TITANIC LOOT BARED PERILS M. POINCARE

Communists Expose Theft of 25,000,000,000 Francs

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS—Disclosures made in the Chamber of Deputies, yesterday, show that the Poincare administration must now face well-substantiated charges of allowing and participating in graft arising out of the reconstruction in the devastated regions variously estimated at from 18,000,000,000 to 25,000,000,000 francs.

According to figures which the minister for the "liberated" regions admitted yesterday, was correct, this is the graft paid to firms and persons engaged in reconstruction work. The Communist deputies, supported in their contention by the socialists and some of the radicals, claim to be able to prove that President Poincare is involved in the scandal personally as well as by reason of his official responsibility.

Expose Halts Tax Levy

More significant than the enormous total of the amount of graft itself is the fact that the disclosures came as a result of the attempt by the Poincare government to levy additional taxation of 2 per cent to cover the budget deficit.

The documentary evidence brought in to uphold the charges of widespread graft and curruption sustain the German contention that in order to bulwark its reparation claims the French government has been giving away billions of francs to supporters of its policies.

Poincare In Desperate Pass

It required all the parliamentary and oratorical skill of Premier Poincare to avert disaster for his government in the chamber yesterday, but he finally gained a breathing spell by promising that the government investigate and revise all reconstruction items in excess of 500,000,000 francs.

Opposition leaders declared that this would be accepted only as a temporary measure as greater portion of the enormous graft total is found in 446 gargantuan claims, all over 1,000,000 francs apiece.

Some idea of the gigantic frauds practised and condoned by the Poincare government is gained when it is known that a total of 3,000,000,000 claims have been granted 100,000,000,000 francs in damages.

The most savage attacks against Poincare since he broached the policy of the Ruhr occupation were launched yesterday.

The recent fall of the franc, in addition to the attempt increase taxation, was a contributing factor to the near debacle that overtook the Poincare government.

Angry deputies called attention to the fact that when these inflated damages were paid the franc was worth 7 and 8 cents, while today it hovers around 4¾ cents.

An Oil King's Sideline

NEW YORK. — Harry Sinclair, oil operator of Tea Pot Dome fame, made $435,599 last year on his race horses. He raced forty horses and won seventy-four races. Zev, named after Zevely, Sinclair's attorney, won $272,000, which is a record for the American turf.

Now This Is Over.

NEW YORK TO FILL MADISON SQUARE GARDEN MONDAY

Lenin Memorial Will Be Giant Affair

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—A special sounding board has been installed in Madison Square Garden so that the vast audience that will fill the floor of the arena and its lofty galleries will hear every word from the lips of the speakers who will tell of the life and works of Nicolai Lenin, Monday evening.

It will be an occasion unique in New York life. The death of no native of Manhattan Island has ever called forth such an outpouring of emotion as the passing of this quiet Russian, who lived and died thousands of miles away, but who was ever present in the hearts of his comrades in the world revolution, no matter where they were.

A galaxy of speakers will stand on the platform such as no New York radical demonstration has seen in a long time. William Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg, Moissaye Olgin, Benjamin Gitlow and Ludwig Lore will be followed by other prominent men and women.

Fitting the mood of the evening the Russian Symphony orchestra of 50 pieces, will play the airs of revolutionary brotherhood that have inspired millions of workers in Russia and in all parts of the world.

Latest moving pictures showing Lenin in action will be shown.

MIKADO'S TROOPS PATROL TOKYO AS DIET DISSOLVES

Fall of Kiyoura Cabinet Is Expected

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKYO. — Thousands of the Mikados soldiers are patrolling Tokyo as the ruling class fears revolt. Parliamentary government has been brought to a standstill by the dissolution of the Imperial diet in a stormy session, where statesmen battled with their fists and shouted themselves hoarse.

Fall of the Kiyoura cabinet is imminent. The Kiyoura government is bitterly hated for the shooting of hundreds of labor unionists and radicals in the days that followed the earthquake disaster, and for ruthless measures it has been using against the parliamentary opposition.

An attempt to wreck a train carrying members of the parliamentary opposition is charged against the government by the opposition. The violent accusations of a murder plot which were hurled in the last diet sessions led to the riot which caused the diet to be dissolved.

Twenty-five of the opposition leaders were returning to Tokyo from a political meeting when the engineer noticed huge obstructions of timber and stones on the tracks. He barely put on the brakes as the train crashed into the pile, derailing itself. Lives of the passengers were saved narrowly.

SENATE FOR WIPING OUT OIL LEASES

Consider Resignation of Secretary of Navy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 31.—The senate this afternoon adopted the Walsh resolution directing President Coolidge to begin court action thru special counsel to cancel the leases of naval oil reserves and to prosecute such other action, civil or criminal, as may be warranted.

The senate defeated the Howell amendment without a record vote. Howell was the only member that voted for it.

Take Up Denby Resignation.

After disposing of the Walsh resolution calling for the resignation of ceeded to consider the Robinson resolotion calling for the resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby.

These are the oil leases granted to Harry F. Sinclair and E. L. Doheny thru former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, and which the resolution charged were "executed under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption."

Sinclair, Doheny Hit.

Action on the resolution followed two days of heated debate during which Democratic senators centered their fire on Secretary of the Navy Denby, seeking adoption of a resolution calling for his resignation.

The vote was reached today only after great pressure had been brought to bear to get the Democrats to delay their demand for a vote on Denby until the Walsh resolution could be put thru.

Senators Robinson and Trammell served notice that they would return to their fight on Denby immediately after the vote on Walsh's resolution was disposed of. The Walsh resolution now goes to the house.

See Fraud Indication.

Under its terms the president is instructed to select counsel for prosecution of litigation for recovery of the leases which former Secretary of Interior Fall is charged with having corruptly and fraudulently given to the Sinclair and Doheny oil leases.

It provides that the presidential nominations for counsel be confirmed by the senate before the litigation can be begun. Former Attorney General Gregory and Silas H. Strawn have been named by the president as counsel.

The resolution states that the leases to Sinclair and Doheny on the naval oil reserves, made by the government of the United States thru Albert B. Fall, secretary of interior, and Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy, as leasors, were "executed under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption."

It specifically charges that Fall and Denby had no authority to issue the leases and that the contracts were

DAUGHERTY ROMPING IN FLORIDA FAR FROM TEAPOT DOME WORRY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MIAMI, Fla. — Attorney General Daugherty was too busy enjoying himself to be bothered about demands in congress for his resignation.

"That business of the Teapot Dome doesn't worry me in the least," said Daugherty. "I do not care to make any statement. I am never on the defensive."

Secretary of Labor Finds the Delegates Know All About His Slave Program

By JOHN FITZGERALD.
(Staff Correspondent of The Daily Worker)

TOMLINSON HALL, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 31.—Booed and hissed by the delegates when he rose to address the United Mine Workers' Convention here, James L. Davis, secretary of labor, holding in his hand a copy of a circular exposing his anti-labor activities, distributed in the convention, made a speech characterized by hokum and bad grammar.

It was also notable for the viciousness of its attack on the foreign-born workers in the organized labor movement.

President Lewis, in introducing Davis, had asked "for a respectful hearing for a member of the President's cabinet."

The effect of the speech of the steel trust secretary of labor was considerably dulled by the fact that hundreds of his audience had already perused the leaflet which he accused the Progressive Miners Committee of circulating.

It contained a concise account of his efforts to secure the adoption of laws providing for the finger-printing and police registration of foreign-born workers and quoted from the proceedings of the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor in which these proposals were denounced as a menace to organized labor and the A. F. of L. executive council instructed to do all in its power to frustrate the Davis scheme.

In addition to the leaflet mentioned, hundreds of copies of The DAILY WORKER carrying an exposure of his campaign for the vicious Sterling bill and other measures providing for a super-blacklist of foreign-born workers under government supervision, were said to convention delegates and spectators.

Audience Had His Number.

It is doubtful if Secretary of Labor Davis ever faced an audience that had more accurate information concerning his loyalty to and activities on behalf of employing corporations. He did not mention the Teapot Dome scandal which is rocking the Coolidge administration; he did not give his views on 100 per cent Americanism, the imported Welsh and Ku Klux variety and attempted to pour oil, perhaps from the Teapot, upon the troubled seas in which the Lewis dictatorship finds itself.

Fails to Reply.

He promised to reply to the charges in the leaflet accusing him of being an enemy of organized labor, but his only answer was a further denunciation of the foreign-born workers; he also spoke with pride of his birthplace on a Welsh hillside, his early poverty and his rise to fame and fortune via the dollar-per-member route in the Moose lodge.

For an hour and a half he gave an exhibition of a not too brainy politician in dire distress and as the delegates were on their feet ready to leave the hall a motion was made to give him a rising vote of thanks.

When today's session opened at 9 a. m., shouts of "Give us a roll-call" came from all over the hall. President Lewis did not dare to call for the report of the constitution committee which had been halted following the vote juggling of the previous session. He stalled until Secretary of Labor Davis arrived.

The Myerscough Case

THE appeal of Thomas Myerscough against his expulsion by the executive board of District No. 5 and its confirmation by the international executive board of the United Mine Workers is expected to come before the convention of that organization today.

Myerscough was expelled solely because of his affiliation with the Progressive Miners International Committee, the organization thru which the left wing in the United Mine Workers carries on its educational campaign.

The charges against him do not question his integrity as a union man but are based entirely on political and economic beliefs held by him.

It was not until Thomas Myerscough became well-known as a leader of the progressive miners during the 1921 strike, thru his activity in organizing strike relief and encouraging the miners in Western Pennsylvania to continue the strike after they had been left out of the Cleveland agreement, that he incurred the enmity of the district and international officials.

Even Phil Murray, Vice President of the United Mine Workers, did not disdain to accept Myerscough's support earlier in his career and Murray still has in his possession a letter given him by Myerscough showing that a supposed friend of Murray's was preparing to double-cross him in an election.

At this time Myerscough was persona grata with the administration of the United Mine Workers; he was then just a coal-digger who had not yet realized the close connection between the hardships of the coal diggers and the policies of reactionary labor politicians.

The Myerscough and Howat cases are almost identical. Both have been expelled because they placed the interest of the membership above that of the political fortunes of international officals. Both have fought the coal operators to the best of their ability and both may have made mistakes of the head; no one has yet accused them of making mistakes of the heart. If men with long records of loyalty to the United Mine Workers are to be expelled, either for mistakes or for political beliefs, then John L. Lewis merits expulsion for his publicity efforts in behalf of James J. Davis, avowed enemy of the foreign-born union miners, enemies of organized labor and the henchman of the oil patriots in the White House.

Whatever the result of the appeal of Thomas Myerscough to the convention may be, it is the duty of the left wing group to see that his expulsion is not ratified without a fight in which the real issues—freedom of speech and belief in the American labor movement—are made clear to everyone of the 1,800 delegates.

Myerscough will not be disgraced if he is denied reinstatement, but the progressive miners will be disgraced and the whole left wing movement as well if they do not rally to Myerscough and force the machine in its effort to expel him to resort to the same tactics that have shown it rules by force and trickery and not by consent of the membership.

BOR PREMIER SEALING RUSSIAN PACT NEXT WEEK

xpected to Oppose French in Ruhr

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON.—Ramsay MacDonald is pected to seal the pact for Russian ognition next week. The London ly Herald, official Labor Party an, denounces all reports to the trary, as misstatements of the ad- istration's policy.

cDonald is anxious to have the issue settled well before nt meets February 12. The g of the Labor Party is fight- inst all delay and there is no nding reason why the agree- t should be held up.

No Hitch.

Absolutely no hitch has developed the government's plan to recog- ize Russia, continues the Herald and eports to the contrary are efforts to misrepresent the labor government, charges the paper.

Matters of detail, such as the question of debts which the Lloyd George government alleged that Russia owed to England will be dealt with by a joint commission to be created as soon as ambassadors can be exchanged. This commission will also take up the issue of claims of British citizens against Russia for property expropriated during the revolution. But the claims will not be presented until recognition is an accomplished fact.

Poincare To Meet MacDonald.

PARIS.—Ramsay MacDonald and Premier Poincare are expected to come together in person, at an early date, over the Ruhr occupation and the recognition of Russia.

The Labor government is tied by its campaign pledges to oppose Ruhr occupation. It has the power to bring enormous commercial pressure to bear against France and the capital is rife with rumors as to what the French will do if MacDonald should make the demand that he get out of the Ruhr.

On the Russian issue the two governments are diametrically opposed. There will be much to discuss when the two rulers meet.

Bankers Learn Dollars Cannot Create Livestock

FARGO, N. D., Jan. 31—"Legislation won't create livestock, and any fear that the $50,000,000 livestock loan bill will cause over-production are laboring under a fallacy," John Lee Coulter, president of the North Dakota Agricultural College, declared today.

"If the entire $50,000,000 were spent for dairy cattle at $100 per head, 500,000 dairy cattle could be purchased or a number about equal to the total of Dairy cattle in North Dakota today," he told members of the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' Association at a hearing here.

"Census figures show that one cow is required to supply the dairy products consumed by five people and that our population is increasing at the rate of 1,500,000 persons per year. In the three years during which the $50,000,000 will be made available, the population increase would require 900,000 more dairy cows or nearly double the number that could be purchased with the whole fund."

Pennsy Manager Admits Financing of Company Union

PHILADELPHIA. — Delegates to the Pennsylvania Railroad company union conference had their railroad fare, hotel bills and wages paid out of the company's own treasury.

That is the admission made by Robert V. Massey, manager of the company's eastern division, while under cross examination in Federal court in the suit of System Federation No. 90 of the railroad shop crafts for the recovery of $15,000,000 back pay due the workers. The $15,000,000 represents the difference between the wages ordered by the Railroad Labor Board and the amount actually paid by the company, and assented to by the farcial company union.

The System Federation demands an injunction restraining the company union. Judge Dickenson will hear further evidence.

Farmer-Labor Leaders Fight Postponement of May 30th St. Paul, Minn., Conference

J. W. Anderson, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party of Montana, and Alice Lorraine Daily, Secretary-Treasurer of the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota, in special statements to the DAILY WORKER put themselves unequivocally on record for holding the monster Farmer-Labor convention, as originally scheduled, on May 30th, and not waiting for the outcome of the Republican and Democratic conventions.

The move to postpone the holding of the Farmer-Labor convention in St. Paul arises from the belief some people have that there is a chance to win over one of these conventions to a genuine progressive program for the farmers and workers. Many adherents of LaFollette are especially burdened with illusions as to the great strength that can be coralled at these two conventions controlled by the reactionary machine politicians of Republican and Democratic stripe.

Some even go so far in their optimism as to believe that the holding of the Farmer-Labor Party convention after the two capitalist parties have held their conferences will enable the Farmer-Labor movement to poll 9,000,000 votes in the coming national elections.

How little one can expect from the "fighting" insurgents and the so-called progressives now slumbering in Congress can be seen from the activities of these legislators to date. The Old Guard has smashed whatever feeble opposition they have been able to put up and most of the time the insurgents could not even array more than a handful, at most, for a test of strength.

The statements of Mr. Anderson and Miss Daly establish very definitely, the fact that what is wanted most by the working and farming masses the country over, is not a third party consisting of all sorts of elements cast off from the Republican and Democratic parties, but a real Farmer-Labor Party organized on a national scale and solely representative of the class interests of the workers and farmers.

In view of the rapidly growing strength of the Montana and South Dakota Farmer-Labor Parties the following statements of their leaders are of special importance to the entire Farmer-Labor Party movement:

"DAILY WORKER, Chicago, Ill.:

"I am sure that every member of the executive committee of the Farmer-Labor Party in Montana would strongly oppose the attempt to change the present date for holding our national convention. Our people are not interested in the platforms or candidates of the old political parties, nor do we have any faith in the promises they might make for the sole purpose of capturing votes." J. W. Anderson, chairman, executive committee, Farmer-Labor Party of Montana."

The telegram received from Miss Daly was as follows:

"DAILY WORKER, Chicago, Ill.:

"The Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota protests most vigorously against any attempt to postpone the national convention of the Farmer-Labor Party, scheduled for May 30. What the Democrats do at their national convention has no influence with us. We judge the Democrats by their record.

"In the southern states where the Democrats have been in power for more than half a century, the cotton farmers and tobacco raisers are worse off economically than are the wheat growers and cattle raisers of the north. An injunction issued under the regime of Palmer has an effect upon our workers identical with the one issued upon the order of Daugherty. We are against both the old capitalist parties, controlled alike from the top, by those who are anti-farmer, anti-labor, anti-constitutional rights for the workers and anti-a square deal for the immigrant. Both old parties are opposed to the recognition of the working class government of Russia.

"That pompous folly ought to be sufficient to make every farmer and industrial worker turn to the upbuilding of a party devoted to the advancement of the interests of those who do the useful work of the world and produce food for all.

"Anyone who wishes to delay the convention to suit the whim of a politician or small group of politicians has no conception of the thought and mood of the farmer at this time; is not thinking in terms of personalities but in terms of program. Petitions demnnding a five-year moratorium on all farm mortgage debts are pouring into the headquarters every day. The farmer demands land for the users, lower taxes, better prices, genuine relief.

"The farmer and industrial workers realize that the continuance of our present foreign policy means war and are determined to be in power before the next war breaks. To talk to the disinherited farmer of South Dakota about what the Democrats might do at their New York convention is mere folly.

"The workers of the United States have endured too much—low wages, bad living conditions, dearth of education, deprivation of their civil rights, injunctions, bayonets, jail and penitentiary sentences. The shame of the labor movement in the United States is its timidity, its lack of initiative. At last we are determined to dilly-dally no longer. The farmer in South Dakota, driven almost to desperation by continued low prices, by high interest rates and high taxes, by the bank failures occurring daily in every section of the state, is ready to join with the industrial worker in the immediate upbuilding of a militant, working class party, not Republican, not Democratic, but his own, and he will tolerate no further postponement. May 30 is "the day" to the farmer-labor forces of South Dakota.

"Alice Lorraine Daly, secretary-treasurer, Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota."

FEDERATED PRESS BEGINS 5TH YEAR OF LABOR SERVICE

75 Paper Members In Co-operative Effort

By CARL HAESSLER

The Federated Press enters its fifth year of work as American labor's only daily news service with its membership numerically unimpaired and with its financial position as good as the year before, according to Sec.-Treasurer Carl Haessler, who transmitted the following annual report to the Jan. 31 meeting of the executive board, given here in part:

To the Executive Board, The Federated Press: The year 1923 demonstrated in a number of ways the prestige and vitality of The Federated Press. Not only was our daily labor news service, the only one in America, deemed influential enough to warrant attack by powerful enemies but we proved able to weather the storm at least for the time being. Our membership has not been scared away. Wherever we are known we are trusted. Financially we have pulled thru a hard year with our deficit $800 more than at its outset, but we wrote off $1,000 in bad debts. The deficit Jan. 1, 1924, was $45,672.68. We survived when two of the five English language labor dailies went under. We are now an internationally known labor institution.

Grown During Year.

Our membership was 75 papers in Jan. 30, 1924, compared with 73 papers Jan. 15, 1923, a gain of two. These represent all shades of labor thought, including A. F. of L. central bodies and international unions, unaffiliated unions like the Locomotive Engineers and Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the I. W. W., Socialist, Farmer-Labor, Workers, and Federated Farmer-Labor parties, and independent farmer and labor groups.

The American Fund for Public Service contributed $15,640 to assist in expanding and improving our service. Part of this has been definitely renewed for 1924 and negotiations are almost completed for a considerable portion of the remainder. Assessments from newspapers pay less than half the cost of producing the daily service. The difference is made up by donations and various auxiliary F. P. enterprises. Total expenditures for 1923, including bond accruals and writing off bad debts were $57,237.89. Both figures are more than 40% below budget estimates. If there had been more income we could have spent it to good advantage under the budget.

Expansion Urged.

Our domestic and foreign news gathering could be greatly expanded. Besides the Chicago, Washington, New York, and Australian bureaus with salaried staff, we rely on string correspondents in the United States, Canada and Mexico who receive little or no compensation. The European bureau at Berlin has maintained itself with practically no direct financial help from the F. P. during 1923. Volunteer correspondents serve in London and Moscow. I believe it is essential to F. P. prestige and service to provide for better financial support for the European bureau.

For 1924 I propose that our policy continue along the lines followed in the past as stated to the A. F. of L. investigating committee. This statement was stamped by the committee, after investigation, "to be an accurate presentation of Federated Press policy." It follows:

Important Policy.

"I shall work as managing editor of The Federated Press as long as I am permitted to carry out my conception of its proper function, which is, I believe, to be a cooperative labor news service catering impartially and cordially to every group in the labor movement. I have tried to cut out the factional news and reports of internal union strife that is of no concern to labor as a whole, tho wads of such news come to the desk. I have tried also to proportion the news so that all albor elements may have an opening in our columns if they wish it."—Carl Haessler, managing editor, quoted in executive council, A. F. of L., report, page 118, October, 1923.

Munsey Has Four Notches.

When you listed the New York papers he has bought and killed, you neglected to mention the old New York Morning Sun, which he consolidated with the Herald. Altogether, he has slaughtered the old Sun, the Press, the Globe and the Evening Mail, besides others in other towns. Munsey paid more than $2,000,000 for the Evening Mail. T. A.

What Congress Wants to Do With Foreign-Born Workers

(Note—This is the fifth of the series of articles which The Daily Worker is publishing on the laws which are now pending before Congress, directed against foreign-born workers who wish to come to this country and those in this country.)

THE LODGE BILL

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

Bills directed against the foreign-born workers are not limited to the House of Representatives. The Senate also has its series of proposed new laws intended to shackle and make impotent any effort of foreign-born workers coming to this country to take part in the labor movement and win for themselves a higher standard of living.

Senator Lodge introduced in the Senate Bill No. 35 which is now pending before the Senate Immigration Committee. This bill limits the immigrants who may come to this country after July 1st of this year to 2% of the number of each respective nationality in this country, according to the census of 1890.

Senator Lodge is very specific about the information which is to be asked of each person who desires to emigrate to the United States. Under the rules laid down in his bill, the immigrant must answer questions which will give information—in addition to the name, age, sex, race, whether he can read and write—about his prison record if any, his military record, and "complete copies of all records concerning him required by the government to which he owes allegiance."

This inquisition, however, is not sufficient for Senator Lodge's purpose. After citing all the facts which he desires to have brought out in the investigation of the proposed immigrant he adds, and "such information as the secretary shall, by regulation, prescribe as necessary to the proper enforcement of the immigration laws and the naturalization laws."

This provision gives the Secretary of Labor the power to add any additional inquiry which he may deem "proper." Under the authority thus given, the Secretary of Labor can easily include questions as to the attitude of the proposed immigrant in regard to labor unions, and as to his political beliefs. In other words, Senator Lodge provides the machinery for carefully sifting the applicants who apply for permission to come to the United States, eliminating all who might prove dangerous to the employing class of this country.

Finger-Printing Proposed.

The Lodge bill is also unique in its provision for taking the finger-prints of every immigrant coming to this country as part of the record of the immigrant to be kept on file in Washington by the Department of Labor.

Under the provisions of the bill containing the finger-printing section, each immigrant when he arrives in the United States will turn over to the Department of Labor a copy of his immigration certificate, which will serve as an arrival certificate. On this arrival certificate, on which will appear a photograph of the immigrant, will be placed the finger-print of the immigrant. This certificate, thru which the immigrant can be kept track of and identified at all times, will be kept on file in Washington, D. C.

The Lodge bill requires each immigrant who makes application to come to this country to pay a fee of $1 and provides for other charges under special circumstances which immigrants will be obliged to pay.

The fact that there are also before the Senate proposed laws dove-tailing with those pending in the House of Representatives is evidence of the seriousness of the threat against the foreign-born workers who may come here in the future and those now in the United States. The bills before Congress and the Senate have been introduced by Republicans and Democrats alike. There will therefore be no partisan divisions on the question of making provision in the immigration laws which will put the foreign-born worker in this country under the thumb of the officials of the government of the United States and enable the government to prevent these workers from participating in any way in the labor struggles of this country.

Hearings are now going on in Washington before the Senate and House Immigration Committee on these bills, and it is probable that within a week or two one of these bills or some new bill including the outstanding provisions of the numerous bills now pending will be reported to the House and Senate.

If there is to be a movement of protest against these bills, it must be organized quickly or the exception laws against the foreign-born workers will be passed before the movement against these laws is crystallized in organized form.

Councils for the Protection of Foreign-Born Workers should be created in every industrial center of this country within the next week or ten days and a series of great mass-meetings arranged thru which the native and foreign-born workers can send the message to Washington that these slave laws will not go thru Congress without a mighty protest by the workers here.

The Miners Like the Daily

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

The officials of the United Mine Workers of America were surely surprised to find two "new girls" with a bundle of the DAILY WORKER at the doors of the Convention hall, the first day the convention opened in Indianapolis.

Both the paper and the two "newsies," as Comrades Natalie Gomez and Kittie Harris are called by the delegates, soon came to be an outstanding feature of the convention. Within one day the circulation of THE DAILY grew to about 400 with a steady increase in sales as the convention proceeded with its work.

The miners like the paper and every morning finds them anxiously looking for the "newsies" to show up. This is evident from the various remarks made by the delegates.

"This is a real Labor paper," is the general opinion of the delegation. "I misjudged the paper at first, but I have changed my mind about it," is the reamrk of a delegate who is now buying the paper regularly.

"This is the only paper I can get the truth from," is the remark of another delegate. "I never knew that there was such a paper," remarked a delegate while making his remittance for a yearly sub. Many delegates pay for the paper, five and ten cents, and even more, tho fully aware of the fact that the regular price of the paper at the convention is only three cents. One miner—who, by the way, is not connected with the Workers Party—paid up for seventeen weekly subs to be sent to his friends in his home town as a souvenir.

"Let them read the paper and get the real dope on things," he remarked while making his payment for the paper and postage. He was sure that many of his friends will subscribe to the paper once they get acquainted with it. This is not an exceptional case. Miner after miner follow the same example by ordering from the "newsies" sample copies to be sent to their friends.

It surely does not please Mr. Lewis and his "pay-roll" assistants to watch the two thousand delegates pouring out of the convention hall and one out of every four holding a copy of THE DAILY in his hands or pocket. But the miners like it. It is an open secret at the convention that THE DAILY has helped many a delegate "to change his mind a little"—lining up with the progressives after a two or three days support of the reactionary machine.

The Workers Party Literature Department, in charge of the same two "newsies," also made itself felt at the convention. Literature sales had to be limited to the various meetings held by the progressives during the convention on one occasion or another. Not a single one of these meetings was missed by our two "news-girls" with their rather fine selection of literature and the various publications—The Labor Herald, Liberator, Soviet Russia Pictorial and others. Distribution of Workers Party leaflets dealing with various problems is a regular feature at the convention and at the meetings of the progressives.

Several miners volunteered to help pack and carry the heavy bundles of literature to and from the meeting and to get subs for the DAILY WORKER, which they consider as the paper of their own. It is needless to say that the Workers Party is the only organization at the convention with its literature and its fighting organ.

The miners after all did not get scared by Lewis' red hysteria and are glad to see the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party literature at their convention.

HEBREW TRADES SABOTAGE FIGHT ON DAVIS' LAWS

But Left Wing Will Carry on Fight

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—Led by agents of the reationary Jewish Daily Forward, the movement for the protection of foreign born workers was sabotaged by the United Hebrew Trades' conference which was ostensibly called to combat Secretary Davis's anti-immigration laws.

The conference refused to seat Delegates Ludwig Lore, Margaret Undjus, Frank Bellanca and J. Luebkert, who had been credentialed by the Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, representing thousands of active unionists of many nationalities in New York City.

In recommending the spurning of the aid of these workers the credentials' committee advised that all delegates be seated except those from the Workers Party and the Council for the Protection of the Foreign Born. The committee stated that there were credentials from the Workers Party—an invented pretext, for the Workers Party had credentialed no delegates.

A minority report in favor of a united front was nearly ruled out of order by Chairman Brownstein of the Furriers' union. Brownstein was opposed, but he railroaded thru the majority report favoring exclusion.

The conferences' action means that aid in fighting the immigration laws is rejected from the many thousands of German, Polish, Italian, Russian Ukranian and Lithuanian workers represented in the Council for the Protection of the Foreign Born Workers. Their aid is needed in the common fight against the vicious immigration and alien laws which would reduce the foreign born to the status of ticketed serfs.

B. Charney Vladeck of the Jewish Daily Forward, spoke before the report of the credentials' committee, lauding in convential style, the foreign born who labor had built this country but failing to offer any concrete proposals for defeating the opposition engineered by the Steel Trust and James J. Davis, Big Business's Secretary of Labor.

Congressman LaGuardia also took the floor, pointing out the joint needs of the Italian and Jewish immigrants but the conservative forces of the Unied Hebrew Trades decided to do it alone.

Left wing forces in the United Hebrew Trades are fighting for a reversal of the conferences action.

The United Front Provisional Committee, to fight the anti-immigration laws, held its first session, with Ludwig Lore, as chairman and Benj. Lifshitz, secretary, Saturday afternoon, at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th Street. The Committee is composed of Jewish, Hungarian, German, Russian, Esthonian, Ukrainian, Italian, Lithuanian and Finnish workers' organizations.

The Conference decided to start the fight against the proposed anti-immigration bills immediately.

The following were elected as members of the Executive Committee: Palweder, Saenger, Willer, Bellanca, Capraro, Balacus, Bittelman, Undjus, Bosky, Radzianowich, Nastasiewsky, Lifshitz, London, Luevker, and Lore.

Coca Cola King Has Love Affairs Aired in Atlanta Court

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 31—A new series of love letters, revealing the ardent wooing of Mrs. de Bouchel by Asa G. Candler, aged multi-millionaire Coca Cola manufacturer, was read in court today in the $500,000 heart balm suit of the New Orleans beauty.

The letters constituted the courtship of the 73 year old soft drink king and told a detailed story of the wrecking of the romance.

The missives, addressed to "my dear sweetheart," "my dear sweetie" and "my dear darling," told of efforts by Candler's family to prevent him from remarrying and described other obstacles which at times threatened the match.

The letters were a chronological review of the lovemaking of the enfeebled Lothario, who was assisted into court as the reading began and sat fidgeting in his chair until recess. Mrs. de Bouchel, smiling attractively, watched him inquiringly from across the room.

"Never!" Thirty Days.

DENVER, Jan. 31.—William Hull appeared before Magistrate Ora Hood here today charged with living illegally with Helen Fernandez.

"My client meant no harm," Hull's lawyer pleaded. "He will marry the girl."

"Fine, I'll marry them today," the judge said.

"But my client needs time," hedged the attorney.

"Now or never," the judge decreed.

"Never!" interrupted Hull, as he glanced at the girl.

"Thirty days," chimed the judge.

Poincare Gets Economical.

NEW YORK.—News dispatches from Paris state that the 100,000,000 franc loan by the French to the Roumanian government is now endangered as a result of Poincare's "economy mania." The loan was intended to cover the cost of military supplies, to be purchased in France for the Roumanian army.

made "in defiance of the settled policy of the government."

Senator Howell, Nebraska, had introduced a last minute amendment which would authorize seizure of the naval oil reserves immediately and require the lessees to return to the government any oil extracted from them since the leases were entered into.

Talk Holds Up Action.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—Action in the naval oil leasing scandal today was being held up by an apparently insurmountable barrier of senate talk.

Tho the votes to pass the Walsh resolution ordering court action to cancel the Doheny and Sinclair leases are available, the senate seemed unable to get to the point of voting.

Mr. Coolidge is a little annoyed at the senate's delay. He has appointed counsel, but the senate insists on the right to approve his selections before they can actually go to work. Indications are that it may be several days before the resolutions authorizing employment of these special counsel and providing funds to pay them and their staffs will emerge from the welter of talk and political wrangling in congress. Meantime three impartial medical experts of Washington—selected by the senate investigating committee, undertook today to determine just how sick Albert B. Fall is.

The physicians reported they believe Fall too ill to appear, but believed it would be advisable for the committee to go to his bedside.

Naval Inquiry Continues.

The house naval affairs committee continued its inquiry into the naval policy of exchanging oil drawn from the reserves for storage and the spending of money derived from the oil to build docks, pumping stations and other equipment at Pearl Harbor.

Silas H. Strawn, Chicago, Republican member of the special counsel appointed by the president, was studying today the evidence disclosed by the senate committee. He will confer with Thomas W. Gregory, the Democratic counsel, as soon as Gregory gets here from Texas.

The senate went on debating, hoping to adopt the Walsh resolution before night.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—With the growing demand for the dumping of Secretary of the Navy Denby and Attorney-General Daugherty in both houses, the senate today is preparing to pass the joint resolution canceling the oil leases secured by Fall and Doheny and demanding the prosecution of everyone found criminally connected with the scandal that has set the nation by the ears.

The administration now, advised by its pilots that the Teapot Dome exposures have aroused a storm of anti-administration sentiment, is trying to allay public resentment by promises of prosecution.

If this does not have the desired effect, and indications are that it will not, Denby and Daugherty will be forced out of office in the eleventh-hour effort to save the face of the Coolidge administration.

Coolidge will have to make a quick decision on this vital tactical question for the three roll calls taken on republican amendments to the restitution resolution show that the administration enemies have enough strength to pass the resolutions of Senators Wheeler, Mont., and Robinson, Ark., demanding the resignations of Daugherty and Denby.

There is every reason to believe that in the event of Denby and Daugherty refusing to resign a move will be made to impeach them and many senators are known to favor this method of removing them from office holding that this procedure would establish definitely their guilt in the public mind.

"Resigning is to easy a way out for men against whom there is much evidence tending to show a guilty knowledge of a crooked transaction," is the way one senator put it.

Morgan Man Visits Mr. Hughes and U. S. Warships Go to Mexico

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—American warships today returned to "guard duty" off Vera Cruz, Mexico, as advices to the State Department indicated that American interests there may be jeopardized by fighting between the Obregon and De LaHuerta forces.

The fighting in Mexico, so far as advices received here indicate, has not yet threatened Vera Cruz, but reported intention of Obregon's army to move towards the city was believed to be the basis of the order to Admiral Magruder, commanding the American in Flotilla.

Gossip here today centered about the visit to Secretary Hughes yesterday of Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan and Company.

ROCKEFELLER IS REBUILDING PEKIN MURDER PLANT

Men Unionizing For Safer Conditions

PEKIN, Ill.—The day after the last of the 42 victims of the Corn Products Co. explosion were buried the Rockefeller subsidiary started rebuilding the ruined dry starch department.

The company's anti-union policy, which is believed by workers to have been responsible for the disastrous blast, is showing itself again in the construction operations. Faced with a demand from 165 of the 200 men on the building job to unionize the work, the company replied that it had nothing to do with that since the insurance companies are in charge. At the same time the employes seem to be also on the plant payroll, as shown by the fact that the foremen can call men off the building job at any time to do work in the departments that are still running.

Few Accidents Under Unionism.

When the plant ran on a union basis accidents were few and not serious. Local 73, United Brewery, Flour, Cereal & Soft Drink Workers, saw to it then that safety precautions were rigorously carried out and that two men were kept constantly at work removing the explosive dust from the dry starch department. After Standard Oil succeeded in smashing the union, safety became a secondary matter until 42 lives were burned and smashed out in the Jan. 3 explosion.

Majority Joins Union.

The unionizing of the building job is in charge of the Int. Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' Union of America. At an open meeting in the Pekin Labor & Trades assembly hall over three-fourths of the 200 men signed up. A committee is presenting the union demands to the company. A rate of 67½ cents an hour is asked with double time for Saturday afternoon, Sundays, holidays and all time over eight hours. The present scale is 47½ cents and no increase in rate for overtime or Sundays. A 100% job is also demanded. The local is 231; Conrad Nannainga is president and Will Ingram secretary-treasurer.

MILITARISM RULES PUBLIC SCHOOLS SAYS SINCLAIR

Legion and Capitalists Dictate Education

(By The Federated Press)

MILWAUKEE.—Charges that the National Education Association, which dominates the public school system of the country, cooperates with the American legion and chambers of commerce in teaching public school children militarism and the divine right of capitalism were made to newspaper men by Upton Sinclair before his address at the Open Forum here.

Sinclair discussed The Goslings, the subject of his new book, which will be a companion volume to his book, The Goose Step. As The Goose Step shows up the power of private corporations over colleges, so The Goslings will prove that the same private interests also rule our public and private school system. The Goslings will also be in part devoted to the role of churches in our educational system. Sinclair will there discuss the doctrine of the churches, including those of the Catholic church, and their connection with the official school curricula.

Our public schools are run by men who hold a factory attitude toward the children, Sinclair continued. The modern educator who would gain the approval of the powers must run his schools as a manager of a large factory does his employes. The children are taught that being different from the desired standard is a vagary, a danger. They must acquire the mass mentality and conformity.

Smaller classes, more teachers, better salaries and more development of individual aptitudes are what all really competent educators regard as the ideal toward which education should thrive.

In the majority of cities the teachers' unions have been taken over by the satellites of the vested interests and used as adjuncts to the capitalist system. Among 500 to 600 delegates to a national convention there are hardly 50 independent teachers, but there is a closely functioning machine of at least 300 who run the association for the ruling class.

The remedy must come mainly from the teachers themselves, Sinclair concluded.

The Power Column

First consideration in to-day's installment of the Power Column is given to Comrades S. T. Hammersmark, the advertising manager of THE DAILY WORKER.

The advertising department of our paper is one of the most important departments, and on the success of this department depends, to a large extent, the ability of THE DAILY WORKER to expand in size and to increase its service to the American working class.

Every one who is familiar, even in a slight degree, with the problems of a daily newspaper, knows as a general rule the income from the sale of papers on the news stands and thru subscriptions is only a very small part of the general income of a newspaper. Unless THE DAILY WORKER can secure a considerable amount of paid advertising, it will be necessary to restrict the size to about that which is now being used. If thru advertising THE DAILY WORKER can increase its income, it will be able to print a larger paper, to extend its news gathering facilities, and to increase its attractiveness and value to the working class in every way.

There are hundreds of merchants and dealers all over the country who would be only too glad to use The DAILY WORKER as an advertising medium. If it can be brought to their notice and if it can be proved to them that The DAILY WORKER reaches potential customers of theirs, it will be easy to secure their ads.

We pass on Comrade Hammersmark's remarks with the hope that every reader and booster of The DAILY WORKER will give them their earnest attention and a quick response to the requests made.

"Advertising Pays," Says Hammersmark.

Advertising in The DAILY WORKER pays, no matter where or what—if it is a legitimate proposition DAILY WORKER readers will be interested.

Our paper has a national circulation—rapidly growing in influence and popularity and our readers are in earnest—they mean business. They all know the value of having a daily paper and know how important it is to have paying advertisements to help keep the paper going.

We look on every advertiser as a personal friend and you know what that means in business.

There is a mistaken idea that the advertiser will not put his advertisement in a radical paper. Nothing is further from the truth. What the average business man wants is more trade—and he does not care what the political color of his customer. What the advertiser does want to know is—will the money I spend for this advertisement come back to me in the shape of more business?

More and more the business man is learning that RADICALS are quite human and make money just like other folks—and making money, they have money to spend. The business man wants part of that money and to get it he will advertise anywhere, any time he can be assured that it will mean more business to him.

So you have a big field to cover—wherever The DAILY WORKER is read there are hundreds of prospective advertisers.

Considering the class nature of our publication our price for advertising is very reasonable.

Those who are interested in securing advertisements should write in for definite instructions and contracts as well as our rates.

WORKERS LEAD IN PHILIPPINES IN LIBERTY FIGHT

Manila Cable Thanks Workers Party

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The campaign launched by the Workers Party against American imperialism is meeting with great response. The Philippine workers have been especially encouraged by the Workers Party activities to get into the fight against General Wood and the Republican administration, backing him in his policy of handing over the natural resources of the islands to the American capitalists.

Manuel Roxas, speaker of the House of Representatives of the Philippines and special Commissioner to the United States, has just notified the Workers Party of the resolution for independence adopted by the Convention of the Federated Labor Unions of the Philippines on Jan. 19. The resolution also thanked the Workers Party for its support of the fight against Wall Street domination. The demand is also made in this resolution that Samuel Gompers and the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor "support Philippine independence without dismemberment of the islands." It is particularly important to notice that the Philippine workers are beginning to give a class character to the independence movement by demanding that from now on the Philippine Independence Commission to the United States "include labor representatives."

Thanks Workers Party.

The letter from Speaker Roxas to the Workers Party and the resolution adopted by the convention of the Federated Labor Unions of the Philippines follow:

"Washington, D. C., Jan. 25, 1923.
Workers Party of America,
1009 No. State St.,
Chicago, Ill.

Sirs:—It is with great pleasure that I inform you that according to a cable I received from the Philippine Islands, the Federated Labor Unions of the Philippines have passed a resolution expressing their appreciation and acknowledgment to the Workers Party of America for their interest in the solution of the Philippine problem and for including Philippine independence in its platform.

With assurances of my highest esteem, I am,

Yours respectfully,
MANUEL ROXAS, Speaker
House of Representatives of the Philippine and Special Commissioner to the United States."

Labor Demands Independence

MANILA.—(By cable to the Philippine Press Bureau, Washington, D. C.)—Federated Labor Unions in convention yesterday resolved to inaugurate a vigorous campaign for Philippine independence. The following were adopted:

1. Resolution for the American Federation of Labor asking Samuel Gompers and the Executive Council of the Federation to support independence without dismemberment of the Islands.
2. Resolution thanking the Workers Party of America for including a plank in its platform favoring independence.
3. Resolution thanking Senators LaFollette and King and Representatives Rankin and Cooper for the resolutions they have presented in Congress for the granting of independence.
4. Resolution requesting the Philippine Independence Commission to include labor representatives in the next mission to the United States.
5. Resolution creating a National Labor Committee composed of the chairmen of the Printers' Union, Lithographers' Union, Cigarmakers' Union, Philippine Labor Congress, Farm Laborers' and Tenants' Union, and the Railway Workers' Union, to work for independence and raise additional funds for the campaign.

Workers Lead Movement.

Jacinto Manahan, president of the Federation of Tenants and Farm Laborers said in the opening speech of the convention: "The time has come when the workers and laborers of the Philippines should unequivocably express themselves on the question of independence. It has been charged time and again that only our politicians desire independence. It is time that we believe this assertion once and for all. I have traveled all over this archipelago, have reached the remotest corners of our provinces, and have fathomed the sentiment of our laboring class."

"The poorest among them and the most needy have often asked when our freedom is coming. They say they are already impatient and would like to see it come soon; while the aged, those who suffered in the wars of our past, those who have known what it is to fight for freedom; those who hardly move about now, have told me in pathetic terms they want to see their country free before they die. The truth is that even if we poor laborers are given nothing but rice and fish to eat and even if we are to live in the smallest hamlet, we would prefer to do so with our country free and independent rather than well to do and yet dependent. America's word is pledged. We await this freedom of ours at the earliest opportunity. We are with our leaders in this movement, each and all of us".

Daily Worker Uncovers More Firetraps As Farcical School Board Continues Whitewash

Disease-breeding, firetrap conditions are found by the DAILY WORKER in two more schools at the very time that Business Manager Burns of the school board is reporting that "nothing startling" has been discovered in the course of the board's own investigation of its buildings.

The school board's whitewashing investigation has been going on for a week without any results in spite of the appalling conditions in all the schools in working class neighborhoods or communities inhabited by foreigners. Inspectors who are conducting the investigation say they are authorized to close any schools, no matter what conditions they find. They will make no reports till they have finished their survey.

Foster School Firetrap

In both of the schools last visited by the DAILY WORKER, are the children of Italians, Jewish and negro workers. The two schools are the Foster School, at O'Brien and Union streets, with Italian and Negro pupils and the Skinner School at W. Jackson and Aberdeen streets with Jewish and Italian pupils.

No fire escapes were found at the Foster building. It has only 1,400 seats for 1,500 pupils. The original building was erected in 1857, with additions in 1890 and 1901. No water sprinkler system has been installed.

The toilet facilities are very bad. The floor of the boys toilet is wet most of the time in an unsuccessful attempt to keep down the smell.

Fire Hazards

In the basement in addition to the toilet there are the three lunch rooms which serves 900 lunches a day, the play room, the manual training room and a small print shop. The lumber for the manual training classes is kept near the print shop and is a big fire hazard. The kitchen for the lunch rooms is inadequate.

All the stairs and hall ways are of wood and the oldest building which is in the center has no exits of its own. Pupils in the class rooms in that building must enter and leave thru the two new wings.

The assembly room is on the third floor and is used as a gymnasium. When used as an assembly room common chairs are placed there. When the fire inspectors visited the school this week they said that the assembly room should be on the ground floor and the chairs fastened to the floor.

Bad As Dixie

The pupils who attend the Foster school are the children of the poorest sort of Italian and Negro families. Few of their parents have a vote and none have political influence. Many of the Negro families whose children attend the school are recent arrivals from the south. They say that the Foster school is little better than the rural schools that their children attended in the south.

The play room in the basement of the Foster school is the usual dirty, illy lit room found in schools in working class neighborhoods.

Skinner School Firetrap

The Skinner school at W. Jackson Blvd. and Aberdeen streets, altho better than most of the working class district schools has many objectional features. The most objectionable feature of the school is that there are so many very young children going there that the first two grades attend on the two shift plan. Educational authorities in the public schools of Chicago say that children for the first four grades at least should be permitted to go to school a full day. Under this two shift plan classes start very very early in the morning for some of the children. When very young children are forced to get up very early an unnecessary hardship is imposed on them, the educators say.

No Fire Sprinkler System

The toilets in the Skinner school are unclean and always wet. There is no sprinkler system as a safeguard against fires. The gymnasium is also used as an assembly room. The principal said that the gymnasium was used as an assembly room only about three times a year, and therefor it was not important to have a good one. When it was suggested to him that if they had a good assembly room which could be used often it would encourage community activities in the school and an interest on the part of the pupils families in the school, he replied that he had not thought of that. The school has about 1000 seats and 1100 pupils.

The stairs and entire interior is of wood and would burn like tinder in a fire.

The most glaring fault of the school however is the two shift system for the first two grades.

Most of the pupils at this school are the children of Jewish and Italian non-voting workers.

The investigator for the DAILY WORKER has been repeatedly impressed by the fact that the worst schools are in neighborhoods where foreign-born workers without a vote or other political influence live.

Interest Shown in Daily's Fight on Fire Trap Schools

Members of the Young Workers League, who are distributing the DAILY WORKER at and in the neighborhood of schools written up, report that people are receiving them with approval. In the neighborhood of the Ogden school, where a distribution was made yesterday, many persons who were given copies of the DAILY WORKER said that they had heard about the campaign against fire trap schools, and were glad to see that their school had received attention. Each time Sam Green, who is in charge of the distribution, goes out he takes a larger bundle of the DAILY WORKER, so as to have enough to give copies to all the people who are interested. So far, he has not taken enough. More than 1,500 papers have been given out by the Y. W. L. at various schools.

Prisoner Asks Aid

I. W. Powers, prisoner in Deer Lodge penitentiary, Montana, writes us wishing the DAILY WORKER success. He and his cellmate have subscribed. Powers asks us to assist him in selling a ladies' solid bead hand bag, made by himself. This paper is not in a position to undertake the task, but asks anyone who can do so to write to Powers at Deer Lodge. The money for the hand bag will go to the purchase of articles not included in the meager prison fare.

RUSSIAN TR EXPERTS TO FRENCH CAP

Departure May Wh France Into Line

NEW YORK.—The semi-official Russian trade delegation in Paris is contemplating an abrupt departure from the French capital during the next few days, and its destination is reported to be London.

Skobelev, chief of the delegation, has told American newspapermen in Paris that he proposes "to quit Paris bag and baggage." The immediate reason given for this contemplated move is the failure of the French government to afford the Russian representatives adequate legal protection on French territory.

But the presence of the Labor government in London obviously lends special significance to the Russian delegates' imminent departure for the British capital. This episode may be interpreted as a demonstration of good will toward Premier Ramsay MacDonald by the Russians. Every opportunity will be given to the British labor party to carry out its avowed intention of improving Anglo-Russian relations, and little doubt exists that British friendliness toward Russia will soon bear tangible fruits.

It is considered likely that th French government, influenced by bankers and industrialists of th country, will not be slow in reali ing that it is to their advantage adopt a Russian policy similar that of the British Labor gover ment.

Correspondent at Coal iners' Convention Solves Riddle of the Ku Klux Klan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOMLINSON HALL, Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 28—As the delegates to the Miners' convention were leaving Tomlinson Hall this evening several men were busy at the door passing out handbills announcing a mass meeting to which miners were invited in order that certain prejudices against a secret organization could be eliminated by an explanation of the principles upon which that organization was based.

Believing that it was a Ku Klux Klan meeting, several newspaper men, a Hebrew in disguise and an Irish Catholic attended the meeting to ascertain what, if any, were the objects to accomplish which this aggregation of mortals were gathered together.

The visitors, after listening carefully to a preacher from New Jersey and the local Klokard held a heated discussion one claiming that the Klan was a dry goods company primarily engaged in the business of selling underwear and specializing in night shirts, another claimed that it was a collection of morons managed by a few clever gold brick artists, while a third, who reads the Liberator, claimed that it represents an economic upsurge and was related, the somewhat distantly, to the third party sentiment that portion of it which was conducted into the White House by Henry Ford in return for a shot at Muscle Shoals.

Each Party Right; All Wrong

The writer claims that the three, like the nine blind men of Hindustan who went to see the elephant, were partly in the right and all were in he wrong:

Undoubtedly the Klan sells night shirts and night caps, hundreds of thousands of morons are in the organization and it represents a protest against the economic condition in which the middle class babbits of America, find themselves in. But that is not a 100% explanation.

On our arrival at the meeting hall, exactly 45 persons were there, including the speaker and the chairman. A large American flag hung back of the speaker's stand and several flags were furled in the corners of the hall. The chairman, or the Klokard turned out afterwards to be either a juggler or an animated flag pole. But this comes later on.

The Numbers Are Meager

The Klokard advised the audience hat owing to the antics of an "alien" (that is a non-member of the Klan) undreds of potential nightie wearers ere switched away from the hall, hence the meager numbers. Accord- g to description given of the cul- t, he must have been a member the Knights of Columbus or one the chosen people. Fortunately ever, by the time we arrived at meeting place, he was invisible in his place was a 100% Ameri- carrying an umbrella to protect elf from a hundred per cent erican drizzle which fell on subject, citizen and alien alike. Excuses such as were given by our friend the Klokard are used quite frequently even by radicals in explaining scanty audiences so we did not blame the poor fellow for it. In fact the representative of a great news gathering agency who accompanied me, rather sympathized with him.

After seven more persons had passed the prying eyes of Kluds, Koons and Kukoos that were stationed by the very dirty entrance, the Klokard summed up sufficient courage to open the meeting. Everybody was requested to stand and sing something or other which excited much enthusiasm in the Klokard. As the Irish penitent said, "I sang God forgive me; I sang like the rest." Prayer was also moderately indulged in after which dissipation the Klokard proceeded to address himself to the 52 subjects and the vast open spaces where men were not men.

He attacked the detractors of the Ku Klux Klan, declared that it was regrettable that a great organization like the United Mine Workers of America, should discriminate against them and that the Klan really thought as much of labor as it did of capital.

A short stocky, little gentleman with a spoted vest who was sitting in a corner was announced as the speaker of the evening. His name was kept a secret, but we were told he was from New Jersey, and I believe he is a colonel, whether in the American army or the army of the Lord, I do not know. However, he is a fighting man and will go to bat with the devil any time. He said so and we must take his word for it.

The Klan Has Four Planks

The Klan stands for four main propositions he declared: First for the Christian religion, second for the christian home, third for the public schools and last, but not least, for government.

What got this man of God's goat particularly, was the information given to him by a doctor in a New Jersey city, that 90 per cent of the girls going to school in that particular city were afflicted with a venereal disease. The unknown doctor heard this unknown speaker deliver a lecture in the unknown city and after the meeting was over he came up and grasped him by the hand, confessed he did not know the devil what he was talking about (quite possible) but said, that he talked like a man who would qualify for membership in the janitor's union. He had a job that required men of his type and it turned out to be cleaning up several houses of prostitution which flourished in the neighborhood. Now, the speaker has no prejudice whatsoever against Jews and Catholics; he absolutely admits that—but it happened that two Hebrews were the managers of one of these houses of shame and that Catholic policemen undoubtedly were patrolling the neighborhood. The speaker assured the venereal speialist that the Klan would relieve him of considerable practice and reduce the exigencies of his profession by closing down these social pest houses at the next election. The method is to threaten the politicians with any number of votes up to one hundred thousand and then watch their smoke.

New Jersey is unfortunate in being located near New York, which is called Jew York in the Invisible Realm. From there foreigners can enter New Jersey for a few pennies.

The Christian home must be maintained, he vociferated and according to the speaker, but for the Klan, virtue would be as rare in America, as an Indian on the banks of the Shannon. It is unnecessary to follow the Unknown Nightie into the realm of assininity into which he floated, suffice it to say that he raved like a regular preacher and talked about God as if he went to church with him.

When the unknown finished speaking, the Klokard got down to business. He confessed that he was an Irishman and as proof of that assertion he exhibited a green rag and cracked a joke about a bed bug. This was not very convincing to the lone Irish Catholic who never saw such a piece of cloth before, having the temerity to masquerade as an emblem of Ireland and the joke tho biting was of the kind that is not very welcome in polite society.

He evidently did not consider the fact of being born in Ireland, sufficient to prove that he was a human being so he insisted on selecting an English woman for a mother and taking unto himself a German woman for a wife. He also brought forth half a dozen children in America to prove that he was not a follower of Margaret Sanger and by a clever piece of sleight of hand turned several flags into one American flag. This was applauded; his jugglery making more of an impression on the audience than his speech.

He Grew Mysterious

Having said very little so far about labor in order to give some excuse for drawing the miners out on such a disagreeable evening, he grew mysterious and produced a document which was issued by the Grand Dragon of the Realm of Indiana last October, on the question of capital and labor. It urged the citizens of the Empire to maintain at all times the best of relations with their employers. They were urged to form a committee of five at the mines in order to co-operate with the boss. A coal operator from Indiana, testified according to the dragon that the Ku Klux Klan helped him to smash a strike which was called an "outlaw strike" and ever since the Klan became the dominating factor in his mines he never had any trouble with his help.

"Give unto Caesar that which is Caesar's" is the moto of the Klan, he said. In other words the capitalists and the workers should go out of each other's way to be generous in true Spanish fashion each one saying to the other "After you Alphonso."

After reading the document he boasted about the millions of members the Klan had enrolled. He was sorry the mysteries of the order did not permit him to divulge the number. He declared Congress was almost under the invisible thumb and the Senate ditto. The Klan would secure control of the mass vote in America, and run this country for the Americans.

The New Jersey man said that 15,000 school teachers were disloyal and the Klan was waiting patiently until it possessed sufficient power to tie a tin can to the teachers and turn them loose. The Klokard was equally in emphatic asserting that the Klan meant business. At the conclusion of the Klokard's speech he suddenly swung around and lo! another American flag, pole and all appeared from his hip pocket. There was wild applause again over this remarkable feat.

There Are Many Questions

Questions were called for. They came. Many of them were superfluous. Some of them intentionally so. One man made an intelligent speech, but it only brought looks of astonishment something like that on the face of a Chinaman, when asked to explain the signs on a laundry check. Questions such as "Can a Catholic join the Ku Klux?" or "Are Masons eligible?" were answered politely. Some expressed the opinion that the miners' union may some day ask to join the Ku Klux Klan. One member of the audience asked the speaker to explain why he was born in Ireland, another asked if God created the colored people. To the first he said he couldn't help it but left there as soon as he could and never went back, much to Ireland's advantage, I believe, and to the second he admitted that God created the negro, but did not have the slightest idea when he did so that the negro would come to America. But the English were responsible for that.

We left the meeting not sadder, but a little wiser. We continued the discussion as to whether the Klan was a phenomenon, a disease or a business. The debate is still raging as these lines are being writen, each one of the three appearing to the innocent bystanders to be absolutely right. The three disputants exceedingly regretted that a question which might throw much light on the why of the Ku Klux Klan was not asked. It is, "Is it possible to keep morons from joining the Ku Klux Klan?"

COAL MINERS! Talk To Your Convention Thru Daily Worker

Coal Miners! Your convention is on at Indianapolis, Ind. It will be responsive to your needs if you will talk to it, talk to it in loud and emphatic tones.

You can do this thru your paper, THE DAILY WORKER. You can do it every day. You can make yourself heard.

Every day THE DAILY WORKER goes to the convention at Tomlinson Hall, at Indianapolis. The miners' delegates are reading it, from first page, first column, to last page, last column.

If you will write to THE DAILY WORKER, telling your needs, the delegates will read your letter.

One of the big things you are interested in is unemployment. If you don't work there is no pay envelope. If you don't work, there is nothing with which to pay the landlord, the grocer, with which to buy the things your family needs. How do you get along? How do you make both ends meet? What do you demand?

Tell it to the delegates at Indianapolis. Tell it to your highly paid officials, whose salaries go on the whole year around.

Write about all the other great prbolems confronting the al miners of this country. Your letters will be published in HE DAILY WORKER and read by the delegates at your con- ention at Indianapolis. Write to the Editor, The Daily Worker, 40 N. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

FORD'S FRIEND OFFERS SELF AS SACRIFICE

New Michigan Plute Steps into the Arena

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 31.—R. R. Pointer, Fort Dearborn, Mich., millionaire, and original booster of Henry Ford for president, was the outstanding figure in the race for the presidential nomination of the Peoples' Progressive Party at the party's first annual convention today.

The convention had been called for the avowed purpose of nominating Ford.

Pointer told newspapermen that he "would be proud to be the new party's candidate." He declared that Ford is now "impossible," since he advocated the re-election of President Coolidge.

Speakers at last night's session denounced the federal reserve bank system. The principal plank in the platform, it was stated, will be demand for repeal of the federal reserve bank law and substitution of a government owned system by which currency may be issued directly by the government against the productive wealth of the country.

For Recognition of Soviet Russia!

The Lewis Bureaucracy Trembles Before Wrath of Rank and File

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS.—For the first time since this turbulent convention opened John L. Lewis completely lost control today and left the hall at five o'clock unable to restore order.

The resounding voice that carried to the farthest recesses of the building when he was trouncing imprisoned Jim McLachlan of Nova Scotia for having called a strike to aid the steel workers was today unable to reach as far as the press table. For one hour he stood there smoking a cigar and surveying the result of his own insolence, occasionally attempting to bring the miners to order but each attempt ended in total failure.

Had Mr. Lewis cared less for maintaining his reputation as a "strong man", who will not bend to the coal miners, than for doing his dirty work against the delegates he could have restored order in five minutes by conceding the right of recount which is the privilege of any deliberative assembly when there is the slightest doubt of the accuracy of the count.

Lewis Abusive

"You can shout until you meet each other in hell" he shouted at more than fifty per cent of that great gathering which demanded a square deal. The delegates however were just as determined as he was and refused to allow any more use of the high handed methods that have enabled Mr. Lewis to pose as a victor in this convention until now.

There was considerable ill feeling at the end of the morning's session when the result of the roll call vote was declared. It was asserted that locals that exist only on paper had votes and that along with the payrollers, the wishes of the rank and file, the men who pay the dues, were ignored. But tho the rank and file may be inarticulate, they will not always tolerate the dictatorship of any one man, particularly a man who is more concerned with the observance of agreements with the boss than he is of the rights of the miners.

A Vital Issue

The question of election versus appointment of organizers is a vital one for the miners union. The miners feel keenly about this. They are determined that an ambitious president shall not have the facilities for building a machine to perpetuate himself in office, a machine built by the dollars of the miners.

After the official count was announced it was freely stated that the progressive elements were gypped out of a victory as Alex Howat was a few years ago. On reconvening in the afternoon session a delegate desired to lodge a protest against this kind of a roll call but Mr. Lewis ignored him.

The powerful Illinois district has always been a thorn in the side of the Lewis machine. Farrington and Lewis fought each other for years, now they have kissed and made up. But the district of which Farrington is president voted almost solidly against the appointive power and it is freely predicted by the Illinois delegates to this convention that Farrington is done for as president of District 12. He voted for the administration and so did his other executive officers.

"Progressive" Reps Shattered

The socalled progressives have shown up in their true colors at this convention. One could not expect very much from a man like Frank Farrington whose only association with anything of a progressive nature was his fight for Howat so long as the latter was useful to him in fighting the Lewis machine, but men like John Brophy, Thomas Kennedy, and C. F. Keeney who enjoyed a reputation for standing for something beyond "a fair day's work for a fair day's wage" have proven themselves to be lackeys of the capitalist system ready to do anything that would please the bosses. They have never uttered a peep at this convention when such questions as the labor party, nationalization, amalgamation and the recognition of Soviet Russia were assassinated by the reactionary labor lieutenants of capital who now control the official machinery of the miners' union.

Dove of Peace Was Hovering

The afternoon session proceeded smoothly with Van H. Bittner reporting for the resolutions committee until he got as far as section two of article ten. At the last international convention the constitution was amended to prohibit local unions with a membership of five hundred from sending over one delegate to the convention. As this would give tremendous convention power to small locals the large locals felt that it was a discriminatory clause and several resolutions were introduced calling for its amendment.

Hartness Opens Battle

Delegate William Hartness, president of the Peoria sub-district, took the platform and read a resolution adopted by that sub-district providing for the direct election of delegates from the local unions they represent, that each delegate shall have one vote for each one hundred members or less and an additional vote for each one hundred members or majority fraction thereof.

Delegate Hartness declared that the insertion of this clause was due to Lewis' fight on the Illinois district. This was not denied.

For the first time since the opening of this convention the officials of the Illinois district lined up against Lewis. George Mercer, statistician for the Illinois District, said that the present section was undemocratic.

Secretary Green, and one or two other delgates argued in behalf of the committee's report and the vote was taken. The count announced was 785 for and 692 against the commitee's report. This did not satisfy the opposition. They demanded a roll call. The roll call requires that 30 per cent of the delegates at the convention demand it. Thirty per cent of this convention of 1870 delegates is 561. William Green announced that 558 demanded it. Only three short of the necessary number!

Too Raw

This was too much for the delegates. On previous occasions the convention quieted down after incidents like this occurred but this time it did not do so. A seething mass of humanity milled around the floor, stood on chairs, sat down, got up again and continued in this fashion for one hour while the chairman looked on helplessly.

Alex Piazza, a delegate from Bairdford, Pa., was assaulted by one of the sergeants-at-arms. Piazza was demanding that they be given a square deal when this surly looking fellow took him by the arm as if to advise him to keep quiet and instead hit him. It was apparently the intention to precipitate a real fight but while the delegates were noisy and determined on having their rights, there was no violence with that exception.

Administration hacks were shouting that the opposition should be hanged, etc., but no effort was made to carry out these threats. Before this article appears in print Secretary of Labor Davis may or may not have spoken. January 31 may be a critical day for John L. Lewis.

Western Pennsy Miners Rely on "Daily Worker"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The coal miners of this section are relying solely on The DAILY WORKER for news of the Indianapolis convention and they have never been more interested in the debates and policy proposals at the national convention of their union.

The progressive miners here do not believe reports of the Indianapolis meeting carried by any other daily paper. Their attention is concentrated on the reinstatement of Alex Howat and Tom Myerscough and judging from many remarks heard here and there, delegates are going to encounter some biting criticism if the campaign for the reinstatement of these two militants fails.

This is not all the miners here expect from the convention, however. They know that Lewis has rounded up his machine men for an attack on the whole program of the Progressive Miners' Committee and they want their delegates to fight all the way.

They do not want any compromise on their basic wage scale and conditions and express themselves as ready to respond to a strike call if the operators follow their threats with an attack.

The Western Pennsylvania miners are against anything but full publicity in the coming negotiations, and want no mysterious agreements and compromises between officials and operators.

The appearance of The DAILY WORKER has greatly encouraged all progressive elements here, and they believe it marks a turning point not only in the affairs of the United Mine Workers but of the entire labor movement. Every day brings added proof of their earnest support of the paper.

Some Idle Thoughts

We have it upon reliable authority that the Republican Party is planning to Hughes an oil can as a party emblem during the next presidential campaign.

• • • •

We are confident, however, that none but cabinet officers, politicians and Ex-Senators Fall for that kind of stuff.

• • • •

With a Ford behind it the well-oiled Coolidge machine should run well.

• • • •

The ancient proverb "Oily to bed and oily to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise," should be very encouraging to the sick Mr. Fall.

• • • •

Mr. Fall is the only politician we know, who has developed a feeling of loneliness in Washington.

• • • •

It seems that Attorney-General Daugherty, Chief of the Department of Justice-to-Whom, in his hunt for traitors and enemies of the guv'ment has inadvertently overlooked certain gentlemen who have generously handed over the Naval Reserve oil lands to Sinclair, Doheny et al. No doubt these lands are now in safekeeping to be used in milking the government by the future dollar-a-year-men during the next war.

Some Job! Miners Got 543,300,000 Tons of Coal Out of Ground in 1923

Soft coal production in the United States last year totalled 543,300,000 tons compared with 422,268,000 tons in 1922, the seventh federal reserve district bank here reported today.

Sagging markets contributed to increased idleness in Illinois and Indiana mines during December, the report stated.

While the Illinois output for December was 17.5 per cent less than the preced g December, the annual production showed an increase of 42.7 per cent over 1922.

CROWDING MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

The reports coming from New York where the seating capacity for Madison Square Garden is rapidly being exhausted in the sale of tickets for Monday evening's memorial meeting show an outpouring of sentiment far in advance of anything the metropolis has seen in years for any cause.

All Workers Party headquarters are busy with the sale of tickets and the rehearsing of arrangements for the tremendous demonstration of Monday. Hundreds of ushers have been appointed to handle the crowd in the great amphitheatre.

As the crowd takes its seats Monday night strains of the Russian Symphony celloists and violinists will rise from the pit and singers of national fame will follow with the revolutionary hymns that Lenin loved so well. Between the speaking parts of the program the music will continue.

William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg will tell of the proletarian genius who has been taken from his comrades and they will be followed by noted New York party speakers.

Writes on Social Conduct of Negro and White Workers

To the DAILY WORKER: The capitalist class and their agents do everything possible to prevent social contact between Negro and white workers. The whole jimcrow and segregation system of the southern states and the anti-intermarriage laws are the weapon by which the crafty southern capitalists keep the Negro and white workers hopelessly divided.

In no southern state can Negro and white workers legally meet together in the same hall, theatre or park, neither can they ride together on trains, street cars nor busses, and for a Negro and white person in the south to be legally married, is out of the question.

By the above methods and many others, the idea is conveyed to the southern white workers that all Negroes are their inferiors and are not fit to mix or associate with them.

The white southern workers believe every lie printed in the capitalist papers concerning the Negro, and will form into mobs and lynch Negroes for any imaginary crime.

The southern ruling class are tickled to death for this state of affairs, because they can rob and exploit both Negro and white workers to their hearts content, and know that a united front of the black and white workers is impossible.

However, the capitalist planter class of the south care no more for the ignorant white workers of the south than they do for the black. White unionists and labor organizers are also lynched, shot and terrorized by the hired thugs of the southern capitalists.

White children under 15 years of age, are forced to toil in the cotton mills at starvation wages. Altho the capitalist legislatures pass laws prohibiting blacks and whites from legally marrying, the so-called southern gentlemen have produced four million children by Negro women.

In spite of the present gloomy condition in the south, I truly believe that the southern white workers will soon come to their senses, and in place of forming mobs and lynching Negroes at the behest of their white exploiters, they will clasp the hand of their Negro brother workers and together fight their real enemy, the capitalist class.

When this condition comes about, the first nail will have been driven into the coffin, now prepared to receive the half dead body of capitalism.—Gordon W. Owens, Chicago.

Communist International Urges Unity of Armenian Workers in Workers Party

The situation which exists in the United States among the various groups of Armenian workers who are sympathetic to the Communist International, particularly in relation to the Armenian Workers Party and the former Social-Democratic Hunchakist Party was considered by the Executive Committee of the Communist International on December 27th.

After a full discussion of the whole problem of bringing these Armenian workers into the organized Communist movement of the Party, the Executive Committee of the Communist International adopted the following decision:

"To send a telegram to the American Workers Party demanding that Comrade Sunarin with the whole opposition group return into the ranks of the Workers Party and await the instructions of the E. C. C. I., which are being sent immediately.

"b) While approving the steps taken by the American Workers Party for the unification of the revolutionary Communist elements and for bringing them into the ranks of the Workers Patry, to insist that after the Congress of the Workers Party in December, 1923, an Armenian Conference be convened with the object of carrying out the recommendations of the E. C. C. I. laid down in the resolution of the Presidium in February, 1923. At this conference the title 'ARMENIAN SECTION OF THE WORKERS PARTY' must be definitely adopted.

"(c) Considering that the concessions made by the Workers Party in the question of the Armenian paper were intended to make the process of unification as smooth as possible, to emphasize the point that the management of this paper must be at present under the political control of the Workers Party and that only reliable comrades be admitted to the editorial staff of the paper."

The Convention of the Armenian section has been called by the C. E. C. of the Workers Party for endorsement of the Bureau of the Armenian Federation, for February 22, in Boston, and it is expected that at this Convention a solid united organization of Armenian Communists will be brought into existence as the ARMENIAN SECTION OF THE WORKERS PARTY.

THE JUNIOR GROUPS AND THE CAPITALIST PUBLIC SCHOOL.

Article No. IX.

In the capitalist Public School the child is nothing, the teacher everything. The school is based upon the authority of the teacher. The child must remain silent until it is addressed; it must listen attentively while the teacher speaks; it must accept without protest every punishment and every task given it. In the capitalist school the teacher is a god, furnished at times with a rod and a note book, the embodiment of knowledge and power—and hence a tyrant. The teacher is under the control of the principal, the principal under the superintendent, the superintendent under the school board, and thus up to the Secretary of the Interior. A whole pyramid of gods and demi-gods towers over the child who naturally feels himself to be as insignificant and small as a grain of sand on the seashore. Woe to the child who has a strong will! Will is a sin against the holy order. Even tho the teacher may be wrong, the child dare not be right, because this would weaken the authority of the teacher. A systematized curriculum is impossible without authority. And it is just this authority that we seek and intend to undermine.

BEDTIME STORY

By ROLAND QUILLAN.

Once upon a time, in fact dear children, the time of jazz hurry and banana songs, when the great democrat party was named after a donkey, a man stepped out from the wilds of the west to announce himself the champion of progressivism and humanity. He stood for every thing that was good, so he said, with special reference to the poor and downtrodden. He stood for these things vigorously every year before the election. When the election was over and he had a berth with a spittoon in congress—well, dear listeners, that was another story, not to be told before bedtime. But, little ones, do not be too hasty to judge. Always remember the motto of the politicians of "policy is the best policy," and, as nothing and nothing equal nothing, so politicians will always be politicians.

It was at this time, dear children, that the two great financial groups, the eastern bankers and the mid-western industrialists, had a mild controversy. The wicked bankers desired our country to get in the League of Nations to make good their loans, while the industrialists, my children, were not so much interested. Our hero politician from the golden west, with his old-fashioned glasses and ideas, belonged to the group of mid-western industrialists. He was a good agent and vigorously fought with weighty words the foreign entanglements of the League of Nations.

For this service, children, the papers of the industrialists gave him the title of "Progressive."

In modern slang, dear children, he got away with it until the working people, who hitherto had no means to give full expression to their views, started a daily paper of their own. Then it was, little ones, that the record of this western politician was examined, weighed, published and, in the opinion of the working people, was sadly found to be wanting. It is this that proves, dear children, that the greatest weapon the working people can have is their own working class daily paper. So, dear children, to be well informed, please subscribe to the Young Worker and the Young Comrade.

GREAT ADVANCE BY T. U. E. L, IN YEAR JUST PASSED

Yearly Report Shows Big Press Increase

The regular yearly meeting of the Trade Union Educational League held last night heard a detailed report of the organization activities for the past year. The report showed splendid progress in every branch of the League's work.

The Building Trades section reported an increase in circulation of their paper—The Progressive Building Trades Worker—to approximately ten thousand copies.

The Metal Trades section reported a noticeable slackening in employment and union halls filled with jobless mechanics necessitating an appeal for financial assistance to the international offices and for an investigation into the serious situation in Chicago. A new group of Jewelry Workers has been added to the Metal Trades section.

The delegate from the Needle Trades section, I. Davidson, gave new information on the situation in the Ladies' Garment Workers' union and the fight against Sigman Perlstein and their expulsion program. The situation in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, he said, is more favorable for the militants.

The success of the official organ of this group—The Needle Trades Worker—is testimony to the progress made in this industry.

Officers for Year.

Earl Browder, of the Labor Herald staff, was elected chairman for the ensuing term; Walt Carmon, secretary and literature agent; A. Overgaard, organizer. Phil Aronberg was elected to the executive board for the Needle Trades; D. E. Early for the Food Trades, with one other board member to be chosen from each of the Metal, Printing and Building Trade sections.

Earl Browder, in reviewing the work of the league, paid special attention to the work of the militants at the miners' convention. He said: "To me it means that the left wing has arrived. It is in the labor movement to stay and nothing can drive it out."

None of the Chicago militants should have missed this meeting.

Philippine Leader and W. P. Members Speaking Tonight

The Workers Party will join with Pedro Guevara, resident commissioner of the Philippines to the United States, at a mass meeting at Schoenhofen's hall, Milwaukee and Ashland avenues tonight, protesting against American imperialism in the islands and United States betrayal of the promise for self-determination.

Guevara led the first strike in the Philippines in 1907, a strike of 5,000 sailors. He was the organizer of the Philippine Seamen's union.

C. E. Ruthenberg, James P. Cannon and Jay Lovestone will address the meeting, with Guevara. The Workers Party has been conducting an active agitation for the right of the Filipinos to conduct their own affairs without dictation by American militarists and trusts.

The Daily Worker Will Start Publishing "A WEEK" ON FEB. 16

Read This Letter Carefully!

Chicago, Illinois, January 31, 1924

To the Readers of THE DAILY WORKER:-

Dear Reader:-THE DAILY WORKER has been advertising that the great Russian Novel A WEEK by Iury Libedinski will be published serially in the columns of THE DAILY WORKER. We are now happy to announce that this wonderful book which every worker in America will want to read will be published starting February 16. Whether the installments will be published weekly or daily will be for our readers to decide.

We know that every one of our readers are looking forward with a great deal of pleasurable anticipation to A WEEK. We know that none of the rapidly growing army of DAILY WORKER readers who already feel that no day is complete without THE DAILY WORKER, will now more than ever want to assure themselves that they will not miss a single issue.

But we wish to call to your attention that many who are now getting THE DAILY WORKER regularly are those whose subscriptions for the weekly WORKER were transferred over to the Daily. Most of these subscriptions will expire on February 14 and shortly thereafter. If the number of your address label is No. 352 or lower, or if the date on your address label is 3-1-24 or less, that means that your subscription will expire on or before March 1, 1924 and that you will not continue to receive THE DAILY WORKER after that date.

During the first few days of the publication of THE DAILY WORKER so many subscriptions came into our business office that not all of them could be placed on the mailing list at once, with the result that some subscribers were forced to undergo the hardship of doing without some of the issues of THE DAILY WORKER. Even now many subscriptions are still coming in with the request that "the subscription be started with the very first issue. I do not want to miss a single issue," write hundreds of subscribers.

We expect that the same thing will happen again; after A WEEK has begun in our columns, we will be deluged with hundreds of requests for back numbers, which we will be unable to fill. A word to the wise is sufficient. Order your DAILY WORKER NOW. If your subscription expires soon or if you are unfortunate enough not to be a subscriber, fill in the coupon below and send it in to assure yourself of receiving the first installment and every installment of A WEEK.

Fraternally yours,

Lenin, Foster, Organization

Some remarkable speeches were made at the great Lenin memorial meeting last Tuesday night under the inspiration of the occasion and the enthusiasm of the vast gathering.

There was eloquence aplenty and the audience showed its appreciation, but it likewise gave its approval to something more than beautiful and stirring oratory.

The response of the crowd to what was really an organization speech by William Z. Foster, the response to what was not only an invitation to join the Workers (Communist) Party of America, but a reprimand for not doing so, must have been a source of pleasant surprise to party members. The audience was told without any mincing of words that the Communist movement is a movement of action and struggle and that in this it differs from every revolutionary movement that has preceded it. "No one is a Communist," said Foster, "who is outside of the Workers Party of America," and the audience roared its approval.

This is a significant incident. It shows that the left wing of the American working class in Chicago, at least, is awakening out of the apathy it has been sunk in for some considerable time. It is beginning to orient itself and to the evidently large group that wants to resume activity the Workers Party of America offers the only field for their efforts. Foster, like Lenin, is essentially an organizer and if at the Lenin Memorial meeting he was trying to sound working class sentiment for revolutionary education and action he received a response that should satisfy him that the time for organization work on a broad scale is ripe.

The Workers Party is carrying on campaigns that use up every ounce of the energy of the present membership. There is no active comrade that is not overworked and more members are needed. They are coming in but not fast enough to supply the demand for the workers the intensive activities of the party demand.

We believe that a new drive for membership would, if the response to Foster's speech is an indication, net greater results for the party than the one that ended with the convention, successful as it was.

Labor's Admiralty Lord

The first labor cabinet in England has four titled members—Viscounts Haldane and Chelmsford, Sir Sidney Olivier and Baron Parmoor.

These men are not now and never have been members of the English working class. They have never associated themselves with the big struggles of the working men for liberation from capitalist mastery. The appointment of one of these, Viscount Chelmsford, to First Lord of the Admiralty is particularly significant. This cabinet position corresponds to the secretaryship of the navy in the United States.

It is a political copy-book axiom that the British navy is the bulwark of English imperialism. MacDonald could not have chosen more conclusive proof of his intention to support the imperialistic empire than by the appointment of Chelmsford to this strategic post in the Cabinet. Viscount Chelmsford is a staunch reactionary. The Tories look upon him as the white hope of the present difficulty with which they are faced. They feel that with Lord Chelmsford at the helm of the navy the government will not move too quickly. Perhaps nothing terrified British capitalists more than the danger of the appointment of some workingman as Lord Admiral of the navy. With this danger definitely disposed of, the English capitalists and Tories are breathing more freely.

Lord Chelmsford is an iron man in politics. He has served the imperialists as Governor of Queensland, New South Wales, and Viceroy of India. It was he who foisted the tyrannic rule on India in the crucial period of 1916 to 1921. It was during his regime that the infamous Armitsar massacre occurred.

The English workers might well ask of MacDonald and his cabinet colleagues why they have had a change of heart since the Armitsar massacre. Why did MacDonald then denounce Chelmsford and demand his recall? Why does he now appoint him a member of the cabinet and particularly why has he given Chelmsford control of the most redoubtable outpost of British imperialism? Whom does MacDonald intend to serve as Premier?

Daugherty and the Klan

Lest some may be burdened with the fear that the epidemic of congressional investigations will reach the Ku Klux Klan, we point to an interesting disclosure just made in the February issue of the International Magazine.

When Congress opened, a good deal of noise was made about the case of Senator Mayfield of Texas. To the innocent public it appeared as if the Ku Klux Klan would surely be unmasked because the republican administration would welcome a chance to conduct at least one damaging investigation on its southern democratic opponents.

Not so. In the last of the International series on the Ku Klux Klan we have the following: "Congress started to investigate the Ku Klux Klan. The hearings were suddenly called off. People all over the country wondered why nothing came of it. The Klan used a pull on a government official. The government official saw Attorney General Daugherty. The investigation stopped."

The article quotes from a letter purporting to have been written by Harry B. Terrell, the Ku Klux attorney at the congressional hearings, to the effect that a certain Colonel Acuff, a personal friend of President Coolidge and Daugherty, had agreed to see the Attorney-General because it is generally conceded that the latter has more influence with the President and upon this administration than any other cabinet member.

This is an eye-opener. It shows conclusively that the employers' government, is tacitly supporting the Ku Klux Klan. It shows very clearly that the Ku Klux Klan is looked upon by the capitalist class as one of its most powerful allies. What is more, it completely establishes the fact that the government will not take any serious steps to punish those who have been defrauding the country's treasury and stealing our natural resources.

Out in the Open

Little effort is needed to convince the average worker that in American politics today money is king and corruption its prime minister.

But it is a somewhat difficult task to win over the average American worker and farmer to the belief that the present government is run by and for the capitalists' interests. It is true, one can point to the tariff which is an outright bonus of more than three billion dollars annually to the capitalists. Now and then, with increasing frequency to be sure, it can be shown that a Senator or Congressman is in the pay of some big private interests and is simply "doing time" on Capitol Hill in behalf of his corporation masters.

Yet, it is not often that Senators and Congressmen dare come into the open as servants of big capitalist interests. The case of ex-Senator McCumber of North Dakota, is an illuminating example of this type. McCumber is now appearing before the United States Tariff Commission in behalf of the southern sugar interests to demand that present tariff rates on sugar be not lowered.

Mr. McCumber was the father of the tariff act which costs the working masses approximately $90,000,000 a year in increased sugar prices arising from higher sugar import schedules. While in the Senate, Mr. McCumber did all he could to enact legislation which would levy this gigantic tribute on the workers and farmers. Now that he is out of the Senate, Mr. McCumber is rewarded by the sugar interests with a handsome fee for arguing their case before the Tariff Commission to perpetuate this tribute being paid them by the workers. Apparently experience is an asset of paramount value in our great national game of selling out those who work to those who own.

The Tribune

As Oswald Garrison Villard said in his recent book on newspapers and newspapermen, the Chicago Tribune, which lays claim to being "The World's Greatest Newspaper," would make a good bid for the position of worst. Its blindness to news values and its callous indifference to human lives was never more glaringly illustrated than in the recent murder of 33 union miners at Johnston City, Ill.

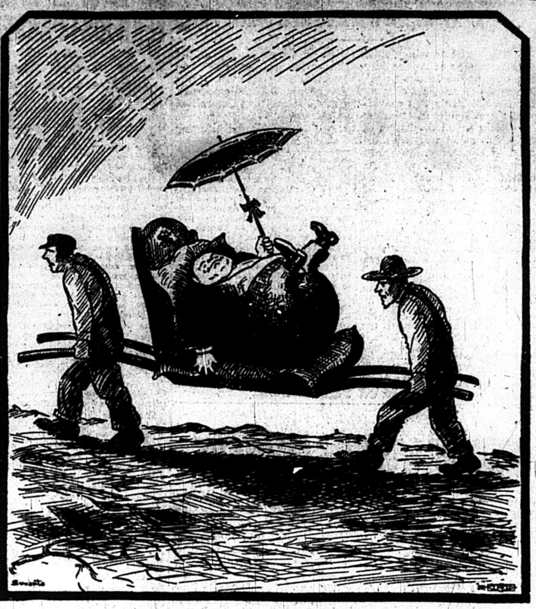
A tiny and obscure paragraph told of the findings of the coroner's jury, holding the Crerar-Clinch Coal Co. responsible for the deaths of the 33 workingmen who were caught in the blast. The company's guilt was established by its proven failure to put up danger signs around the workings whence came the deadly fire damp.

How the Tribune tore its hair and called for vengeance when a number of scabs and gunmen lost their lives in Williamson county in 1922! Hundreds of columns of ink were spilt in the effort to bring a number of union men to the gallows. But when a mine owner murders 33 union miners, just one meager item—glossing over the more vigorous parts of the coroner's verdict—is printed.

Could the class character of a bosses' propaganda sheet be more convincingly shown?

If a real test of the feasibility of the peace plan submitted by the Bok prize-winner is desired, why not turn him loose on the fundamentalist-modernist controversy now raging among the Christian soldiery?

100 PER CENT AMERICANISM IN PRACTICE



No Wonder the Workers and Farmers Are Protesting.

Murky Prosperity in the Building Trades

By HARRY GANNES.

BUILDING trades workers are apt to think their industry is unaffected by the general, depressive trend of business generally in the United States, and that unemployment is a remote possibility for them.

A glance at the facts in the building industry warn the building trades unions, however, to be on the guard. Envious and disgruntled at the comparatively high wages paid building trades workers, the master builders are straining at the leash for an opportunity to stamp into the dust the organization of the building workers.

Prices of building material is dropping, and the past four to five months shows a decline of from four to ten per cent. To the building capitalist this is a sure sign that wages must come down; and if strong organization is successful in maintaining wages or even increasing them, the conclusion is drawn by the building bosses that the organizations must come down with the wages.

How the master builders were training apprentices in every line of the building industry to frustrate strikes has been pointed out by Max Schachtman in the Young Worker. This is an important factor that cannot be overlooked.

Just the other day Earle Shultz, the president of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers (an organization representing $5,000,000,000 worth of property in the principal cities of the United States) announced that the putting up of skyscrapers was going to stop. He echoed the warning note that Babson initiated in a recent building trades survey: Too many office buildings went up in 1919; business is falling, the number of failures is increasing and available office space is greater than the demand. Shultz puts it this way:

"During the war years nearly every city was faced with an acute shortage of office building space. After the war there was such a strong demand for space that, regardless of construction costs, innumerable office buildings went up. But now that the demand has been largely filled we shall probably see building operations tapering off for some time to come.

"The new space that has been put on the market is necessarily high priced, because the cost of building material and the unprecedented wages paid to labor."

Babson declares that the present abnormal amount of building cannot continue, and states that "if costs should advance further we would experience a severe reduction in construction work."

The New York Building Trades Employers' Association had issued the announcement that if wages became higher they would decrease building work, and are already starting a campaign to lower wages. Since the Eastern district would be mainly hit by a stoppage of larger construction, the announcement by the president of the Owners and Managers Association that skyscraper construction would stop means a slackening in building activity in New York and vicinity.

Fifty per cent of present construction work is confined to residential properties, for the most part the smaller types. A gradual increase in unemployment is bound to affect this activity as the rents charged in the newer structures cannot be met by the workers.

United States Commerce reports for December 31, 1923, show a decrease in the activities of nearly all basic industries. Production of steel by independent steel mills totaled 188,144 tons in November of 1923, as against 225,714 in October. Plant capacity was decreased.

Building permits for 27 states showed a decrease from 319,860 in October to 289,263 in November. While it is true that this is somewhat due to weather conditions, the fact that the total building contracts in the Northeastern states dropped from $323,558,800 in June of 1923, to $274,205,100 in July of the same year, proves that the building industry is also capable of quick retreat.

On the whole no rapid unemployment can be expected in the building industry; tho no one will deny that all facts and statistics prove a gradual shutting down. How far this will go depends on the movement in the basic industries, which are anything but encouraging. With the coming depression there will be initiated a drive for lower wages. Concerted effort by the Builders' associations to install apprentice schools shows that they can foresee the time when they can materially weaken the strength of the building trade unions, while on the other hand the unions are following the ostrich-in-the-sand policy of excluding and limiting the number of apprentices, and keeping a good many of the young fellows who are bound to become building tradesmen out of the union.

The present breathing spell should be a time girding and strengthening the fighting capacities of the building trades unions in order to maintain the existing wage rates, especially, as was pointed out before when unemployment threatens the basic industries and there is a drop in prices of building material.

Negro Leadership

By LOVETT FORT-WHITEMAN

When the Negro in America became a freedman, the Negro preacher was at once recognized as the logical leader of the race. One explanation of this fact is that, during the generations of bondage, the Negro so-called preacher was the only source of moral strength and consolation for the slave. In secret spots deep in the woods, the slaves would gather in common prayer about the person of the slave-preacher, who believed himself ordained by God. This slave-preacher, at emancipation, being the most enlightened among his people, was the easily accepted leader.

They loved their people and sought help among the rich for funds to build schools and churches. The emancipation of the Negro having been simply a transformation from the status of a chattel to that of a wage-slave, the capitalist class found in the Negro preacher a potent instrument by which they could influence the Negro masses to their selfish interest. The ranks of Negro leadership have widened; today it is no longer confined wholly to the clergy. But an unwholesome practice set by the clergy has been kept up; and relationship between the two races for which it is responsible, and which cannot but encourage disrespect on the part of the employing class of the [illegible] and [illegible] animosity between the [illegible] of both races, has been maintained.

The money that has gone to build up Negro institutions of learning thruout the South has come largely from members of the capitalist class of the North; those, who at the same time, are the most relentless exploiters of Negro labor, whether their interests be established in the North or South. The popular Negro leader at this time cannot speak out in the full and true interest of his race. And this is because he draws his subsistence from the capitalist class who are daily exploiting the Negro in the mills, factories, mines, on the plantations, in the transport industries, etc. Consider such organizations as the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People and the Urban League. Could one conceive of the Negro officials of either of these organizations advocating labor unionism among Negroes, knowing that their best contributors are the very persons who benefit most by the Negro's economic helplessness, his unorganized condition in the labor field?

It is pitiable how the Negro girl is overworked and underpaid in the meat packing industries and the garment factories! Yet, the Young Woman's Christian Associations and other female philanthropic organizations dare not advise the Negro girl on the necessity of unionizing in the shops and factories. Were any Negro officials of any one such institution [illegible]est as to advise the Negro girl to go into trade unions, he would at once be acting against the rich class that maintain these institutions. Such a person would forthwith lose his position.

No race of men is more appreciative of wholesome womanhood than the Negro. And yet, if prostitution is daily on the increase among Negro girls, we must look primarily to the conditions of insufficient wages as a cause. It is not the lack of religion that is responsible, but the lack of bread.

What girl can live on $12 a week and maintain her decency? There is an increasing number of shops since the war which are turning out white girls and putting in colored. The sickly sentimentalism of the Negro leader interprets these acts as an indication of a change of ethical conscience on the part of the white employing class. He would rather not see that the Negro girl is given preference in such cases because she is in no union, and such being the case, can be paid less and worked longer hours.

Present-day Negro leadership has no program or policy which can in any way approach even an amelioration of the miserable social conditions of the Negro. Each, from the grafting, hustling politician of the Second ward to the average Negro bishop is so bound up, part and parcel, with the capitalist class of the nation, which has its heel on the neck of the Negro, that to expect any general social benefit from them, would be to expect a man to go consciously [illegible]

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

Navy Desertions Are Large.

OFFICERS in the Kaisers and Czar's army were known for their brutality to the rank and file soldiers. It seems that the sphere of brutality has changed to the foremost imperialist nation, the United States. How else can be explained the wholesale desertions from that well-advertised "recreational" institution, the United States navy?

In the past five months, 4128 young fellows deserted the 12th naval district. Of these 1978 are still being looked for and a "chance to see the world," does not seem a sufficiently strong promise to impress their consciences to return.

There are officials reasons given for this vast number of unofficial leaves of absence, but in nine times out of ten, they are wrong or willfully misinterpreted. One rather frank reason is that declaring that a good many men desert because of "misrepresentation of navy life and insufficient cruising." From what we have heard of navy life, a punch in the jaw from an officer or the subjection of the men to inhuman treatment is not an attribute of only pre-war European military forces.

Increased desertions will mean stricter discipline in the military forces of this country, and with it the unsavoriness of the life of the soldiers and sailors. But the imperialists of this nation must have an army. They might have to invade the Mexican oil fields any moment, or the Philippines or some other of the exploited countries might at some time object to continued enslavement. Further expansion in the world market means a necessary growth in the military machine. The last report of the secretary of war shows that the United States armed forces have grown about 35 per cent in the last ten years.

Desertions are but a pitiable example of the militarization of the so-called democracy, the United States. Facts show that a growth in armaments (and recruiting of the naval and army forces) carries with it a more brutal army spirit; hence desertions.

Christmas Cheer

By HOMER CROSS

The Bessemer blows. Showers of burning sparks, plumes of vitrious yellow, the fan of light that cuts its edges through the black mist to play on the low clouds, proclaim the birth of steel.

Below these dark roofs, where the searing stream of molten light pours forth from the travail of the furnace, briefly to sink, in the grip of the rolls, through whiteness and glowing red to cold blue shapes of death, swarthy men, hard and grim from this fiery birth and cruel death, labor dully.

The slag, afterbirth of metal, moulders in the pits. A sweating hunky breaks it up with a bar and throws it out to be carried away. At his blow the largest mass viciously explodes and he falls screaming, chest torn open, eyes blinded, body burned. His pitmates, their faces twitching, help to lift him on the stretcher and the group watches while he is taken away to suffer the agony of slow death. The foreman tells the men to go back to their places.

For hours the work goes on, some men exposed to hotter than summer heat, some to winter cold, and some to both at once. At 6 they go out of the gates, while other men take up the work which they have left. On the way to their sooty, squalor-ridden homes, up on the hill beside the offices, they pass the "Works'" Christmas tree, symbol of happiness and good will. High above its red and white lights is a luminous cross. Beneath this is blazoned thru the smoke and fog the wish of industry—PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

"They put up a mighty fine tree this year," said the man beside me, "Best I've seen and I've been here twenty year."

SOVIET RULE RECOGNIZED BY BRITISH

Action Held Up Until Now Thru Fear of Haste

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Great Britain today recognized the Soviet Government of Russia.

The MacDonald cabinet met today and after its conference, recognition of Russia was announced in a Foreign Office communique.

Feared to Be Hasty.

Before and since his accession to the office of Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald had consistently stood for early recognition by Great Britain of the present regime in Moscow. Action had been postponed for a time, however, due to the wish of the newly established labor government here not to appear hasty.

The foreign office communique said that the Moscow government had been notified that De Jure recognition had been accorded Russia.

O'Grady Goes to Moscow

James O'Grady, who was in charge of negotiations at Copenhagen, with Maxim Litvinoff, assistant commissar of foreign affairs in the Russian government in 1920, regarding an exchange of war prisoners, and subsequently went to Russia with an English relief force, will be the first British ambassador to Moscow.

M. Rakovsky, now in London, is the Soviet ambassador to the Court of St. James.

Simultaneously, it said, the British government will be glad to receive a Russian charge d' affaires in London.

SERIOUS HOUSING SHORTAGE FACING NATION'S LABOR

Growing Home Dearth Since War Started

Here is the first of a series of articles on the growing problem of housing facing the nation's workers. This series will take up all the varying phases of this knotty question and present the program for the way out of this capitalist chaos. Contributions from our readers on this question are invited. Send in your views, the local conditions you are facing. Write plainly. Address: The DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

By JAY LOVESTONE

Perhaps no other problem confronting the working masses today involves as many difficulties as does the housing question.

In no other difficulty faced by the workingman are there so many hardships involved. All the ills of low wages, unspeakable living conditions, complications of race and nationality, child labor and lack of education manifest themselves in ugly relief as the background of the terrible conditions arising from capitalist control of the houses of the working class.

Since the declaration of war, in 1914, there has been developing a great dearth of homes for the working masses. Taking fifty of our largest cities, we find that the housing shortage is so great that it would take at least ten consecutive years of building, at about 25 per cent above the normal rate of construction, to make up the serious deficit. It is estimated that at least a million and a quarter new building operations will have to be launched in order to check the shortage in these fifty cities. For the entire country, at least five million new building operations are needed, since these fifty cities con-

Wilson Cabinet Bogged In Oil Mess: $250,000 to McAdoo; Gregory, too

WASHINGTON.—Cancellation of the stolen oil reserves of Teapot Dome and California is ordered by a 120 to 4 vote in the house on the Walsh resolution already approved by the Senate.

The quagmire of the Doheny oil scandal, which has wrecked the reputations of the Coolidge and Harding cabinets, rose about the feet of leaders of the Wilson administration in the sensational hearings before the senate oil committee this afternoon.

William G. McAdoo, son-in-law of Woodrow Wilson and Secretary of the Treasury in the Wilson cabinet and Thomas W. Gregory, former attorney general, and the man selected by Coolidge to follow the present graft trail, altho Coolidge knew of his oil connections, were publicly named by Edward L. Doheny as paid retainers of his corporation.

Doheny Gave $250,000 to McAdoo.

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars was the price McAdoo received, "all told from our company," declared the multi-millionarie freebooter to the senate committeemen.

The quarter of a million was paid for services alleged to have been rendered shortly after McAdo left the cabinet.

"He still represents us in Mexico," said Doheny.

As for Wilson's attorney general, Doheny said that "our company and a half dozen others employed Mr. Gregory to represent them before the president in regard to getting permits to drill oil wells in Mexico."

Coolidge Ditches Gregory.

These revelations showing that Coolidge selected a Doheny man to investigate Doheny graft amazed even some of the more hardboiled senators in the committee. Reports at the White House were that Gregory would be withdrawn as special government oil council.

The disclosure of the rewards heaped on McAdoo so quickly after he left Wilson's cabinet come at the moment Rear Admiral Grayson is denying visitors to his father-in-law and late chief, who is said to be dying.

With the Party of Lenin

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

THE scores of Lenin Memorial meetings, which are being held under the auspices of the Workers Party, and the great audiences of workers who are attending these meetings, prove the wide influence which the great leader of the world proletarian revolution had won even in the United States. Hundreds of thousands of workers, who, even tho not sufficiently conscious of the class struggle to fight with the Communists as yet, instinctively feel that the Russian Revolution stands for a new and better life for the workers. These workers, who are today paying tribute to the memory of Lenin, will tomorrow be in the ranks of the party of Lenin in the United States—the Workers Party. The great audiences at the Lenin meetings are the best evidence of the future triumph of Leninism.

PLAN AFOOT TO GET OBREGON TO DESERT CALLES

U. S. Oil Interests Seek Split in Mexico

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Discovery that Obregon is handicapped by his support of Calles, who is "an extreme radical, literally a bolshevist," is made by the Washington Post, organ of the administration and the Sinclair oil interests, in an editorial printed Jan. 30. Despite the stand taken by Hughes in defense of Obregon, this editorial seems to threaten a reversal of policy unless Obregon shall disown Calles and the policies for which the Obregon government stands.

"Calles," says the Post, "has made mischief sufficient to condemn him in the eyes of natives and foreigners alike. The governments of Yucatan and other native states have been made practically communistic by Calles, and the confiscation of property is one of the basic features of those governments.

"Gen. Estrada, de la Huerta's chief lieutenant in the field, has a large following, and is strongly opposed to the agrarian policy of the Obregon administration. He has taken the field against the policy of confiscation without compensation.

"If the revolutionists under de la Huerta are fighting bolshevism, and if foreign-owned property in Mexico, is still being confiscated, the people of this country will not regret the passing of Obregon, if he should be overthrown."

The immediate occasion for this feeling is found in the fact that the Mexican minister of agriculture has recently declared null and void the titles of some millions of acres of properties forcibly taken from their owners by Porfirio Diaz and given to favorites or foreigners.

BACKERS OF LASH SUFFER BIG DEFEAT

Negro Delegates on Floor in Fight Against Reaction

By JOHN FITZGERALD

TOMLINSON HALL, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 1.—With a thundering chorus of Ayes the convention voted its condemnation of the Ku Klux Klan as an enemy of organized labor and voted down the proposal of the President John L. Lewis machine to permit members of the United Mine Workers to belong to the hooded order, whose purpose is the subjection of the foreign-born and the flogging of radical workingmen.

The fight on the Klan was led by the progressives, as they have led every other forward looking measure since the convention doors swung open. And the fight for the Klan was led by Van H. Bittner, Lewis' right hand man, whom he used in the breaking of the miners' union in Kansas, Alberta, and in Nova Scotia, and in the disruption of the strike in the coke regions.

Bittner presented the report of the resolutions committee which recommended that the convention cancel the clause in the constitution forbidding members of the United Mine Workers from belonging to the K. K. K. His speech was calculated to placate the enemies of this anti-foreigner organization and at the same time to reverse the anti-Klan policy of the union.

Colored Delegates Defend Race.

Several colored delegates took the floor in fiery opposition to the night riding enemies of their race who are denying all rights to human beings with black skins, wherever they have the power.

There were encouraging shouts from the delegation. The United Mine Workers has led the American labor movement in the program of equality to all workers in the mines, regardless of the color of their skins and the heroism of black men in the West Virginia marches were fresh in the minds of many in Tomlinson Hall.

Hessler Speaks in Vain.

A voice for the Klan tried in vain to turn the tide against the brotherhood of the lash. The voice was from John Hessler, one of the lieutenants in the Lewis army.

His speech had all the earmarks of a Klansman's, tho he would not affirm or deny the suspicion as to his own membership in the terror society. But a skeptical murmur arose when he tried to tell the convention that several thousand members in his district were Klansmen.

Hessler was a member of the resolutions committee that sought to save the Klan. By his speech was in vain.

The sentiments of the convention were expressed when John Hindmarsh of Illinois rose and shouted:

Denounced as Strike Breakers.

"The Klan is a strikebreaking institution!"

"When the Ku Klux Klan wants to take off its mask and work in the open, then it will be time to change our constitution and let the miners join," declared John Bates, of Williamston, Pa., leading the anti-Klan forces.

Hearty cheers greeted every denunciation of the Koo Koos and cries of protest or ominous silence was the delegates' answer to every attempt of Van H. Bittner and John Hessler to legitimatize the hated order. The United Mine Workers of America is vigorously on record against the Ku Klux Klan, in spite of the Lewis machine.

The resolutions committee is the creature of the administration. The resolutions it brings are those the administration wants. And the selection of Van H. Bittner to present the resolution shows how John L.

The Miners Must Save Themselves

THE coal miners of this country are facing a desperate struggle.

Tens of thousands of miners are out of work. Other tens of thousands are working only part time. In many coal fields the miners and their families are already suffering great hardships because the mines do not give the miners regular work or are closed down altogether.

Twice in five years the half-million coal miners have had to strike—and suffer all that a strike means—in order to defend themselves against attacks on their standard of living and the working conditions they have won. Each time the government has been against them.

Another great strike threatens April 1st. The miners will have to fight again for a wage scale that will give them a decent living and to safeguard their union.

The bad conditions in the mining industry are not the resu of a temporary situation. Unemployment, short pay check fights over wages, fights against the attempt of the operat to destroy the union, will be part of the life of the miners long as present conditions continue in the coal industry.

The situation in the mines is due to the greedy struggle profits by the coal operators. It is due to management w aims first to make profits for the bosses and doesn't care w happens to the workers in the mines. One hundred miners wer killed by the operators while the convention was in session.

The coal industry was overdeveloped during the war. It because of this fact that unemployment and short time for t miners—which mean less for the miner and his family to li upon—are now the order of the day in the coal industry.

The coal operators will not remedy the conditions th created in the coal industry thru mismanagement. They ca not, without sacrifice of profits. They will never do that. would rather sacrifice the miners.

The Lewis machine refuses to face the situation and t make the fight which will save the miners. It would rathe expel individuals who propose progressive measures and ev whole districts from the organization. It spends the money the miners for the benefit of the machine rather than for org izing the unorganized territory.

The miners themselves must take up the job. They m adopt a program and fight for a program that will solve t immediate problem of unemployment and solve the whole problem of the bad conditions of the mining industry.

The following program will save the miners from the hardships of unemployment; it will change the conditions of the mining industry:

1. Immediate legislation by Congress to compel the coal operators to pay regular wages to unemployed out of their profits.
2. Immediate legislation by Congress establishing the six-hour day and five-day week in the coal industry.
3. Immediate nationalization of the mines.
4. Sending of a delegation by the Convention to Congres to make these demands and fight for them and a fight of th whole miners' organization for this program.

The passage of a law compelling operators to pay wages to unemployed will immediately relieve the suffering now existing in the coal industry. The six-hour day and five-day week will help solve the unemployed problem and standardize productio in the coal fields. Only nationalization of the mines will bring a permanent solution of the problem of over-development and mismanagement by the operators.

Miners! This is a real program for the coal industry. Thi is a real program for the coal miners.

Nationalization! The six-hour day and five-day week! Immediate unemployment relief from the coal operators! A delegation to Congress to demand passage of these laws! This is your program. Make the fight in your Convention. Get something real out of the Convention for the miners.

The miners must save themselves.

Daily Worker Exposes Crime of Seating Delegate From One-Member Miner's Local

(Special Correspondence to the DAILY WORKER.)

TOMLINSON HALL, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 1.—One of the many diabolical schemes used by the President John L Lewis machine to defeat the progressive element in conventio is to seat delegates from one-member locals, William Feene Secretary-Treasurer of Provisional District No. 4 (Fayet County, Pennsylvania, coke region) is such a delegate. "represents" Local 849, Albany mine, near Brownsville, Pa.

Feeney used to belong to Local 593, Charleroi, but it said that several years ago he circulated false statements cerning William Guiler, one of the members, and transferred his membership to Local 849 for fear of being expelled from Local 593.

This action was certainly a good thing for Local 849 for without Feeney it would be a dead one. Secretary Green's reports show that Local paid as International ta the ten months ending 1923, the sum of $5.00 w exactly the amount from one member at 5 per month. It is sai Feeney claims to have exonerated members

HICAGO CLOTHING INDUSTRY KEEPS ITS OWN JOBLESS

Unemployment Prevention, Not Insurance

Unemployment prevention and not unemployment insurance is set up by the recent agreement in the Chicago men's clothing industry, according to John R. Commons, University of Wisconsin, in an address to the Chicago City Club forum. Commons is chairman of the board of trustees of the unemployment funds established jointly by the organized employers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Commons emphasized the fact that there are as many unemployment reserves as there are individual firms of employers. The only exception is the provision in the agreement for pooling the unemployment funds in the case of a hundred or so small contractors in the industry. Each clothing concern sets up its unemployment reserve as a liability on its s exactly as it would set up a re e for dividends. There is no ling of funds whatever as there ld be in a mutual insurance scheme. This is the case also with the employes of each firm. Their contributions which are exactly equal to those of their employer, namely, 1½% of their wages, are merged into the house fund so that those employes who may have steady work in a certain house contribute toward benefits going to those who do not have steady work in that house.

Unlike British Plan.

This principle of unemployment reserves instead of unemployment insurance is the peculiarity of all American plans as distinguished from European plans, Commons stated. Under the British compulsory system which now covers 12,000,000 workers the employers contribute to a common fund which is then distributed to the unemployeyd in any t of the country with the result that the employer who furnishes steady employment is taxed for the fits going to employes of firms ch do not give steady employ- t.

mployment Penalizes Boss.

all the American plans where one employer contributes to any other employer's funds each employer can keep his reserve intact by furnishing steady employment and d not contribute to any reserve all if he has no unemployment. ce, said Commons, the American ns should properly be named unemployment prevention rather than mployment insurance. This idea appears in the Chicago agreement in the provision that when a house fund reaches a certain amount the premiums cease both for the employe and employer. The idea, he asserted, to furnish an inducement toward ablishing employment rather than ef for unemployment.

Lewis Machine Fights Against Six Hour Day More Vigorously Than the Trained Corporation Lawyers

TOMLINSON HALL, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 31.—The official family of the United Mine Workers of America today threw the six-hour day to the winds and went to bat like loyal lieutenants of the coal operators to wage war against the efforts of the representatives of the rank and file on the floor of the convention to insert a clause in the proposed wage scale providing for a shorter workday.

The coal operators need not worry so long as John L. Lewis and the present officialdom control the destinies of the organized miners of America. What care they for shorter hours? Their hours of labor are not set by the constitution.

Unemployment means nothing to them. While the coal-diggers toil in the mines and worry about the security of their means of livelihood, the officials are enjoying life and making hay while the sun shines.

At the previous convention of the organization the delegates by an overwhelming vote instructed the scale committee to fight for the six hour day, but not one official whisper has been heard about it since. This time the six hour day will not even be used as a trading point. It is ditched in advance. The officials want nothing but retention of the present wage scale and the concurrent termination of all contracts in the bituminous fields.

A referendum joker is inserted whereby any agreement secured shall be submitted to the rank and file for ratification. If the steam roller methods of John L. Lewis during this convention are a criterion of his treatment of the referendum it is only an insult to the intelligence of the union members.

The stage was set for the report of the scale committee after listening to James J. (Babbit) Davis preaching co-operation between coal miners and operators at the morning session. Mr. Davis claimed that there were 244,000 men too many employed now in the coal industry. Not the shortening of the workday but the elimination of these men from the industry was the solution of Mr. Davis for the problem of unemployment and the chaos which exists. And that is also Mr. Lewis' solution. Where are these coal miners to go to? Have they no right to a living? One would not think so judging by the speeches made by the members of the scale committee, who defended the report.

Frank Farrington, the new found friend of John L. Lewis, when called on to report for the scale committee warned the delegates that the report would not satisfy those who held "extreme and impossible" views. After preparing the ground for disappointment he submitted the following document:

Report of Scale Committee.

To the Twenty-ninth Consecutive and Sixth Biennial Convention of the United Mine Workers of America, Greetings:

We, your Scale Committee, to whom has been delegated the duty of drafting a proposed wage scale, herewith submit for your consideration and acceptance the following report:

1. We recommend to the convention, in lieu of all resolutions relating to wages and working conditions that have been presented, that the properly accredited representatives of the organization be authorized and instructed to secure the best agreement obtainable from the operators in the Central Competitive Field on the basis of no reduction in wages and that any agreement so secured be submitted to a referendum vote of the membership for ratification.

2. We recommend that the next wage scale cover a period of four years, beginning April 1, 1924 and ending March 31, 1928.

Policy.

1. For the purpose of meeting in a practical and constructive way all unforseen emergencies which may arise a Policy Committee composed of the Scale Committee of the Central Competitive Field, three representatives from each outlying district, the members of the International Executive Board and the International Officers, be authorized to take such action for the protection of our best interests as circumstances may require and to advise the membership on unexpected developments which may arise and which cannot now be foreseen.

2. The Committee recommends that the outlying districts be authorized to enter into wage scale negotiations with their respective operators when the opportunity presents itself, it being understood, however, that no outlying district will conclude an agreement until after an agreement for the Central Competitive Field has been secured, or permission to do so has been granted by the Policy Committee.

3. The Committee recommends that all contracts in the bituminous districts run concurrently and expire on the same date.

Respectfully submitted: Frank Farrington, Chairman, District 12; John Hessler, Secretary, District 11; Rinaldo Cappellini, District 1; John Brophy, District 2; William Feeney, District 4; P. T. Fagan, District 5; Lee Hall, District 6; Thomas Kennedy, District 7; James Foster, District 8; John J. Mates, District 9; Martin J. Flyzik, District 10; J. H. Morris, District 13; Wm. Bogartz, District 14; A. J. McGuire, District 15; Francis J. Drum, District 16; W. A. Sherman, District 18; Wm. Turnblazer, District 19; Geo. Hargrove, District 20; Andrew McGarry, District 21; Martin Cahill, District 22; Lonnie Jackson, District 23; George B. Toskey, District 24; Arch Helm, District 25; Joe Bosone, District 27; Samuel Pascoe, District 30.

Delegate Hindmarsh demanded the right to move an amendment including the six hour day but the chair denied him that right. Hindmarsh then spoke in opposition to the committee's report. He declared that in England where nature did not shower so many favors on the country as in America the miners in Northumberland thirty years ago won the seven hour day. The miners were interested in better conditions and shorter hours as well as more pay. One would imagine from the speeches made by the officials defending the report that the workers who produce the wealth of America had no right to have a share in its bounty, that being the privilege of the capitalist class alone.

Vice-president Murray boasted of the aggressiveness of the officials of the United Mine Workers and declared that Frank Hodges, secretary of the British miners, in a speech delivered in England since his return from the A. F. of L. convention urged the miners of that country to follow the example of their brothers in the United States.

Perhaps, but the record of Frank Hodges is little better than that of Mr. Murray himself, with the exception that Frank Hodges knows something of economics and sociology and is thus able to pose as a revolutionist, while Murray glories in his reaction. If Murray was seriously intent on securing better working conditions for the American miners he would point to the shorter workday in England as a goal toward which the United States miners would strive. Mr. Murray pleaded for a system whereby intermittent strikes would be eliminated. Would you discard the strike weapon, Mr. Murray? Of course you do not say so in so many words but the implication is there. Why not abolish the class struggle, too? It would then be easy sailing for the Murrays and Lewises and Greens, but tho these gentlemen have made their peace with the capitalists the rank and file have not. The officials do not feel the pinch as the coal diggers do. They are not the ones who are exploited down in the bowels of the earth and the exactions of the capitalists in their drive for more and more profits will render null and void any scheme of Lewis and his henchmen to have the labor lamb lie down in peace with the capitalist lion.

Delegate Freeman Thompson pointed out that so long as the present economic system prevailed there would be unemployment and even the shorter workday was not a complete solution for it, but it was the best temporary solution short of the abolition of the capitalist mode of production and the substitution of workers control and ownership of the means of wealth production. The officials of the miners union have no sympathy for this kind of language. It means the emancipation of the working class from labor fakers as well as from the capitalists and the labor fakers are well off under this system.

Secretary Green, the wheel horse of the administration, wound up the discussion as usual by playing on the emotions of the audience, appealing for brotherly love and then threatening the opposition with punishment if they did not stop that opposition. The vote was taken, the Green oratory had its effect, the report of the scale committee was carried, the six hour day was buried and another day of the convention of the United Mine Workers of America came to an end.

Greedy Sharks Fight Bill Cutting Employment Fee

By MIRIAM ALLEN DE FORD.

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO.—At the last session of the state assembly the Fellom law was passed limiting the fees of private employment agencies to 10% of the first month's pay. The agencies, which had fought the bill hard, have now attacked its constitutionality, and a test case is pending before the state supreme court. Meanwhile the employment sharks are making hay while the sun shines.

A recent case of extortion was revealed by an ex-service man, Marion J. Noble, who secured from the Business Men's Clearing House, a private agency, a job paying $125 a month. He had signed what he thought was a registration card, only to discover that it was a contract to pay from 30% to 35% of his first month's salary, according to promptness of payment. Learning of the Fellom law, he paid the agency instead $12.50, or 10%. The agency is now bringing suit against him for the difference, $31.25. Noble says he took his case to the state labor bureau, and was advised to pay the difference and take a chance on its being refunded if the law is upheld by the supreme court.

Unemployment is rife in California, and the employment agencies are reaping a harvest. The test case in question was decided against them in the lower court, and then appealed by them. A former law limiting agencies' fees was declared invalid.

Sidney Hillman, Sick in Chicago, Tells of Lockout

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, is sick at the Morrison hotel here. Hillman came to Chicago to confer with local officers of the union on various organization matters and became sick Tuesday; since then he has been confined to bed.

Hillman told a reporter for the DAILY WORKER of the lockout of 25,000 clothing workers in New York City. The clothing manufacturers have reduced the prices they paid to contractors for work, and the contractors in turn tried to shift the cut in prices to the workers. When the workers refused to take the cut, the contractors locked them out. Since Hillman came to Chicago, about 10,000 men were locked out by the coat contractors.

"The lockout is both against the manufacturers and the workers," Hillman said. "The workers have shown that they will not take a cut in wages and the contractors will be forced to either do the work for the new prices or deal with the manufacturers."

"Until the contractors decide to center their attention on the manufacturers, it is a waiting fight for the workers."

Daily Worker Presents the Facts in the Howat Case

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOMLINSON HALL, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 1.—The attempt of President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers to destroy Alexander Howat was ably seconded by Governor Allen, of Kansas, father of the Industrial Court Law, which was passed early in 1920, with the object of destroying the power of Unionism in Kansas.

This Law gave to a so-called "Court," appointed by the Governor, the authority to change and fix up the miners' wage agreements to suit itself. Officers and members of a union engaging in a strike were made liable to fine and imprisonment. An injunction was also issued prohibiting strikes.

The Kansas miners fought the Industrial Court Law in the 1920 election campaign, and engaged attorneys to try to get it declared unconstitutional by the courts. But shortly after the passage of the Law in 1920, the Convention of District 14 adopted as a policy, in reference to this law, that if it became necessary to strike in violation of this law, as many strikes should be called as necessary to protect the interests of the miners, and the Convention pledged the full support of the Kansas miners to their officials in case the latter should be prosecuted under the Industrial Court Law for carrying out this policy.

Howat for Rank and File.

After the passage of the Industrial Court Law, there were several strikes of the miners but the Law was not invoked against them for nearly a year and a half, until May, 1921. At that time, Howat had ordered a strike against a coal company which failed to pay to one Carl Michmash, some $200 claimed by him on the grounds that he had attained the age of nineteen and was entitled to a man's pay. The company disputed the young man's age and the case has been in controversy prior to the passage of the Industrial Court Law. The case had already been settled according to contract procedure and young Michmash had won his case but the company would not pay the money claiming it had new evidence to show that he was younger than he claimed. But the company failed to present this evidence and Howat finally in May, 1921, called a strike which soon resulted in the money being paid to Michmash.

Allen now got busy with his Industrial Court Law and the anti-strike injunction issued as a part of the same policy. Howat was sentenced to jail on various counts and on Sept. 30, 1921, began to do his time, which totaled up to sixteen months before he was finally released in January, 1923. Vice-President Dorchy was a fellow prisoner of Howat's.

Howat Kills Slave Law.

The day that Howat went to jail, the Kansas miners went on strike for the purpose of proving that altho their leaders could be sent to jail, strikes could not be prevented by legislation or injunction.

After some four months, the strike on the advice of Howat, was discontinued, its purpose having been accomplished. Not a single arrest under the Industrial Court Law after the jailing of Howat was made because of this strike and since the day of its inception the Industrial Court Law in Kansas has been a dead letter and all efforts to imitate it in other states have failed because of its total defeat at the hands of the Kansas miners.

At the time that Governor Allen prosecuted Howat under his Industrial Court policy, the latter was involved in a controversy with President Lewis. On March 26, 1921, a dispute arose at the Dean strip mine. The pit was not loading any coal and the company wanted some dirt moved to make a track. They wanted the coal-loading shovels to do this work with four men. The men demanded that the laboring gang be given work also, claiming that the custom at the mine was to employ the laborers when the coal-loading shovel was used on such a job. The company claimed that the custom at the mine allowed them to use the shovel for this work without the laborers being called out.

According to the proceedings of the International Convention, Howat's statement shows that the coal-loading shovel broke down while being moved to the place where the company wanted the work done. Howat also claimed that the big excavating shovel was laid idle shortly afterwards because of the company's endeavor to violate the contract, and their action in sending the crew home when they requested that the contract be lived up to.

Company at Fault.

Thruout the whole discussion of his case, Howat has consistently maintained that the mine was laid idle thru the fault of the company, which endeavored to introduce new customs at this mine, and which allowed this broken-down shovel to remain unrepaired for months while at the same time it was endeavoring to fix responsibility upon Howat for keeping the men idle.

International Board Members Dalrymple and Steele, sent by Lewis to investigate the complaint of the Operators' Association that Howat had called and was supporting a strike in violation of contract, did not in their official report adduce evidence to support the contention that there was a strike at the mine. The company called the situation a strike; Howat called it a shut-down; Steele and Dalrymple expressed not even an opinion as to which was right. Nevertheless, their report recommended that "district officers should order men to return to work at once," in order that the dispute might be taken up according to contract. The contract stated, "No strike or stoppage of work shall occur at any strip mine until the question in dispute shall have been considered and finally disposed of by the joint board of operators and miners."

Lewis Upholds Operators.

The recommendation of Steele and Dalrymple was in effect repeated by the Administration in the September 1921 International Convention, where the matter was discussed. In this discussion Howat endeavored to secure a definite statement from Lewis on a second important phase of this dispute. If the men were to be ordered to return to work, the question was, under what conditions?

Howat asked Lewis, whether the recommendation should be understood to "mean that the Executive Board of District 14 is to advise the men to return to work under the new conditions laid down by the operators."

Lewis stated in reply, "The national organization will oppose any new conditions being enforced upon them" (meaning the men.)

Howat in the 1923 convention stated that in accord with these instructions, he instructed, thru a board member, the men to return to work under the old conditions, and that the company refused to resume operations on these terms. Howat left the convention in order to report to jail for the commencement of his sentence, received because of the Michmash strike.

Miners Strike for Rights.

The day that Howat went to jail, the strike against the Industrial Court Law began, and twelve days later, Lewis revoked the charter of District 14, and appointed provisional district officers to administer the affairs. His telegram revoking the charter said in part, "I am compelled to take official cognizance of the present extraordinary situation existing in District Fourteen. The laws of the United Mine Workers are being flagrantly disregarded and the ruling of an International Convention is being deliberately flaunted." Later, Lewis claimed that the strike was not in reality against the Industrial Court but in reality to support what Lewis claimed was defiance on the part of Howat of the instructions of the Convention to order that the men return to work.

When the Kansas miners did not abandon their strike against the Industrial Court, the charters of most of the locals were later revoked, and Howat and his fellow-officers were expelled for life. District 14 was "reorganized" under the direction of International Organizer Van Bitner. Some five thousand members of that district did not get back in time to vote in the 1922 District elections, where officers were elected to take charge of the District which received back its autonomy Jan. 1, 1923.

After Howat's final release from jail early in 1923, he went on a speaking trip in the Pittsburgh coal district, the anthracite region, and the mining sections of northern West Virginia and eastern Ohio. A proposed visit to Nova Scotia was stopped by action of the Canadian authorities who refused to allow Howat to enter Canada on the grounds that he was a dangerous agitator. Several meetings in various sections were broken up either by the Lewis machine, or by the authorities or by both in conjunction. On the whole, however, the trip was highly successful, and thousands of miners heard Howat speak, receiving him with great interest and enthusiasm.

The progressive element in the Labor movement give Howat and his fellow-officers and the Kansas miners credit for killing the Kansas Industrial Court Law, and for preventing the introduction of similar laws in other states. Lewis' attack on Howat while he was being persecuted by Governor Allen of the infamous Industrial Court Law fame is one of the blackest marks ever placed on the name of a labor organization. The progressive element maintain that in the controversy with Lewis, Howat was right, and that there was no excuse whatever for the action of Lewis under the circumstances.

LIBERTIES UNION DARES MAYOR TO HALT MEETING

Coming to Wilkesbarre to Defy Fascism

The forcible breaking up of a Lenin Memorial meeting at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., by a local post of the American Legion, brought a protest yesterday from the American Civil Liberties Union, wired to Mayor Dan E. Hart, and the announcement that another meeting would be held in the same hall on Feb. 10 "to test the right of free speech." The Union called upon Mayor Hart to furnish police protection. Otherwise attorneys for the Union "will endeavor to secure it from the courts or from Governor Pinchot."

The Union's attorneys are contemplating damage suits against the officers of the Legion post and also starting proceedings for criminal assault. The telegram asked Mayor Hart to confirm or deny press dispatches which quoted him as inciting the raid.

In a statement to the Civil Liberties Union, Harry Winitsky, business manager of the "Freiheit," a radical New York Jewish daily newspaper, who was the speaker forced out of Concordia Hall "at the point of rifles," denied that he said anything against the American government or the Constitution, as reported.

"In fact, I did not speak at all," Winitsky said. "The meeting had just begun, and the chairman was introducing me, when a dozen Legion men, armed with rifles and led by a police sergeant, marched into the hall. The sergeant demanded to see a permit for the meeting. When I told him a permit was not necessary, he said he would disperse the meeting anyhow to avoid a riot.

"The armed Legion men then drove the audience into the street, where about seventy-five other Legionaires, many of them armed, forced the people at the points of their guns to take their hats off to the flag."

Winitsky refused to salute the flag under compulsion. When the Legion man in charge of him put down his rifle, Winitsky removed his hat. He had police protection to the railway station. According to Winitsky's statement, Mayor Hart told him he did not incite the raid or approve of it.

Fifteen Hundred Garment Workers Out in Montreal

(By The Federated Press)

MONTREAL.—There is a lockout in force in the clothing trade here. About 1,500 men's clothing workers are affected. The Clothing Contractors' Association gave notice of a cut in wages, and when this was refused by the union, the employers closed their shops. Some 90 contract shops and 35 to 40 smaller inside shops are said to be involved. The lockout affects both men and women workers, comprising coat, vest, pants and button hole workers.

Conferences are now in progress between the union and the employers. Lazarus Marcovitz, member, general executive board, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and manager of the Montreal board, is in charge of negotiations on the union side.

Left Wing Was Bulwark of Union, Say Expelled Members, Replying To Attacks of Perlstein's Machine

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is now reaping the bitter fruit of the disruption carried on by the General Executive Board, headed by Sigman and Perlstein, in their campaign of expulsions, disfranchisements, and discriminations against the left-wing members.

Emphatic protests from the membership have been going in almost every day to the officials. These officials are now trying to justify the expulsions by renewing the absurd charge that the left wing interfered with organization work. In Justice of Jan. 25th, they say:

> "Had the organizing work among the dressmakers of Chicago proceeded along regular and normal lines, we are confident that by this time there would be but few of them outside the union."

But every member of the union knows that the "regular and normal" lines were broken up in Chicago by Perlstein, under orders from the G. E. B. Not alone were expulsions resorted to, but even the shameful expedient of co-operating with the employers in getting members thrown out of the shops, deprived of their jobs, denied the right to make a living!

Charge Yanofsky Lied

Attempting to justify themselves before the protesting membership, the officials bring slanderous charges against their victims. In Gerechtikeit of January 25th, Editor Yanofsky says:

> "They (the expelled) were detrimental in the shops where they were allowed by the union to work. They undermined the prestige and authority of the union. . . . What could the union then do but take them off the job? Now they are raising the cry that the union left them without bread . . . . People who cannot see the thing a little deeper may really think that the union here committed a terrible crime. What, to deprive people from making a living? And this has caused a good bit of restlessness among the members who cannot understand that if these people would not have been taken out of the shops these shops would have become non-union."

This charge against the left-wing workers is a vile slander, and the Chicago membership will all know that it is not true. Perlstein himself would never dare to make such statements in Chicago. The truth, well known in Chicago and which should be known thruout the country, is that those workers taken from their jobs were not only among the best workers in the union, but were also leading fighters for the union in the shops. Some of them were shop-chairmen or served on price committees until taken from their job, and they maintained union conditions, held the organization together, and supported the authority and prestige of the union. Not one single act can be cited by Yanofsky or anyone else to prove otherwise.

Reaction Failed.

The fact is that the reactionary officials have failed dismally in their duty of building up the union and making it a powerful weapon for the membership, to improve working conditions, and Yanofsky and those who tell him what to say are merely adding another shameful act to their long record in an attempt to shift their own responsibility onto the shoulders of the left-wing members. The present deplorable condition in the ladies garment trades is the direct fruit of the policy of the General Executive Board in destroying the rights of the membership, in expulsions, disfranchisements, and discriminations in the shops. Those responsible for that policy are responsible for its results. The membership of the I. L. G. W. U. will not allow them to evade this responsibility.

If the officials really want to organize the industry why do they carry on their disruptive campaign? The left-wing members expelled in Chicago were the very men and women who, in the past, have been the most active organizers and strike leaders and who, at the very time they were expelled, were carrying on the organization campaign. Perlstein himself is on record to that effect and the entire Chicago membership knows that it is so. It was the left-wing members who assumed the most responsible work in the last organization campaign and carried it out, not hesitating before hardships and arrests. The results were good and promised to organize the entire industry in Chicago. But the expulsion campaign, inaugurated and carried out by Sigman, Perlstein & Co., put a stop to it all.

Militants Want United Front.

The left-wing militants appealed for peace for the sake of the organization campaign. They had given the officials loyal co-operation. They declared themselves ready to go to any lengths to preserve and strengthen the union. But the only answer they received was that the officials will carry out their expulsions even if they will remain with but seven members in a local union.

Convincing proof that full and complete responsibility for the whole situation rests upon the officials, and that the left-wing elements have always been ready to do everything possible to settle all controversies, is contained in a statement recently issued by a group of union cloak makers. Those are not radicals or left-wingers, they are just honest union members who want peace in the union. The statement follows:

Rank-and-File Tell Facts.

We, the undersigned, have formed ourselves into a committee to attempt to bring about a settlement of the controversy between the officials of our union and the expelled members. This committee was formed at the request of Vice-President Meyer Perlstein who made the statement at the meeting of Local 5 that those who are speaking for the expelled should go to them and make them give up issuing the circulars that they have issued lately, and that he would reinstate them back on their jobs, and if he won't do it he will have Biallis do it. He further agreed that a conference should be arranged by the undersigned, including the expelled and Perlstein for the purpose of establishing peace in the union.

This conference was agreed to by the expelled members and the conference was called for Dec. 11th. Perlstein left for New York two days before the conference without making arrangements for the reinstatement of those expelled from the shops. This conference was delayed owing to Perlstein's absence until Dec. 28th. In the meantime, we prevailed upon the expelled not to issue any circulars in the hopes that Perlstein would carry out the statement he made to Local 5, namely, that he would reinstate these men back on their jobs.

We have approached Biallis and called his attention to the statement made by Perlstein that if he won't reinstate them, he would have Biallis do it. And he refused to act on the argument that this is an International case and he does not want to interfere with it. We have appeared before the Joint Board and were not admitted.

The committee composed of the undersigned and formed upon Perlstein's suggestion at the meeting of Local 5 met with Perlstein previous to a joint conference. We reminded him of his promise to reinstate the expelled back on the job. His answer was to order us out of the office and threatened us with the same punishment as he inflicted upon the expelled.

The expelled members agreed to Perlstein's offer of peace made by him at the meeting of Local 5 and it is no fault of theirs that this promise was not carried out.

We make this statement for the sake of bringing about peace and harmony in our union. We give this statement without drawing our own conclusions and leave it to the judgment of the rank and file.

Fraternally submitted,
The Expelled.

For United Front.

The officials of the I. L. G. W. U. know, just a severy member of the union in Chicago knows, that we, the expelled members and all of our sympathizers, are ready at all times to put aside all differences in order to form a solid front in the fight against the bosses. They know that we are ready to do everything in our power to make the fight a success. They also know that one of the essential steps toward making a real fight against the bosses in Chicago is to reinstate all of the expelled members immediately into their full union rights.

If the International officials are in earnest when they say they want peace, if they really mean their declarations that they want to organize the industry, let them prove it by their actions. Let them restore the rights of the membership thruout the country. And then let all of us, with complete unity of forces, make a real and successful fight against the employers.

LOCHRAY TELLS ABOUT NEBRASKA FARMER POLITICS

Party Like Minnesota's Planned, He Says

While in Chicago attending the annual meeting of the Federated Press, William Lochray, editor of the Mid-West Labor News, of Omaha, stopped in the DAILY WORKER'S office, and talked about the plans of the Progressive Party of Nebraska for the special convention, which it is calling February 22, at Grand Island.

The call was sent out by the executive committee of the party, said Mr. Lochray, and the purpose of the convention is to nominate a full ticket for the political campaign of 1924, and, if possible, the formation of a Farmer-Labor Party, after the structural model of Minnesota's.

Mr. Lochray believes that the Farmer-Labor movement has an excellent future in Nebraska. The working farmers, who raise the wheat that has made the state famous, are in great distress. Many are being driven from the land and their failures are finding their reflex in the crashing of Nebraska banks.

Lochray said that he, personally, and many of his colleagues are in accord with the program for a moratorium on the mortgage debts of all working farmers which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is promulgating. The need for this was never greater in Nebraska.

The editor of the Omaha labor paper said that the "Progressive People's Party," which has been meeting at that city, was not to be taken seriously. He called it the property of Roy Harrop, a Ford booster, who had been organizing Ford clubs thruout Nebraska, and he said that, since Ford's support of Coolidge compelled the party to scrap the automobile manufacturer, it no longer had much excuse for existence. In fact, he declared, the Progressive People's Party did not even have the status of an officially recognized party under Nebraska laws, because of its insignificance.

GARMENT WORKERS LAUD DAILY WORKER'S FIGHT ON FIRETRAPS

"I am sure that the DAILY WORKER, in its fight against firetrap public schools, and efforts to get 'a seat in a safe school for every school child', has the hearty approval of every member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Chicago," said Hyman Schneid, general organizer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Ameica.

One-Man Locals Exposed

cal. But such a claim does not agree with the facts.

The Albany mine has long been operating non-union. Albany is on the edge of the great non-union coke region. A year ago the coke region strike was called off by the International Union, even tho there were some seventy local unions, and—by the International's own admission—nearly three thousand men are still out; the coke region men claimed that many more were still on strike. Certainly a strike of only eleven men is not being continued. If these mysterious eleven men are on strike in Feeney's local, are they getting relief? If they are not on strike, why should they be completely exonerated month after month?

The rank and file have the right to know who elected Feeney a delegate, and who is paying his expenses. A local which can pay per capita on only one member can certainly not pay a delegate's expenses. Is the International standing the expense? Do the miners wish their funds to be used to bring delegates from one-man locals, to vote with the machine and defeat the wishes of the real rank and file delegates?

Feeney, the Prize Straddler

The coke region, a former stronghold of non-unionism, came out practicilly solid in April, 1922, and remained so until after the Cleveland Agreement. The coke region operators refused to recognize the union and the strike was continued until called off, January 18, 1922. The coke region is now in the same old unorganized condition.

Feeney's efforts thus came to naught. In fairness, it must be said that this does not prove that Feeney cannot organize. One of the chief reasons for losing these regions was the Cleveland Agreement, which took away from these sections the powerful backing of a nation-wide signing of contracts with the Consolidation Coal Company, the Hillman Company, and other companies, of some of their mines, without compelling them to sign at the same time for their mines in the coke region, or in other non-union territories. The neglect of relief in the coke region was also a great blow to the strike.

After the Cleveland Agreement, the International and District No. 5 organizations failed to furnish adequate relief, and Feeney went on the war-path. He helped to organize two outlaw mass meetings of miners to raise relief. He proposed to run for President of District No. 5 against the Administration candidate, Fagan.

But Feeney's rebellion soon subsided. He withdrew from the race for President, and spoke for Fagan. He is now a staunch supporter of the machine, which belongs to the coke region workers he helped to organize.

Feeney—Expense Account Artist

In the twenty-two months period—from February 1, 1922, to December 1, 1923, Feeney has drawn from the International treasury, according to Secretary Green's reports, $5,280 salary and $5,868.72 expenses, or a total of $11,148.72. This is at the rate of $506.76 per month. He lives in Charleroi, where he usually gets his breakfast and supper at home, and travels by train to Brownsville, where his office is. The round trip fare is $1.60. Feeney has done very little traveling thru the coke region, either during or after the strike. Fayette County, in which most of the coke region lies, is well supplied with railroads and trolley lines. You can go from one end to the other for a couple of dollars. To make an expense account of some ten dollars per day under these conditions requires therefore no small degree of imagination. In the six months, February 1, 1922, to August 1, 1922 (the strike began April 1), Feeney received $900 salary. This seems strange, in view of the general understanding that the coke region organizers were working during the strike only for their expenses. In this six months Feeney's expenses were the liberal sum of $1,362.45.

Feeney likes to refer in his speeches to his poverty, but it is said that some ten months ago, shortly after the coke region strike was called off, he made a cash purchase of a $6,300 house in Charleroi. It would certainly be surprising if, out of $500 per month, one could not purchase a house as well as a few other conveniences.

Feeney is also able to "pass prosperity around" to the members of his family. His son, Frank, to whom he referred in the convention with the utmost feeling as his "boy," but who is a full-grown man, has long been assisting him in the office. In the convention, International Board Member O'Leary admitted that he had appointed Frank, but where Frank gets his salary of $200 per month does not appear.

Crawfish Organizer

Feeney's disappointment at not being able to make the race for President of District No. 5 has been softened by an appointment (not election, by rank and file) as Secretary-Treasury of Provisional District No. 4. Feeney has been drawing, on the average, $506.76 per month.

But, if organizing results are what Feeney wishes, the situation is not so satisfactory. Secretary Green's report shows that in this report. In the next four months, since August, the number of tax-paying locals decreased from thirty-three, in the preceeding six month's perior, to fourteen. The amount of tax decreased, from one report to the next, from an average of $146.15 per month, to an average of $100.25 per month. At this rate, how long will it take Feeney to disorganize the coke region?

ALL AGREEMENTS IN BITUMINOUS FIELDS TO EXPIRE TOGETHER

TOMLINSON HALL, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 1.—The convention of the United Mine Workers adopted the report of the scales committee authorizing a new contract at a wage not less than that now prevailing. Agreements in all bituminous districts must run concurrently, and expire at the same date, the report declares. No outlying district will be allowed to conclude an agreement till after the Central Competitive field has concluded its agreement.

The six-hour day program was abandoned in the committee's report. Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois miners, arguing that if costs were increased in union fields the trade would go to the non-union fields. The alternative idea of organizing the non-union fields was not considered by the machine.

Conservatives engineered the scale committee report but the clause making agreements expire concurrently was a concession to the progressives' strength.

Lewis stands on the subject of the Ku Klux Klan.

After the report was voted down the convention went officially on record in favor of retaining the anti-Klan section of the constitution.

Lewis Owes Much to Klan.

The Lewis machine owes much to the Klan for the Klan is co-operating in the program of crucifying the radicals which is one of the main businesses of the United Mine Workers' officialdom.

The Ku Klux Klan has done all in its power to injure the progressive delegates who are fighting the reactionary machine in the miners' organization. Like Mussolini's Fascisti the Ku Klux Klan takes the official stand that it is friendly to conservative unionism but violently opposed to radical unionism, which in the case of the miners means to all efforts to improve working conditions and link up the miners' union with the rest of the labor movement.

The Russian Investigation

The Senate investigation of alleged Soviet Government activities in the United States against the government seems to have lost fire. For a few days it appeared that the sub-committee presided over by Borah would really get down to the bottom of things and present a comprehensive report to the Senate in order to enable it to debate the Borah Russian Recognition Resolution with some degree of intelligence.

It appears now that there is a danger of the country being spared the pleasure of a near-intelligent debate in Congress on the Russian question. There is an attempt being made to have the committee discontinue its hearings. There can be only one reason for the effort to stop the sessions of Borah's sub-committee. The State Department has presented its case and it is the concensus of opinion amongst the members of the sub-committee and the interested observers that the evidence submitted by Hughes was very weak. The documents and neral material presented by the State De- rtment's agents were handled much more orly than by some second-class city attor- ys in their prosecution of Communists. This questionably will be the decisive reason for iscontinuing the hearings if the committee decides to do so.

Samuel Gompers has made a formal request upon the sub-committee to be permitted to state his case against the Communists. Some committee members were at first reluctant to accede to Gompers' request for fear that it would become too evident that the decisive reason for the administration's refusal to resume friendly relations with Russia was its fear of the effect a new Russian policy would have on the American labor movement. The government is particularly interested in perpetuating Gompers' control of the American Federation of Labor, and many of its leading figures dread Russian recognition because they feel that it would hurt the prestige and domination of the labor lieutenants of capital in the organized working class movement.

Compers, however, was granted permission to appear before the committee. Should hearings be resumed the capitalist press will, without doubt, give the widest publicity to Gompers' counterfeit charges against the Communists in America and against the Soviet Government. It will then be pertinent to ask whether the Senate sub-committee in its desire to get the fullest information about the horrible crimes that are supposedly committed by American Communists, at the behest of the Soviet Government, will agree to allow representatives of the Workers Party to state the Communist case at the hearings.

If the Senate is to be given all the facts obtainable then the Communists will have to be heard. Otherwise, the charge of bias against the sub-committee will be irrefutable, especially in view of the fact that Gompers, Lewis, and others, will have had the opportunity to misrepresent the Communist program and activities.

Democracy From the Inside

Millions of workers and farmers who for- erly were subjected to the blessings of Capitalist Democracy are now living under the pall of open, brutal capitalist dictatorships—Fascist governments.

Within the last two years the tendency to discard the mask of fraudulent democracy has been so greatly enhanced that the official pologists of the capitalist order have had the devil's own time trying to build up a philosophy of excuses for the rousing welcome the big employers have accorded the new Fascist overnments.

Perusing some of the most inspired apologetic literature we came across a rather instructive and somewhat unusually honest explanation. In its last Monthly Bulletin, the National City Bank gives the real why and wherefore of government to-day and of capitalist democracy. To quote in part: "Democracy had run itself into the ground, and in heer desperation the public welcomed any uthority that promised to be strong enough nd patriotic enough to give good government. fter all, the most important service of gov- ment is that of maintaining order and pro- ting industry and private business. If emocracies will learn this lesson they will be reatly benefited by the experience."

Here we are told the real function of gov- ernment today by those who are on the inside. We are indebted to the National City Bank or its frank statement of what capitalist mocracy really is. No Communist could r put the issue more squarely and define rol [illegible] government today more clearly.

Any working man knows precisely what "protecting" industry and private business" means to him in his every-day life and work. Injunctions, severe prison sentences, low wages, intolerable working conditions, smashed labor organizations and broken strikes are the only fruits the workers have gathered under the rule of capitalist democracy.

Poor Team Work

There is a sad lack of co-operation between Brother Meyer Perlstein and S. Vanofsky, editor of Justice, official organ of the International Ladies Garment Workers.

Perlstein has been weeping all over the pages of the Chicago Tribune because of the disruptive work of certain sheiks, he alleges, are employed by bosses and to the activities of these persons he ascribes the failure of the organization campaign here.

Comes now Brother Yanofsky, ex-anarchist, and a recent convert to Gompersism, and lays the blame for the organization debacle on the radical elements, thus giving the lie direct to his payroll colleague.

In this difference of opinion between two alibi artists we take a neutral position, i. e., we consider both of them very clumsy liars.

The truth of the matter is that following the expulsion of the left wing elements the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in Chicago has lost its fighting spirit.

Of this invaluable asset of a union the left wingers had a monopoly.

Deprived of their activities, aid and advice the Ladies' Garment Workers Union is becoming a typical Gompers union—devoid of initiative, destitute of leadership, with its officials blaming everything but their own reaction and inefficiency for the failure to accomplish the primary function of any union-organization of the industry over which it claims jurisdiction.

The left wingers, the most active ones at least, have been deprived of membership in the union and we await with considerable curiosity the next Sigman-Perlstein-Yanofsky alibi for the continuation of the retreat the Ladies' Garment Workers will be forced to make until the officialdom recognizes the fact that functioning unions are not built up by high-salaried incompetents but by militant workers whose devotion to revolutionary theory and practice is the best index of their loyalty to the working class.

The Profits of Prohibition

In the little side show of an investigation now going on in New York, the investigation of the Anti-Saloon League, much light is being shed on prohibition as an industry. We have long known that the enforcement of the prohibition law has been the butt of politics and has enabled the present capitalist administration to build up its machine thru the disposal of handsome patronage. We have long suspected that our most strenuous prohibition advocates were giving vent too lightly to moral indignation over the ravages of liquor. We have often wondered how much they were paid by those who had the price and the desire to pay for these moral outbursts.

The New York investigation of William H. Anderson, the cyclops of the National Prohibition movement, has fortunately let us in a bit on this secret. We now have a confession, and it must be a true confession, since Mr. Anderson has always advertised his high regard for morals, from this leader of the Prohibition league that some mysterious stranger gave him $20,000 in cash. Mr. Anderson grudgingly further confessed that he was operating his prohibition campaign on a basis of splitting commissions. Of course, the reason for his being so well treated is to be found in the fact that his work was satisfactory.

These are but a few of the myriad of facts yet to be disclosed proving that prohibition under capitalism, like most of the other movements for the uplift of the working men, is run on the basis of making profits. Most of the professional prohibition agents are engaged in their game in order to amass the profits formerly secured by the manufacturers of sundry liquors. There is only one way of removing the many evils of the use of liquor to which the workers are subjected. That way is to take the profit out of prohibition and not the present capitalist method of transferring the liquor profits to the field of our new and flourishing indusry—the industry of prohibition enforcement.

Soviet Russia has shown the way. In Soviet Russia the profits have been taken out of the manufacture of liquor and the enforcement of prohibition. In Soviet Russia there are no professional prohibition agents. In Soviet Russia the bootlegging industry is at its lowest ebb and does not flourish, as in the United States.

Let no one be disturbed. Anderson and his tribe will continue preying upon the gullible. It is in the interest of the capitalist class and its guardian angel, the government, to have such professional fakers draw the red herring of morality, decency and other vagaries, across the trail of the class conflicts in order to mislead the workers.

The Leland case will undoubtedly make Hollywood more amenable to suggestions from the Christian persons who are worrying themselves sick over the open immorality said to flourish in the [illegible] Angeles suburb. Testimony in the Lela[illegible]ould indicate that it is the lack of c[illegible]at is objected to.

tain only a quarter of our total population.

The Bigger the City, the Worse the Suffering

Mr. George Gove was the Director of Investigations of the New Work State Housing and Regional Planning Commission, which has just completed a thorogoing survey of the housing crisis in the Empire State. In discussing the housing shortage with the writer, Mr. Gove said that his commissions investigation definitely indicated "that the larger the city, the more serious is its housing problem, and the more difficult is it to meet the housing demands of the great mass of people." High rents, taxes, and transportation all play their part in aggravating the housing difficulties here.

Thus the best picture of the housing crisis, which is national, the best view of the shortage of homes from all important angles, can be obtained from a review of the conditions in New York.

Millions of Workers Not Provided For

According to the latest official census figures, there are 6,566,636 people living in New York City. Last June there were, in New York City, 103,387 tenement houses, having 1,036,870 apartments. These apartments house 4,353,520 people. If one should entirely disregard the fitness of the houses inhabited by the mass of workers, and even assume that the shanties in the squallid alleys and the wretched hovels now inhabited by the workingmen, are satisfactory homes, then there would be still a lack of housing facilities for at least 2,213,116 people.

At the hearings, conducted by the New York Housing Commission, it was shown that these figures translated themselves into a lack of homes for no less than 165,903 families. One of the most experienced social investigators in New York, who has had many years of contact with the working class districts, and who has appeared before the Housing Commission, told me that the situation was really much worse. Said Miss B——: "At least five times this number of people are today compelled to live in houses whose conditions cannot be endured for a long time. Many families are forced to double up in apartments built for half the number of people, because they cannot find rooms that they can afford to pay for."

In many sections of the city the housing conditions remind one of the miserable shacks that crowd the raw mining camps and the congested steel and oil communities. Testifying before the commission, President Harry R. Ely, of the Federation of Tenants' Associations, cited a case where no less than forty-two tenants occupied one tenement in three eight hour shifts for sleeping.

Vacancies Decrease Steadily

The number of houses available for occupation by the mass of workers is decreasing steadily. At the same time the population of New York City is increasing at the rate of about 250,000 a year.

One of the most comprehensive investigations of the rising shortage of homes for the great mass of workers was made by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. This institution, which is one of the strongest champions of the big interests, and whose service to the employing class no one can question, made its report public last November, to the effect that: "Inquiry among apartment house renting agencies in this city, as to rents following October 1, indicated a continued shortage of medium and low priced apartments, and no reduction in rents, which generally average 9 per cent higher than a year ago."

The additional construction in the last few years was admitted by Dr. Lindsay, representing the wealthiest New York landlords before the Housing Commission to be of no benefit to the average worker who could never attempt to pay more than $10 to $12 for a room. Besides, the Commission looked into the character of about 200 of these vacancies and found that "most of the tenements visited had been vacant for a long period and were either abandoned as unfit for use, or held for higher rental than prevailed in the neighborhood for similar apartments."

Interviewing several worker-tenants in the Bronx, Harlem, Chelsea and East Side districts, I proposed the following questions and met with replies which shed startling information on the critical stage the housing shortage has assumed for the working people in the metropolis:

Q.—How many vacancies are there in your section today?

A. (Mrs. G—y, Bronx).—"I don't know of a single one. For some time I have been looking out for a friend of mine to get new rooms for her family. The other day I saw a room-to-let sign and tried to get the flat. The janitor told me that he has already promised about twenty other people a chance to look it over."

Mr. T——h, a worker having a family of seven, and occupying a four room apartment on the East Side, told me: "I haven't seen a new house built in my neighborhood for at least ten years. I would like to move into larger quarters, but I can't afford to spend car fare to ride to work, and it is next to impossible to find anything better in the neighborhood. Besides, as a new tenant, I would have to pay more for the same number of rooms. I am already paying the limit."

That this condition prevails thruout the city was established by the testimony of Tenement House Commissioner Frank Mann, before the Housing Commission, as shown below:

"Q.—Now take Manhattan. 972 vacancies in the old law tenements, as of March, 1923, compared with 2,883 vacancies in the old law tenements, as of April, 1920; is that right?

"A.—April, 1922, yes; 2,883.

"Q.—Showing a much more serious condition, so far as vacancies for moderate priced apartments in Manhattan is concerned, in March, 1923, than in April, 1920; is that right?

"A.—Undoubtedly; so far as lower rental apartments are concerned, there are practically none to be had. They are practically all occupied.

"Q.—These vacancies, in old law tenements, as a matter of fact, are the least desirable, are they not?

"A.—Of course, they are the least desirable. I am under the impression, and I maintained years ago, that, if normal conditions had continued to prevail, the time would come when nobody would live in the old law tenements."

Mass Dearth of Houses for the Workers

Tho there has been going on a good deal of building construction in the last two or three years in New York, the shortage of houses from which the great mass of wage earners is suffering is increasing.

It has long been the concensus of opinion amongst the most competent social investigators that the maximum the average family can expend for rent is 20 per cent of its total income. Analyzing the effect of new construction on the housing situation in New York State, the Commission concluded that: "Only a few instances were reported of rents in new construction at less than $15 per room, or $45 for a three room apartment. Assuming 20 per cent of the income for rent, and also on the basis of average rentals paid, construction at this minimum rental is beyond the means of most of the 69 per cent of the population with family incomes below $2,500 a year."

The new construction is helpful and available only to about 8 per cent of the population whose income is $5,000 or more. The Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce found from an investigation of the rent situation confronting 500 families of the workers in the eight leading industries of the Borough that less than 3 per cent of the newly built houses is "within the renting power of persons earning up to $60 a week, and that there was none available in Brooklyn in 1922 for a person earning less than $45 a week."

Why the Shortage?

The fundamental cause of the housing shortage in New York and in the other centers of the country is to be found in the private capitalist control of the housing facilities of the great masses of workers.

The capitalists find it necessary to maintain a huge army of unemployed workers, an industrial reserve army, in order to maintain what their defenders have chosen to call "an economic equilibrium in wages," in reality, the lowest wages workers can possibly be compelled to accept. Likewise, the capitalist landlords are now bent on maintaining a huge reserve army of tenants, of workers being forced to pay the highest, outrageous rents for houses that should long ago have been condemned as unfit for habitation. The profit hungry landlords are not willing to invest money in building homes which the workers can afford to pay for from their low wages.

Director of Investigations Gove summed up the whole situation very well to me when he said: "We must supply three-fourths of our families with homes at $500 a year or less. This can't be done under speculative enterprise. The landlords haven't done it and won't do it. Speculative enterprise is filled with waste. The whole competitive system is filled with waste. This present system has given rise to the fly-by-night speculator, who is out only for enough money to swing a deal, buy and transfer houses, boost the rent, raise the prices, and quit."

(The second article will deal with the terrible effects of the living crisis on the workers' families.)

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARDS THE THIRD PARTY

tity of the Workers Party? Not only was such a proposal never made, but the so greatly disgraced old majority of the Executive combatted energetically even the desire of the close allies of Comrade Lore to give up the identity of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party within a greater Labor Party. It declared again and again that the Labor Party in itself is not our aim, but that it must simply create more favorable conditions for the organization of the proletariat as a class. And for this reason our task after the founding of the Labor Party is not solved. And an organized left wing in this Labor Party will make our task considerably lighter. This left wing is the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

If at any time the Executive or any one of its members made a proposal such as the one intimated by you, it would have been your urgent duty, Comrade Lore, at the deciding session of the Executive not simply to give a few shabby moments to the whole object of discussion, as you did, but you should have sounded the alarm, by immediately bringing up accusation against the treacherous Executive before the Communist International. You did not do that, because no such proposal or similar proposal was ever made by anyone at any time. To make this assertion however, at this time in the debate, to say the least, is not a wholly irreproachable tactic for a guardian of pure Communist principles.

The Compromise Bugaboo.

In the discussion there is constant talk of compromise with the lower middle class. Who has ever made such a proposal? Concessions are proposed. But not concessions to the lower middle class; only concessions to the working class whose minds are unfortunately still filled with lower middle class illusions.

No compromise with the lower middle class is proposed. But also no flight from the great mass of workers and poor farmers, simply because they have not yet freed themselves from all capitalist ideology.

Furthermore, we should do everything, to snatch the workers and poor farmers from the leadership of the lower middle class and to separate them from the lower middle class. If we do not succeed in doing this we will at least not permit the lower middle class to separate us from the laboring masses thru our own free and voluntary abdication.

And finally we should warn the workers in this case of the results of their submission to the leadership of lower middle class politicians. We should prophesy the unavoidable deception, which such a leadership must result in for the masses of workers and poor farmers. But we should not be merely prophets; we must in the first place have a policy. Thus, we must do everything that is necessary, in order to convert our momentary defeat into a later victory, but we must not flee. To flee would mean that we give up the fight for the leadership of these masses and that we surrender these masses to the lower middle class leadership for better or for worse.

In fighting for the souls of the laboring masses and revolutionary farmers we can not expect to be victorious immediately in the first encounter. Therefore, after we have shown up the lower middle class sufficiently, we will declare that we will not desert the laboring masses despite their mistake which in our opinion they have made. We will support their candidates and so prepare the school of experience for the workers, which will complete what our propaganda has not completed, the destruction of lower middle class illusions of the laboring masses. We will therefore support the lower middle class politicians, in the words of Lenin, as a rope supports a hanged man.

To see a compromise with the lower middle class in the proposed tactics of the Executive, or even an attempt to dissolve our party in a lower middle class party shows a great lack of understanding of the problems before us or it shows an opposition to the united front tactic. Nobody wants a compromise with the lower middle class. But in the interest of the successful achievement of the united front tactics we must make concession to the petty bourgeois ideology of the laboring masses. Only in this way can we hope to overcome this ideology in common action.

The tactics of the united front have their dangers, especially for such comrades who fear too strong a test of their Communist fundamentals. Such comrades at times convince themselves, that their stand is more radical, more pure in principle than that of the opponents of concrete united front tactics. But the characterization of the right elements of the Communist Party of France, which was hostile to the united front, the characterization made by Comrade Zinoviev at the Enlarged Executive of the Communist International in February applies to these comrades in our Party. Zinoviev said there that the right wing of the French Party fought against the united front ostensibly to prove the purity of their principles. In reality, however, these comrades had so little confidence in this purity that they feared to appear in a united front with non-Communist workers, because they were not certain that these workers will not be able to distinguish them from non-Communists.

The problem before us is not a compromise with the lower middle class, but the question of how we Communists can free the masses of workers and poor farmers from the influence of lower middle class ideology and leadership. Our answer is, thru political action. This answer of the supposed "Lefts" is, thru political "propaganda." It is not very hard to decide.

But until this decision has been definitely made, we should confine the discussion to party comrades. We should guard against sowing mistrust outside against our party and our movement. Have those who with such self confidence have raised the accusation of reformism stopped to consider what they would do if the decision goes against them? By what means will they restore the confidence in the Party among those outside of the party, the confidence which they now destroy with such a light heart, so as not to miss the opportunity to score a run in the race, and not because they want to find the right thing for the Party, but to be "right" in any case.

talists; the I. W. W. sets all its hopes on the direct economic revolutionary action of the industrial unions in the struggle against the capitalists.

Against this counter-revolutionary and revolutionary anti-political attitude of the American Federation of Labor and the I. W. W. the Socialist Party never opposed a consistent revolutionary political tactic. The right wing of the Socialist Party (the Victor Bergers, Morris Hillquits and Meyer Londons) have degraded and narrowed political activity into election campaigns and into parliamentary activity. The election campaigns were not utilized by them, to mobilize the masses, but as a means to grab seats in Congress. The proletarian participation in Congress they did not use for revolutionary propaganda or for awakening the class consciousness of the working class, but as a means to secure small, insignificant patchwork reforms within the capitalist system.

The left wing of the Socialist Party was justly disgusted with the shallow opportunist tactics of the right wing, but out of its disgust it did not develop the correct tactic of revolutionary parliamentarism, only an anti-parliamentarism on principle. The right wing Socialists have replaced the direct action of the masses by miserable opportunist action of individual members of Congress. The left wing of the Socialist Party did not adduce the correct lessons namely, that direct mass action in the factories, in the unions, on the streets, must be combined with a revolutionary stand in Congress and in the various state legislatures, but it rejected parliamentarism entirely without criticism, and it ridiculed all election campaigns.

The Communist Party in America, has arisen out of three elements: the American Federation of Labor trade unionists, I. W. W.'s and left wing Socialists. All these three groups were opponents of political action altogether, or were against parliamentarism. It is therefore no wonder that the young Communist Party became a prey to anti-parliamentary cretinism and rejected all parliamentary activity.

The Workers Party of today, has theoretically correctly solved the question of political action and has also allotted to election campaigns and participation in parliament their proper place within general political activity, at least in theory. But in our practice the Party is still suffering from the old American anti-political traditions of the working class. In theory our party is for election campaigns, but in practice we have not had until now a single election campaign in which the Party on a national scale or the various party organizations on a local scale really whole-heartedly participated. The recent attempts in New York and Cleveland, have shown that we could not mobilize the Party membership for an election campaign. Our Party in this respect is like the newly-baptized Jew who carries a cross about his neck but still cannot eat pork. Our Party carries the theoretical cross of participation in election campaigns, but its anti-political instincts still reject real participation in election campaigns. The atavistic anti-political inclinations still live too strongly in our Party. It is our duty to fight against these inclinations. We hope that thru the Labor Party campaign and especially thru the thoro going mobilization of the Party for the presidential and Congressional elections of 1924, we can uproot the last vestiges of the freakish mixture of anti-political opportunism and anti-political revolutionary phrase from our party.

CHAPLIN'S PRISON SONGS HEARD IN CHICAGO THEATRE

Set to Music by Max Oberndorfer

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

Ralph Chaplin's "Night in the Cell House," "Prison Reveille," and "Prison Nocturne," set to music by Marx E. Obendorfer, were sung by Raymund Koch, baritone, at the first concert of the Chicago Solo orchestra at the Blackstone theatre on January 31. The poems are cleverly set. The words are chanted, rather than sung, and the orchestral accompaniment reflects skilfully the poignant protest of the working class poet against his iron cage.

Mr. Koch, one felt, was not sincere in his interpretation. He seems never to have felt the revolutionary fire of Ralph Chaplin, never to have felt his dreams and desires broken on the wheel of greed. And so the poems lost some of their meaning and effect.

A Symphony Departure

The Chicago Solo orchestra consists of twenty five instrumentalists, conducted by Eric De Lamarter. Small concert orchestras are no new thing in Chicago, for the Little Symphony, George Dasch, director, has existed here for several years. The difference is that Mr. Dasch's orchestra plays standard symphonic music, cut down for small orchestras, while De Lamarter's will play only music written for small instrumental combinations.

The orchestra played, for the first time on any concert platform, a "Symphony in Miniature," by David Stanley Smith, dean of the Yale music school. What little we heard of it sounded like a good modernist string quartet, amplified by the addition of a few wind instruments.

New Rhapsody Heard

Another brand new composition was Leo Sowerby's rhapsody for small orchestras. This is a singularly beautiful work, a study in musical dusk and mystery.

The program ended with a serenade and a waltz by d'Indy. They are both small, light, and lively things.

Someone has suggested that small orchestras of this kind will supplant large symphony orchestras. Perish the thought! The Solo orchestra is an organization capable of producing worth while and valuable effects, but the sonority and the fire of a full orchestra are lacking. A sort of glorified chamber music is its field, and outside of this graceful and delicate form of art, it has no business to go.

And the Thief Escaped.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—Prof. John Sharp saw a chicken thief prowling about his barn early today. Garbed in his night gown and armed with a lantern, he gave chase. Up into the haymow of the barn ran the thief, the professor with his lantern in pursuit. Finally Sharp got close enough to hurl his lantern at the intruder. The hay caught fire, burning the barn, causing a $10,000 loss—and the thief escaped.

PARLIAMENTARISM - - -

By JOHN PEPPER

THE Communist Party of Italy called upon the Communist deputy Bombacci to resign his place, and declared that Bombacci is no longer worthy of the confidence of the Party and of the working class.

The Communist Party of Bulgaria expelled the Communist deputy, Dr. Nikola Sakaroff from the Party and called upon him to resign his place.

These two recent events within the Comunist International bring up again the question of Parliamentarism. The opponents of participation in the bourgeois parliaments will try again to find arguments against the tactics of the Communist International. They will tell how Bombacci behaved as a lackey in parliament and not as a revolutionary, that at the occasion of the discussion on trade relations between Italy and Russia, he praised Mussolini and forgot all proletarian pride. The opponents of participation in parliaments will tell with anger how Nikola Sakaroff in the parliament of the counter revolution in Bulgaria showed himself a renegade, that he slandered shamefully the heroic September uprising of the Bulgarian workers and peasants.

One swallow doesn't make a summer. One or two renegades do not make a winter, do not necessitate the revision of the tactics of the Communist International.

New Communist Experiences

The Communist International has always made a sharp division between opportunist parliamentarism and revolutionary parliamentarism. It criticized the opportunist parliamentarism of the Social Democrats and at the same time it built up the tactic of revolutionary parliamentarism. Lenin and the Russian Bolsheviki were the first party which exposed and showed their contempt for the practice of opportunist parliamentarism, but at the same time they waged the first fight against all Syndicalist, I. W. W. and so-called left Communist elements which rejected parliamentarism as a matter of principle.

The situation in the Communist International today is such that all the great Communist parties participate in the various election fights and in the various parliaments. The German, the French, the Cheko-Slovak, the Italian, the Bulgarian, the Polish Communist Parties—legal or illegal, and the countries which are at greatly varying stages of development all have their Communist fractions in parliament. The French Communists have proven that they have understood how to use their places in parliament against imperialism and the Ruhr invasion for practical anti-militarism. The Polish Communist fraction in parliament has become one of tht most important legal expressions of the illegal party. The German Communist fraction of Parliament at the moment of dissolution of the Communist Party issued its declaration in the Reichstag, the real revolutionary slogan: "The Communist Reichstag fraction calls upon the workers to prepare for the decisive struggle. The uprising of the working class is the only deed that can save the German people. In the struggle against military dictatorship we will prepare the armed uprising, and the victory of the proletarian dictatorship."

The various Congresses of the Communist International and the implacable fight of Lenin in his various writings against revolutionary phrase and for revolutionary realism have clarified theoretically the question of parliamentarism. The practice of the various Communist parties proves that a revolutionary parliamentarism is possible and that Dombal in Poland, Paul Froelich in Germany, Marcel Cachin in France, in their fight in parliament have become the real followers of the parliamentary activity of Karl Liebknecht and the Bolsheviki fraction in the Russian Duma. Individual comrades such as Bombacci in Italy or Sakaroff in Bulgaria can fall victims to parliamentary cretinism. But the Communist International and its most important parties are today free from both, from parliamentary cretinism and anti-parliamentary cretinism.

The Historical Role of Parliament.

What is the Communist conception on parliamentarism?

We all know today that the parliament in all lands is a tool of the capitalist class. The parliaments were revolutionary institutions as long as the bourgeoisie itself was revolutionary. Cromwell's parliament, the Federal Congress and Constitutional Convention of the American revolution, the French Convention, were institutions of the young, revolutionary bourgeoisie against feudalism and monarchy. The capitalist development itself has turned the bourgeoisie from a revolutionary class to a reactionary class and has thereby transformed the bourgeois parliaments from tools of suppression of feudalism into tools of oppression of the working class.

Professor Charles A. Beard in his historical studies denounces the "Fathers of the American Constitution" because there was no worker or poor farmer among them, but they were the representatives of the rich and the capitalists. Professor Beard is right. But he is wrong when he does not understand that in the period of the American revolution it was not the working class which had not yet come into existence or the backward provincial farmers, but the capitalists, who economically and politically represented the real revolutionary class.

In our present period, in the period of the decay of capitalism turned into imperialism, the parliaments are everywhere the outspoken tools of the worst counter-revolution. The English House of Commons, the French Chamber of Deputies, the German Reichstag and the American Congress are in equal measure nothing else than enemies of the workers and working farmers. All these parliaments are so much the more dangerous enemies of the oppressed and exploited because they appear in the mask of democracy, universal suffrage and they awaken in this way the deceitful illusion among the workers and farmers that they represent the instrument of the rule of the masses. We Communists must therefore combat all these "democratic" parliaments, as the worst and most dangerous enemies of the workers. We must expose universal suffrage and democracy as being in reality only the cloak which hides the rule of the finance oligarchy.

We must make it clear to the masses that when they elect the Senators democratically they put the power into the hands of the trusts, that when they elect Coolidge president thru universal suffrage they only set up the dictatorship of J. Pierpont Morgan.

But it is not enough to show the masses that Congresses and parliaments are nothing but tools of mass oppression and mass deceit, but we must also show that the workers and working farmers can never attain to rulership thru parliamentary struggles, and that the rule of the laboring masses must construct new political institutions. The political form of rule of the workers and farmers is not Congress, but workers' and farmers' councils. The bourgeois method is elections based upon geographical divisions; the proletarian method of election has its basis in economic organization, the factories, mines, mills and farms.

The historical task of the Communists is to help to destroy the political tool of the capitalists, the parliament, and to build up the political tool of the workers, the Soviets.

Anti-Parliamentary and Parliamentary Cretinism

The question now is, how can we attain this aim?

We find two great obstacles before us. First the government organization of the capitalist class, which defends parliamentarism with force of arms. Second the illusion of the masses which consider parliaments as organs of democracy.

In the working out of the correct proletarian tactic on the attitude toward parliamentarism two mistakes are possible. The first mistake (and this mistake has been made by the leftist Communists and the I. W. W.) is that we do not reckon with the illusions of the masses and we boycott the parliaments because they are capitalist institutions. The second mistake is (and this mistake was made and is made today by the Socialists) that we share the illusions of the masses, that we consider the parliaments as tools of real democracy and we content ourselves with working in the parliaments for reforms within capitalism. As the Communist International was not born complete and thru one act, but as it is a product of historical development, and as it was built up on the one hand by Socialist elements which abandoned the Second International and on the other hand by former Syndicalists, I. W. W's. and anarchists it was inevitable that both mi takes, the leftist and opportunist ar again being committed within the Communist International. Against anti-parliamentary as well as against parliamentary cretinism, the only weapon is revolutionary Marxism, which reckons with the illusions of the masses, but does not become a victim of the illusions of the masses. Revolutionary Marxism has established the tactic that we must participate in parliaments because that is the best method to expose the parliaments and to destroy the illusions of the masses concerning them. This Marxist, realistic method has separated the small leftist groups of revolutionary phrase in Germany, England, Holland, Bulgaria, from the Communist International. But, the same ruthless Marxian method elimininated the opportunists of parliamentarism from the Com International, those who adapt themselves to their c colleagues, as for instance F in France, Bombacci in Italy, Sakaroff in Bulgaria.

Anti-Political Tradition in the United States

Here in the United States we are facing a more complicated and difficult situation in the question of parliamentarism than in the other countries.

The greatest mass organization of the workers, the American Federation of Labor has been preaching for forty years an anti-political ideology to the masses. Its slogan is that Congress and the government should not interfere in the affairs of the workers and the workers shall take part as little as possible in politics. The American Federation of Labor is an opponent in principle of every independent Labor Party because it claims that the Labor Party would subdue the trade unions.

The I. W. W. has in fact the same attitude towards politics as the American Federation of Labor, except that it translates Gompers' words into a revolutionary language. Gompers sets all his hopes on the direct economic opportunist action of the trade unions in collaboration with the capi-

Political Activity in the Trade Unions

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

THE lack of a working class political viewpoint apparent in the American trade union movement, to say nothing of revolutionary political vision and tactics, is a source of great concern to everyone who realizes the important part the trade unions must play in the tremendous changes that are taking place in the capitalist world.

Disgusted with the reactionary character of official trade union policies, the belief has gained ground among the revolutionary elements that the American trade union movement is generally anti-political, and that where it is not, its activities serve only to strengthen the hold of the capitalist class on industry and government.

Two Points

In this article, I want to prove two things.

First, that the American trade union movement, as represented by the American Federation of Labor, instead of being anti-political, or even non-political, conducts intensive and very complicated political activities.

Second, that, while judged by revolutionary standards, these activities are either of a mild reformist or positively reactionary nature, they are not entirely the result of the conspiratorial machinations of evil geniuses in the form of trade union bureaucrats, but are also conditioned by the social, economic and political milieu in which the trade unions have developed.

rly Political Thinking

liest protest movements of erican history advises us, by the feeble trade unions day, were against executive dicial tyranny, and took on a al form. The right, first to ne for protection and then to ke, was gained by the early un- only thru political agitation and tion, as McMaster clearly shows.

The campaign for free and compulsory education resulting in the establishment of our public school system was an early movement in which the trade unions of that time formed the most active section.

The Owenite agitation again attracted the support of the trade unions and it was these organizations that furnished the nucleus of the movement. The Knights of Labor was more a political than an industrial organization and in every wave of protest that has swept the nation since that time the trade unions have taken a leading part.

No Anti-Political Tradition

There is, therefore, no anti-political tradition so far as the trade unions of the United States are concerned. There is a plentitude of confusion of thought and a disposition to follow what appears to be the line of least resistance, such as the support of liberal candidates on the capitalist party tickets, but this is no evidence of any anti-political bias.

Reasons for Present Methods

It seems to me that one of the principal reasons for the ineffective and non-working class character of the present political activity of the trade unions is to be found in the fact that in the United States, owing to conditions which can not be detailed in an article of this length, the trade unions never have been able to convince the ruling class that they have a right to exist; that they are a permanent part of our social structure, and must be recognized as such: this fact is made clear during every period of stagnation in industry bringing widespread unemployment. The national associations of employers no sooner see an overstocked labor market than the cry of "wipe out the unions" is raised. In no other great capitalist nation is this condition found. The recent open shop drive is only the most recent evidence of this attitude.

It is a little too much to expect that such an extremely feeble trade union movement should develop a powerful political movement.

American Ideology

Altho a very large percentage of the union membership is of foreign birth and extraction, not citizens of the United States, the ideological basis of trades union organization is American citizenship. The right of franchise is considered the guarantee of political and economic equality and, in practice, this becomes for the trade unions, a hostility to any form of political activity based on the class struggle.

Effect of Weakness

The weakness of the trade union movement and the constant and bitter struggle that even the most conservative unions are forced to conduct, combined with this typical American viewpoint, makes the leadership hesitate to place in the hands of the employers what they, the leaders, believe to be an effective weapon—ability to charge and prove radical tendencies.

Demanding, as American citizens, a mythical, but, to them, very real thing known as the American standard of living, these officials view with a holy horror, absolutely incomprehensible to the average revolutionist, any act or utterance that would make it difficult to defend their loyalty to American institutions.

Concrete Rewards

In many sections of the trade union movement favorable working conditions, high wages and job control are obtained quite as often by political deals and trades as they are by the economic strength of the unions.

To the building trades in many cities the appointment of building, plumbing, electrical and health inspectors favorable to the unions is a matter of vital importance. In municipal elections such issues as these will arouse the greatest interest in the unions and any form of political activity that would alienate the union's friends in either the democrat or republican parties is frowned upon.

The labor union government of San Francisco, under Abe Ruef and P. H. McCarthy, is a case in point.

Defensive Activity

There is again the necessity for securing neutrality from the police force during strikes, the ability to "spring" arrested strikers, immunity from prosecution from various necessary activities a hostile administration could make much of, etc.

Much of the political activity that secures the privileges mentioned is altogether valueless, much of it positively harmful, but political activity it is, none the less.

Organs of Political Expression

The state federations of labor and the central labor bodies—city central councils—are the political organs of the American Federation of Labor. They have no executive power under the laws of the A. F. of L., but in political matters they are allowed considerable latitude. They are the only bodies thru which the labor unions, as such, find organized political expression and are important because of this fact.

Constant Activity

In many cities the political activities of these two bodies are of an intensive nature. The state federation of labor watches all legislation proposed at the state capitals, keeps the union membership informed of favorable or hostile measures, and many times finds it necessary to secure the passage of resolutions for or against certain measures and even to organize demonstrations against them. Last year in New York the labor unions sent a veritable army of representatives to Albany to protest against the enactment of bills menacing labor organizations.

Ease of Betrayal

The officials entrusted with the responsibility of passing on laws or candidates for labor to oppose or support develop a high degree of skill in political maneuvering; they often betray the interests of the labor movement and certainly nothing could be easier with the present level of political consciousness among the rank and file; the wonder is that it does not occur more often.

Progress

To one familiar with the lack of cohesion and common program in trade union political activities, the organization of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, was an advance step for the trade union movement.

It has no class character—quite the reverse—its program is hopelessly inadequate, but for the first time thousands of local unions, scores of central bodies and dozens of state federations of labor, found themselves uniting on a program that gave them a national political viewpoint and a common program, mild and ineffective as it was and is.

Effects Apparent

The burden of carrying out this program falls upon the most advanced groups in the American Federation of Labor—delegates to the central bodies and state federations of labor—who are always the most active and the best informed of the union membership. Because of the disillusionment brought by the war, the bankruptcy of the farmers, with whom most state federations are in close touch, the evident failure of the local "reward and punish" policy in national politics, the idea of divorce from the capitalist parties is sympathetically entertained by central bodies and state federations, nor has the Gompers' machine been signally successful in sabotaging this new development. Political consciousness is growing in the trade unions and the idea of their non-political character—never entirely true—must be revised.

Important Development

For Communists this is an interesting and important development. No working class movement without clear political vision and understanding ever can become a menace to the capitalist class, and there is no more important task for the Communists in the trade unions than to assist this development by activity based on knowledge of the strength and weaknesses, the ignorances and prejudices of the membership of the American labor movement.

Of Strategic Importance

There is no better starting point than propaganda for a wholesale desertion of the parties of the employers, based on a wealth of concrete instances of betrayal, both by candidates and labor officials, for a farmer-labor party controlled by the unions and farmer organizations.

With this idea of a class party every honest unionist is in sympathy, altho he may be held from work for it and participation in it by fear of losing some immediate advantage.

In addition to these fears he must reckon with the bureaucracy which now has abandoned all pretense of ruling by consent of the rank and file. Control of the unions today is a machine-like process comparable only to the manner in which the capitalist state maintains power. The bureaucracy in no way expresses the desire of the membership for expansion of political activity, but opposes it.

Great Opportunities

With this as a beginning, however, and with the growth of the movement itself, the bars are down for political agitation of a far more fundamental character—for Communist propaganda—impossible when the only political issue discussed is the extent of the friendship of republican or democrat candidates

Extension of Party Activity

Party activity in the trade unions from now on must take on more of a Communist character—it must be more political. We have won the sympathy of the left wing with our slogan of amalgamation and the work for this objective now is largely of an organizational character—the mobilization of our sympathizers in the fights against the sabotage and terror of the bureaucracy.

Our Task

The defeats of the railway men in particular, on the industrial field, has given impetus to political thinking. The shopmen know that it was the capitalist government that beat them. To drive this lesson home with all its corollaries is the task of the Communists, and a task that our previous campaigns have made not easy, but possible.

Lenin and American Films

"The art of the cinema is the most important of all arts for the Russian people," wrote Premier Lenin not long before his death. So great was the value he placed on the film as a direct appeal and an education for Russia's backward masses that at one end of his work room was given up to a white screen flanked on both sides by big long book shelves, with the projecting apparatus in the opposite corner. In a box beside the machine were three of the latest films, in the showing of which he delighted.

It is interesting to note that two of the films were American. The first was a detailed picture of Henry Ford's Detroit factory, showing the most modern time and labor saving methods. The second was entitled "Ivan in America," and pictured an ignorant Russian immigrant gazing from between the decks at the Statue of Liberty and New York's towering battlements of steel and stone. Then Ivan goes to Niagara, which introduces scenes from the electric power houses, such as Lenin wished to install in Russia, and on thru the Pittsburgh steel mills and the Pennsylvania coal mines to Washington, where Ivan stands awestruck before the capitol and White House. Then he goes West to Montana's copper mines and on to California, with all its oil fields and water power plants. There are scenes too of Minnesota's grain fields with the very latest agricultural machinery, and grain elevators and scenes of fruit growing in Washington and Oregon and of cattle raising and horse ranches and sheep, poultry and cotton. The latter series Lenin liked especially, saying "Russia is still a land of peasants; it is from the land we must live; mining and electrification and factories must come later."

The third film was a historical presentation of the chief events of the Bolshevist revolution.

THE centuries of the primeval forest still lay in the middle between the seas. The gulfs and inlets, cut out with golden prongs. With adamant hammer the waterfall shattered the resistant rocks.

The trees swelled into the sensual noon. They had the red flower stains of lust. Hemlock shimmered and hissed on high stalks. And the slender grape-vine danced with wide-open hair.

Like green and blue lanterns the parrots scurried thru the night of bushes. Deep in the slimy underbush a rhinoceros burrowed. The tiger came toward him in a brotherly manner from the stream.

The sun circled fiery in the golden sky like a merry-go-round. Life was a thousandfold and eternal. And where death came to putrify: new life sprouted with double brightness.

The old century still lay among the people of the earth.

II.

Hereupon came the long, slow worker troops. The emigrants and the exiles. They came with struggle and with need.

With trembling torments men came and struck the booming bells of metal.

They lifted their arms as for a curse and rent the heavens in anger about their naked shoulders.

Their blood perspired in the earth. How many lean children, how many nights of anguish were squandered on such days!

The fists were uplifted like torches. Bent bodies. There was work. There was misery. There was hate.

Thus Spaniards turned once at the martyr's stake. Thus negroes once cringed on their knees, bound.

But these were the modern worker troops. Here were the holy, suffering proletarians.

They lived in barracks and huts of laths. Smell of fried fish and unsavoriness of spirits overflowed. The wooden beds struck against the coffins in the graveyard.

On Sunday an accordion longed for Italy or for Capeland. Some sick heart sighed for the thousand others.

They danced together with heavy, slow foot. They wanted to stroke the earth, the morning was forced to cry out under the axe. Then they sipped raspberry ices for five cents.

And again came the hundred days of work.

III.

They turned the earth into a sick-bed. Red fevers spread out of the air. And the clouds of mosquitos whirled about the sun.

No tree rustled more. No flower-star bloomed more in this clay hell. No bird vaulted into the lost heavens.

It was all pain. It was all refuse and sulphur. It was all cry and abuse.

The hills tore their breast open in a dynamite-cramp. Out of dripping clefts howled the wolves of the steam whistles. Dredgers and cranes scratched up the lakes.

People died in this endless graveyard. They died everywhere with the same torment.

Out of the men escaped the mad cry to God, and they reared themselves like golden pillars. Out of the women were precipitated pitiful, pale children, as if they wanted to punish the earth with so much misery.

They had come from the whole earth to serve as slaves. All the dreamers of golden rivers. All the desperate from a life of hunger.

The righteous and the truthful were there, those who still believed in the sympathy of fate. And the dark clumsy ones and the criminals, those sunk deep in the blight of their shame.

But the work was only a subterfuge. That one had twenty embittered generations in his heart to avenge. This one had to strangle the syphilis mother in his blood.

They all cried in struggle with the earth.

IV.

But they knew nothing of the Panama Canal. Nothing of the endless fraternization. Nothing of the great gate of love.

They knew nothing of the spanning of oceans and of mankind. Nothing of the radiant revolt of the spirit.

Each one saw a swamp drying up. A forest burning down. A lake boiling up of a sudden. A mountain kneeling down into dust.

But how should he believe in the greatness of mankind! He did not mark how the cradle of a new sea arose.

One day however the locks opened like the wings of an angel. Thereupon the earth groaned no more.

It lay with open breast just like a mother. It lay chained in the will of man.

On the wave-steps of the ocean the white ships clambered down. The thousand sister ships out of the thousand harbors.

These with singing sails. Those with smoking funnels. The pennants chirped like captured birds.

A new primeval forest of masts rustled. From ropes and cables crept festoons of vines.

And the Pacific Ocean and the Atlantic stood joined in a holy kiss. Oh wedding of the white East and the Western evening star. Peace, peace, was between the brothers and sisters.

Now mankind stood astounded at the center of the earth. From the seething cities, from the buried deserts, from the glowing glaciers arose the salute.

The world squadron came steaming up. The blue sailor bands played. Joyous flags from all countries fluttered.

Forgotten was the sodden work. The spades of the proletarians were buried. The brick barracks were torn down.

Over the black worker troops the waves of freedom struck together. For one day they also were mankind.

But on the very next day new need threatened. The merchant ships with heavy corn and oil left their poverty standing at the water-side.

On the next day there was again misery and hate. New chiefs shouted to them at new work. New slaves damned their abysmal fate.

On the next day mankind strove again with the old earth.

THE POOR

By Carl Sandburg.)

Among the mountains I wandered and saw the blue haze and red crag and was amazed;

On the beach where the long push under the endless tide maneuvers, I stood silent:

Under the stars on the prairie watching the Dipper slant over the horizon's grass, I was full of thoughts.

Great men, pageants of war and labor, soldiers and workers, mothers lifting their children—these all I touched, and felt the solemn thrill of them.

And then one day I got a true look at the Poor, millions of the Poor, patient and toiling: more patient than crags, tides, and stars; innumerable, patient as the darkness of night—all broken, humble ruins of nations.

Beautiful, tragical faces—
Ye that were whole, and are so sunken;
And, O ye vile, ye that might have been loved,
That are so sodden and drunken,
Who hath forgotten you?
O wistful, fragile faces, few out of many!
The crass, the coarse, the brazen
God knows I cannot pity them, perhaps, as I should do;
But oh, ye delicate, wistful faces,
Who hath forgotten you?

THE CLARA ZETKIN FACTORY

By JESSICA SMITH

BEFORE the war, the only factories in Russia that made clothing were military, and in all Russia there were only a few of these. I have seen in Moscow a number of clothing factories for civil work, organized since the revolution, and found them modern, well-equipped buildings, fitted out with electric cutting and pressing machine equipment from America and Germany, and employing the most up-to-date production plans. I was anxious to compare with these one of the old factories that had existed before the war. Thru the All-Russian Clothing Syndicate, I secured permission and a guide to visit the "Clara Zetkin" factory, a private factory of the Mande-Raits firm, founded some twenty years before the revolution, and called in those days the "Mars" factory. The son of the old owner, by the way, is now one of the financial experts in the State Clothing Syndicate, has worked with them faithfully for two years, and is one of the most valuable members of the staff.

The factory is on the outskirts of Moscow, a large group of buildings standing together and making a whole community in themselves. Inside the big gates we found the yard clean and well swept. The group of buildings looked a bit weather beaten, but in good repair. In the first was the manager's office. Here were remnants of bygone splendor—a large, cracked peerglass faced the top of the stairs, with an ornate gilt frame in a rather disreputable state. I noticed, however, that everything necessary for practical use—windows, stairways, etc.—had been kept repaired, even tho the decorations had been sadly neglected. In the office of the manager the same thing was noticeable. The former director had evidently been a man of elegant, if not artistic tastes. There were remnants of it in the wall decorations, an absurd chandelier and several luxurious, but delapidated, chairs pushed back against the wall. In contrast, the present director's desk, a simple wooden affair, and a few ordinary office chairs, stood by the window, bearing witness to the Spartan simplicity of the new regime.

The director himself we found to be a plain, friendly man in the prevalent well-worn black leather suit of the Soviet worker. He formerly had been a skilled craftsman in the clothing trade, and was well acquainted with the practical end of the business. He had come straight from his work bench to the directorship without any special training except the work he had done with his hands, but it was evident that he made a good administrator.

During the course of the conversation, the director had occasion to send out for some production and wage figures we had requested. The man who brought them was an aristocratic-looking old fellow in a brown suit, with a black ribbon on his glasses. He came in with a big ledger containing the wage records. We discussed wage scales with him and learned that the workers at that time were receiving on an average of 22.50 tavarne rubles (a ruble based on purchasing power and worth somewhat more than the old ruble—50 cents) to which was added 25 per cent or more every month, according to the amount of piece-work done above the required minimum. The man in the brown suit assured us that this came to more than before the war, when from 12 to 15 gold rubles a month was the average on military uniform work. This is in addition to the benefits in the way of medical care, cheap living accommodations, etc., now received by all organized workers in Russia. The increase of wages in this factory during the past year, he informed us, had been about 200 per cent. Later, we learned that our informant was the former director of the factory. When it was first nationalized, he had fled with the rest of the management, but, as he had applied to return to Russia, and was willing to work, they had taken him back as assistant director. He and the new director had now worked together without any friction for over a year.

In pre-war times 2,000 workers were employed in this factory. During the war 5,000 toiled on uniforms, working in two shifts. Later, when the factory was nationalized, they had cut down to 2,000. Recently, with the reduction in military work, only 1,200 workers are employed full time, 950 in the clothing department, the remainder at shoemaking. In spite of this cut, there is very little unemployment in the clothing industry, as many of the emergency workers were unskilled and have gone into other industries. Indeed, in the last month, the applicants for new workers have exceeded the number of applications for work.

Formerly the working day was 10 and 12 hours. With the present 8-hour day and the smaller number of workers, total output runs under the pre-war figure. However, they produced in those days a lower quality of goods. Now their uniforms are of a more complex pattern, to secure greater durability. Altho total production is less, invividual productivity has more than doubled over pre-war.

This has been due chiefly to the introduction of the American system of dividing work into a great many separate processes, which has been substituted for the old method of each worker tailoring a whole garment.

The director himself took us thru the various departments of the factory. It was not as light and airy or well constructed as the factories for civil clothing which I have visited, and they are still using the same clumsy machinery used in the old days, for they have not been able, as yet, to replace it with new. An interesting department of the plant was a machine shop, where a number of mechanics are constantly at work repairing machinery in order to keep it working at capacity. They have found this much more satisfactory than sending out for extra parts, or for outside mechanics, especially since the old machines are in such frequent need of repair.

The general atmosphere was not as efficient and "American" as in the Comintern factory, or the Moscow Experimental, which have the advantage of comparatively new buildings, fresh machinery and a fair number of American trained workers. Still they have done remarkably well at the Clara Zetkin. The workers seem a happy lot and turn out a high grade of work.

The director told us that when he had first tried to introduce the American mass production methods some of the workers had cursed and raged at him. In fact, a meeting was held to protest against giving up their old slow, wasteful, but familiar, process. At last, however, he convinced them, and now they are proud of their new way of work.

We were particularly interested in one room, where only women worked, all engaged in specially light work. "These," said the forewoman of the department, "are our mothers." This special department is reserved for nursing mothers when they come back to work after the four months' leave of absense allowed for child-birth. These mothers, for nine months thereafter, work only six hours a day, (at full pay) and may go home to nurse their babies three times a day. The special department was organized for them in order not to interfere with the other work of the factory. They work on the very lightest operations.

"And these are our factory children, they told us, as we came upon some young operators at work. These were orphans the factory had adopted at the time of the famine. The workers had fed them and housed them out of their own slender means, and now they had become skilled workers, employed four hours a day, and studying the remainder of the time in the factory school.

Most of the workers seemed to enjoy their work, and several of the older ones who operated special machines, stopped their work to explain the operations to us with parental detail. Several of the workers engaged on the more noisy and difficult machines were required to work only six hours a day.

One of the most interesting aspects of a Soviet factory is always the community life of the workers springing up around it. Near the factory one finds the community house, where living accommodations are secured at a very low rate, varied according to the salary. The Clara Zetkin has an unusually fine home, divided into small apartments, where most of its workers live. Here I found a fine day nursery, full of the younger children, who are kept while their mothers work, and are returned to them at night, fed, bathed and happy. Nearby was a workers' club, formerly an officers' club, run jointly by the workers of several factories in the district. Here there is a library, classrooms, and a large auditorium, where plays and entertainments are given every week.

From the living conditions of the workers, it may be seen how the new regime, thru all its difficutlies and struggles, tries always to adhere to the principle of giving the workers the product of their work.

While the clothing plants might develop faster and state industry grow richer if they kept wages lower and reduced the worker's health, cultural and living advantages, the first call on the industry beyond the fundamental needs of production is always the welfare of the workers. It is not always possible to raise wages fast enough to keep pace with all the workers' needs, but it is a rule never to lower wages, and a standard once attained is adhered to. In the clothing industry, in spite of its comparatively recent development, the management is able to look after the needs of the workers, pay them comparatively good wages, and still run at a fair profit. As capital accumulates, or is received from the American workers thru the Russian-American Industrial Corporation, all the clothing industry employes in Russia will benefit by the improved standards which will then be possible.

The Bankruptcy of Germany Told in Figures

Germany is bankrupt. The capitalist state is impotent, and cannot maintain any system. Recently the state was not in a position to pay its officials their salaries. They received only half of their pay with the promise that the remaining half would be paid later. The state railways, which have recently been separated financially from the German state, are equally bankrupt. The bankruptcy is not limited to the Reich and the business enterprises of the Reich: every individual state and every town is likewise bankrupt.

Production itself is involved in a most severe crisis. The number of unemployed among the six most important trade unions, according to the returns of the skilled trade unions, is as follows:

UNIONS	Membership in 1000	Entirely Unemployed (percentage)	Part time (percentage)	Total	Percent
Building workers	487	25.8		126	25.8
Wood workers	394	18.5	33.3	204	51.9
Metal workers	1152	18.9	77.1	1106	96.0
Textile workers	685	10.6	58.3	472	68.9
Factory workers	676	11.0	22.0	223	33.0
Printers	68	18.2	50.0	46	68.1
Total	3462	17.2%	41.6%	2177	57.3%

According to these figures, there are in the most important branches of production, already 57.3 per cent of the workers either unemployed or on part time. Production in Germany is laboring under the most severe crisis which can be imagined. This crisis is bound up in the closest manner with the bankruptcy of the state.

The present bankruptcy of the German state finances, which is becoming plainly apparent, is no new phenomenon. The German state was already financially bankrupt two years ago. But this fact was concealed by the continually increased output of paper money. In the autumn of 1923, all possibility of further concealment came to an end as the landowners and peasants refused to sell their products in exchange for paper money. As a result, it became impossible to supply the towns with food, and the imperative necessity arose of creating a new currency which would be accepted by the peasants. This led to the creation of the Rent Mark, and put a check to the further covering of the deficit, and thereby to the concealment of bankruptcy by the unlimited issue of paper money.

The cause of the bankruptcy of the German Reich—apart from the foreign political and social relations into which we will not go further in this connection—lies before all in the absolute taxation sabotage of the German capitalist class. The total taxation paid by the German people reckoned in gold marks at the official course amounted:

In the year 1923
January	57.2
February	43.3
March	54.8
April	85.8
May	122.6
June	48.3
July	48.3
August	13.0

Of these amounts the greater portion was derived from taxes on the working class (wage tax reductions) and on the "consumers" — (which, likewise, means in an overwhelming measure, the working class) in the form of taxes on the turnover of business houses and taxes on articles of consumption. The taxes paid by the German capitalist class and German landowners together has not amounted this year, at the very highest estimate, to more than 200 million gold marks. It must also be remembered in this connection that, under the new regulations of the finance system of Erzberger, the greater portion of the expenditure of the various states and municipalities had likewise to be met out of the revenues of the Reich, so that the capitalist class has paid no state or municipal taxation worth mentioning.

How trifling the amount of this taxation is, can be seen by a comparison with the state income of France or England. The state income of France amounted in the years 1922 and 1923 to over twenty milliard paper francs, equal to about six or seven milliard gold marks; that of England to 900 to 1,000 million pounds sterling, equal to seventeen to eighteen milliard gold marks. After making the fullest allowance for the impoverishment of Germany, it is still inconceivable that the German people, numbering sixty million, could only raise taxes amounting to one fifth to one tenth of the sum raised by the people of France, numbering about one third less.

THE PRESENT ECONOMIC SITUATION

By JAY LOVESTONE

IN THE great emphasis that many are now putting on the acuteness of the agricultural situation there is a danger that the developing industrial crisis may be overlooked.

It is true the collapse of agriculture has been so phenomenal and on such a mass scale that one naturally tends to fall into the groove of forgetfulness and disregard, momentarily of course, the growing depression enveloping our basic industries, other than agriculture.

Our Cloudy Business Skies

Business is begining to taper off. Our business horizon is far from being cloudless. Slowly but surely, a thickly-gathered storm is threatening to swoop down upon the millions of industrial working masses.

The latest summary of the general business and financial conditions in the country made by the Federal Reserve Board is a veritable eye-opener. It once and for all dispells the myriad of fake prosperity rumors and optimistic outbursts that the bankers have so assiduously spread in the last six months.

In December, the production of basic commodities has shown a further decline. The index of production in the basic industries has reached the low point of the year, declining as much as four per cent within the month. Operations were greatly reduced in the cotton, woolen, lumber, petroleum and sugar industries. The consumption of cotton by textile mills, according to the latest figures of the Department of Commerce, fell by almost 75,000 bales in one month. Relative to 1913, the production of bituminous coal fell from 117 in December, 1922, to 101 in the corresponding month of 1923.

The production of merchant pig iron, the unfilled iron and steel orders, the production of lead, and the manufacture of leather have all shown a marked decrease in December.

Increasing Unemployment and Depression

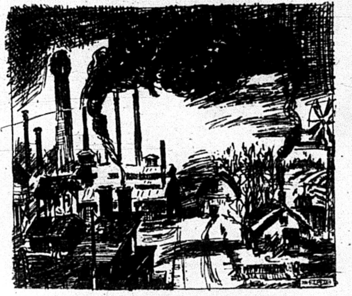
The Federal Reserve's index of employment also showed a decrease in December. The fall in the number of workers employed indicated a further decline of one per cent in the month and was four per cent lower than in the Spring. The workingmen engaged in the manufacture of food products and railway equipment were the heaviest sufferers. In the month of December, the Pennsylvania Railroad discharged 7,360 shop craft workers alone. Today, this railroad has approxixmately 25,000 of these workers less than it did a year ago. The building contracts awarded in December, were also smaller than in November.

Railroad shipments continued to fall in December and reached a point slightly lower than in December, 1922. The loadings of coal and grain were also smaller than last year. This Federal Reserve Board Report goes on to say: "The volume of wholesale trade showed more than the usual seasonal decrease and was at about the same level as a year ago." This is a significant conclusion, for it indicates that business is definitely tightening up and that caution and preparedness are getting the better of unfounded optimism. The sale of shoes and dry goods went down badly in December. The retail trade which usually shows a large increase in the Christmas season did not show so big a rise this year.

In the four weeks following Christmas, the earning assets of the various Federal Reserve Banks declined by $360,000,000. This fall was greater by about $150,000,000 than in the between December 12th, and January 16th, "to a point $264,000,000 lower than at the peak in October."

These facts are very plain. They tell a stirring tale. They indicate that our much-heralded prosperity has long ago turned corner and is now swiftly heading for oblivion. When the basic industries of the country and agriculture suffer a continuous condition of decline for some time, the banks react, the trade situation reacts, the workers are discharged from their jobs. The cold figures of corresponding period of the preceding year. This fall is still continuing. By the middle of January, "the volume of reserve bank credit outstanding was below one billion dollars for the first time since early in 1918." The loans made by the Federal Reserve Banks in the leading cities fell falling production and exchange translate themselves into the cold stare of starvation. Millions of workers and farmers then live in the bondage of misery, debt and disemployment.

The Smoke of Depression



Stifling the Workers and Farmers.

Great Political Significance

These straws on the back of our paralyzed Mr. Prosperity bear a political significance of the first magnitude. Because of our inability to export our surplus produce at prices sufficiently profitable to our capitalists, our industry is more and more becoming dependent on domestic demand. This demand is less than our producing power. Hence the general realization amongst our business men that hard times are on the way. Attempts are therefore being made to force business. Typical examples of such artificial methods to delay a serious depression overwhelming the country are the strained investments in the railway and building industries now being made by certain capitalists.

The reactionary Coolidge administration will do everything possible to avoid the country's being thrown into economic crisis before the November elections. Coolidge is continually conferring with the leaders of Employers' Associations and Chamber of Commerce to impress upon them the importance of their being lenient with creditors and of their continuing heavy investments. The recently announced program of new railway construction totaling nearly $2,000,000,000 was inspired by White House influence. The same may be said for the last extra dividend of the United States Steel Corporation. The eleventh hour attempt now being made to prop up certain second class banks in the agricultural areas of the Northwest also falls in this category of artificial attempts to give new blood to our respiratory organs of our system of production and exchange.

The great depression of 1921, has taught the capitalist governing agents a great lesson. The serious rift in their fold growing out of the last economic depression has brought untold political losses to them. Their overwhelming majority in the Senate and House has been reduced to practical insignificance. Another wave of economic difficulties would in all likelihood widen the breach now menacing their party and would tend to disrupt their firm political hold on some key positions in the government.

With the agricultural crisis steadily becoming worse and an industrial crisis looming up on the horizon many reactionary political leaders are becoming panic stricken. There is no more powerful force making for unity between rural producers and city workers than a simultaneous acute economic crisis. It is the developing unemployment and slowing up of trade and the accelerated pace of economic disruption in the agricultural districts that are driving the city and country workers to political unity. The men at the helm of the government in Washington, do not feel sure of themselves. They do not know whether they will be able to ward off a serious halt in production before the end of the year. This is the real motive for their redoubled efforts to win over some of the so-called farm leaders like Frazier and Ladd. On this basis we may also look forward to some half-hearted remedial measures being considered by Congress in behalf of a small section of the working class that is the highly skilled layer of the masses. As a matter of fact, the present flood of immigration legislation arises from the plan of the reactionary Republicans to utilize the fraudulent cry of the protection of American labor as one of their main campaign slogans. In this fashion the big capitalists hope to sow dissension in the ranks of the industrial workers and prevent effective political co-operation between the farmers and the workers.

Trouble Impends

Whether the employing class can muster sufficient strength to delay a general economic depression for the whole year is questionable. At this date no one can definitely answer this problem. But there are sufficient fundamental facts and data at hand indicating that the capitalists are confronted by an almost hopeless task.

The conditions in Europe are showing no signs of improvement for American business. Our exports for the last fiscal year are less than those of the preceding year. Our farmers are meeting with more serious competition in the world market than they have ever faced since the declaration of the war. At home, agriculture is falling behind in the development of more efficient productive methods. Our efficiency and skill in industrial production and the development of improved machinery in manufacturing, are outstripping the improvement in agricultural production at an ever increasing pace.

Under these conditions our capitalists can at best only hope to delay for a short period the serious economic troubles that are impending for the country. These economic troubles are pregnant with fundamental political changes. The employers realize this and they are working overtime preparing to meet the crisis.

Lenin on the Labor Aristocracy

"It is true that the jingoist and chauvinist-minded labor aristocracy in England and America constitutes the greatest danger for Socialism, the greatest support of the Second International, and the leaders and workers who belong to such a bourgeois International are guilty of the greatest betrayal."

Liebknecht and Luxembourg

Five years have passed. The smold'ring memory,
Which they, our martyred leaders, left to us,
Has burst into a flame, tempestuous—
A mental flame that crosses every sea.

These valiant strugglers in a foredoomed fight
Have seared their mark on every rebel mind.
A restless heritage they left behind,
That fires our brains and gives our muscles might.

In every land, the folk of toil revere
The names of these, who paid the total price...
For striking at the ruthless ones, who steer
The world and crush the toilers in their vise. . . .
To us, their failure is a lesson, clear;
An inspiration is their sacrifice. . .

From "Smoke and Steel"

By Carl Sandburg

A bar of steel—it is only
Smoke at the heart of it, smoke and the blood of a man.
A runner of fire ran in it, ran out, ran somewhere else,
And left—smoke and the blood of a man
And the finished steel, chill and blue.

So fire runs in, runs out, runs somewhere else again,
And the bar of steel is a gun, a wheel, a nail, a shovel,
A rudder under the sea, a steering-gear in the sky;
And always dark in the heart and through it,
Smoke and the blood of a man.
Pittsburgh, Youngstown, Gary—they make their steel with men.

In the blood of men and the ink of chimneys
The smoke nights write oaths:
Smoke into steel and blood into steel;
Homestead, Braddock, Birmingham, they make their steel with men.
Smoke and blood is the mix of steel.

THE RUSSIAN IN LENIN

By LEON TROTSKY.

THE internationalism of Nicolai Lenin needs no special recommendation. It is best revealed by the irreconcilable break in the first days of the world war with that immitation of internationalism which reigned in the Second International. Upon the rostrum of parliament the official leaders of "Socialism" endeavored, thru abstract explanations in the spirit of the old universalists, to reconcile the interests of mankind. In practice this led, as we know, to the support of the rapacious fatherland by the working class.

The internationalism of Lenin from first to last, is no formula of reconciliation of national and international in words, but the formula rather of international action. This internationalism considers the territory of the world inhabited by so-called civilized mankind as a single, continuous field of battle upon which the individual nations and their classes wage a gigantic struggle against one another. According to this internationalism not a single question of importance permits of being forced within the national limit. Visible and invisible threads in fact connect this question with dozens of phenomena in all corners of the earth. In the estimation of international factors and forces Lenin was more than anyone else free of national prejudices.

It was the view of Marx that the philosophers had explained the world sufficiently, and he perceived his task to be that of reshaping this world. He himself, this inspired prophet, did not live to see it. The reshaping of the old world is at present in full swing and the one who has more to do with it than anyone is Lenin. His internationalism consists of estimating historical events practically, and intervening practically in their process upon a world-wide scale for purposes which effect the whole world. Russia and its fate represents only one element in this contest upon whose outcome the fate of mankind depends.

The Internationalism of Lenin needs no special recommendation. And yet Lenin himself is withal national in a high degree. He is deeply rooted in the new Russian history, absorbs it, in himself, gives it the most pregnant expression; and it is just in this way that he reaches the peak of international potency and influence.

At first sight this characteristic of Lenin as "national" may be a surprise, and yet, at bottom it is something very obvious. To be able to lead such a revolution, unprecedented in the history of the nations, as the one taking place in Russia, it is obviously necessary to have an unseverable connection with the basic forces of the people's life, a bond which springs from the deepest roots.

Lenin embodies the Russian working class, the young class, which politically is perhaps, not older than Lenin himself, a deeply national class, for it comprises the whole of the preceding development of Russia; it holds in its hand Russia's future; with it stands or falls the Russian nation. The absence of strict routine and conformity, or of falseness and convention, a decisiveness in thinking, daring in action, a daring which never degenerates into indiscretion—all this marks the Russian working class and Lenin as well.

The nature of the Russian working class which has made it at present the most significant force in the international revolution has been prepared thru the process of Russian national history, thru the barbaric cruelty of the absolute government, the insignificance of its privileged classes, the feverish developments of capitalism upon the dregs of the world stock exchange, thru the degeneracy of the Russian capitalist class and its ideology, the cheapness of its policy. Our "third estate" did not know these. The revolutionary tasks of the Russian working class acquired an all-embracing character, which included these. Our history in the past has had neither a Luther nor a Thomas Munzer, neither a Danton or a Robespierre. Just on that account the Russian working class has its Lenin. What was lacking in tradition was made up for in revolutionary spirit.

Lenin reflects the Russian working class, not only in its proletarian present, but also in its peasant past which is still so fresh. This man whose leadership is least disputed in the working class, does not only outwardly resemble the peasant, but also has a good deal of the peasant about him.

In front of Smolny Institute stands the monument of another great man of the world proletariat: Marx, in black frock-coat, on a rock. Certainly that is a trifle, but it would be impossible for a moment to imagine Lenin in a frock-coat. In a few portraits Marx is pictured in a broad, stiff shirt-front upon which dangles a sort of monocle. That Marx did not incline to vanity is clear to all those who have some concepion of the spirit of Marx. But Marx grew up on a different soil of national culture, lived in another atmosphere. In the same way, the leading personalities of the German working class have their roots extending back, not into the village, but into handicraft and the complicated city culture of the Middle Ages.

Even the style of Marx, which is rich and beautiful, in which force and flexibility, wrath and irony, ruggedness and elegance go hand in hand, reveals the literary and ethical stratification of the whole preceding social-political German literature since the Reformation and extending even farther back. The literary and oratorical style of Lenin is amazingly simple, ascetic like his whole life. But this powerful asceticism has not even the shadow of moral preaching about it. It is not a principle, not a calculated system, and certainly not decoration, but simply the outward expression of an intensified concentration of the forces leading to action.

It is a frugal objectivity peculiar to the peasant, but on a gigantic scale.

All of Marx is contained in the "Communist Manifesto," in the foreword to his "Critique" and in "Capital." Even if he had not been the founder of the First International, he would have always remained what he is. Lenin on the contrary lives entirely in revolutionary action. Had he not published a single book in the past, he would nonetheless appear in history as that which he is now, as the leader of the proletarian revolution, as the founder of the Third International.

A clear scientific system—materialist dialectic—is necessary for the execution of actions of such historical dimension, as Lenin had to perform. This materialist dialectic is necessary, but not sufficient. What is still needed is that secret creative force, which we call intuition, the capacity immediately to grasp a situation correctly, to separate the essential and important from the inessential and insignificant, to be able to imagine the missing parts of the picture, to follow up thoughts of others to their conclusion and principally those of the enemy, to weld all this to a uniform whole, and to strike the blow the moment that the "formula of attack" springs up in the mind. That is the intuition for action. In one way it is synonymous with what we call acumen.

When Lenin, his left eye narrowed, receives a wireless which contains the speech made in parliament by one of the shapers of imperialist history or a diplomatic note requiring an answer—a mixture of blood-thirsty slyness and polished hypocrisy—he resembles a devilishly clever peasant who does not let himself be confused by any words or deluded by any phrases. That is highly intensified peasant shrewdness, lifted to the point of inspiration, and fitted out with the last word in scientific thought.

The young Russian working-class was capable of accomplishing that which the peasant class desires to accomplish, that class which cultivates the hard, untouched clod of earth. Our whole national past served to prepare this very thing. But it is precisely because the working class acquired power thru the course of events that our Revolution has been able at one bound to overcome radically the national narrowness and provincial backwardness. Soviet Russia is not only the shelter of the Communist International, but also the living embodiment of its program and its methods.

In that unknown way in which the personality of a man is formed, which has not as yet been investigated by science, Lenin took from the national that which we needed for the most tremendous revolutionary action in the history of the world. It is precisely because the social revolution which for a long time past already had its international theoretical expression, now for the first time finds in Lenin its national embodiment, it is for this reason that he became in the real sense of the word the revolutionary leader of the world proletariat.

The Christening of "Hull 18"

"Hull 18," we called her in the "ways—"
Ten thousand tons of labor-cemented steel.
Oh, how we loved her, from the very days
When first we laid her resolute keel.

And now she is finished, and leaves our hands
To be fitted out for the challenging sea;
Soon, ready to meet the severe demands,
Which she will answer, we'll guarantee.

Three shifts a day we sweated and toiled—
We wrestled and fought with the trembling steel;
In garments, ragged and burnt and soiled;
'Mid heat and noise that made us reel.

And many were injured and two were killed,
But this we couldn't heed,
Because an ambitious master willed
To sate his giant greed.

And now, she is ready to slide from the ways,
And, into the water—splash;
Soon, ready to thread the ocean's maze,
Without any fear of its lash. . . .

The day's first shift is over now,
And the sun is in the west;
And strangers stand on the haughty prow,
In lordly raiment, dressed.

They are friends of the master;—this we hear—
They have come to christen the ship;
To break a bottle and gaily cheer
As into the water she takes the dip.

The bottle is broken by a maid—
It is the master's daughter;
The ship is skidding the greasy grade,
And into the startled water.

I stare at my mates, who, on every side,
Toward the time-houses crush and press;
In some, I notice a glow of pride,
In others, scowls of bitterness.

Resentment burns in many a breast
As we punch the accursed clocks;
And the sun, descending in the west,
Our barren impotence mocks. . . '

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARDS THE THIRD PART

By MAX BEDACHT.

THE radical comrades won a great victory at the Convention of the Workers Party, was the joyful report made by the "Volkszeitung" to its readers on New Year's day. And a few days later a leading article crowned the brow of Comrade Lore with a laurel crown for this "victory" and added that the victory is still not complete and that difficult struggles are ahead.

And the discussion thus far in the "Volkszeitung" seems to represent the heavy blows of the opponent in this hard struggle against the theses of the Central Executive Committee.

May I remark that something more than an assertion of a report in the "Volkszeitung" is needed to make the world believe that the Finnish language group in alliance with Comrades Lore, Trachtenberg, Poyntz etc. are all at once promoted to custodians of radicalism in the Party. Particularly Comrade Poyntz who every time she regards her callous laborer's fists can suppress only with difficulty a fit of rage against the wicked intellectuals and "non-workers" in the Party.

The manner in which the discussion has been carried on up to now is not calculated to clarify the question. It creates confusion rather, and tends to discredit our Party in the eyes of the non-members.

The very least that can be expected of those taking part in the debate is that they shall get clear on the object of the debate. Comrade Berner is the only one who has done that. He comes to the conclusion that the majority of the previous Executive was in the right. Nevertheless, strangely enough, he is against their proposal.

A few of the participants in the debate, as for instance "Marius", formulate the sins of the Executive out of the inexhaustible realm of their imagination, and then, with a grand gesture they refuse absolution for these sins. Besides, the discussion is no "free for all fight", but an earnest Party discussion, and Party comrades cannot and should not hide behind pseudonyms in such discussions.

The Problem Before Us

What is the problem?

The November theses of the Party Executive are under discussion. Not only those paragraphs which specify the attitude of the Party towards an eventual Third Party, but also the analysis of the present political situation laid down in the theses. The conclusions of the author and exponent of the theses are built upon this analysis. Either the opponents of these theses have something to advance against this analysis. In that case where is their own analysis? Or they accept this analysis and in that case they must admit that we have a difficult problem to solve. The authors and exponents of the November theses propose a solution. The opponents condemn this solution. But the problem remains. Where is the solution which the opponents of the November theses propose? Either one has sufficient understanding of the problem so as to be able to solve it in a better way than the one proposed, and if so well and good, out with it. Or perhaps one has no such understanding and thereby one forfeits the right of criticism.

Here is the situation:

During the start of the forward development of capitalism in the United States in the exploitation of the natural resources and markets of the country there were always enough crumbs which fell for the pigmies from the tables of the giants of the capitalist class, so that the pigmies submitted more or less willingly to the political leadership of the giants. But the giants have now reached the peak of imperialist development and their group interests collide more and more with the group interests of the pigmies. This period of capitalist development gives rise to independent political movements of the various lower strata of the capitalist class. These movements are produced from very real special interests of capitalist groups, special interets which in the political program of the imperialists, not only find no provision for themselves, but are even directly disregarded for the sake of the imperialist group interests. No one of us claims that these small capitalist special interests can be the ground for a real, advanced political party. On the contrary. But the vehemence with which these political special interests seek to assert themselves is a proof of the incipient inner decay of the ruling, the capitalist class.

This decay in turn is the prerequisite for the assumption of political power in society by the working class. We are therefor interested in this decay not only as complacent onlookers but we must help to hasten the process of decay. We should not confine ourselves to interpreting history, but our task is to make history. Wherever there is a possibility of furthering the inner process of decay, yes, the inner dissolution of the ruling class, it is our duty to take a hand at it. Naturally none of us has the illusion that the ruling class will of itself collapse from this decay. But the continuation of this decay brings the development of the deciding factors of the social revolution, "the formation of the proletariat into a class" which stands up independently and in the end fights the class struggle inexorably to its logical conclusion under the leadership of a Marxian, revolutionary party.

Thus the growth of the political self-consciousness of the workers goes hand in hand with this inner dissolution of the ruling class. The process of dissolution within the capitalist class of the United States mainifests itself concretely, partly in the stubborn movement which aims at the founding of a Third Party, while the political awakening of the working class finds its expression in the movement for a working class party in alliance with the poor farmers.

These two phenomena appear in parallel lines. No, parallel is not exact. Yes, simultaneously, but not beside each other. Rather with each other and in each other. That makes our task harder. But then, politics is not so simple. It's all very well to sit home and lay out the formula: Here the working class—there the capitalist class. But in actual reality it is absolutely impossible to find a solution of the political problems of the class struggle on the basis of this formula.

It shows a very praiseworthy instinct for antiquities when our comrades dig up again the Lassalean formula discarded and buried fifty years ago, of "one reactionary mass".

And so we have two simultaneous tendencies before us. The tendency of the lower middle class to emancipate itself from big capital. And the tendency of the working class to emancipate itself politically from the whole capitalist class. These tendencies seem to run into each other inextricably. There may be difference of opinion among us over the question of whether it is part of our task to further the first tendency and assist at the formation of a Third Party. But, with the exception of a few incurable "lefts", we are unanimous on this, that it is our task to further the tendency of the working class to emancipate itself from the leadership of the capitalist class. But when the ugly reality insists stubbornly in presenting the working class to us, not as a pure, filtered and crystallized group with which and in which we can maneuver without having to come near any impure lower middle class person; and on the contrary, the working class and its tendency is permeated with the lower middle class and its tendency, what ought we to do? That is our problem. And here Comrade Wenderich lays down our duty categorically: Hic Rhodus, Hic Salta. Yes, we must do our part. But not like the cat before the hot porridge, to slink off finally because we don't like to risk burning our mouth. No, the porridge must be eaten. The question is not whether we should eat it, but how can we eat it without spoiling our stomach.

I don't want to dispute with Comrade Wenderich over his characterization of the great Peasants' Revolt when he off-handedly turns that heroic peasant movement against serfdom into a reactionary movement against the rising power of industry (power of industry in the Sixteenth Century???)

Nor do I want to dispute with him when he makes out the fight of the Boer Republic against the aggression of English imperialism to be simply a reactionary movement against a modern industrial state. (This conception certainly gives a wonderful argument for Noske's "Socialist colonial policy".) But I must advise him earnestly to read the theses of the Second Congress of the Third International over the agrarian question. I want to remind him and other "radicals" in this question that Serrati and other "lefts" in that Congress made an opposition of principle against the intended "betrayal" by the Third International of the pure Marxian principles.

What is a Reactionary Movement?

What then is all this outcry over the inherent reactionary character of all farmer movements? Have we really learned nothing from the Second International?

No class is reactionary in "principle" on the ground of its ideological stand, but only as a result of its class interests. Either the farmers are reactionary to the marrow because their class interests demand it—in this case what becomes of the advice that their salvation lies in solidarity with the working class? Or perhaps there is a community of interest between sections of the farming class and the working class. In that case what becomes of the talk of farmers being reactionary under all circumstances? How can you say, Comrade Lore, that sections of farmers are sympathetic towards our movement if there is no community of interest of some kind between sections of farmers and of the working class? But if there is such community of interests why could we not win over such strata to our movement? The essence of our attitude towards the farmers is not that they are reactionary under all circumstances, but that historically they are a class of the past and not like the working class, the class of the future. For this reason even with a revolutionary stand against the existing system, they could never assume the leadership and initiative of the revolutionary movement. The leadership belongs to the working class. But the revolutionary farmer groups must be won over to this leadership.

In this connection every comrade should read the excellent article of Comrade Pepper "The Farmers and the American Revolution" published in the supplement of the DAILY WORKER of January 19, as well as the article of Comrade Zinoviev for the "Daily Worker" published in the "Worker" of January 21.

And so the working class presents itself to us as an object for operation which is not clearly separated from all non-proletarian elements, but is pervaded with lower middle class politicians, and controlled by a capitalist ideology. The class separation, altho a social fact, is not a prerequisite of our operation, but should be its result. This separation must be first created politically.

What Shall We Do?

How can we accomplish this titanic task? Quite simply the opponents of the theses say: We must agitate; we must educate the working class. We must make the farmers sympathetic. Correct. But how? Our party is no workers' educational society which "educates" the working class thru courses on national economy, but a political party which engages in political action. It is our task to teach the working class the art of swimming the waves of the sea of political class struggle. That does not mean, to introduce the workers to this sport theoretically, but we must throw ourselves into the waves before their eyes, and we must get them to jump in with us, we must put at the disposal of the working class our capabilities, our experiences, our energy, our fearlessness. And who will propose that we should leave the swimmer in the lurch in that very moment when he is in danger of sinking in the whirlpool of his petty bourgeois ideology? The working class in its mass does not learn thru theoretical propaganda, but in the school of experience. Either we are present where the school is and thru our activity as teaching fellow-combatants make it easier for the working class to assimilate its own experiences, or we resign as proletarian political leaders and Marxians.

The political situation presents us therefore with a concrete problem. Two simultaneous tendencies: A Third Party tendency under the lower middle class and a class party under the workers and farmers. And before us an election year which stimulates these tendencies immensely. At the extreme right of this group we find the lower middle class political leaders of a Third Party. At the extreme left are the Communists, the eventual leaders of the working class. And between the two, the unclear and confused mass.

The lower middle class politicians aim to drive the working class from its political wagon. The capitalist ideology which controls the laboring masses favors them in this venture. The Communists must therefore fight against the lower middle class politicians for the souls of the workers and poor farmers in this mass which is not exactly definable. They therefore throw themselves into this mass and recruit their forces. They attempt to crystallize the workers' class party tendency, before it is drowned even if only temporarily, in a Third Party. The founding of the Federated Farmer-Labor party is the immediate result of this effort. This Party is only the beginning of this process of crystallization. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party does not solve the problem. It only creates a more advantageous basis of operation for the solution. It has put the whole left wing of the class party movement among the workers and poor farmers under the influence and leadership of the Communists and has thus multiplied its force in the campaign for a class party.

This also determines the role of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. We cannot remain standing with it. In the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and thru it we increased our basis of operation by a great deal. New attempts must be made to crystallize into organization the class party tendencies among the workers and poor farmers. Not abstractly on the ground of theories and empty resolutions, but on the ground of real and true political group organization for the coming elections.

The St. Paul Conference

Thus we come to the Conference in St. Paul on May 30. For our purposes it is unnecessary to speculate as to whether the Conference really takes place. There may be another Conference, or even a series of similar conferences.

As the two tendencies described are not exactly marked off and separated, both tendencies will find expression at every such conference. And the struggle at any such conference will take place between the Communists and the lower middle class politicians, the Communists as the conscious fighters for the working class party on one side, and the lower middle class politicians as the clearest representative of the Third Party on the other side, and the workers and poor farmers represented at the Conference form the object of the struggle. The Communists want a clear separation of workers and poor farmers from the Third Party, and in this way from the political leadership of the lower middle class. The lower middle class politicians in turn want a separation of workers from the Communists. The Communists are the only ones who exert themselves seriously to withdraw the working class from the political influence of all strata of the capitalist class and with time to make it impossible for the capitalist class to utilize the political power of the working class for its own purposes.

If we should be victorious in this fight at the Conference, because we succeed in consolidating the workers and poor farmers represented into a political united front on a class basis with a realistic class program, our problem is solved. But if the laboring masses and poor farmers there represented are still so much dominated by capitalist ideology that their indefinite longing for a class party is satisfied in the Third Party, if they therefore accept the political leadership of the lower middle class even if temporarily, what should we do in that case? Here begins our problem.

In a leading article of the "Volkszeitung" of January 17 we find that the writer of the article, Comrade Lore, without a doubt, is not opposed to having the lower middle class farmers and the city population made sympathetic thru the propaganda of the Communist movement. But that does not mean that we should enter together with them into a party organization, there to lose our identity. Comrade Lore, we do not discuss in order to force thru our views under all circumstances, but to draw out the best for our Party and for the movement. For this reason it should be the first comradely duty not to twist consciously and to represent falsely. I ask you what member of the Executive has made a proposal inside or outside this body, which even with biased interpretation could be made to seem that it called for our entering a lower middle class party, and within it to give up finally th

1,187 Miner Delegates Plan Recall of Lewis; Big Steal Aids Swing to Farmer-Labor Party

This Week to See McAdoo, Pet of Labor Bureaucracy, on Grill for Getting $250,000 from Doheny

New Significance to May 30th Conference

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Unexpected and unwelcome to the republican and democratic party leaders is the news from the country at large of the great swing towards the Farmer-Labor movement as a result of both parties being involved in the Teapot Dome steal.

Democrats are no longer wearing a jubilant smile, for the Doheny revelations as to the connections of McAdoo and other prominent democrats with the oil interests have, according to those who, with that remarkable agility found only in politicians, keep both ears to the ground, suffered more than have the republicans. The May 30 Farmer-Labor conference called for St. Paul is now attracting the undivided interest of both republican and democratic leaders.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Doheny's story of wholesale hiring of prominent men, including McAdoo, Thomas W. Gregory, formerly United States Attorney-General, Lindley M. Garrison, former secretary of war, and the late Franklin K. Lane, former secretary of the interior, has rocked congress and official Washington to its heels.

It was a political bombshell, exploding with tremendous force in the camp of McAdoo's supporters for the Democratic nomination for president; upsetting President Coolidge's selection of Gregory as one of the special counsel to prosecute the leasing cases and opening a new and startling chapter in the amazing story of how men high in the government were involved with Doheny, lessee of naval oil reserves and generous lender of money to Fall and other friends.

McAdoo Called.

William G. McAdoo will be invited to tell the senate oil lease investigating committee exactly what services he rendered E. L. Doheny, California oil magnate, for which Doheny paid him $250,000.

He is understood to desire the opportunity to explain publicly that his services to Doheny as a lawyer had nothing to do with the naval reserve oil leases which Doheny got from former Secretary of Interior Fall.

When McAdoo tells his story, he will be subjected to severe cross-examination intended to disclose whether he knew anything of Doheny's dealings with Fall in the naval leases.

This phase of the inquiry today quite overshadowed Fall's scheduled appearance before the committee, under a peremptory subpoenae issued after three doctors hired by the committee reported Fall was not too ill to go to the capitol to testify.

The committee wants to examine Fall under oath regarding the money he borrowed from Doheny, J. W. Zevely, agent of Harry F. Sinclair, Teapot Dome lessee, and any others from whom Fall may have obtained funds.

Gregory Dumped.

President Coolidge continued conferences today with Senators on selection of counsel to replace Gregory, whom he discarded yesterday after Doheny revealed that he had hired Gregory in oil matters. Mr. Coolidge had Senators Curtis and Lenroot at the White house last night discussing selection of counsel.

The resolution directing the president to take court action for cancellation of the naval reserve leases was due to be sent to the White House today, having passed both senate and house.

Fall Will Not Talk.

Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of Interior, has declined to answer any questions put to him by the senate public lands committee regarding the naval oil reserve scandal or Fall's borrowing of money from E. L. Doheny, Harry Sinclair, or others.

Shrunken and nervous, Fall tottered into the crowded committee chamber, leaning heavily on a cane.

He sat pawing with his hand at the arm of the witness chair and stared with deep sunk eyes at his

Five hundred dollars has just been cabled to Germany by the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany as an earnest of the larger support which is on the way. The wire, which was sent to the Ausland Kommittee, Berlin, is as follows:

See Collapse of De La Huerta in Taking Vera Cruz

WASHINGTON.—Occupation of Vera Cruz, stronghold of the Mexican fascisti, early this week with the ensuing collapse of the whole de la Huerta counter-revolution, was forecast by the Mexican embassy here tonight, after receipt of official dispatches from the Mexican foreign office.

De LaHuerta on the Run.

LAREDO, Tex.—Unconfirmed advices received here late Friday night from the interior, stated Adolfo De LaHuerta, Fascisti chieftain, has fled from Vera Cruz.

Generals Sanchez and Lagrens are reported to have taken to the mountains with De LaHuerta.

Federal troops marching on Vera Cruz have occupied Orzaba, capturing large supplies of ammunition, according to the reports.

Glenn Young Back; Leading K. K. K. Williamson County

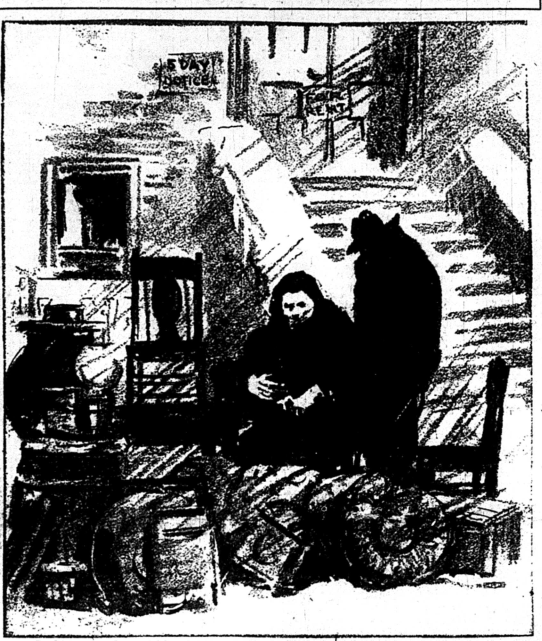
MARION, Ill.—Under the leadership of S. Glenn Young, the Ku Klux Klan has resumed its anti-booze campaign in Williamson County.

One hundred seventeen persons, arrested at Johnston City, scene of the recent mine disaster, by twelve hundred of Young's' raiders on federal warrants last night, were taken to Benton and jailed today. Most of the prisoners gave bond and were released.

Strawn Oil Tips Pay Very Well

For over a year the law office of Silas H. Strawn, appointed by President Coolidge as the Republican counsel in the bipartisan investigation of the Teapot Dome and Doheny oil scandal, has been the source of profitable tips to local oil gamblers, according to inside information obtained by The Federated Press. Employes in the Strawn office have been given tips that resulted in substantial winnings for those who took flyers on the Strawn whispers. Whether higher-ups in Chicago's business, professional and political world also profited from the oil tip dispensary in the Strawn office has not yet been ascertained.

A LABOR PROBLEM



Perhaps no other problem confronting the working masses today involves as many difficulties as does the housing question."—From series of articles on Housing now appearing in The DAILY WORKER.

The Kept Government of the United States

JOHN PEPPER

THE Teapot Dome oil scandal began as a modest case of individual corruption. It has grown and today it looms up as the most frightful exposure of the whole government of our country. What until now only the Communists denounced clearly and boldly—that the "most democratic government of the world" is only the rule of finance capital—has become now a common possession of millions and millions of the common people. Masses learn political wisdom, not thru text books, but thru experience. The Teapot Dome oil shame is the greatest mass experience imaginable on the essence, system and methods of American democracy. The shrapnel of the Teapot Dome oil scandal has cut a horrible wound in the body of the United States governmental system, has ripped open its abdomen, has torn out its intestines, has covered it with its own tainted blood and excretion. It stinks. The odor nauseates not only the 110,000,000 people of the United States, but it spreads from Alaska to Mexico, it fills the entire Western Hemisphere. Karl Marx said once of young capitalism that capital was born with blood and dirt sweating out of all its pores from head to toe. We can say of aged capitalism turned into imperialism that its loathsome body is sweating blood and dirt and oil out of all its pores from head to toe.

The capitalist press speaks of individual kept politicians and government officials, but it is silent on the fundamental truth. It is not a case of kept persons, but of a kept government.

Everybody and everything is involved in the Teapot Dome oil shame. The Republican Party as well as the Democratic. The Harding administration as well as the Wilson and Coolidge administration. All "leaders" of the nation are guilty. With combined forces they did their utmost to hand over the treasures of the nation, worth hundreds of millions, into the hands of the oil magnates. They are all patriots; but all—Republicans and Democrats vying with one another— have broken the Constitution, have destroyed the laws, to give the gigantic oil fields of the United States navy into the hands of the Sinclairs, the Dohenys, into the hands of the Standard Oil. They made the nation poorer by hundreds of millions. They have well-nigh destroyed the power of resistance of the navy in case of war, and at the same time they have stirred up dangers of war and intervention in Mexico in order to defend the oil interests of the same Dohenys and Sinclairs.

Who of all the powerful ones of the White House and capital is not guilty?

President Harding knew that the government has no right

LONDON TIMES HITS RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RULE

See Conservatives in Blow at Labor

LONDON.—The Times, in a leading editorial today, bitterly attacked the government's grant of diplomatic recognition to Russia.

Recognition, altho accepted as inevitable ever since the labor government headed by Prime Minister MacDonald assumed power, caused a considerable impression when announced by the foreign office.

The editorial in the Times was interpreted as the opening gun in a conservative attack on MacDonald's action. It was the more surprising in that the newspaper recently has been broadly pro-government in its foreign affairs attitude.

Liberal newspapers, led by the Express, praised recognition as a great step forward in the British program for restoration of the political and economic equilibrium of Europe.

Mussolini Seeks Soviet Trade

ROME.—In a hurried scramble to get in on the Russian trade which will be directed to England, in greater volume as the result of MacDonald's treaty, Signor Mussolini is seeking to arange a treaty with Moscow himself.

The Italian is believed to have been caught napping by the British Labor Party's prompt consummation of recognition proposals. He is now asking the Soviet government for the guarantee of large grain shipments from Black Sea ports. The Russians are also asked to lower their tariff rates on Italian products. A commission would have charge of trade arrangements.

Mussolini's soviet proposal is dictated by Italy's economic crisis. Political observers say it will cause a new political allignment, that if the fascist chief wants to continue in power, he must bid for liberal support at the coming election.

Strong Arm Squads Help Lewis Fight Progressive Aid Given to Howat and Myerscough Appeals

Falling Out Among the Machine Following

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The adminstration forces of the United Mine Workers are claiming complete victory today but without any enthusiasm. They know better than any one else that their handling of the Howat case by refusal to allow him to defend himself on the floor, the ratification of the adverse committee report without a count of the vote, has strengthened Howat and the progressive element that support him. Not only is the Howat case still a source of irritation but the radical and progressive forces have now a live issue—the violation of the constitution in the Howat case and in the vote on the representation resolution—an issue that the rank and file can easily understand and on which they will fight. There is, among the machine following, much mutual criticism for giving the radical element a chance to start the Lewis impeachment proceedings with delegates who were at the convention and altogether too familiar with what happened there.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—A total of 1,187 delgates out of 1,800 remained in Tomlinson Hall after President John L. Lewis left the platform Saturday morning without adjourning the convention, heard Alex Howat state his case and adopted a motion calling for a special convention to impeach Lewis.

Afraid to allow Howat to state his case before the convention, the committee on grievances and appeals recommended that his petition for reinstatement be denied.

A roar of shouts for Howat came immediately from the floor and gallery. Lewis called for the vote on the committee report, declared it carried without the formality of a count, and then tried to stem the greatest storm of protest yet seen in the convention.

It was evident that only the payroll followers of the Lewis machine had voted for the report and roar became a steady shout of "Take the platform, Alex."

Howat walked down the aisle and his appearance stilled the noise somewhat.

"For what purpose do you appear, Alexander Howat?" said Lewis.

Howat replied, "To get justice from this convention."

"Your case is not before the convention," replied Lewis, and again came the shouts of "Platform, Alex."

Howat walked onto the platform and stood for a few moments by the president's chair. Then he was seized by some of the strong-arm squad, a gun was drawn by one of the crowd, and Howat was almost thrown down the flight of steps leading to the platform.

Impeachment Proceedings Begun

A crowd of delegates rushed for the platform, Lewis broke his gavel pounding for order and left the chair, the floor leaders of the administration started a rush for the door in an effort to stampede the convention but failed. The disorder continued for a time, but finally quieted when Howat began to speak to the crowd of more than a thousand delegates that had remained, as was announced by Delegate John Watt, who mounted a chair, to take action for the calling of a special convention to impeach Lewis for his violation of the constitution in the Howat and other cases.

The motion adopted by the 1187 delegates reads as follows:

"That we organize to call a special convention for considering the wage-scale, giving Alexander Howat a fair hearing, considering violations of the constitution by President John L. Lewis and taking such action on them as may be necessary."

The constitutional sections of which violations are claimed were also cited in the motion which was adopted unanimously. A committee was elected to organize the impeachment proceedings.

National Program

The following demands were also adopted by the meeting as a basis for a national campaign thruout the United Mine Workers:

1. Immediate legislation by Congress to compel the coal operators to pay regular wages to unemployed miners out of their profits.
2. Immediate legislation by Congress establishing the six-hour day and the five-day week in the coal industry.
3. Immediate nationalization of the mines.
4. Sending of a delegation to Congress to make these demands and fight for them and a fight of the United Mine Workers for this program.

MEXICANS PUT FLAGS AT HALF MAST FOR LENIN

MEXICO CITY.—All the flags on public buildings thruout the State of San Luis Potosi were flying at half mast on the day Lenin was buried and for the two days following. The new governor of the state, Jorge Manrique, is a member of the Agrarista Party (peasant Agrarians). He was elected by a united front of the Agrarista, Laborista and Communista parties of the state.

His opponent was Prieto Laurens, leader of the Cooperatista party, and the latter, having the control of the metropolitan press, the press of the capital of the state, the old state government, the outgoing legislature, the electoral commissions and the national and state courts and the federal congress, declared himself elected and took office.

Then the old peasant bands of the Cedillo brothers who had been demobilized onto public lands in San Luis Potosi, mobilized their followers and proceeded to recapture the state for the small farmers and workers. They were well on their way when the rebellion of De la Huerta and Prieto Laurens broke out. With the aid of Federal troops they quickly finished the job.

It was known that the new governor was radical, for he began by distributing more lands, pushing irrigation projects to give free water to the peasants and small farmers and abolishing bull fights. But the announcement of three days of public mourning for the death of the great Russian statesman and Communist leader came as a distinct shock to the conservative press of the capital. With their usual dignity (?) they expressed their amazement.

Fall was sworn.

Senator Walsh asked him if he wished to make any further statement.

"I decline to answer any questions," Fall answered in a steady voice.

Fall Gets Tough.

Fall then challenged the authority of the committee to quiz him.

He said the resolution passed by the senate providing for the present investigation was not in force now, since other resolutions of condemnation of oil leases had since been passed.

"I also decline to answer on the ground it may incriminate me," Fall said.

Chairman Lenroot of the committee ordered the chamber closed after Fall had concluded and the committee went into executive session to decide what should be done.

One point Fall raised was that the present investigating committee was appointed during the last congress and that it had no power in the present congress.

To meet this objection the committee will ask adoption in the senate Monday of a resolution giving power under the present congress. This action was unanimously decided upon motion of Senator Walsh, Montana democrat.

Fall's counsel maintains the federal grand jury would have to indict Fall for contempt before he would be required to answer.

"I have looked up the matter and I find that the committee must report, if it wishes, to the president of the senate that a witness has refused to answer questions," Cook said. "The president of the senate then hands the matter to the federal district attorney who presents the facts to the grand jury. The grand jury may then indict the witness for refusing to answer."

In executive session, the committee discussed holding Fall in contempt. The senate could try him, on recommendation of the committee in contempt proceedings and Fall would be sent to jail if found guilty and if he still declined to answer.

Fall appeared on the verge of collapse at first, but after reading his statement, he walked firmly—without use of his cane—into an ante chamber to await action of the committee.

Grief for Lenin's Death Shown by Bonnaz Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—Expressing their grief for the death of Nicolai Lenin, the following resolution was adopted by the Bonnaz, Singer and Hand Embroiders' Union, local 66, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union:

The Bonnaz Embroiders' Union, Local No. 66, I. L. G. W. U., expresses profound regret over the death of Comrade Nicolai Lenin.

The International Labor Movement and the Workers of Soviet Russia have lost a great leader and devoted and untiring fighter for the workers' cause. We, together with the workers of all countries, mourn the irreparable loss and send message of condolence to the workers government of Russia in this hour of great sorrow.

Signs of Spring.

WILKESBARRE, Pa.—The ground hog saw his shadow here today but it don't mean anything, according to Uncle Joe Chambers, who drove into town today to invite his friends to a "groundhog dinner."

"I've seen two caterpillars in the yard; a robin has been singing near my window for a week; bulbs are sprouting and the animals are stirring, all signs of an early spring," Uncle Joe said.

Uncle Joe killed a venturesome groundhog which came out a day early, and intends to have a feast. That's what he thinks of superstition.

Correction on "Expelled" Story

The signature "The Expelled" did not belong in the cloak makers' statement, which was incorporated by the expelled Ladies' Garment Union members in their protest against the Perlstein machine published in Saturday's Daily Worker. The cloak makers' statement was from a group within the union which is urging the reinstatement of the expelled members. The erroneous signature was an editorial error.

The Kept Government of the United States

to give the naval oil fields into the hands of private capitalists, but he tolerated this dirty business.

Denby, Secretary of the Navy of Harding's and Coolidge's cabinet, signed the order which transferred the valuable oil reserves from the Navy Department to the Interior Department in spite of the opposition of all navy officers. Fall, Secretary of the Interior of the Harding administration, signed the leases which gave the naval oil fields to the oil magnates Sinclair and Doheny.

The investigation up to now has not shown whether Secretary of the Navy Denby and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt have or have not received money from the oil magnates, but it is clear that the brother of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Archie Roosevelt, was a paid employe of the oil magnate Sinclair. And the investigation has shown clearly that Senator Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, received from Doheny $100,000 and other big sums from Sinclair. Doheny was forced to say in his testimony that he gave the money to Fall not only out of old friendship but out of gratitude for valuable services with the government rendered him by Fall.

Daugherty, Attorney-General in Harding's and Coolidge's cabinet, knew everything about the shameful corruption, the dissipation of national wealth and the weakening of the navy, but he was so occupied with the prosecution of Communists that he did not prosecute the guilty oil magnates and cabinet ministers.

Who is not guilty in the Coolidge administration, and who dares to say that Coolidge himself is not guilty? Who is so naive as to believe that it was only by chance that the cunning, calculating Coolidge selected Silas H. Strawn and T. W. Gregory as his counsel to prosecute impartially those guilty in the oil corruption? And who believes that Coolidge did not know that Gregory, former Attorney-General of the United States, has been in the employ of the source of corruption itself, the Doheny corporation, and that Silas Strawn is counsel for the Texas Oil Company?

Who of the whole Coolidge administration is innocent?

Who of the Harding administration is innocent?

And who of the Wilson administration was not corrupt? Can it be simply chance that Doheny the oil magnate in his testimony was forced to admit that almost all the members of the Wilson cabinet were also employes of his oil corporation?

Secretary of the Interior Lane of the Wilson cabinet was Doheny's personal assistant in the dirt and oil business. Doheny hired him for $50,000 a year and Doheny stated: "I made the agreement with him before he left office as Secretary of the Interior."

J. J. Cotter, assistant to Secretary Lane, also became a hireling of Doheny. He is now vice-president of Doheny's corporation.

Lindley M. Garrison, Wilson's Secretary of War, is the employe of a big banking firm which is the property of Doheny.

George Creel, head of President Wilson's Bureau of Propaganda, got money from Doheny to "propagandize" Secretary of the Navy Daniels to grant to Doheny the Teapot Dome lease. But Daniels could not be bought because—as Doheny stated—Daniels was an advocate of the interests of the competing Standard Oil Campany.

And the most outstanding figure, McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, son-in-law of the late Ex-President Wilson, the present "progressive" presidential candidate of the Democratic Party? Doheny testified that he retained him for five years and paid him $250,000; and the oil magnate stated that he paid McAdoo this immense sum in order that he represent his oil interests in the Washington cabinet, especially to win the support of the government for his capitalist interests against Mexico. And we should not forget that this happened shortly after McAdoo left the office of Secretary of the Treasury, but retained his other office of being son-in-law of Woodrow Wilson. And we should not forget that all this happened during the time that President Wilson had unlimited dictatorial power over the nation and was the uncrowned monarch of the United States.

The whole cabinet of Wilson later simply became the cabinet of Doheny. But that is only the appearance. The reality is that Wilson's cabinet even earlier, before it became Wilson's cabinet—was Doheny's cabinet. Who dares to deny that the cabinet of Harding and Coolidge is anything but the cabinet of Doheny, Sinclair, Rockefeller, Gary and J. P. Morgan? All of these cabinets carry on the affairs of the government in behalf of the big capitalists, make peace or declare war in the interest of the magnates of finance capital. A few months ago cable dispatches reported that Sinclair received a proposal to become king of Albania. But he would have been a fool to accept this proposal when he can be the real king of such a mighty country as the United States. Doheny has a private car and he named it "Patriot." That is an appropriate symbol. Doheny and the other big robbers ride in the private car "Patriotism" rough-shod over the whole nation, and they defraud and rule 110,000,000 people in the name of nationalism and jingoism.

Not only individuals are guilty, but the whole system is guilty. The government of the United States is a kept government. It is the mistress of big capital.

The Senate is investigating today the oil corruption—but the Republican and Democratic Parties which form Congress are born of the same money which they pretend to investigate today.

Coolidge is investigating the oil corruption—but who does not know that Coolidge and Harding and Wilson and every president was elected by the same money which Coolidge finds is stinking today?

The capitalist press in the whole country is howling today against the corruption—but the truth is that the kept press is worthy of the kept government, that it is financed by the same government as are all the great statesmen, leaders, presidents and secretaries of the nation.

The masses of workers and farmers must know that every administration of the United States was and is the government of the capitalists. Not only because the individual members of the various cabinets were bought up by individual capitalists, but because the whole government system is nothing but the political rule of the capitalist system. Our task is to utilize the dramatic effect of the gigantic scandal for a giant campaign, so that every worker and exploited farmer shall understand this simple and great truth. And our slogan in this campaign for which we must mobilize all the forces of our Party and the whole working class must be:

"The Republican and Democratic Parties are corrupt, and they ruin the nation because they are the parties of the capitalists.

"Only an independent party of workers and exploited farmers can protect the interests of the laboring masses, can purify the nation of its capitalist corruption, and can prevent wars, conducted for the interests of finance capital.

"Down with the kept government of the capitalist parties! Long live the workers' and farmers' government!"

WILSON, MORGAN WAR MAKER, IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Struck Down in Kansas with Workers in Prison

WASHINGTON.—Woodrow Wilson, wartime president, is dead. Death ended four years' of chronic invalidism that began four years' ago while on his League of Nations' tour thru the west. He took to his bed as the presidential train was passing thru the Kansas city of Wichita where more than 30 oil workers were rounding out their second year of imprisonment, without trial, on espionage indictments prepared by his attorney general.

The final chapter of the late president's illness began with an attack of indigestion, which rapidly took a severe and fatal turn. Hope was soon abandoned.

The Wilson Legend Exploded.

Wilson's death came five years too late for him to pass into history with the aura of legend that has attached to other stricken rulers and ex-rulers.

His physical death comes just five years after the death of the Wilson legend at the time of the Versailles conference when he abandoned the fourteen points that spread his name thru European peoples as the apostle of liberalism.

The Anti-Morgan Candidate.

True to the irony with which political history is written the anti-Morgan candidate was the war president under whom Morgan's son doubled and trebled his fortune in the greatest orgy of profiteering the country has ever known.

Wilson's election came in the three-cornered fight between the G. O. P., the Bull Moose and his party, in which the winning democrats had a plurality but no majority. In neither presidential election did Wilson ever have a majority of the total national vote.

The doctrine of the "New Freedom," with its vague radical phraseology led well meaning liberals to believe he would try to restore a condition of Jeffersonian democracy.

Wilson's Imperialism.

Followed a foreign imperialistic policy in which the oil interests were assisted in their grab of Mexican oil; American sugar lords were strengthened in their domination of Cuba; Haiti and Santo Domingo were conquered and 3,000 Haitians slain, by an American invasion ordered without sanction of Congress and capitalistic revolutions were engineered in Central American republics.

Diplomatic assistance was given to the Allies in their blockade of Germany while newspaper tom toms began arousing the war psychology for later use.

"He Kept Us Out of War."

Liberals still clung to the president, however, as he went into the 1916 campaign against Charles Evans Hughes, with the Democratic slogan, "He Kept Us Out of War."

Quickly came breaking of diplomatic negotiations and a full-speed-ahead course towards war. Then war, conscription of men but no conscription of profits, and the trampling under foot of all civil rights by wholesale raids and indictments and trials under anti-free speech laws.

"Force Without Stint or Limit," become the announced motto of the late pacifist.

The Fourteen Points.

Liberals still had faith in him, however, for he announced that the war was being carried on for the liberation of the people of Germany and promulgated the 14 points pledging the German people that if they overthrew their autocratic government and surrendered that they would be dealt with in kindly fashion and assisted back into the family of nations.

The Germans took Wilson at his word and surrendered on the basis of the 14 points.

The Failure at Versailles.

At once came the allied blockade which murdered tens of thousands of German children. Then came the Versailles peace conference which riveted the chains of the allies about the neck of the Germans in direct contravention of the 14 points.

Wilson returned home but the temper of the people had changed. When he reached Seattle where organized labor had supported him before, he was met with a cold request from the trade unions that he free the political prisoners still languishing in U. S. penitentiaries. By the time he reached Kansas he collapsed.

In the Chicago Federation.

While several delegates were on their feet to oppose a motion instructing the president of the Chicago Federation of Labor to send a letter to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, expressing the sorrow of the labor movement of Chicago over the death of the former president of the United States, John Fitzpatrick, at yesterday's meeting of the Federation, shut off discussion and put the question to a vote, and it was carried.

The motion was introduced by Delegate Ed Wright, one of the most reactionary members of the federation. Woodrow Wilson, the political mountebank, who secured the public's ear thru his advocacy of social reforms, was perhaps the bitterest enemy of the working class that ever sat in the White House.

In 1918 when the miners in the anthracite region went on strike he warned them by telegram that unless they went back to work he would send in the militia. Again in 1919 when the bituminous miners went on strike his attorney general issued an injunction prohibiting the miners' officials from carrying on the strike.

gates were registered with the committee and a collection taken up to defray the expense of issuing a bulletin on the convention proceedings.

Meeting Is Orderly

The meeting was probably the most orderly of all the Indianapolis sessions.

Tom Myerscough, secretary of the Progressive Miners' International Committee, whose case was reported just before Howat's, was also refused a chance to make a defense. When he rose to speak he was grabbed by two sergeants-at-arms and forced back into his seat. There was plenty of protest but it was evident that his supporters were waiting to make the Howat case the start of the real fight that came later.

No more arbitrary action than that of Lewis on both the Myerscough and Howat cases has ever been seen at a convention of the United Mine Workers and Lewis had to rule both cases out of order to save his administration from defeat. It is a foregone conclusion that had the vote on the committee report been counted, or a roll call taken that Howat would have been reinstated and the administration repudiated.

It was a knowledge of this that prompted Lewis to deny a hearing to Howat and the other Kansas officials who have been out of the organization for 28 months without a trial.

The Farrington-Lewis alliance did not swing District No. 12, (Illinois) to the Lewis machine and this, the largest district in the United Mine Workers left the convention solidly against the administration. The defeat of the Farrington's district administration is freely predicted. Subdistrict No. 4, of District No. 12, announced thru its delegates that they were going to take a leading part in the organization for the special convention to impeach Lewis.

Blackjacks For Machine

The concensus of opinion among the delegates as they were preparing to leave Saturday evening, for their homes, was that the Lewis administration from now on will meet the strongest opposition it has yet encountered and an opposition that has been solidified by the utter disregard of the wishes of the majority at the convention.

"Lewis will have to rule by force and nothing else from now on," said a delegate from a district, formerly known as Lewis territory.

That the machine was prepared to crush opposition at all costs is shown by the purchase of 120 blackjacks by its strong-arm squad during the two days before the end of the convention. This is vouched for by the hardware man who sold them and who was much elated over the rushing business he had been doing.

Review of Howat Case

The appeal of Alex Howat for reinstatement in the United Mine Workers of America has been pending for more than two years.

Howat, president of the Kansas district of coal miners, led a strike against the Kansas Industrial Court law which attracted nation-wide attention and resulted in the law being nullified. Differences with the Lewis administration, growing out of a campaign against Lewis, led by Robert Harlin and Howat, led to his expulsion by Lewis, together with the entire Kansas district while Howat was serving a jail sentence for his fight against the Industrial Court.

Howat was pardoned by the newly elected governor of Kansas after an election campaign in which the Industrial Court was one of the principal issues. Since that time Howard has been carrying on a campaign for his reinstatement and has the support of all the progressive elements.

Labor Plans Big Fight Against Job Going to Christian

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Organized labor has opened a fight on the nomination of George B. Christian, secretary to the late President Harding, to be a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

Twenty railroad labor organizations, thru W. S. Stone, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, sent a letter to President Coolidge, asking him to withdraw Christian's nomination, declaring he "does not possess the qualifications demanded" in a member of the commission.

A letter was also sent to Senator Smith, South Carolina, chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee, before which the nomination is pending, asking the committee to report it unfavorably.

The railroad bodies urged the president to appoint a man of high character and broad public experience, who will be acceptable to the agricultural interests of the nation "because of important cases involving agriculture pending before the commission."

"The Federal Trade Commission exercises functions of the very greatest importance to the people of the United States and has come to be regarded as an institution which serves the public," Stone wrote the president, disapproving Christian's appointment.

"We regret to find it necessary to state, most respectfully, that in our judgment, Mr. George B. Christian, whose name has been sent to the senate, does not possess the qualifications demanded in a member of the Federal Trade Commission."

Yield to Strike Threat

BUENOS AIRES.—Yielding to the workers' threat of an immediate general strike, the government has nullified the workers' pension. Labor objected to the clause compelling the workers to contribute excessively to their own relief.

DAILY WORKER STARTS BIG DRIVE FOR CHICAGO SUBS

Boosters Are Meeting on February 7

While militants all over the country are putting in strenuous efforts to build up the already rapidly growing circulation of The DAILY WORKER, a special campaign is being started which is calculated to add at least 1,000 new DAILY WORKER readers to the thousands now reading The DAILY WORKER in Chicago. Under the direction of City DAILY WORKER Agent G. A. Schulenberg and District Organizer Arne Swabeck assisted by all of the DAILY WORKER branch agents, this campaign is catching the imagination of hundreds of DAILY WORKER boosters in Chicago.

After a preliminary conference of the campaign managers, details of the drive have been announced. Comrades in Chicago are enthusiastic over the prospects and the prediction has been made by many that a great deal more than 1,000 new subscriptions will be secured.

Campaign Meeting Feb. 7.

While the campaign proper will not be started until Feb. 10, first steps will be taken on Feb. 7 at a special meeting which has been called on that date at the headquarters of the Russian Technical School at 1902 W. Division St. Every DAILY WORKER branch agent, together with their assistants, will be in attendance. The meeting which will commence promptly at 8:15 p. m., will be open to all the live wires in Chicago who wish to participate in the campaign. Complete details regarding the conduct of the drive will be worked out at that time and everything set in readiness to start the campaign with a rush on Feb. 10.

The general outline of the campaign has already been worked out, but it has been decided to allow those who participate in the campaign to determine the rules under which the drive will be conducted. Those who will be able to attend the preliminary meeting on February 7 are requested to come prepared to offer their suggestions. For those who will be unable to attend the first campaign meeting but who desire to take part in the campaign, the columns of The DAILY WORKER will be open on Feb. 8, 9 and 10 and suggestions addressed to the Chicago Campaign Manager, care of The DAILY WORKER, will be printed in these issues.

Prizes to Boosters.

During the campaign, by special arrangement with The DAILY WORKER business office, the regular 20 per cent commission allowed to branch agents for subscriptions turned in, will be given to all those who are accepted as entrants in the drive. In addition to this prizes will be given to those who turn in the most subscriptions. The committee in charge of the arrangements makes the following suggestions for rules to govern the campaign:

1. The campaign will begin on Feb. 10 and continue until 1,000 new subscribers are secured in Chicago. "ONE THOUSAND NEW SUBSCRIBERS IN CHICAGO BY MARCH TENTH" is the slogan.
2. Prizes will be given to the individuals who turn in the most subscriptions.
3. Prizes will be given to the Federation branch of the W. P. which turns in the most subs in proportion to its membership.
4. Prizes will be given to the English W. P. branch which turns in the most subs in proportion to its membership.
5. Branches will be credited only with subs which its members sell. Individuals will be credited only with subs they themselves secure.

For full information regarding the drive, come to the meeting, on Thursday, Feb. 7th, at 8:15 p. m., in the headquarters of the Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division St.

Milk Producers' Election

The milk producers of the Chicago district, who recently conducted a strike against the Milk Trust, will meet today at the Hotel La Salle to elect officers for the year.

The two candidates for the presidency are Frank T. Holt of Kenosha, Wisconsin, the present incumbent, and Mayor Frank Green of Woodstock.

It is expected that 1,500 milk producers will participate in the election. Mayor Green claims to have the backing of McHenry county. E. C. Rockwell, secretary of the organization, is unopposed.

Thompson On Super-Power

Carl D. Thompson, secretary of the Public Ownership League, spoke on the super-power system at the Chicago Federation of Labor meeting, Sunday, showing that electricity would do most of the work that human beings are doing today. Delegates Niels Kjar and Arne Swebeck declared that the workers should secure control of the government else industrial progress would mean nothing to them.

RYKOV, ENGINEER, SUCCEEDS LENIN AS SOVIET CHIEF

Escaped from Siberia Under Czarism

MOSCOW.—Alexis Ivanovich Rykov, the first engineer to head a great nation, has been unanimously chosen by the central executive committee to take the post vacated by the death of Nicolai Lenin as president of the Council of Peoples' Commissars. The committee's action ratifies the decision of the Soviet congress.

Associated with Rykov will be the quartette of brilliant proletariat leaders: Kameneff, Tsuriupa, Chubar and Alashvelli.

Trotzky Remains Commissar.

Rumors of internal strife regarding Trotzky are set naught by the announcement that Trotzky will be retained as commissar of military affairs.

This closing of the ranks around Rykov means that Russian government forces will present a united front to the world during a period when unity is essential.

Leader In Economic Field.

Rykoff has held many important positions in the Soviet government, principally in the field of economic administration. With Stalin and Kameneff, he was one of the vice-chairmen of the council of peoples' commissars appointed at the time when Lenin's illness removed the premier from all political activity.

For a long time Rykoff was president of the supreme economic council, one of the most important departments of the Soviet government, having general supervision of the economic reconstruction of Russia. He is a distinguished linguist.

He is generally regarded in Russia as a man of wide political experience and a talented administrator.

Rykov escaped from Siberia, a year before the Great War, after a three years' exile for his revolutionary activities in the Bolshevik movement. Arrested again in Moscow and sent under guard to the arctic he escaped for a second time.

Since 1906 he has been a member of the party's executive committee. He had the utmost confidence of Lenin. He was born of peasant parentage in 1881.

Goose-Stepping Will Be Rapped at School Meet

Resentment against "goose-step" educational methods will be aired when 12,000 public school superintendents convene in Chicago, February 23 to 28, at the annual conclave of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association in the Auditorium theatre.

Censonship of educational methods by school boards composed of small business men connected with the American Legion, the Ku Klux Klan and similar organizations, is expected to come in for castigation by the minority. One phase of this censorship which will probably be assailed is the casting out, in some schools, of all American histories which have abandoned the romantic lies about the founding of the republic on which hundred-percentism is fed.

The left swing group among the superintendents is relatively small, however. The demand for freer methods of education is largely limited to rank and file teachers, especially to those organized in the teachers' union.

Blame the Firemen.

ST. LOUIS.—Stationary firemen and engineers here are opposing a pending city ordinance which would impose fines and jail terms on firemen in cases where smoke was permitted to emit for longer than a fixed period at a time from the establishment in which they were employed. The measure is proposed as a smoke abatement act. Five minutes' time would be allowed for fire attending periods, after which the fireman would be arrested, fined or jailed if the stack emitted dense smoke.

Waymen Take Strike Vote.

OTTAWA.—No immediate action is expected in labor circles here as a result of the strike vote of the Canadian members of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes and Railway Shop Laborers. The expectation is that the result will be communicated by the union officers to the Canadian railways with a view to the reopening of wage negotiations before there is a question of actually declaring a strike.

Ladd for Russ Recognition.

WASHINGTON.—Senator Ladd of North Dakota, speaking on Russia to school teachers at their union meeting here, declared for recognition of the Russian republic, and said that his tour of Russia last summer convinced him that Russia desired peace and the friendship of the people of the United States. He did not believe that any change in policy would result from the death of Lenin.

OMAHA.—Farmers from Saunders county drove forty miles to Omaha, the county seat of Douglas county, to attend a Lenin memorial meeting here. Rev. J. L. Beebe, Evangelical church, was the principal speaker.

COAL DIGGERS IN NEW STRUGGLE IN NOVA SCOTIA

Battling 20 Per Cent Cut by Steel Company

By JOHN A. McRURY
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia.—The miners of Nova Scotia are again battling for their livelihood against the British Empire Steel Corporation. After many weeks of negotiations between the provisional district executive, U. M. W. A., and the corporation, the conference ended abruptly within ten hours of the expiration of the contract.

As the miners were leaving the pits on January 15, they were attracted by large notices displaying the new wage scale, which would go into effect the following day. This was a heavy blow to the miners, as no news had been given to the press regarding the wage controversy.

Twenty Per Cent Cut.

The new wage scale contained a 20 per cent reduction in Cape Breton, from December to April, and for the remainder of the year the 1923 rate of wages would be paid. Coal is increased to $4 a ton. Collieries on the mainland are not affected by the wage cut, altho the price of coal is increased. By only reducing the wages in one section of the district, it was thought that a wedge could be driven into the ranks of the miners and a split caused. But the training the Nova Scotia miners of since the days of 1909 prevented this.

All mines in the district were ordered to "suspend operations" pending a satisfactory settlement.

Bosses Offer $2.60 a Day.

The demands of the union were for the resumption of the 1921 rates, or a 20 per cent increase over the expiring wage schedule. This would increase the pay of the datal men from $3.25 to $3.80 a day, and contract men in ratio. The rate offered by the company to affect only the Cape Breton coal fields, until May 1, when the 1923 rate would be paid, was $2.60 a day, the rate paid in 1916. The corporation guarantees five days and four days' work a week to the collieries, thus the miners would be earning $13 and $10.30. The union stated that it considered this a starvation wage and it would be better to see the men stay home and starve, than starve while working.

"Go to Work," Says Premier.

Andrew Steele, U. M. W. A. representative in the district, later dispatched a telegram to the premier of the province, who replied suggesting that the men go back to the pits for fifteen days, pending a settlement. This was accepted by the corporation, but rejected by the union.

With 5,000 tons of coal on its sidings, the corporation gave orders that no more coal would be sold. In any effort to secure coal for heating the most daring of the miners dig coal from the surface mines on the outskirts of the town, while others resort to oil. Orders for food supplies are being issued to the most needy cases by the local union.

Negotiations have been resumed.

Fabulous Steel Profits Nail Gary's Lie About Cost of Shorter Workday Which Credulous Cal Swallowed

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Did Gary lie when he told President Coolidge that abolition of the 12-hour day increased production costs by 10%? Record profits and an extra dividend just announced by the steel corporation for the last quarter of 1923 appear to show that Gary was using the president of the United States as a vehicle for dishonest propaganda of big business against the shorter working day.

The total profits for $49,958,980 taken by U. S. Steel in the last three months of the year are the largest of the year. They set a record for any three months in the peacetime history of the trust. And they were earned during a period when the shorter working day was in full swing. How about that, Mr. Gary?

Profit Rises, Hours Fall.

Profits of $18,600,197 for October were the largest of the year, and exceeded those of July when steel workers were producing approximately the same amount of steel on the 12-hour day by nearly $3,000,000. Even the financial column lackeys of the metropolitan press are finding it difficult to harmonize this fact with Gary's statement about the 10% increase in cost due to the shorter working day.

They will find it somewhat harder to apologize for Gary when they glance at the following figures taken from the U. S. department of commerce monthly revue showing that taking the steel industry as a whole no increase in wage bills was necessary to maintain production on the shorter work day basis.

1923—	No. of employes	Tons produc'n steel ingots
June	521,991	3,748,890
July	524,321	3,515,966
August	528,321	3,677,771
September	521,075	3,316,166
October	521,244	3,547,966
November	506,351	3,144,000

According to these government reports 524,321 steel workers working under the 12-hour day regime at an average weekly wage of approximately $30 produced 3,515,966 tons of steel ingots in July. During October after the 12-hour day had been abolished 521,244 steel workers produced 3,547,966 tons working for approximately the same weekly wage. The total weekly payroll in October was not more than 1 1-2 per cent higher than in July when the longer day prevailed.

Such figures merely reinforce the evidence of huge profits to prove that steel workers are not getting their share of the value which they are creating.

The total profits of the steel corporation for 1923 amounted to $179,650,000. After paying all income and corporation taxes, setting aside depreciation and sinking fund reserves and paying bond interest there remained $108,493,271 for stockholders, or more than twice the regular dividend requirements. After paying dividends on preferred stock $16.42 of the profits remained over for each share of common stock.

Take a look at that last figure. The profits accruing to the absentee owner of 100 shares of U. S. Steel common stock exceed a whole year's wages paid by the corporation to the average worker sweating in the mills. How about the few like Gary whose holdings run into the tens of thousands of shares?

Extra Dividend Doubled

Such record breaking profits encouraged Gary and the directors to double the extra dividend paid out of the abundant profits of the third quarter. This put an extra $2,541,512 in cash into the pockets of the stockholders and brought the extra cash disbursements for the year to $3,812,268. Altogether stockholders have received $54,447,068 in cash as their share of 1923 profits and total disbursements to absentee owners, including bondholders, have amounted to $74,151,713.

But Gary's misstatement has a more sinister significance than would appear. Big business is determined to block the spread of the idea that the great productivity of modern industry should result in a steady shortening of the work day. If the increasing overhead of private capital is to escape bankruptcy, absentee owners must draw all the benefits of increased productivity. The tendency in Europe is all toward longer hours. It will spread to the United States. Already our business men are hailing it with satisfaction. This is the background of Gary's attempt to make the country believe that the shorter work day really increased costs.

Farmers! Capper Voted in Defense of Teapot Graft

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Senators who voted to strike out of the Walsh resolution calling for cancellation of the naval oil leases the clause in the preamble which directly charges illegality, voted in effect to give the Doheny and Sinclair interests an advantage in the courts, as against the government, in the contest for possession of these oil reserves.

The senators who thus lined up behind the Lenroot amendment were Ball, Brandegee, Bursum, Cameron, Capper, Couzens, Cummins, Curtis, Dale, Edge, Elkins, Ernst, Fernald, Gooding, Greene, Hale, Harreld, Howell, Jones (Washington), Keyes, Lenroot, Lodge, McKinley, McLean, McNary, Moses, Oddie, Pepper, Phipps, Reed (Pennsylvania), Shortridge, Smoot, Spencer, Stanfield, Sterling, Wadsworth, Warren and Watson. Of the 12 who did not vote, those supposed to be paired in favor of Lenroot's amendment, were Bruce, Colt, Fess, McCormick, Weller and Willis.

Bruce is the Maryland "B. and O" Democrat who voted for Cummins, and Howell and Couzens are Republicans formerly listed as progressives.

Charge Gompers with Sabotaging Child Laborers

By J. W. LEIGH
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS.—Miss Alice Odenheimer in an address before a representative gathering of women said Samuel Gompers showed he had not the welfare of humanity at heart when he deliberately gave the child labor amendment entrusted to his care to an indifferent senator who deliberately pigeonholed it, which statement was loudly applauded.

The occasion was the annual meeting of the local consumers league at which it was stated that manufacturers in the north and east were preparing to descend on the south where even the pretext of protection for children of tender age and women was a mockery as compared with manufacturing sections in other parts of the United States.

Isaac Heller, prominent in Jewish circles was another speaker who said it was necessary that another amendment to replace the one nullified by the supreme court be passed to protect children and women, and advised all to speak to their congressmen and senators in the only language they could understand—votes.

Start Open Shop Association in Big Southern City

By J. W. LEIGH
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

NEW ORLEANS.—The Mechanics' Cooperative Association is the deceptive name of a new open shop outfit here which has filed its charter with the secretary of state and is inviting carpenters and other craftsmen to join. The organization proposes to classify workmen into grades according to "skill and ability," wage scales to vary according to grade.

The charter provides for the establishment of a training school for apprentices and mechanics desiring to increase their skill. In addition to this sick benefits will be arranged, but no life insurance. The president of the organization is Benj. Jackson, who says that the association is not a labor union, far from it, but a close alliance between contractors and workers for "mutual benefits."

One of the features which appeals to the contractors is a declaration against the strike as a means of settling disputes. Nor is arbitration allowed. The boss sets the price, and you take it or starve.

Jury Hits Syndicalism Law.

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—The last stronghold of the criminal syndicalism law was weakened today when a jury acquitted Ed Higgins, E. McCrae and Sam Oberman of criminal syndicalism. The trial had lasted 36 days, and all the stock professional witnesses were brought in, but the jury acquitted after four hours. Sacramento is the only county now actively prosecuting under this law.

VIVID PICTURE OF RUSSIAN PRESS BY MISS STRONG

Workers' Papers Throb with Interest

Anna Louise Strong painted a picture of Russian newspapers that throbbed with vital human interest, at the annual banquet of the Federated Press at King's restaurant.

It was her first appearance in Chicago after years spent in the land of the Soviets and those who were fortunate enough to hear her wish only that thousands had been present.

Miss Strong reads Russian and did not depend on translators. The papers of Moscow and other cities she visited are as different from the bloated monstrosities of American newspaperdom as day is from night. Instead of a glorification of the virtues and follies of the private life of the wealthy such as fill the columns of the American press there are full and dramatic accounts of the deeds which advance the interests of the workers.

No Plute Social Chatter.

Let a scientific explorer find new oil fields, mica or iron mines and the papers give glowing and informative accounts. Profiteers are dismissed with sarcastic paragraphs and the papers carry no social chatter of the doings of their wives such as encourages American people to profiteer so that they can emulate such a life.

The only time the profiteer gets more space is when evidence is found against him. Much of this evidence appears in the newspapers for the first time. Workers are encouraged to write to the paper and to tell what they wish, let the chips fall where they will.

"Workers' Life" Department.

The "Workers' Life" department of the Communist papers is composed of letters from factory workers. Here facts are presented about efficiency or inefficiency in the factories, for above all other public questions the workers are interested in successful production. Startling revelations are often made on graft, leading to prosecutions. Let favoritism be shown in the distribution of products, such as shoes, or let milk intended for the tubercular be given to the healthy and the readers of the "Workers' Life" department are likely to hear of it.

Albert Coyle, editor of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, followed Miss Strong with a speech on the need for extension of the workers' press in America and a presentation of the financial problems labor publishers face.

All Factions Represented.

Carl Haessler, managing editor of the Federated Press, expressed his pleasure at speaking to such a representative labor gathering as included conservative A. F. of L. editors, a communist advertising manager, an I. W. W. poet, an anarchist statistician, and others. This varied clientele of the Federated Press, which aroused the hostility of the A. F. of L. administration that wished to restrict labor news service to one faction of the labor movement, was the strength of the service, he declared.

Robert Morse Lovett called the Federated Press a great agency for free speech and fact-giving.

CHICAGO.—Reaffirmation of its traditional policy of fair and cordial service to every group and wing in the labor movement was voted by the Federated Press, assembled in fourth annual meeting in Chicago, Feb. 1.

By unanimous vote the labor editors declared that the association, now comprising 76 member papers, will continue to welcome all genuine labor papers into its membership and will continue to gather and distribute news of interest to them all without discrimination.

The meeting followed established custom by re-electing to the executive board all three of the directors whose terms expired this year. Those re-elected were E. B. Ault, editor, Seattle Union Record; Wm. Z. Foster, editor, Labor Herald, Chicago; R. D. Cramer, editor, Labor Review, Minneapolis. At the meeting of the new executive board following the annual meeting the old officers of the board were unanimously re-elected.

The 1924 minimum budget as approved by the board was adopted by the annual meeting with minor changes. It provides for an estimated year's income from sales and donations of $43,411.68, and for expenditures to an equal amount.

Progressive People Nominate

OMAHA.—The Progressive People's Party, which was left in the lurch by Henry Ford, is bravely carrying on at its convention here and has named a presidential ticket. The men who will try to sweep the country without Ford's millions are Robert R. Pointer of Dearborn, Mich., for president and Roy M. Harrop, for vice president. E. M. Price will probably take over the national chairmanship from Harrop. The Soldiers' bonus and abolition of the electoral college are leading planks in the platform.

Lovestone Meetings.

Jay Lovestone will address two meetings in Detroit on Sunday, Feb. 10. At 3 p. m. he will speak at the House of the Masses on the subject: "Who Owns Congress"; at 8 p. m. he will speak at the East Ferry Street Hall at a mass meeting under the auspices of the South Slavish, Polish and English Branches, W. South Dakota Dirt Farmers Fight For Political Power As Crashing Banks Show Ruin of Present System

(Special Correspondence to the DAILY WORKER.)

SIOUX FALLS, S. D.—South Dakota continues to be the most interesting spot on the map of the northwest. Just now it is the financial storm center. During the last ten days thirty banks have blown up.

For a year the dinky country shave shops have been quietly dropping like autumn leaves, but the big show began in Mitchell two months ago, when the First National Bank, the oldest institution in the town, closed its doors. Tied to this bank was the First Trust Company, organized under the state law, to take up the musty paper that had been accumulated thru years of bad loans by the First National.

Fresh deposits were desired for the First National, and the only way these could be got was by the organization of the subsidiary company. One of the devices of the First Trust to coax new deposits, was to send out several hundred pass books to people of small means, inviting their deposits. A credit of one dollar was written in the pass book, providing the recipient of the book became a depositor of the bank. This pass book credit "come-on" system worked with a great many, with the result that a large number of people are now patiently awaiting the promised re-opening of the bank. The First National Bank was a favorite of the officers of the State Rural Credits Board. One of the members of the Rural Credits Board, Albert Zosky, was a director of the bank. How much Rural Credits funds, borrowed by the State on bonds sold to furnish loans on land to farmers, are tied up in the failure, nobody but the insiders know. The Rural Credits Board is a closed corporation, divulging nothing it can conveniently keep from the public.

Panic Grips Sioux Falls.

The acute stage of the panic which has been approaching for months, broke in Sioux Falls, with the failure of the Sioux Falls National Bank on the 10th of January. This bank had deposits of two and a half million dollars, and with it went a number of its satellite banks in the smaller towns. This failure was followed two days later by the failure of the Sioux Falls Trust & Savings Bank, with deposits of between four and five million dollars, and with this institution also went a number of its country correspondents. In the interim, other smaller banks in the State, having no relations with these banks, "went South."

These huge failures startled the big boys at Washington, and last week we were informed that Coolidge—quick to come to the aid of the banks—but slow to recognize the farmer distress as the cause of the trouble—had instructed the War Finance Corporation to come to the rescue of the banks of North and South Dakota and Minnesota, with a thirty million slice of War Finance Corporation funds. Eugene Meyer is now on the ground with the alleged purpose of plugging the financial storm sewer with public money, one third of which is to go to this State, and the balance to North Dakota and Minnesota.

Coolidge Didn't Save Them.

This promise of the administration to come to the rescue could not been taken seriously, however, for on Monday the Western National Bank of Mitchell, with deposits of nearly a million dollars and five branch banks, closed its doors. This bank is headed by W. S. Hill, who was formerly president of the South Dakota Farm Bureau Federation. He was a prospective "dirt" farmer choice for member of the Federal Reserve Board and later for an appointment to the Shipping Board. On the same day the International State Bank of Sioux Falls, with deposits of $1,300,000 turned the key in its doors. This makes the third big failure in Sioux Falls within ten days. The combined deposit obligations of the three failed Sioux Falls banks amounts to over eight million dollars, which makes the Coolidge donation of ten million dollars for South Dakota look like a drop in the bucket to the distressed bankers who are not yet closed, but are shivering on the brink.

Banks Failed Monday.

The daily press of this section is running a "closed shop" on news of bank failures generally, but from current information available at this writing, eleven banks closed their doors in this State on Monday. It was Black Monday for South Dakota's financiers. Nobody can tell how many more banks will tumble within the next few days or weeks. Depositors are quietly withdrawing their funds from all the banks now open, so that a continuation of the bank explosions may be expected. Nobody, not even the bankers themselves, appear to believe that the dumping of thirty or even fifty million dollars into the banks of the northwest to take up the bad paper of the banks, would now do any good. It is too late.

Millions of dollars of state, county and road funds are swamped in the crash. Unless the panic ends abruptly, it is probable the legislature may have to be called in extra session to provide funds to pay the running expenses of the public institutions and the various political divisions of the state. The governor has power to issue "emergency" warrants to meet unlooked for contingencies, and he may avail himself of that power—doubtful tho it may appear in the circumstances—to avoid a legislative session, which, if held, might develop investigation of public finances which would result in a political cyclone. The governor, who is a candidate for United States Senator, may not care to invite the cyclone.

Advanced Political Spirit.

Not only is South Dakota a financial storm center, but it has a stormy political future. In this respect it is likely to outrank Minnesota before the end of the 1924 campaign. In contrast with North Dakota, whose Nonpartisan League elements have not yet discovered that the League is dead, and who are still enmeshed in the sticky fly paper of the republican organization, the South Dakota Nonpartisan League began its career as an independent political party and went thru the campaign of 1918 labeled as a "farmer-labor" element.

It had a distinctive national viewpoint in 1920, as contrasted with other League states. It sent a delegation of forty people to Chicago that year to participate in the deliberations of the gathering where the Farmer-Labor Party was organized. The influence of this delegation turned the tide in favor of the Fitzpatrick group as against the Committee of Forty-eight during that convention. In the first deliberations of this convention the advanced viewpoint of the South Dakotans was well shown. When asked what they thought about platform, the South Dakota delegation unanimously submitted one plank: "Proportional, Occupational Representation." This knocked the Chicago trade unionists off their pins. They could not take the rough fodder of the South Dakota farmers. The Leaguers, however, stuck to their plank, inserted it in their platform that year and have kept it there. They have advocated it persistently in their publications and on the stump. It is a part of their faith.

"Land for the Users."

The quick transformation of this group of fifty thousand farmers and workers into a Farmer-Labor Party at their convention last December, and the unanimous adoption of the leading planks of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, "land for the users," and a "five-year moratorium for working farmers on their farm mortgage debts" shows the flexibility of this group, its alertness to changing conditions and its grasp of the cold fact that the time is close at hand when class lines in politics will be strictly observed. This places the South Dakota radicals in the lead of the political thought and action of the northwestern states. It is safe to predict that within the next year the struggle in this state will be between the radicals and reactionaries, wiping out old party alignments. It is certain that 1926 will witness this if it does not come this year.

Couzens Dines with Denby, Then Comes Out in His Defense

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—After-dinner government scores again.

Item in society column, Washington Star, Jan. 30: "The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Denby entertained at dinner last evening, when their guests included the Minister of China, Dr. Alfred Sze, . . . Senator and Mrs. James Couzens, . . . Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns," etc.

Item in the Senate, Jan. 30: "Senator Couzens—I did not attempt to determine the exact acts of the Secretary of the Navy. I desired to point out that there was some justification for proceeding along the line on which the Secretary proceeded, but whether to the extent to which he proceeded I have not gone into the testimony sufficiently to determine. What I desired to point out was that, while this campaign of recrimination is going on, Congress itself might take some notice of the manner in which it passed the act."

Couzens is comparatively liberal, but is many times a millionaire. He accepted Denby's hospitality in the midst of the airing by the Senate, which is sitting virtually as a court, of the oil scandal in which Denby is among the men accused of law-breaking. Stearns, his fellow-guest, is the financial backer of President Coolidge, who has been trying to protect Denby and Roosevelt. After dining with these men, Couzens for the first time gets into the debate, and says that Denby may merely have misunderstood the law, and Congress is to blame for not having been more definite in saying what it meant.

And that same day, on the first three roll calls in the Senate's trial of the case, Juror Couzens voted twice with the administration, to weaken the terms of the sentence passed on the acts of Fall and Denby and Roosevelt.

Two Dunne Meetings in Detroit.

COST OF LIVING AT DIZZY HEIGHT, SURVEY SHOWS

Workers Need $1,450 for Barest Existence

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

The upward course of the cost of living has not been checked, according to the December survey of the U. S. bureau of labor statistics. Only the lowest subsistence can be purchased by the average wage earner's family with the present so-called high wages. Health and comfort are beyond the reach of all but a minority even among the better paid mechanics. Hundreds of thousands of unskilled workers cannot hope to provide even bare necessities for a family.

The cost of a wage earner's family budget is today 4 per cent above the level of September, 1922, and 73 per cent above the average of 1913, the bureau's figures show. In many industrial centers the cost of living has increased more rapidly than the average for the country as a whole. Compared with the low point of 1922, wage earners are paying 5 per cent more to meet living expenses in Boston and Detroit, 6 1-2 per cent more in Philadelphia and Scranton, 6 per cent more in Buffalo, 6 1-2 per cent more in Chicago, and 7 per cent more in Cleveland. Such increases are more than enough to cancel apparent increases in wages secured by many groups of workers.

Landlords' Greed Grows.

Increases in rents have been an important factor in the slow but steady encroachment of living costs upon the wage earner's purchasing power. As already pointed out by the Federated Press the government figures are based on average rents paid thruout the country rather than on changes in the cost of such housing as the American worker can afford. These figures show average rents up to 67 per cent since 1913. But other figures also originating in the bureau of labor statistics show that working class rents have increased at least 100 per cent during the ten-year period.

Correction of the increase for the entire budget on the basis of this rent figure would show the cost of living today to be approximately 78 per cent above the pre-war level.

Need $1,450 To Even Exist

With living costs at this level the minimum family budget of the New York factory commission will demand at least $1,450 a year. And experts declare that this budget is low in its provision for food. It makes no pretense at providing comforts. But to provide this low minimum a worker must be assured of 52 weeks steady work at $27.90, or just the average wage of all New York factory employes in December. To provide the minimum comforts of the U. S. department of labor health and decency standard it would be necessary for the annual pay envelope to contain $2,290. And that means steady earnings of $43 a week thruout the year.

Puzzle—Find the industries that pay workers enough so that, in this rich land, their families can enjoy the ordinary comforts of life, not to mention decency and health. And the result—employment of mothers, infant mortality, child labor, the development of a class of physically unfit.

FREE FILIPINOS MEETING HELD HERE FIRST TIME

Rousing Rally for Philippine Freedom

The first mass meeting in the United States for Philippine freedom was held under the auspices of the Workers Party and proved to be an impressive demonstration.

C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, Jose Topacio Nueno, a representative of the farm tenants in the Philippine legislature, and Jay Lovestone, addressed the meeting. Robert Minor, editor of the Liberator, presided.

One of the contracts granting Colonel Procter a cocoanut oil concession in the Philippines was made public for the first time by Jay Lovestone. The meeting unanimously adopted resolutions for Philippine independence from American imperialist domination. At the close of the meeting Mr. Nueno proclaimed his solidarity with the American working men by formally announcing his joining the Workers Party of America.

End Bondage of 11 Million.

Ruthenberg aroused the audience to great enthusiasm when he declared, "The Workers Party of America will do all in its power to end the bondage in which the eleven million Filipinos are now being held by the American capitalist government." Ruthenberg said: "The only way in which the Filipino masses can secure their freedom lies in their allying themselves with the American workers, struggling against the same American imperialists.

"We know that our interests as workers are identical with the interests of the working masses of the Philippines who are the overwhelming majority in the islands. We will make common cause with the Filipino people to win our freedom here in the United States and in the Philippines. As followers of Lenin we are enthusiastically joining in this struggle for the liberation of the Filipinos from the imperialist tyranny now oppressing them."

Mr. Nueno drew great applause when he said that the bulwark of Communism was in his province. Mr. Nueno's eloquence, met with a tremmendous response from his listeners when he declared: "We have revolted against Spanish tyranny and we shall fight all oppression. America has bought the Philippine Islands for twenty million dollars from Spain. Spain had no right to sell a free country. The only way for the United States to redeem itself is to carry out its pledge and give the Filipino people complete freedom. America has proclaimed to the world that she entered the War to fight for the self-determination of nations. Let America now show to the world that she meant what she said and grant us our freedom. The last resort for the Filipino people, before we rise again to fight for our right to exist, is to appeal to the workers of America.

"Your pains are our pains; your sufferings are our sufferings. We have no grievance against the American people but the desire for human liberty is innate in every self-respecting nation. America to-day is on trial; the America of 1776 is no longer today. The world is beginning to believe that the United States is turning imperialistic. Let America free all her colonies, and restore herself.

"The Workers Party of America is helping to free all the people of the world when it fights for Filipino freedom. The America of 1776 was not what the American capitalists and profiteers of today are making of it. The workers of my country still believe that the United States meant what she said when she promised us our freedom. We appeal to the American working masses. We know they alone can compel the politicians in Washington to free us. The Workers Party of America will merit the eternal remembrance and gratitude of the Filipino people."

Hits at Leonard Wood.

Lovestone stated that the Philippines were the gate-way to American Imperialist supremacy in the Far East. He showed that the whole Philippine question was a class question involving the most desperate attempts of American imperialism to dominate the world. Lovestone declared that General Wood, who is the most notorious labor-hater and strikebreaker in the country, was deliberately chosen by the capitalists to govern the Islands, because of his long black record of unfailing service to Wall Street. Wood's attempt to hand over the wealth of the Philippine Islands to American oil, coal and railway magnates was denounced scathingly by Lovestone. He showed that Procter, who had invested $741,000 in Woods' 1920 Presidential Primary campaign was awarded on March 3rd, 1922, the right to organize a huge vegetable oil corporation in the Philippines and that there was organized then a corporation called "The Procter and Gamble Trading Co."

Resolutions Are Adopted.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the audience:

"We, the working men and working women of Chicago, in mass meeting assembled, under the auspices of the Workers Party of America, hereby declare ourselves unequivocally for the complete independence of the "We assure the working masses of Filipino people from the American imperialists. the Philippines of our fullest support in their struggle for National freedom and we call upon Congress to grant the Filipino nation freedom without delay and without dismemberment.

"We demand that Samuel Gompers and the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor call upon congress to grant the Filipino people National freedom without dismembering the islands in any way.

"We urge all the organizations of the working and farming masses in the United States to rally to the cause of freedom of the Filipinos and all other oppressed nationalities."

At the close of the meeting Mr. Nueno proclaimed his solidarity with the American workers, by joining the Workers Party and offering a special resolution endorsing the speech of Commissioner Guevara on the floor of congress and the "Filipino Appeal for Freedom" issued by the Philippine Independence Commission in the United States. This resolution, proposed by the Honorable Nueno; was adopted by acclamation.

THE PARTY AT WORK

Workers Party Begins Campaign for Farmer-Labor Party Convention

Instructions have been sent to all District Organizers, City Central Committees, Language Section Secretaries and Branches of the Workers Party by C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Party, to immediately begin work to build up sentiment for the holding of a National Convention, on May 30th, for nomination of Farmer-Labor Party candidates, and the adoption of a national platform.

The Workers Party has expressed itself very definitely as being opposed to the proposal made by William Mahoney, one of the leaders of the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, to postpone the May 30th Convention until after the conventions of the old parties.

The letter of instructions to units of the Workers Party reads in part as follows:

"You have undoubtedly observed from the Party press than an attempt has been made by the Organization Committee of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, in charge of the calling of the May 30th Convention, to delay this Convention until after the conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties.

"This proposal was made by William Mahoney, one of the leaders of the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, and a member of the Organization Committee, after conferences in Washington with Senators La Follette, Shipstead, Johnson, and others. The fact that this proposal comes after such conferences is an indication of the danger to the farmer-labor movement in postponement of the May 30th Convention.

"Our Party, as well as the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, stands for the organization at the May 30th Convention of a class Farmer-Labor Party. The forces which are behind the proposal for delaying the May 30th Convention are groups which stand for the formation of a Third Party, which will represent the middle class, well-to-do farmers, professional interests, and not the class interests of the exploited farmers and industrial workers.

"Our Party has taken a firm stand against any delay in holding the May 30th Convention, in order to give the leaders of the petty bourgeoisie in Congress an opportunity to decide whether they will support the Farmer-Labor Party or not. These petty bourgeois leaders want to wait till they see what the Republican and Democratic parties do before deciding whether they shall go with a Third party movement.

"Our Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are for the formation of a mass class Farmer-Labor Party on May 30th. We are for the May 30th Convention, whether the petty bourgeois leaders, such as La Follette, Shipstead and Johnson, go with this movement, or remain in the old parties in the national campaign. The workers and exploited farmers have no reason why they should wait for the decisions of the old party convention. Those decisions will be against the workers and exploited farmers, and for the capitalists and employers, irrespective of what particular man is named to head the ticket, or what program is adopted as to the platform of these parties.

"It is our immediate duty to begin a campaign among the workers and exploited farmers for the May 30th Convention, for a class farmer-labor party, and against the leadership of the La Follettes, Johnsons and Shipsteads. We must stir up the labor movement to an understanding of the issues involved in the question of delaying the May 30th Convention.

"The Party units and Party membership are instructed to at once intensify the agitation in favor of a Farmer-Labor Party. In addition to the campaign of endorsement of the May 30th Convention and against delay, all Party units and Party members are instructed to intensify their agitation in favor of a mass Farmer-Labor Party. In carrying this agitation, the difference between a Third Party, representing the interests of the middle class and well-to-do farmers, and a class Farmer-Labor Party must be explained. The campaign for the Farmer-Labor Party is the greatest issue of our Party. All our forces must be thrown into this compaign at once, or there is danger that the work which we have done thus far for the formation of a mass Farmer-Labor Party will be dissipated. Our slogans should be: "FOR THE MAY 30TH CONVENTION" and "FOR A CLASS FARMER-LABOR PARTY."

"The Federated Farmer-Labor Party today is the nucleus of a class Farmer-Labor Party. The work of building up and strengthening the Federated Farmer-Labor Party as a party will materially aid in the fight to bring out of the May 30th Convention a class Farmer-Labor Party in place of a Third party. All Party units are directed to survey the possibilities in their territory of assisting in the organization of branches.

Trachtenberg Lecture Tour

The National Office of the Workers Party is arranging a lecture tour in the eastern and middle western states for Alexander Trachtenberg who has just returned to this country after a fourteen months' trip to Europe.

Comrade Trachtenberg was one of the delegates of the Workers Party to the Fourth Congress of the Communist International. He spent five months in Russia and had an exceptional opportunity while there to come into closest contact with the activities of the Soviet Government and the Communist Party. Besides attending the Fourth Congress of the Communist International, he was also present at the meeting of the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Twelfth Congress of the Communist Party of Russia, the Constituent Meeting of the Central Executive Committees of the various Soviet Governments which formed the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, and the Congresses of various Russian Labor Unions.

Comrade Trachtenberg also visited Checho-Slovakia, Germany, France and Austria, and came into intimate contact with the Communist Parties and labor movements in these countries. He was in Saxony during the existence of the Socialist-Communist Coalition Government. He also had the opportunity of attending the enlarged sessions of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Germany and kept in touch with the German Party thruout the stormy days of October and November, when the Party was driven underground.

The subject of Comrade Trachtenberg's lecture will be "The International Communist Movement" and his tour is a part of the comprehensive educational program which the Central Executive Committee will undertake to put into operation during the year 1924. Comrade Trachtenberg is an excellent speaker and it is expected that his tour will be a success from every standpoint.

Comrade Trachtenberg's dates are now being assigned. All Party units desiring to have the lecture by him should notify the National Office without delay.

FIGHT HOLD-UP OF JOB HUNTERS IN WISCONSIN

Employment Shark Is Fought Successfully

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Exploitation of job seekers by private employment agencies doesn't go in Wisconsin, according to the December report of the state industrial commission. The private employment agency law discourages the harpies of the industrial world from establishing offices in the state and the public employment offices make their service unnecessary.

Last year the public employment offices placed 123,269 applicants at a total cost of $59,653. For placing the same number of applicants in similar positions private agencies would have charged fees totaling $404,770 or nearly seven times as much. The average cost of placing applicants on the free public agency basis was therefore only 48.4 cents in place of the $3.28 average fee which would have been exacted by the private agencies.

Exorbitant Fees Evil

The time was, says the report, when private employment agencies required endless correction by the state. The private employment agency law of 1913 and the rules applying to licensed employment agencies cover abuses such as these: (a) misrepresentation of employment offered, (b) agencies splitting fees with employers or shop foreman to whom labor is furnished, (c) applicants sent to places of bad repute and (d) exorbitant fees.

During the past three and a half years the industrial commission has received 37 requests for private employment agency licenses. But upon being furnished with information as to the conditions of the law to which they would be forced to conform all but three of the applicants dropped their applications. Two of the remaining three withdrew before the findings of the commission were announced and the other was denied a license.

Wisconsin considers an employment agency as an enterprise of a public utility nature. It puts upon the applicant for a license the burden of proving that the existing employment office services are not adequate to meet the needs of employes and employers. To quote the report of the commission: "Much as a city finds no advantage in being served by two telephone systems instead of by one, so a multiplicity of private employment agencies could not benefit communities or the state."

Tool of Scab Employers

Private employment agencies have always been a tool of the anti-union employer. They have been a means to discrimination and the recruiting of strikebreakers.

The free employment offices established by the U. S. department of labor during the war were resented by employers as hindering their war on organized labor and were knifed as soon as possible after the armistice.

The experience in Wisconsin in more recent years indicates that in this field private initiative and protection of the worker looking for a job are not compatible.

Lenin Is Dead

By R. D. Cramer, in The Minneapolis Labor Review.

LENIN is dead.

Not since the passing of Abraham Lincoln has sorrow come to so many humble homes in so many lands as the news that death at last has brought down this mighty figure whom all the desperate forces of world capitalism had failed to conquer.

In Lincoln the toilers saw the emancipator of the chattel slaves. In Lenin they beheld the man who most successfully led the way along the rough and trying road toward the freeing of all from the slavery of capitalism.

He was loved and admired by the workers of Russia and the class conscious workers of all the world. For him the peasants of Russia, their lives for the first time brightened by the opportunity of education, felt an affection and admiration which found expression in the name by which they called him, Papa Lenin.

In the trying days of establishing the Soviet government, when he worked in cold rooms and lived on scanty food, they trudged miles thru the deep snows to bring him wood and food. They did not want Lenin to be cold or hungry.

And when things sometimes went amiss in governmental affairs, the peasants always said, "Lenin will straighten it out."

And now Lenin is dead. A worker and a teacher he has done his work well.

Russia rising out of the perplexities of reconstruction strong and sturdy, while other nations that denied the soundness of his doctrine, sink deeper and deeper into the mire of their contradictions until their civilization is on the verge of dissolution bear witness that Lenin, cursed and berated by the seers and philosophers of capitalism, was fundamentally right.

Today because of the movement in which he played so prominent a part, despite the fact that he is dead, there is more of security and hope for the masses of Russia than they have known for centuries.

Lenin was a fighter, a destroyer. Also he was a constructor and an advocate of world peace. He saw the way to the end and did not hesitate to follow it, to the overthrow of capitalism.

But he was also an interpreter of Marxian socialism. Events in Russia have proven his interpretation correct.

He differed with those socialist savants who from their easy chairs led the workers of many lands to believe that it was the teaching of Marx that the ballot box alone would suffice for the complete emancipation and salvation of the workers. He taught the true Marxian doctrine that the workers must ever be ready to defend the conquests by the ballot against the armed attacks of a politically defeated, armed capitalist minority.

Events in Finland, Germany, the Mexican revolt and the reported assassination of the socialist governor of Yucatan, Felippe Carrillo, affirm the correctness of his contention.

Lenin not only stated the solution of the problem. He demonstrated it.

He pointed out the way clear and distinct to the masses who had become confused and discouraged thru the false interpretation of Marx.

Soviet Russia does not die with Lenin. It is not impossible that his passing may cause some confusion. But so well has he taught, and organized and demonstrated that Soviet Russia will meet and conquer the crisis of his death as it overcame the famine and the counter-revolution.

From his hands other leaders, and the loyal organization which he inspired and thrilled, will take the burden of continuing the progress of the workers and peasants. Following the course he has charted they will sweep on to new victories and new accomplishments.

On the stock exchanges, in the offices of international financing corporations, and the inner chambers of great industrial corporations there will be that rejoicing that comes to the leaders of an army when a brave and brilliant spirit in command of the opposing forces dies or is killed.

But in the homes of the peasants along the steppes and prairies of Russia, out into Siberia, in the working class quarters of far away Japan and China, among the oppressed toilers of India, among the boatmen on the Nile, down in the coal mines where the miners toil, wherever men and women work there will be a sadness that comes only when death claims one whom they have felt always has had the hand of friendship on their shoulder, encouraging and urging them to end forever the oppression and misery of exploitation.

Lenin is dead.

Jap Government Faces Defeat in New Elections

TOKIO, Feb. 1.—A general election in which the government faces almost certain defeat was made necessary by yesterday's dissolution of the diet.

Further serious disturbances are feared by politicians at Tokio.

Dissolution of the diet had been expected for tomorrow, when the three opposition parties were to demand a vote of lack of confidence in Premier Kiyoura and his ministry. But it came suddenly Thursday afternoon. The government, fearing that the high tension would cause more serious disturbances.

"RED" IS COLOR OF LIFE, WATT TELLS MINERS

Only the "Reds" Give Hope for Future

By ANTONIO PRESI
(Editor, Alba Nuova.)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The eighteen hundred delegates attending the convention of the United Mine Workers of America here represent a tremendous power—a half million workers in the great coal industry. The miners are the granite columns upon which the modern world stands. They are the giants of this epoch. They supply the basic energy and force for this machine age.

The miners of America are brilliant and courageous fighters, men who can resist and fight harder than any other group of workers. They are men who can, and do, abandon their homes and take to the hills for weeks and months while on strike.

The men here from the mines can speak. They can tell of their struggles, and they do. One of the delegates, Watt, a miner from Illinois, told the convention that they should prepare for greater things. "Do not be afraid if they call you 'red.' Red is a beautiful color, it is an inspiring color. It is a color that suggests life, hope," he said. "History remembers the 'reds,' it forgets the 'yellows.'"

John L. Lewis is a defender and friend of the "yellows." Poor John L. he hates, but it is the fighters he hates. John is like a mad turkey or bull; he hates red. It is too bad, for John.

The red roses will not stop their blooming at the bark of this great man. It is a pity.

Miners! do not be afraid of the "reds"; the yellows are the ones to watch. They who are friendly to our enemies, the bosses. They hate the workers who went to jail for their defense of their class. They are the friends of the plutes.

Miners! do not be afraid of the future.

RISTOCRAT SEES STARVATION AS ERMAN MENACE

Wants American Gold to Save System

"We preferred a depreciated currency to a Bolshevist Germany," a high official of the German bourgeois republic told Count Harry Kessler, who in this way explained the present collapse of capitalist Germany at a lecture delivered at the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association dining room.

The German count, former ambassador to Poland, recommended the establishment of a gold bank and is confident that if three hundred to five hundred million gold marks can be obtained by Germany as a loan from abroad, that the German bourgeois can be induced to dig out of hiding a like amount and deposit it in the proposed gold bank, which could then issue a gold based currency for three times the amount of gold on hand.

"But," the Count said, "the plan depends on balancing the German budget before the gold bank is established. Further inflation may make impossible the establishment of the gold bank.

Employes Dismissed.

"Heroic measures have been made to balance the budget. Great numbers of employes have been dismissed and salaries have been cut to the point of starvation. Railroad workers now get wages amounting to $120 a year. And expenses are as great in Germany as in America. A cabinet minister gets 12,000 gold marks per year, which is about—something less than $3,000 for a cabinet minister to live on.

"The condition of the working people is simply terrible, of course. Four million are totally unemployed, besides many partially employed. This is a terrible state of affairs as far as the working class is concerned. They get, you know, 25 or 30 cents a day and can't live on it. They starve on it. This is of course extremely dangerous socially. We must allow German industry to get on another basis.

"In Germany all working capital has simply disappeared. Of course the plant remained, and has even been increased."

Count Kessler went on to criticise in very mild and polite terms the cynical and deliberate efforts of Poincare to destroy Germany economically. To the evident astonishment of the audience he said, "I believe it is necessary for Germany to pay reparations,"—a statement which brought out a reply from a member of the audience who asked why Germany should pay reparations in a war that was totally imperialistic on both sides.

Stock Presents His Favorite Composer at Orchestra Hall

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Anton Bruckner's ninth symphony was played at the sixteenth concert of the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Orchestra Hall last Friday and Saturday. Frederick Stock once declared that Bruckner is his favorite composer, and so, when Stock's orchestra plays Bruckner, as it does most infrequently, we sit up and take especial notice.

There is much resemblance between the lives of Anton Bruckner and Cesar Franck, whose symphony was played last week. Both were religious mystics, both were medieval god lovers transplanted to a modern age, and living in a modern metropolitan city. But here the resemblance ends. Franck's music is intensely subjective, the subdued sorrows of a gentle man. Bruckner, on the other hand, judging by his ninth symphony, was markedly and unmistakably influenced by Wagner, and, Wagner-like, his music is planned on a vast scale, suggestive of gods and heroes, and the making of worlds.

The program opened with two works of Bach, the third Brandenburg concerto for string orchestra, and an arrangement of a chorale from his "St. Matthew Passion" for the same instruments. These are among the least poisonous of the rotated monstrosities of this musical mathematician. The concerto sounds like a series of meaningless technical exercises, but the chorale is a real inspiration. It is slow and quiet, like the peace of some great landscape.

Carl Friedberg was the soloist, and he played the Beethoven fifth concerto for piano. Friedberg is a small, elderly man, possessed of all the technical brilliance desirable, with the addition of the mellow warmth of his age. The concerto consists of musical pinwheels and Roman candles, contrasted with a calm, meditative slow movement.

Next week a most interesting program is scheduled. Sophie Braslau, the contralto, will sing a group of songs by Mousorgski, an aria from Wagner's "Rienzi," and the vocal part of the Dante symphony of Granados. Another piece of music inspired by Dante, Chaykovski's fantasia "Francesca da Rimini," will be played, and an Indian rhapsody by Carl Busch and an overture by Gluck.

St. Louis Typos Get Increase.

ST. LOUIS.—Approximately 1,800 printers, members of Typographical Union No. 8, will benefit by a 5 per cent increase of wages negotiated with the St. Louis employers. The original demand was for a 10 per cent raise, but a compromise was accepted and ratified by the membership.

Idaho Federation of Labor Gets on the Militant Map

Written for The Daily Worker by WILLIAM ALLEN.

The Idaho State Federation of Labor held its ninth yearly convention in Pocatello, Jan. 14-15-16.

After the convention had been formally opened, Mayor C. B. Ross, in a speech in which he pointed out the need for the workers to stick together, bid the delegates welcome. He showed statistics that the farmers are exploited just as much as the industrial workers and that these two groups therefore ought to cooperate. Only by intelligent actions of the workers and farmers can anything be gained.

R. H. Park, Boise, Idaho was elected as chairman for the convention. About twenty motions of varying degrees of importance had been submitted to the convention. The most important of these were adopted as follows:

Government ownership of railroads, repeal of the Federal Reserve Bank law, recall of judicial decisions, recognition of Soviet Russia, amalgamation of trade unions, for a Labor Party, against the Idaho Criminal Syndicalism law.

Recognition of Soviet Russia.

The resolutions asking that the United States recognize Soviet Russia, organization of all the unorganized and for the repeal of the Idaho Anti-Syndicalist law were adopted unanimously.

Government ownership of railroads was endorsed.

Therefore, Be it resolved that the Idaho State Federation of Labor in Convention assembled pledge all of its influence and power to the end that the people may recover the instruments of Government and apply said Government to the well being of all the one hundred and ten million citizens.

And, Be it further resolved, that we, the Delegates to the Ninth Annual Convention assembled, do reaffirm our belief in the Government ownership of all railways within the borders of the United States, and that we will use every opportunity for the furtherance of that idea.

And, Be it further resolved, that the legislative committee be instructed to pledge all nominees for congress; and the Federation report to all affiliated bodies the results of such action.

Amalgamation.

This resolution was reported by the organization committee who recommended that it be tabled. The committee consisted of Wm. Allen, Pressmen's Union No. 230, Boise; L. R. Harper, Cooks and Waiters Union No. 510, Pocatello, and Wm. Harr, Labor Union, Pocatello.

Delegates Parson tried with the largest possible number of words to say as little as possible and declared that he was opposed to amalgamation. If Gompers had been present and heard his meaningless expressions he would have felt ashamed of his lieutenant.

A. Rosquist, C. I. Card and C. F. W. Donicht from Pocatello, who during the whole convention were at the extreme left, did not have much trouble in killing the arguments of brother Parson. The motion was adopted by a large majority.

Open the Prison Doors.

The following letter was adopted to be sent to Governor C. C. Moore and to the Pardon Board:

We, the Idaho State Federation of Labor, assembled in convention on this 16th day of January, 1924, most respectfully apply to your honorable body to favorably consider the release from the Idaho State Penitentiary of the following men convicted under the Criminal Syndicalist Law:

A. S. Embree,
H. F. Herd,
R. Quackenbush.

These men have already served long sentences for acts, the criminality of which has often been disputed by some of the brightest minds and the most true citizens of this country.

Permit us to quote here from the Congressional Records of the United States, part of a speech delivered before the House of Representatives on the 11th day of December, 1922, by Representative George Huddleston of Alabama.

Let us say at this point it is no crime under the laws of the United States for a man to be an I. W. W., a communist, an atheist, or to hold to any other belief, no matter how wild and subversive it may be, nor is it a crime for men to belong to an organization no matter what purpose it may have. Our laws are aimed at men's actions, not at a frame of mind, or a belief. Men may be convicted as criminals only for deeds and not for thoughts. It is no more a crime to be a communist than to be a Mormon or an agnostic. It is only when a man is guilty of some overt act or of conspiracy coupled with an overt act that he violates the law.

The Idaho State Federation of Labor has nothing to say in approval of the methods or ideals of the Industrial Workers of the World, nor do we in any sense condone any such acts of individuals of that organization, which are contrary to the laws of the State of Idaho or in any way detrimental to the best interest of our State or Federal Government.

When we, this convention of the most representative organized labor body of your State, most respectfully come before your honorable body to plead for the freedom of A. S. Embree, H. E. Herd and R. Quackenbush, each one of whom has already served his minimum sentence, we do so only because we feel that the solution of the great problem of our age might better be served in a spirit of forgiveness; because we feel now that peace reigns in our land, that the great principles for which our fathers so heroically fought would only be strengthened by the release of these men.

Labor Party.

This motion gave rise to a prolonged discussion. President Park, who at the opening of the convention had extended personal thanks to the Mayor for his excellent speech, stating as follows:

"As presiding officer of the Convention, I thank you for your kindly welcome and interesting talk. As presiding officer of several previous Conventions it has never been my pleasure to hear a more instructive and comprehensive address from a public official."

Park is a member of the Typographical Union in Boise—in this organization half of the members are democrats and the other half Republican.

The delegate from the Pocatello Labor Union, which has gone on record in favor of a Labor Party, tried to kill it with the remark that it was not worth a cent. He preferred the statements of Park instead of a Labor Party.

A resolution was adopted pledging support to Union Restaurants. A resolution of sympathy with the Burke Miners Union No. 10 was carried unanimously. The following was adopted to be sent to all labor organizations and publications in Idaho:

Defeat the Governor.

"The Governor, C. C. Moore, in his remarks delivered at Haily last Armistice Day as set forth in the Idaho Daily Statesman of Nov. 12, 1923, which statements were never publicly denied by him, the Governor, and are therefore assumed to be correct, did express himself as being opposed to the afore mentioned measures and thereby indirectly gave the inference that the people of the various states and the nation were incompetent to manage their own affairs and that such affairs should be left to the management of the corporate interests, that Idaho senators to the U. S. senate should be appointed from the Owyhee hotel instead of being elected by the people; that the people should have no right to say what laws they desired and in general declared himself as being ultra reactionary, and

Whereas, this is the age of progress and not ancestor worship;

Now, Be it resolved that the Idaho State Federation of Labor in convention assembled that should Mr. C. C. Moore announce himself as a candidate for re-election at the next general election that his election be opposed by organized labor and all honorable means be used to secure his defeat."

T. W. Parson has felt very much offended since the convention; it did not help him to try and scare the delegates with the bolshevist ghost, and he was off in his calculations when he tried it in Pocatello.

Thanks to the propaganda that has been carried on here during the last year, and thanks to the reactionary stand taken by Mr. Gompers in Portland, Oregon, and not the least on account of the clear understanding and presentation of proofs this convention and its decisions stand out as the most important Labor Convention in Idaho for many years.

If we look backward to the past few years we have no reason to feel despondent. But if we look forward and notice how much is yet left to be done, then it becomes treason against the present and the future if we do not set every ounce of our energy in motion to win a human existence for the working class.

Newspapers to Be Given Same Service as First-Class Mail

As a result of several months of investigation and study by experts of the Post Office Department, Postmaster General New has issued the first definite, concise and complete program that has ever been put out by the department for the mailing, transmission and delivery of newspapers.

This order is most important and far reaching in its effect. It gives the same expedition to newspapers as is accorded to first-class mail and specifically states that newspapers, as interpreted by the order, are publication which are commonly and popularly understood to be newspapers of which the leading and major feature is the dissemination of timely news of interest to the general public, whether published daily or weekly.

BRITISH SUCCESS BOOMS PLAN FOR CANADIAN PARTY

Labor Visions Self in Power at Ottawa

OTTAWA. — The British Labor Party's rise to power has stiffened the sentiment for independent political action by Canadian labor. Unionists, who have been imitating the Gomper's policy of playing with the old parties, are talking of forming a unified labor party, for the purpose of seizing the reins of government in the dominion.

Canadian labor has officially declared for the labor party idea—several years ago at the sessions of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, which gave its official consent to the formation of a labor party under its auspices.

It was hoped by the labor party advocates at that time that a movement would gather in the political movements in the labor and radical movement, but success did not come as expected. Several provinces had an Independent Labor party, similar to that which Ramsay MacDonald has been connected with in England, but the movement was not of a national character.

More recently the Workers Party of Canada has been carrying on an active campaign for a united political front, and the formation of a labor party. The success of the British Labor Party has tremendously strengthened the movement for unity.

Tom Moore, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor congress, a labor leader generally regarded as conservative, said, regarding the effect of the British Labor Party success on Canadian labor affairs:

"The workers here will realize that, in a labor government the expression of opinion of organized labor in Canada will naturally receive much more consideration than with any other government in matters of empire policy, such as emigration from Great Britain."

Says Daily Worker Reports on Miners' Convention Valuable

To the DAILY WORKER: The reports carried by the DAILY WORKER on the proceedings of the convention of the U. M. W. A. are indeed a valuable contribution to the enlightenment of the members of that organization.

I noted with interest the complaint made by John L. Lewis, that labor papers oftentimes attack him more severely than do the capitalist papers. To some delegates this may appear to be a serious indictment of these labor papers. I am confident tho that the number of such delegates is not larger than the number of those who are on the payroll of the union by grace of John Lewis.

I had occasion several days ago to discuss this question with an official of a local union in this region. This man was on a balloting committee at the time of the recent election for District President, and relates the following interesting story:

"When the ballots had all been cast in my local union, I proceeded to a tabulation of the vote. Immediately one of the men on the committee told me not to bother about making a count, but to throw the entire vote to Brennan. This I refused to do. In the face of this refusal, the other members of the committee were compelled to go thru with the count, and we found an overwhelming majority for Cappellini.

"I had no sooner arrived home, after filling out my report, when I heard a knock at my door, and when I opened it, was much surprised to find the late visitor (it was then after 12 a. m.) to be no other than the superintendent of the mine in which I am employed.

"The superintendent lost no time in making his mission known. He had heard that our local had given a majority to Cappellini and insisted that I revise my report so that it would favor Brennan. To my argument that it would not do to change my report, as the other members of the committee had a similar report made, and that having but one report blank, there was no way in which I could hide erasures. He assured me that the other members of the committee were "all right," and produced from his pocket a number of blank reports.

"Under the circumstances, I had no alternative—if I wished to keep my job—but to sign the report he made out. Knowing that he could have obtained the blank reports only by the consent of Brennan, I realized how foolish it would be to seek redress from the district officers of my union. I therefore signed the report and notified Enoch Williams on the following day."

"Now," my informant concluded, "if capitalists will get out in the middle of the night, to steal votes for labor leaders who serve them and betray the workers, is it any wonder if their press lends itself to the same kind of 'Labor Leaders.'"

Perhaps the above will help to explain why the press that honestly serves the interests of the workers, wages war against the labor leaders who are so praised in the capitalist press.—Herbert Benjamin, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Protect the Foreign Born!

Charge the I. W. W. Packed Audience at College Debate

By CARL BRANNIN
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

BERKELEY, Cal.—Radicals of the Bay district are having a good laugh over the report in local newspapers that the "I. W. W. vote in the audience was responsible for the defeat of the negative" in the inter-collegiate debate here on the question, "Resolved that the criminal syndicalist law should be repealed." The vote, as announced by the chairman at the conclusion of the contest between the University of California (affirmative) and the University of Southern California (negative) was 300 for the affirmative and 345 for the negative. The papers reversed the figures. There were about 500 present who did not vote at all. Since a majority of those present were either professors and instructors (with jobs at stake) or students (with class fees or tuition paid in advance) the verdict is understandable.

One explanation advanced for the "boner" pulled by the press was that the reporters assigned to the job were so nauseated by the buncombe presented by the negative as argument that they could not stay until the finish, and left, assuming that the verdict would be for the affirmative. Another is that the press was so anxious to make out a case against the I. W. W. on the charge of "tampering with the jury," because a number of "wobblies" handed literature to people as they came to the debate, that it was not deemed necessary for the reporters to stay for the discussion. They already had a "good story."

The decision was in contrast to the San Francisco inter-high school debate, which resulted in a victory for the team advocating the repeal of the criminal syndicalism act. The team from the University of Southern California, which is located in Los Angeles, was supplied with "information" from the Better America Federation, and several of its members were said to be members of the B. A. F.

Colleges Debate Syndicalism Law.

By MIRIAM ALLEN deFORD
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

PALO ALTO, Cal.—The second of the triangular debates between the University of Southern California, with the repeal of the criminal syndicalism law as their topic, resulted in a victory for Stanford, which took the positive side of the debate, advocating the law's repeal. The first debate gave a decision for U. S. C., opposing the repeal. The two victorious teams will now meet at Los Angeles for the final debate. Each university has one team on each side of the question.

"The law is discriminatory," said Thomas Bailey, opening for Stanford, "because it singles out political opinion in its attempts at suppression. Jefferson, Lincoln and Wilson could be sent to prison under this law for their public statements."

That the debaters do not express a general liberal attitude at Standford, however, is evinced by the recent founding there of a unit of the Ku Klux Klan, 35 strong, established by an engineering student from Texas. President Wilbur says the kluxers will not be interfered with "as long as they do not violate any of the university's traditions."

Boston Runs Relief Meeting.

BOSTON, Mass.—An enthusiastic meeting was held in Tremont Temple as the opening of the campaign for German relief conducted by the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany. Two reels of motion pictures showed the contrasting conditions in the two countries.

The views of Russia's reconstruction were greeted with great applause while the pictures of German misery resulted in a collection of $103.85. William F. Kruse, who took the pictures, gave an interesting lecture loaded with facts on Germany's misery and Russia's rebuilding.

A meeting for Russian Recognition was to be held in the same hall, Feb. 3. At a recent Lenin memorial meeting there was an attendance of 1200 with several hundred more turned away.

Richmond Goes to Vera Cruz.

WASHINGTON. — The cruiser Richmond has been ordered from Galveston to Vera Cruz to relieve the Omaha and six destroyers sent there when de la Huerta Fascisti blockaded the port, the state department has announced.

The Richmond will serve as a refuge for Americans driven out by the fighting between Obregon and de la Huerta, which is reported nearing Vera Cruz. It will also look after the American interests menaced in the conflict.

Moonshine Is Blamed.

Temporary insanity brought on by moonshine liquor was given by police today as the cause for a double killing at the home of Herman Rentsch.

In the presence of their two children Rentsch shot his wife and turned the weapon on himself.

The children told police Rentsch apparently intended to kill them for he searched for them after they hid under a bed following the death of their mother.

LUMBER LORDS URGE CANADA TO OUTLAW STRIKE

30-Day Walkout Hurting B. C. Companies

CALGARY, Alberta.—The strike of loggers which has tied up the lumber industry of the eastern district of British Columbia for a month was almost the sole topic of discussion at the two days' meet of the Rocky Mountain Lumber Men's Association in Calgary. Appeals have been sent to the prime minister of Canada and to the ministers of justice and labor to enact special legislation outlawing the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union, associated with the Industrial Workers of the World, which is conducting the strike for the 8-hour day.

The greatest employers' distress is found among the small operators, who must get their timber out over the frozen roads before the thaw or wait another year. These smaller operators are pressing for quick settlement. It is the larger concerns, that have their own logging railroads, who are demanding continuance of the fight.

Minister Visits Strike Zone.

CRANBROOK, B. C.—The Minister of Labor of the Province of British Columbia visited the strike zone and urged operators to settle the strike which promises to continue for a long time. One thousand men are now taking their subsistence from the strike committee and thousands of others are being supported from their own savings or by friends.

Twenty-eight strike breakers stopped by pickets turned out to be aliens picked up from a Winnipeg bread line by authorities there and threatened with deportation unless they scabbed.

Pickets of the One Big Union in Winnipeg are now preventing shipment of strikebreakers.

Raises Bugaboo of Invasion.

WASHINGTON.—The oil storage construction at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, resulting from the oil reserve leases relieved the Pacific Coast from the threat of invasion, Rear Admiral J. K. Robinson testified before the house naval affairs committee today.

Robinson said the war plans of the navy depended on oil reserves at Honolulu and that without such reserves the Pacific Coast was open to invasion.

Where Brother Lewis Failed

Said John L. Lewis to an Associated Press correspondent after the United Mine Workers' convention:

> "The complete rout of the radical influence demonstrates that the overwhelming majority of the membership of the United Mine Workers organization believe in constructive progress thru the instrumentality of orderly procedure."

Leaving for a moment the debatable question of the "complete rout of the radical influence" we wish to call attention to the monumental gall of Brother Lewis. It is quite probable that the majority of the miners do believe in "constructive progress thru the instrumentality of orderly procedure" but that is the one thing they do not get from the Lewis administration and did not get at the Indianapolis convention.

The actions of Lewis and his henchmen at Indianapolis demonstrated—to use a favorite word of John L.—that the machine is absolutely unable to lead the membership of the United Mine Workers but has to depend for its lease on power upon the most open and shameless violation of every democratic principle in the organization.

Even with the army of paid organizers, its control of the organization press, the economic pressure it can put upon those who challenged it, the Lewis machine could not muster a majority vote on matters on which the membership were thoroly informed such as the Howat case, the basis of representation of local unions to the convention, etc.

Had the Lewis machine not arbitrarily disregarded majority votes on these questions it would not be in control of the organization today.

Constructive progress? Orderly procedure? These terms, coming from the lips of Brother Lewis will sound a little queer to the majority of the delgates who know that on the Howat case none but the payrollites voted for the machine and that Lewis, despite his strong-arm squad and his dozens of able speakers did not dare let Howat have a fair hearing.

If one thing is certain it is that if Lewis had had to depend on orderly procedure in Indianapolis the radicals would have captured the convention with very little trouble. The majority of delegates were not with the machine, the majority of delegates voted against the machine and the "orderly procedure" of Brother Lewis consisted of ignoring this fact in a manner that astonished and disgusted even the cynical capitalist press correspondents.

As far as the Progressive Miners International Committee in concerned Brother Lewis played right into their hands.

Whenever any privileged regime is forced, under the pressure of those whom it rules, to abandon openly all pretense of adherence to lemocratic principles, that regime is doomed. The length of the period for which it will con- inue to hold power is conditioned only upon he extent to which the rank and file take ad- ntage of the new situation and organize the rces of discontent that the tyranny of the lers have let loose.

Lewis is a demagogue and for a while he led because of his ability to play upon the rejudices of the membership. The difference between a demagogue and a tyrant is slight nd Lewis soon was forced to become a tyrant. a tyrant over his little domain he ruled at dianapolis but the weakness of his position ced him to go to lengths that have brought revolt.

The rank and file of the delegates understand etter than ever before the necessity of organ- ation and thanks to Brother Lewis the left ing in the United Mine Workers is now some- ing more than a nucleus.

It now is a broad movement embracing all e honest, militant and intelligent delegates— me 1187 according to the post-convenion re- istration—and the thousands of the rank and who have confidence in them.

Brother Lewis is not a clever labor politician. A good one suppresses the membership and ill keeps it satisfied, prevents any organized content.

The failure of Brother Lewis to do this at ianapolis can be taken as indicating that onstructive progress" will take place in the nited Mine Workers "thru the instrumentality orderly procedure" but that in two or three ars—perhaps in less time—it will not be rother Lewis who will be its director.

If anyone in the good old U. S. A. has use for complaint it is the oil company pro- ters who were sentenced to prison for stock e frauds before the Teapot scandal broke. ir more resourceful competitors in the binet are still at large.

Wilson, Morgan's War Lord

Death was not kind to Woodrow Wilson. It waited until the respect of millions had turned to hatred, until his fame had become infamy, until the brilliant, altho superficial mind, had become only a reservoir of personal hates and perjudices.

Woodrow Wilson perpetrated the greatest betrayal of the American people for which one man could be held responsible. He plunged this nation into a war that had not even the nationalistic justification of acquiring more territory for expansion. He did this horrible thing four months after he had been elected on a pacifist platform and he did it because he had become the abject tool of the finance-capitalists—the House of Morgan and its allies and subsidiaries.

Elected because he was thought to be a liberal—the liberals still think so—he and his administration abrogated every hard-won privilege of the American people; free speech, free press and free assembly became a myth.

He seduced and subsidized, terrorized and coerced, into the service of American capitalism, every weakling in the liberal and labor ranks. He turned the American trade union movement into a gigantic heresy hunting organization and made it an instrument for the support of the greedy and murderous militarists and profit-mongers.

He and his administration gave the United States conscription for foreign aggression, food-restrictions for the benefit of food profiteers, an army of spies and agent-provocateurs to prey upon the working-class and political prisoners to fill the jails and penitentiaries.

He could make war but he could not make peace—because his masters did not want peace without profit. He left America in triumph and returned in disgrace—a babbling fool with feeble excuses on his lips.

He made war on the Russian people without scruple and under the guise of friendship.

He sent more than one worker's son to death in Siberia that the Czar's loans might be saved for Wall Street.

Woodrow Wilson's venomous sputterings diverted the populace for a while and then he was forgotten until death, tired of the cruel game it had played, stretched out its hand and took him.

Wilson will sleep in the same clay that clasps the bodies of the thousands of workers who died for lies he told, for the high-sounding slogans he voiced with his tongue in his cheek, and he will be mourned less than the most humble of them.

If Woodrow Wilson is buried by those whom he served, his coffin will be furnished by the House of Morgan and on its lid should be the dollar sign with a vulture tearing at the body of an American worker in the uniform of the national army that made the world safe for the blackest section of the American capitalist class.

We doubt if even those who owned him will mourn him.

Our Aristocratic Navy

Much capital has been made by the defenders of pure American democracy of the supposed fact that in the United States there is no military caste.

Recent events in the development of American militarism have been knocking the bottom out of this supposition. But the most damaging blow yet struck at this unfounded contention has been delivered by the state of affairs in the navy.

An analysis of desertions from the navy in the period of July 1, 1922, to November 30, 1923, shows that more than 80 per cent of the deserters are from the enlisted men constituting the rank and file of the navy. It is a well known fact that many workers and farmers were talked into joining the navy as a means of helping themselves out of their daily grind. The fact that less than 10 per cent of the deserters are from the petty officer class and their superiors and almost 90 per cent from the rank and file affords indisputable proof that the United States Navy, like all other navies, controlled by capitalist governments, is organized along lines definitely calculated to cater to and develop an employing class ruling personnel. These figures bring out in bold relief the fact that the workers joining the navy are given poorer treatment than the members of the employing class. In this fashion a definite aristocratic capitalist naval clique is being built up.

No one need be astounded at this condition. The present condition in the United States Army and Navy flows out of the class relationships existing in the country. It is distinctly to the interests of the employing class to build up a militarist and navalist caste. The navy desertion figures prove beyond a doubt that the American capitalists are successfully building up such a caste against the workers.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt, speaking in Kansas City the other night, stated that his brother Quentin had "probably been killed because his airplane was a bad airplane" and advanced this as an argument for preparedness.

Whatever the faults of the Roosevelt tribe may be superfluous modesty is evidently not one of them. Most Americans will, we believe, feel somewhat coldly toward the Roosevelt demand that we should have the most up-to-date fighting machinery available for the protection of that office-holding family.

Looks Just Like the Burden of America's Workers.

Righteous Indigantion

By J. O. BENTALL

A wave of righteous indignation such as has not rolled forth upon the shores of sinful civilization since the days of the proposed stoning of the woman brought before Jesus charged with allowing degraded men to defile her body, is whipped against the rocks of respectability by the tempestuous New York press, with the dignified hypocrisy of a fundamentalist bishop or the injured innocence of the infuriated High Priest Kaiphas.

The "Times" is wounded.

"The World" is grieved.

The "Globe and Sun" is hiding in the shadows of shame and disgrace.

The "Journal" and "American" go limping about with a broken heart.

"The public morals of it!" mourns the "Times" above a cluster of editorial penitences.

All because the thieves in high places in our glorious government plundered the people by giving away the Tea Pot Dome to the Sinclair Oil Company for a song—that turned into a howl.

Because the thieves did this ugly job? Not at all. But because they were found out—or rather because they fell out.

It is a sorry tale. Not that it is unlike other tales of pirates, except that it has been told, as most tales are not.

Secretary of the Interior Arthur B. Fall, while in the Harding cabinet simply gave away one of the richest oil lands in the country to a fellow by the name of Harry F. Sinclair. In return for the favor Sinclair gave Fall some hundred thousand dollars, which was cheap. Pinhead members of the capitalist game would not keep their mouths shut about this particular piece of plunder, or nothing would have been said. The whole transaction was in keeping with the entire program of the officials at Washington, and in no way unusual. In fact, it is a very small matter when looked upon in the light of other doings at the Capital.

For instance:

When the sanctimonious Congress gave Woodrow Wilson $150,000,000 to use as he pleased, and which he pleased to use in riotous brawls in Paris, where hotel damages in one night of Wilsonian hilarity reached over $275,000; which he pleased to use for the purpose of sending an army of American soldiers to the borders of the new-born Soviet Government of Russia, in violation of all law and decency.

For instance:

When the sanctimonious Congress "gave" orders to the shipping trust to make a couple of billion dollars worth of wooden battle ships and other useless hulks, that were sold later on for less than an Indian's rat skin.

When Congress sponsored the air craft swindle, whereby private interests made fraudulent planes that caused the death of every aviator that ventured up in them, the whole sorry affair costing the people billions of dollars, and costing hundreds of men their lives.

Swindles, concessions, "gifts," frauds, grafts, intrigues, thievery, public looting, treasury raids, oppressive legislation for the workers, ironclad protection for the masters—all in one long infamous series of acts of officials in high places.

And whenever did the sanctified press come out in protest against it? Where have our editors and preachers and university presidents been all this time? Why have not our "best people" raised their voice and cried for a cleansing?

Oh, "The Public Morals of It!"

Why this late lamentation? Does it take so many years for the news to reach the editorial desk of our metropolitan papers? Slow service, we say.

Or shall we go back to the stoning story again? Pharisees were there. Priests and high priests were there. Lawyers and lawgivers were there. "The best people" were there. Their sense of purity and high morality had been outraged. This woman had been caught in adultery. The law was clear. She must be stoned. These innocent accusers demand her removal from their holy environs. Also they demand revenge. Also they want to trap a man who mixed with publicans and sinners. There was dignity in that crowd. Much righteous indignation oozed forth from that crowd. Who shall dare to dodge the issue? "We got you this time—both of you," they sneered. Jesus was either to condemn or defend her. He did neither. He knew that the stoning was not demanded because she was a "sinful woman," but because she had refused her body to some of these refined hypocrites. That peeved them and they wanted her stoned.

There is something that peeves the wailing and self-righteous press besides the sinfulness of the common grafters at Washington.

Here it is:

"They will see the danger of unsettling confidence in the integrity of public men."

Imagine what would happen if the people should find out the truth about these "public men." As far as the press is concerned, it will be a long time till the people find out. The whole mess is well smeared over.

For Recognition of Soviet Russia!

NEW LIGHTS ON RECOGNITION

The oil scandal has various angles that are not unrelated to the question of the recognition of Soviet Russia.

Sinclair only quite recently made a trip to Russia and Chas. E. Hughes has been called "Standard Oil Secretary of State Hughes" by Jay Lovestone in a startling article "Soviet Russia in the Headlines" in the new issue of SOVIET RUSSIA PICTORIAL.

The facts of a new agreement, are mentioned in this article, between Russia and the Sinclair Oil Company, whose head has chosen this as the most suitable occasion for a vacation in Europe.

Comments of the author on Senator Borah's answer to Senator Lodge in their recent debate on Russian Recognition and the unexpected progress and soundness of the present Russian economic position answer the lies of the daily press on these questions.

All phases of the subject of Russian recognition have been touched on in this many sided and interesting article.

One reading this article is touched by another note concerning the magazine in which it is published. Plenty of photographs dot a series of other articles from one by that most whole-hearted advocate of Russian recognition, Paxton Hibben, to another by Jessica Smith, a delightful picture of a visit to a Russian children's home.

SOVIET RUSSIA PICTORIAL justly merits the praise it receives.

Even the Dead Lenin Increases the Party

The correspondent of the New York Times reports from Moscow: One of the first notable effects of Premier Lenin's death has been a flood of applications from the principal urban centres, Moscow, Petrograd, Kharkov, Kief, Odessa and Siberian cities from groups of workers to be allowed to enter the Communist Party. This will doubtless be permitted in many cases. It is even reported that the party membership will likely be increased from below 400,000 to upward of 750,000. It is already certain that the sorrow of Lenin's loss will be utilized as the foundation of a revival campaign to infuse new energy, enthusiasm, unity and discipline in the Communist Party.

Here and There

VULTURES

With chilly eye and open beak,
The vultures wait.
"Lenin is dead," they shriek,
Dumbly elate.

"Lenin is dead," they cry,
Or anyway,
"He's sick, and soon will die,"
And then, "Hooray!"

They wait not till the corpse is cold
Trese scavengers,
But pick it's eyes for gold
While it demurs.

"Lenin is dead," they shout,
Nor know not why
They can, but Lenin cannot,
Cannot die.

CAN A CHILD BE A FIGHTER?

Article No. 10

The international communist children's movement has already obtained a quantity of valuable material dealing with the military abilities of the children. This is especially true in Germany, where more than thirty thousand children are organized in the Communist Children's Groups. In many schools there have been conflicts between our young comrades and the teachers who attempted to prevent the children from distributing their papers and from wearing the badges with the Soviet stars.

The children understood, however, how to maintain their rights and to defend themselves. They declared that they had a right to distribute their papers as long as nationalist, religious and other literature was being distributed in the schools. When prohibited from wearing the Soviet stars they replied that they would wear badges as long patriotic badges were worn in the schools. Where the teachers proceeded to use disciplinary measures to enforce their decisions the children declared a school strike.

Other conflicts resulted (we speak again of experience in Germany) from the refusal of our young comrades to attend nationalist school celebrations and to sing nationalist songs. On the occassion of the Ruhr occupation, "memorial services" were arranged in the German schools by the Social Democratic Minister of Education. The Young Communist League of Germany organized a counter campaign and the children refused to sing nationalist songs. In many places the memorial service celebrations were completely boycotted.

The school struggle consists first in protests and manifestations of individual children. It is true that many of our young comrades have been severely punished for this. Eventually, however, they win over larger masses of children—as in cases just mentioned—to united action. By such united mass action the class consciousness of the children, their solidarity, their knowledge of the political relations of the ruling class, are made deeper and wider. The school is for the children, what the shop is for the adult workers. It is their field of action, the place where they form a united front.

Rich Loot Returned.

NEW YORK—Following the amazing return of 237 pearls estimated to be worth as high as $120,000 stolen from Mrs. C. P. Hugo Schoellkopf, Buffalo manufacturer's wife, at a new year's eve party here over a year ago, police investigators believed today all of the $300,000 loot was about to be recovered.

WILSON'S DEATH CAN'T SAVE MCADO

Coolidge in Frantic Effort to Appease Rural Unrest

RELIEF FOR BANKERS NOT FOR FARMERS

No Enthusiasm for Latest White House Proposal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—Relief for bankers but nothing for the farmers, is the way in which representatives of various farmers' organizations here characterize the latest proposals of President Coolidge, made to the northwestern conference on agriculture.

The proof that the measures proposed are not intended to relieve poverty-stricken farmers is found in one sentence of the president's address, which says:

"It will serve no useful purpose to lend money to a farmer who is in such a position that an any moment mortgage holders and general creditors can fall upon him, sell his lands and seize his property."

It is the evident intention to loan the funds which will be furnished to banks only to farmers who are "good risks" at present. The diversification of farming recommendation is laughed at by farmers who point out, that one or two years must elapse before dairy and poultry farming begin to bring in any income and that both are highly speculative ventures.

They point out that in dairy and poultry sections the farmers are just as much at the mercy of dairy and commission houses as are wheat farmers at the mercy of elevator and milling combines.

What the farmers need, say their representatives, is not more credit, but a cancellation in some form of the existing indebtedness. The Coolidge proposals make no mention of this condition.

Specifically the President proposed, for the government's part:

1.—Enactment of the Norbeck-Burtness bill providing a $50,000,000 appropriation for promoting diversification of agriculture in the wheat states.

2.—Extension of the life of the war finance corporation to permit it to aid distressed banks until Dec. 31, 1924.

For the part of the business interests of that region, welfare is linked with that of the farmer the President suggested:

3.—Co-operation with the Department of Agriculture in promoting diversification.

4.—Arrangement of a general refunding and extension of existing indebtedness of farmers, their voluntary agreements with their creditors.

"This conference has been called to consider the pressing agricultural needs for the northwest," Mr. Coolidge explained.

"Difficulties exist there among some of the banks and on farmers for which I wish to propose certain remedies. I do not intend to exclude other remedies nor am I undertaking to consider agriculture as a whole.

"The object should be reconstruction, not charity, whether it is charity for the weak or for the strong.

"It must be recognized that all the banking difficulties are by no means

MCADOO BOOSTER WOULD HIT BOTTOM IN THE OIL MESS

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Senator Dill of Washington announced, after McAdoo's $250,000 of retainers from Doheny had been revealed, that it was time that the "lid be torn off, and congress go to the very bottom of all this use of money in influencing public policy at Washington in recent years."

The stigma of oil was as poisonous as the shade of the fabled upas tree. Public men should remove it at once, from its evil effect upon government. Dill has been a McAdoo supporter.

VILE KLAN FILM SHOWING DESPITE ARRESTS OF TWO

Police Fear Outbreak of Race Battles

Managers of the Auditorium Theatre will continue to show "The Birth of a Nation," David W. Griffith's race hatred picture, until a jury passes on the case of Jay Weber and Nathaniel Galben, the two operators arrested by the police while the picture was being shown Sunday night. The men demanded a jury trial when arraigned before a judge in the South Clark street station.

Police stopped the show under a statute forbidding pictures which tend to engender race hatred. They said they feared a revival of the race riots in which scores lost their lives in 1919.

Ku Klux Klansmen are ardent boosters for the picture which represents the hooded order as the savior of the South from the emancipated slaves. The Griffith production is based on Thomas Dixon's novel, The Klansman, which seeks to justify the violent methods by which Southern black men have been disfranchised and frequently murdered.

Police say the showing of the picture is far more dangerous now than when an injunction was obtained against an earlier showing in 1915. Negroes are in a more aggressive mood. Many of them are armed and prepared to fight to the limit against lynch gangs.

It is pointed out that the success which white thugs had in slaughtering so many blacks in the riots of 1919 was not due to superior marksmanship of the whites but to their more fiendish methods of fighting. Negroes' homes were burned and they were shot down as they fled from the flames.

Since then thousands of negroes are declared to have resolved that they will punish the next wholesale murder attempt so thoroly that it will not be repeated.

HOT ON TRAIL OF DAUGHERTY AND WAR GRAFTERS

Att'y General Asked to Disclose Facts

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Senator Norris has introduced a resolution in the Senate, directing Attorney-General Daugherty to give information. (1) Whether, in prosecuting war grafters, Daugherty has settled on a basis of civil suit, and has failed to bring criminal action; (2) Detailed list of such cases, including the nature of the fraudulent act charged, the date of settlement, the amount claimed and the amount secured in settlement in each case, name and address of each defendant, and the fact as to whether an immunity bath was given each or any of them.

Senator King, of Utah, offered a supplementary resolution, asking Daugherty what use he has made of the $1,000,000 given him by Congress two years ago, for prosecution of war contract frauds, the status of all prosecutions, and especially the status of the Wright-Martin aircraft fraud case, submitted to Daugherty by Secretary Weeks in October, 1921.

These resolutions are intended to lead up to an exposure of the suppression of the war graft scandal which led the New York Tribune, two years ago, to demand that Daugherty resign.

FORD'S MUSCLE SHOALS OFFER STRIKES SNAG

Rep. Hull, of Iowa, Raises Opposition

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals today struck the first snag in its passage thru Congress when Representative Hull, Iowa, leading opponent of the Ford offer, announced that he would oppose immediate consideration of the bid in the House.

A special rule to give the McKenzie Bill, providing for acceptance of the Ford offer, the right of way, was presented last Friday by Representative McKenzie, Illinois, and is now pending before the House Rules Committee.

FORBES SOUGHT TO MAKE REAL CLEAN-UP AS OIL OFFICIAL

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — When the witness Mortimer was before the Senate committee investigating the notorious Forbes administration of the Veterans' Bureau, he testified that Forbes, just before Fall retired from the Harding cabinet, boasted that he, Forbes, expected to get the secretaryship of the interior, "and then I'll make a real cleanup."

Handling a few hundreds of millions in the Veterans' Bureau did not offer sufficient scope for the president's chum.

MILLIONAIRES PALLBEARERS FOR WILSON

Magnates Lead Mourning For War President

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—A cortege of multi-millionaires will carry the body of Woodrow Wilson, late war president, to its final resting place in a Washington cemetery.

Among the pall-bearers will be his warm personal friend, Bernard Baruch, Wall Street financier, who netted a fortune at the time of the leak of the Wilson peace note, in December, 1916, and who afterwards was dictator of war contracts as head of the War Industries Board; Cleveland H. Dodge, copper magnate who doubled his fortune during the war; Vance McCormick and Cyrus McCormick are members of the late president's war cabinet.

Hundreds of messages of sorrow have been received from European potentates, American financiers and politicians, who unite in attributing to the war president every imaginable virtue.

The Wilson legend, which died so violently at the Versailles conference, is arising again in the flood of myth making, now going on.

The only barren field for Wilson eulogies is found in the labor movement which remembers that the late president attacked conservative labor, after the war, as persistenly as he had attacked radical labor during the war.

Gompers and Gary Mourn.

Samuel Gompers, almost a lone admirer in the ranks of organized labor, however, comes forward with a laudation in which he compares Wilson to Washington and Lincoln. Gompers has always been an ardent supporter of Wilson. His loyalty did not flag even when Wilson was using all the forces of government to crush the strike of the steel workers for semi-human conditions of labor and the strike of coal miners to protect their standard of living against rising costs in 1919.

Gompers' grief is equally shared by Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, who had Wilson's aid in fighting the great steel strike. The administration's aid was given thru the department of justice which, working hand in hand with Gary's under cover men, arrested scores of active strikers on deportation warrants. Wilson directly intervened in behalf of the 12-hour-a-day autocrats—who refused to meet union leaders—by sending Major-General Wood to the steel town of Gary with orders to use any methods necessary to crush the strike.

Says Gary's tribute:

"The death of Mr. Wilson will cause a shock of grief thruout the whole universe. Mr. Wilson was a great man, a profound scholar, a statesman of high rank, an orator equal to the best. His knowledge, his wisdom, his keen perception and his influences were practically dedicated to the cause of justice, and what he did for the protection of civilization will never be forgotten."

Even Liberals Don't Weep.

Little contribution to the Wilson symposium has come from the ranks of the liberals who found in the libertarian phraseology of his earlier speeches an object for their admiration. Their disillusionment was completed after the peace conference when the war president abandoned

McAdoo Paid for His "Pull"

WASHINGTON.—"Coolidge is thru." This is the statement made openly in Washington today by men who were his strongest supporters a few weeks ago. The Coolidge kite has flopped into oil.

McAdoo is also thru, but his boosters acknowledge that Doheny stopped the McAdoo drive for the presidency when he testified before the senate committee that his firm had employed McAdoo while the Wilson administration was still in power.

Here is the testimony that sounded the death knell of the McAdoo cohorts:

The Chairman—And how long did Mr. McAdoo continue to represent you?

Doheny—Mr. McAdoo continued to represent us in that regard until the Mexican situation was practically completed; that is, until the administration changed.

The Chairman—That is, he continued to represent you so long as Mr. Wilson's administration remained?

Doheny—So long as he was president, yes sir, and after that he didn't represent us in Washington any longer.

The Chairman—And does he still represent you?

Doheny—And he still represents us.

The Chairman—Will you tell us how much you paid Mr. McAdoo?

Doheny—All told, I think about $250,000.

Put in newspaper English this testimony means that McAdoo was paid by the Doheny interests, not for legal ability, but for the fact that he was Wilson's son-in-law and had a "pull" with the administration.

The McAdoo boom will be buried under a flood of oil and friends are asked to omit flowers.

McAdoo and Coolidge, Caught in Oil Scandal, Out of This Year's Presidential Race for White House

WASHINGTON.—William Gibbs McAdoo will not be nominated for the presidency of the United States, and no longer has a claim on the political support of organized labor.

Calvin Coolidge will not be re-elected to the presidency, and henceforth can exert no moral leadership among even the reactionaries in his party.

This is the crux of the situation, revealed in the pitiless spotlight of the oil scandal inquiry by Edward L. Doheny's testimony that he had employed McAdoo at $50,000 a year and had likewise employed former Attorney-General Gregory, to represent him in influencing the policy of the State Department, under the Wilson administration, in connection with Mexican policy.

Doheny Bought McAdoo.

From a date about a year after McAdoo left the cabinet, Doheny testified, he had employed McAdoo to act as his agent in dealing with Mexican matters in Washington. After the Republican regime came in, McAdoo continued to represent the Doheny interests here, going before the Shipping Board and various departments either in person or by proxy. To date McAdoo is still drawing Doheny's $50,000 salary or retainer, and he has not seen fit to tell the public about it. He has received $250,000.

As to Gregory, whom President Coolidge picked—much to the amazement of everyone in Washington, who knew him as an oil attorney—to represent the public in prosecuting the oil lease frauds, Doheny testified that Gregory, soon after leaving the cabinet, took $2,000 of the easy Doheny money to "go before the State Department, to gain entree there for us in connection with Mexican oil lease permit matters, to get the State Department to adopt a certain policy toward Mexico."

Coolidge was inviting the Senate to take Doheny's own former lobbyist before the State Department as its vigilance officer in recovering loot from Doheny and the men he had corrupted. Of course, as soon as the White House received news of Doheny's confession, Gregory was thrown overboard. But even the most hard-boiled Republicans now shake their heads over the Coolidge "innocence," and say that his political future is as flat as McAdoo's.

Pay For Political Pull

Senator Norris declared that it was obvious that McAdoo and Fall and the other big fellows were not employed by Doheny for legal ability, but to influence government action. These retainers were just a form of corruption.

But not only was the American policy toward Mexico warped by Doheny's purchase of the services of Gregory and McAdoo, when they were lately out of the cabinet; Doheny bought the "personal advice" of Secretary Lane at about $50,000 a year as soon as Lane resigned. And Lindley M. Garrison, ex-secretary of war under Wilson, was counsel for Doheny's bank, known as Blair & Co. To these four was added George Creel, who, Doheny said, got $5,000 from him for trying to induce Secretary of the Navy Daniels to lease Teapot Dome.

This rotten mess was aired while William Hibbs, a wealthy stockbroker who is prominent in official social circles here, was waiting his turn on the stand, and while Albert Fall himself was being summoned back to explain his perjuries after his "nervous breakdown."

Waterpower Grabs Expected to Offer New Opportunities for Big Scandal

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—One of the next scandals to be charged to Coolidge and the "millionaire-class" regime now in office will be the attempt on the part of Secretaries Hoover and Weeks to commit the United States, at an "international" waterpower conference in London soon, to opposition to public devlopment and ownership of superpower.

Secretary Merrill of the Federal Power Commission, agent for Hoover and Weeks in giving out power-site leases in this country, is to go to London to join in a protest against public ownership and even public development of hydro-electric resources. That is to say, he will go unless protest in Congress shall stop him.

The new government in Britain will give no countenance to this gathering of resource-grabbers. It smells much like an oil conference.

SS AND BRITISH MMISSIONERS O FRAME PACT

bor Party Debt Action May Irk France

ONDON.—Announcement of the es of the Soviet government missioners who will negotiate the treaty following recognition by Labor Party government is ex-ected here daily.

The unconditional recognition accorded the Soviet government leaves the question of treaties and agreements to be settled by a joint commission and the note sent to Moscow by the Labor Party government contains an invitation to the Soviet government to send such a commission. The full text of the note is delivered to the Kremlin by the British charge d'affaires is as follows:

Text of Note.

"I have the honor, by direction of my government, to inform your excellency that they recognize the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics as de jure rulers of those territories of the old Russian Empire which acknowledge their authority.

"In order, however, to create the normal conditions of complete friendly relations and full commercial intercourse it will be necessary to conclude definite practical agreements on a variety of matters, some of which have no direct connection with the question of recognition and some of which, on the other hand, are intimately bound up with the fact of recognition.

"In the latter category may be cited the question of existing treaties. His Majesty's Government is advised that recognition of the Soviet Government of Russia will, according to the accepted principles of international law, automatically bring into force all the treaties concluded between the two countries previous to the Russian revolution, except where these have been denounced or have otherwise juridicially lapsed. It is obviously to the advantage of both countries that the position as regards these treaties should be regularized simultaneously with recognition.

"Technically unconnected with recognition, but clearly of utmost importance, are the problems of settlement of the existing claims by the Government and nationals of one party against the other and the restoration of Russia's credit.

"It is also manifest that genuinely friendly relations cannot be said to be completely established so long as either party has reason to suspect the other of carrying on propaganda against its interests and directed to overthrow its institutions.

"In these circumstances his Majesty's Government invites the Russian Government to send to London at the earliest possible date representatives armed with full powers to discuss these matters and draw the preliminary bases of a complete treaty to settle all the questions outstanding between the two countries.

"Meantime, I have been given the status of charge d'affaires pending the appointment of an ambassador, and am to state that his Majesty's Government will be glad similarly to receive a Russian charge representing the Government of the Union at the Court of St. James."

It is said here that no single member of the government believes that the Soviet government will ever pay the old Russian debt amounting to $2,838,000,000 but it is thought that some sort of a compromise connected with trade agreements or something of the sort will be arrived.

The Labor Party government has urged and granted the recognition of Russia for the reason that it will tend to enhance trade relations and thus relieve unemployment at home.

The foreign office now has under advisement a request from the Association of British Creditors of Russia asking the government to refuse to release the deposits in British banks to the credit of Russian banks and cooperatives until the Soviet government promises to make good the claims of British citizens.

Senator Norris On Recognition.

WASHINGTON.—British recognition of Russia sets a good example for all other nations, says Senator Norris of Nebraska. He wonders whether, in view of the working-class character of the British government which has done this service to the peace of the world, there is not in the fact a rebuke to employer-class governments.

"In Britain," he told The Federated Press, "a peaceful political revolution has brought the Labor Party into power, after that party has withstood for many years the same general line of alarm at the hands of its critics as the Russian soviets have withstood. And the first thing it does upon taking office is to recognize the Soviet government of Russia, which the old money power government of Britain refused to recognize.

"Here is a Russian government that the other governments don't like because they are down in the rut of mental habit that is more concerned with money than with humanity. The Russian government seems to be concerned with humanity and its rights. I recognize that this is a new type of government, and that until modified by the younger generation now growing up under it in Russia it is likely to persist. All other nations should recognize Russia as the British have done, and join in establishing peace for the general welfare."

Sure Enough! McAdoo and Creel Opposed "Immoral" Soviet Rule

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Word that a Labor government in Great Britain had formally recognized the Union of Soviet Republics was received in Washington on the day that former President Wilson lay dying, and on the day that the wholesale "retaining" of Wilson's political associates and former cabinet heads was being revealed by the oil magnate who paid them the money.

Private control of the Mexican policy of the State department thru the lavish use of money was disclosed to have been attempted, at least, while George Creel, who sent Sisson to Russia and published his anti-Russian forgeries at public expense when Sisson returned, was found taking a pitiful $5,000 from this same oil magnate in an attempt to grab the naval oil lands under a lease which later was secretly given to his rival, Sinclair.

McAdoo and Creel were staunch opponents of recognition of the "immoral" Soviet government.

INDICT KISSANE FOR SHOOTING AT TEAMSTER DANCE

Gunman Was Not Union Member

Anthony Kissane was indicted yesterday for the murder of William Newman, who was killed at a dance of the Chicago Teamsters' Union held in Ashland Auditorium, Saturday night. Six others were wounded in the same affray. Kissane's indictment followed an inquest held at 1820 W. Harrison St., where police failed to connect the shooting with differences between the Chicago Teamsters' Union and the International organization, as newspapers had alleged.

From the testimony of witnesses it appears that Kissane, said to be a well known beer runner and police character, came to the dance as a guest and was asked to leave and later came back to "shoot up the works." He and two other men, according to William Etchingham who was at the dance, came thru a window on the north side of the hall and started shooting. Etchingham knocked Kissane down and held him till police arrived. Kissane's two companions escaped.

The shooting nearly caused a riot. Kissane was severely beaten and kicked while being held by Etchingham before the arrival of the police. Kissane is said to have carried two guns when he came into the hall thru a window and began shooting. Behind him was an unknown man with an automatic pistol and a third man followed with a sawed off shot gun. As soon as they got into the hall they opened fire, wounding six men.

The wounded were: Maurice Annenberg, 2645 Augusta Ave.; Oliver Vanderpool, 207 Throop St.; Charles Nacey, Maywood, Ill.; William Barry, 8 E. Pearson St.; George Smallex, 2435 S. Avers Ave., and John Keating, 1156 W. Harrison St.

At the inquest the police were unable to prove that Kissane has now or ever had connection with any labor union.

Court Sustains Lee's Expulsion of Rail Strikers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND.—W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, has just been upheld by the Circuit Court of Appeals in ousting 881 members of the brotherhood for taking part in the outlaw strike of 1920. The court's decision came in a suit presented against Lee and other officers by suspended members, asking for the appointment of a receiver, to take over the property and beneficiary funds of the brotherhood, totaling more than $5,000,000.

During the strike, Lee had withdrawn charters of all locals participating in the strike. Members who did not strike were admitted to other locals.

Lee, besides being president of the labor organization, is an official of a $10,000,000 corporation. He is the most conservative leader in the brotherhoods.

Minneapolis Trades Council Is After Daugherty's Scalp

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS. — Immediate resignation of Atty. Gen. Harry M. Daugherty is asked by the Minneapolis Trades and Labor assembly. The resolution, which was passed without a dissenting vote, requests President Coolidge to ask for the immediate resignation of Daugherty. It recites the alleged connection the attorney general had with the Teapot Dome oil lease scandal, his failure to prosecute war-time profiteers, his disregard for constitutional guarantees of free speech and assemblage during the 1922 railroad strike, and his appointment of William J. Burns to head the department of justice.

Labor Wants Radio Station

The Chicago Federation of Labor placed itself on record in favor of the installation of a radio broadcasting station at the weekly meeting and referred the proposition to the executive board. The radio, it was pointed out, would assist in prompt communication with affiliated unionists in Chicago, and with organized labor in other cities.

DUSSELDORF, Germany. — Failure of the allied railway administration to furnish enough cars has caused the suspension of mining work two days a week in the Bochum and Essen region.

Missouri Labor Wages Campaign on New Constitution

ST. LOUIS.—R. T. Wood, president Missouri State Federation of Labor, is touring the state labor organizations against the proposed new state constitution, on which the people will vote in a special election, Feb. 26th.

The labor federation is bitterly against the proposed amendment to Article 1, which would abrogate a citizen's right to a trial by jury in a case of libel. Labor opposes amendment No. 7, which would establish a "judicial council," with unlimited power to abolish established courts and create new courts. The council would be empowered to set up an industrial court.

Wood says the hostility to the constitutional amendments is not confined to organized labor. About 20 delegates to the constitutional convention have announced they are opposed. Wood has characterized the new constitution as "a thousand times more vicious than the one which was rejected in Illinois."

British Railway Men Pledge Aid to Dockers' Strike

LONDON. — Promise of support from the National Union of Railway Men has made the British dockers more aggressive in their threats of a national strike February 16th, unless their demands for a two shilling a day increase and guarantee of employment or maintenance are met.

The railway workers' solidarity is pledged in a letter given out by the Transport and General Workers' Union, which states that all members coming under the Shaw agreement shall cease work with the dockers and that any cases of blacklegging will be punished.

The Shaw agreement related to all workers on and about the docks, including railway men employed into shunting freight cars on and off the docks. Walkout of these railway workers will effectually paralyse freight movements, even tho some blacklegs are obtained on the docks.

Sixteen shillings a day was the wage fixed under the Shaw agreement in 1920, but this has since been cut to 9 and 10 shillings. The men now demand an advance of two shillings.

Dockers are refusing to load German ships whose crews numbering more than 1,500 men, are on strike.

War Mothers Ask That All Military Prisoners Be Freed

ST. LOUIS. — Release of soldiers sent to prison by court martial for various alleged infractions during the war, will be sought by the National War Mothers, according to its executive committee, which is meeting here.

"The wartime sentences in military cases were abnormal," says Mrs. H. H. McClure, president. "These prisoners have served four to five years, and we war mothers believe many of them have served long enough. We hold that the men who went to prison when they were in the service of their country should receive some consideration, particularly when conscientious objectors, Wobblies, and the like have been let out."

The war mothers endorse the resolution adopted by the recent convention, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The vetrans telegraphed a request to President Coolidge that cases of service men sent to prison by court martial be reviewed. The war mothers have examined the cases of fifty military prisoners at Leavenworth, and they will appeal to the president and the secretary of state, Mrs. McClure says.

"A discharged prisoner receives an outfit from underwear to hat and shoes, that costs $12, besides $5 and railroad fare to the place from which he was sent," Mrs. McClure continues. "Every thug and every policeman knows that outfit. In Kansas City we have provided new overcoats for several [illegible] military prisoners, so they would not be so unmistakably labeled."

TYRANNICAL RULE IN BAVARIA LED TO SLAYING OF HEINZ

Workers' Liberties Had Been Trampled Down

By PAUL HOYER
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

SPEYER, Palatinate, Germany.—The murder of the German separatist leader, Heinz, by a German compatriot, is an act of despair which surprises nobody who has had an opportunity to look into conditions in the Palatinate.

For months a reign of terror has obtained there, almost worse than in the Ruhr and lower Rhine regions. The men who assumed power there under the protection of French bayonets were not men who believed that the Palatinate would be better off as a separate state, but hoodlums and criminals of the worst type.

Shortly before the murder, the German trade unions in the Palatinate, the works councils and a number of municipalities had joined in sending a deputation of 15 men to the Interallied Rhineland commission at Coblenz to describe the anarchial conditions obtaining in the Palatinate and to express the protest of the population against these conditions.

The deputation also presented a series of demands, including the following: Restoration of conditions by which the regularly elected and appointed authorities may be able to fulfill their functions unhindered; freedom of press and assembly; inviolability of personal liberty and of private personal property in accordance with German laws and the agreement with the Rhineland commission; cancellation of the deportations, arrests and confiscations made by the separatists; disarmament of the separatists and restoration of the German police.

As a result both of this protest of the workers of the Palatinate and of the tragic excess of the murder of Heinz, the British government has sent consul-general Clive of Munich to investigate conditions personally. The results of his investigations are not yet known at this writing, but it is known that he was told frankly by the spokesmen for the organized workers that 99% of the population of the Palatinate have no use for the separatist movement or its leaders.

the 14 points which furnished the propaganda fuel that warmed the hearts of millions to the war for democracy.

Wilson's ability to please the liberals with phrases while winning the plutocratic forces with license to loot was strikingly illustrated by his method, thru A. Mitchel Palmer, of handling alien property. While the president was expressing his love for the German people and his purpose in going to war to save them from their rulers hundreds of millions of dollars were being swagged by those on the inside thru the good offices of the Alien Property Custodian.

And while waging a war for "democracy" his Attorney-General, Thomas W. Gregory, was putting hundreds of workingmen into penitentiaries for long terms under the espionage law which flagrantly violated the plain terms of the Bill of Rights.

Many Jobless in Denmark.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark. — Almost 8% of the workers of Denmark are unemployed. This is about twice as many as were normally unemployed in pre-war times.

As compared with normal pre-war conditions, 8.9% of the workers, namely, those belonging to the building, barbers, hat makers and shoe workers' trades, are enjoying a greater percentage of employment now than before the war. On the other hand, the brewery workers, rope makers, glove makers, glass workers, copper smiths and electrical workers have five times as much unemployment as during the last year before the war. With the workers in the iron industry, the typographers and the book binders, unemployment is three times as high as before the war. The smiths have been especially hard hit, and unemployment among them is greater than ever before, largely due to the fact that the docks of Koege have been closed and all work there suspended.

A long contemplated undertaking of the Chicago League to organize a branch in Cicero, will be realized Wednesday eve, Feb. 6th, in the formation of the Austin Branch, Y. W. L., at Seick's Hall, 731 N. Cicero Ave., where it will meet every first and second Wednesday of the month. The feature of this first meeting will be an address by J. L. Engdahl, on "Militant Youth Organization." The Chicago Organization Committee urges all readers of that district to attend this meeting.

Amalgamated Aids Unemployed

NEW YORK. — Members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union who are at work will contribute 5 per cent of their weekly wages to a special fund for the relief of fellow-members who are out of work. Officers of the union will contribute 10 per cent of their salaries to the same purpose. This decision was reached by the New York Joint Board and the Executive Boards of the Union at a conference this week.

The Industries for the workers!

Imperialist Fist of United States Busy Thruout This Western World

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK.—In view of the government's repeated declarations of a policy of non-intervention, recently supported by Hughes' soft words as to the Monroe Doctrine, the following list of events occurring during the last few weeks, compiled by a New York publicist, acquires special interest:

The American admiral, Vogelsang, has been sent to Brazil to improve the Brazilian naval and military establishments, which are engaged in bitter rivalry with those of Argentina.

Another American Admiral, Woodward, is at the head of a U. S. naval mission in Peru, occupied in brushing up the Peruvian fighting forces.

The American government is selling thousands of rifles and millions of rounds of amunition to Obregon, now busied with a civil war. One hundred American warships have been maneuvering in the Panama canal.

Eight vessels have been hurried to Vera Cruz. The U. S. government has taken diplomatic steps to thwart revolutionary movements in Honduras and four other Central American republics. Meanwhile, the senate tries in vain to prove some sort of Russian intervention in America.

What Happened in Last Moments of the Coal Miners' Convention

By THOMAS J. O'FLAHERTY.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—John L. Lewis is not a deep thinker but he is a deep schemer. He knows how to dodge trouble, temporarily at least. One of the severest tests of his dictatorship at the convention was the Howat case. He feared it. He knew that Howat had a strong personal following—a following that would not stand any nonsense when the question came up for discussion.

How he would handle the Howat case was the subject for much discussion since the convention opened. Some were of the opinion that a recommendation would be made by the committee on appeals and grievances that would look to the delegates like a reinstatement. Lewis might do something that would draw the fangs of the opposition so that he could leave the convention a victor, after having successfully violated the constitution in previous tests of strength.

Another view which was shared by the DAILY WORKER correspondent and published in one of our issues was that Lewis would hold over the Howat case until the last moment and declare the convention adjourned as soon as the committee made its report. That is just what happened.

On the last day of the convention the delegates generally lose interest in the proceedings. They are in a hurry to get home. The bait of an early adjournment was dangled before them by the administration leaders during the two preceding days. This was for the purpose of putting the opposition in the unfavorable position of dragging out the convention.

Usually the last act of a convention of the United Mine Workers is to set the time and place for the next convention. It cannot legally adjourn until this is done. The suspicion that Howat was going to be flimflammed was apparent when on Saturday morning, after Secretary Green made some announcements Lewis brought up the question of setting the date for the next convention. This business was purposely dragged out by the administration to take up as much time as possible, the only other business before the delegates being the report of the committee on appeals and grievances. This committee was originally scheduled to make its report ahead of the scale committee but for obvious reasons it was placed at the bottom of the list.

After Indianapolis was selected as the meeting place of the next convention and Lewis made a threat that "any organized attempt to obstruct the business of this morning's session would be dealt with" the grievance committee began to make its report. It was twenty minutes of ten and the administration had stated that the convention should adjourn at twelve o'clock, thus allowing less than two hours for this very important report with the Myerscough and Howat cases likely to bring into play many of the best speakers on both sides.

Delegate G. W. Savage, secretary of District No. 6 and as reactionary a tool as ever led a battalion of payrollers made the report for the grievance committee. Several petty grievances were disposed off, the recommendations of the committee to refer to the International Executive Board being concurred with.

Tom Myerscough's appeal was reached. There was a noticeable stir among the delegates. Myerscough's appeal was a dignified statement of the position of a militant miner who announced his communist position without apology and signified his intention to continue his work in behalf of the revolutionary working class movement as long as life remained in his body.

Myerscough denied the charge that he was a disruptionist or a dual unionist. He stated, however, that he was in favor of dethroning the reactionary fakers who now dominated the union. Hundreds of militants applauded the reading of the report particularly the sections that breathed the class struggle.

With an air of judicial poise Delegate Savage read the committee's decision. They found that Myerscough did attend a meeting under the auspices of the Progressive Miners in Pittsburg, that he was expelled by the District 5 executive board, that he circulated attacks on John L. Lewis, William Green et al and that his announced determination to continue the work that he was engaged in rendered him undesirable as a member of the United Mine Workers in the eyes of John L. Lewis and his henchmen.

Free Speech Taboo.

When Tom Myerscough tried to get the floor to speak on his appeal Lewis in a voice like that of a criminal judge delivering a death sentence said, "Thomas Myerscough, the committee has renderd its report that your so-called appeal has no standing before the convention. The convention has no authority to further consider your appeal. You cannot be heard on this question on the floor of this convention." He put the question on the committee's report which was carried against a heavy opposition vote.

The delegates were anxious to get to the Howat case. Delegate Savage read Howat's appeal. Then the committee's decision. Howat had not complied with the requirements of the constitution, he had caused the international losses of funds in going to the courts for redress and so on. The decision of the committee was that until Howat complied with sundry imaginary constitutional requirements his case was not properly before the convention.

Lewis Becomes Mute.

At this point three fourths of the delegates were on their feet cheering for Howat. The motion to accept the committee's report was put, the tellers counted the votes for and against but the tabulation was never announced. That the committee's report was defeated was so obvious that even the monumental gall of John L. Lewis deserted him and his lips were sealed. The reporters at the press table felt that had the vote been counted Howat would be restored to membership with all rights and privileges in the union.

Lewis threw the constitution to the winds and turned the platform over to his gunmen. While the payrollers and his other lickspittles passed by and shook hands with him after that disgraceful scene the militant miners were meeting in the center of the hall organizing the forces that will bring about the downfall of reaction in the miners union. Had this been done when the Cleveland convention broke up in a similar manner two years ago, John L. Lewis would not have gone away from Tomlinson Hall crowing about his illegal victory.

Nearing Declares France Has Reached End of Her Rope

"Surprise has been expressed in many quarters at the stability of the Russian government," writes Scott Nearing in the February Liberator. "No student of the economic basis on which the soviet government is founded will feel any such surprise—quite the reverse. He will regard it as the most natural thing in the world.

"Take the new Russian currency as an example. The Russian State (government) bank has adopted as the currency unit, the chervonetz, a 10-ruble piece. The chervonetz was quoted in New York, Jan. 17, 1924, at $4.58. On the same day the pound sterling was quoted at $4.26, which means that while the pound sterling stood at 88 per cent of par, the chervonetz stood at 89 per cent of par. In the estimate of New York bankers on Jan. 17, 1924, the promise to pay of the soviet republic was sounder than the promise of the British empire."

"France has reached the end of her rope," Nearing declares in the same issue of The Liberator. "When she passes over the brink, pulling Belgium and perhaps Britain after her, the keystone of European capitalism will have fallen. After that the arch will crumble rapidly."

California Prison Overcrowded.

SAN QUENTIN, Cal.—San Quentin prison has now reached its absolute limit of capacity. There are 2,603 prisoners inside the walls and 278 out on road work. If any more are received before any of these are discharged, emergency measures will have to be taken to accommodate them. As it is, two men are sleeping in one-man cells and three men in two-men cells.

Nearly 100 of these prisoners are victims of the criminal syndicalism law, and six more are on trial at this writing and from all indications will be the first subjects of the warden's emergency measures.

NO TEARS FLOW FOR WILSON AT LEGION'S ORDER

Mourn Only for Lenin in Pittsburgh Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—More than a thousand workers jammed the Lyceum Theatre today to honor the memory of Nicolai Lenin, resisted the efforts of American Legionaires to swing it into an occasion of mourning for Wilson. The meeting was addressed by Fred Merrick, the District Organizer, and Jay Lovestone.

Despite repeated advanced warnings thru the press from the American Legion that the meeting would be broken up, as it was in Monessen, the workers flocked en masse and turned the gathering into one of the most successful meetings ever held by workingmen in Pittsburgh.

Merrick and Lovestone brought the enthusiastic audience to repeated applause when they told of Lenin's great services in uniting the workers of the world against the imperialists, in building the Communist International, and in organizing the most constructive movement the world has yet seen—the international Communist movement. An appeal for membership in the Workers Party as the Party of Lenin in America was made.

At the close of the meeting the American Legionaries,, Department of Justice Agents and all sorts of non-descript secret service men, who turned out in large numbers and occupied the front seats, attempted to raise a turmoil. One of their crew got up and asked the audience to rise and bow their heads in reverence to Wilson whose death he announced. It was only the tactfulness of Merrick and the skill with which he handled the request that prevented a riot as the audience refused to comply with this show of pseudo patriotism. Department of Justice Agent Lennon was seen in the box coaching the Legionaire.

The attempt of the disturbers to force the audience to sing "America" also failed and the meeting adjourned peacefully.

A collection of about $250 was made. The net proceeds will go towards the relief of the starving German workers.

Employers Quit When Lockout Is Found a Failure

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK.—A crisis in the New York garment industries has been averted and only a minor aftermath remains after an abrupt, two-day stoppage which tied up 75% of the industry here.

Owing largely to a conflict between the contractors and manufacturers in the clothing trades, a lockout was proclaimed, affecting more than 20,000 organized garment workers. Simultaneously, 5000 workers, employed in 150 New York firms, went on strike to enforce existing union agreements. After its second day, the lockout was abandoned and the men returned to the shops. The 5000 strikers are still out. It is stated at the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' headquarters that the spirit of the striking men is determined and that their fight for the defense of union standards enjoys every prospect of success.

due to unfortunate agricultural conditions," he said.

"There is every indication that in the case of some of the institutions which have been compelled to close their doors during the past year, the difficulties have been due essentially to poor banking rather than to distressed agriculture.

"The principal purpose of this conference is to secure cooperation. Agriculture cannot stand alone. The banks cannot stand alone. A great amount of money has been spent to establish the population in the area affected.

"It represents some of the best elements of our citizenship. In this day of distress and adversity, it ought to be saved because it is worth saving. It can be saved if all of you are interested and are willing to do what you can do.

"Without you the government can do practically nothing. With you the government can save the situation."

Secretary Hoover was appointed chairman of the conference by President Coolidge.

WILKES-BARRE'S MEETING BUSTERS GET IN TROUBLE

Hart and His Gunmen Sued for Assault

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK. — Dan Hart, mayor of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has bitten off more than he can chew, and put his foot in it, mixed metaphorically speaking. It appears that Dan Hart has been trying to transform Wilkes-Barre into a hard-boiled, heartless, Bret Harte town, with himself in a William S. Hart role.

Anyway, Dan Hart is now being sued for felonious assault, along with over-zealous members of the local post of the American Legion. These proceedings were instituted by the American Civil Liberties Union upon the receipt of a telegram from Mayor Hart, stating that he "would not tolerate any organization holding meetings in Wilkes-Barre which is opposed by the American Legion."

Broke Up Lenin Meeting

Dan Hart's difficulties spring from his endorsement of the Legion's action in breaking up a Lenin meeting, held under the auspices of the Workers Party a few days ago.

"I shall not allow any meetings of anarchists and communists to be held in this city," telegraphs this Daniel-about-to-come-to-judgment. "Freedom of speech . . . under the red flag of anarchy will never be tolerated."

In his reference to the flags of anarchy and communism, Mayor Hart obviously confuses the red and the black. This might be merely awkward at roulette; but it is a more serious blunder in politics.

"All meetings of this character in the future," wires the palpitant Hart, "will be submitted to the Legion committees for approval before they are permitted."

Free Speech Test Coming

Preparatory to the free speech test meeting, on February 10, the Civil Liberties Union is seeking a court order, compelling Mayor Hart to provide police protection. Meanwhile, the Union has also informed Governor Gifford Pinchot of the facts and requested his co-operation, should the courts fail to act. World war veterans, an Episcopal church bishop and a distinguished lawyer will be among the speakers at the February 10 meeting.

Mayor Hart's star-spangled telegram has been sent to Governor Pinchot, with the remark that it is "one of the most extraordinary examples of official lawlessness which has come to the attention of the Civil Liberties Union."

"A Week" Draws Hundreds or New Readers to Daily Worker

How many of the present regular readers of the DAILY WORKER are particularly interested in the forthcoming serial publication of "A Week," by Iury Libedinski? Hundreds, if not thousands of them, if the number of letters written to the editor is any indication.

Whether this great novel will be run daily or as a special feature of the Saturday Magazine is still a matter for our readers to decide. So far the vote seems to be strongly in favor of daily instalments, but if the adherents of that plan do not make their wishes felt, it may be that before Feb. 16th, the date now set for the publication of the first instalment, the votes for weekly instalments will have piled up to such an extent that the score will have been reversed.

The DAILY WORKER business office is particularly interested in the attitude which American workers are taking to the serial publication of this story of the Russian Revolution.

The business manager admitted that a part of that interest had been aroused because of the many workers who had taken out new subscriptions because of having first been attracted to the DAILY WORKER because of this new venture in working-class journalism.

"The business office is also interested," said the manager, "in the number of subscribers to the weekly Worker who, having been receiving the DAILY WORKER by reason of their unexpired subs, will be wise enough to renew in time to prevent their missing the first instalments of Libedinski's novel."

Renew Subs Now to Get First Instalment of "A Week".

A fairly heavy proportion of the subscriptions which have been carried over to the Daily from the weekly Worker have not yet been renewed. Those whose address label bears the number "338" or "352" should take note that their subscriptions expire on February 14th and March 1st, respectively. Similarly those whose address labels bear the date "2-14-24" or any date between that and "3-1-24" should note that their sub expires within the same period.

Readers of the DAILY WORKER are advised to inspect the address label on their paper and if their sub expires, to send in their renewal at once.

Workers' School in New York City Opens Second Term

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY.—The SECOND TERM of the WORKERS' SCHOOL, 127 University Place, began Tuesday, Feb. 5.

The first term has proven that the desire and need for truly proletarian education are great. Especially necessary is systematic proletarian education that should help the workers meet the political and industrial emergencies that face them in the struggle with the ruling classes.

Education has so far been monopolized by the master class to maintain the working class in subjection. It is the duty of the Working Class to break the wall of darkness with which the capitalist class has surrounded them. WE MUST USE THE WEAPON OF EDUCATION TO HELP US ACHIEVE THE LIBERATION OF THE WORKING CLASS.

The task that the Workers' School has set before it is huge, but important. For its aim is to make the school a force in American life. Considering its limited resources, it must be said that the school has been a great success, both morally and educationally.

The second term begins with a continuation of many of the courses of the first term, as MARXISM, HISTORY, EVOLUTION, PUBLIC SPEAKING, LITERATURE, ENGLISH, advanced intermediate and elementary. The following courses have been added so far:

Modern European History, J. S. Poyntz.

History of the American Trade Union Movement, Solon de Leon.

History of the Three Internationales, Ludwig Lore.

Imperialism since 1860 in the United States, Charles Brower.

The Syndicalist Movement in Europe, Arnold Roller.

Shows Unemployment Growing in Hungary at an Alarming Rate

By FRITZ KREJCSI

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

BUDAPEST. — Unemployment in Hungary is rising at an alarming pace, and the country is confronted with a serious economic crisis. Altho Hungary is an overwhelmingly agrarian nation, the number of workless industrial laborers has mounted 25 per cent since October. Meanwhile, several vital industries are about to shift from a full-time to a part-time basis, and thousands more workmen will be thrown to the street pavements.

The Magyar trade unions are paying out enormous sums in unemployment allowance, and their treasuries are nearly drained. In certain industries, the number of workers dismissed amounts to two-thirds of all those employed. The trade unions demand state help for the unemployed and a constructive building program as a necessary alternative to relief for the unemployed. Labor is also advocating a bill which shall make it illegal for employers arbitrarily to shut down their plants.

Cost of Living Goes Up.

BUDAPEST.—The cost of living in Hungary increased by 12 per cent in December, and is still ascending. The official minimum wage has been raised from $11 to $12 a week.

Since 1914, the cost of necessities in Hungary has increased 5,741 times, while wages have increased only 3,559 times. A suit of clothes costs 9,348 times more than during the war.

Watch the "Daily Worker" for the first instalment of "A Week", the great epic of the Russian revolution, by the brilliant young Russian writer, Iury Libedinsky. It will start soon.

Middle West Is Hit by the Worst Storm of Winter

Many cities west and north of Chicago, were isolated yesterday from telegraph and telephone communication by the worst snow and windstorm of the winter.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, the Dakotas, Iowa and Nebraska, were the worst sufferers. Minneapolis, St. Paul and other cities in Minnesota, were completely cut off. Lincoln, Hastings, Fremont and other Nebraska cities also were cut off. Milwaukee received an interrupted service, but the rest of the state received little or no service. The Dakotas appeared to be cut off. Des Moines, Iowa, was isolated.

Rain and sleet were responsible for most of the trouble. Wires sagged and many broke under the weight of the ice and pressure of the gale.

Many of the cities were in total darkness during the night as electric light wires collapsed. Electric wire poles gave way in many places.

Railroad service was demoralized in some portions of the storm area. Trains were many hours late.

In Nebraska, the wind reached a velocity of 50 miles an hour. Huge snow drifts are piling up and unless the storm abates shortly, rail traffic will be blocked. The storm is sweeping eastward.

Winter Rages In Southwest.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 4.—The worst blizzard of the winter raged over the southwest and west today.

Sweeping eastward from the Rocky mountains, the storm demoralized rail and wire communications and caused heavy loss to livestock.

Following a spring-like day, the mercury took a sudden tumble Sunday night.

Heavy wet snow started falling, accompanied by a gale.

Trains were running hours behind time, having great difficulty in fighting their way against the drifting snow and heavy wind.

Heavy demands for relief were made upon all charitable agencies by the poor and indigent in Kansas City. Fuel and food were needed for relief.

Collision in Blizzard.

HILLSDALE, Wyo., Feb. 4.—In a blizzard here Sunday the eastbound Overland Limited train collided with the Portland limited Sunday morning, but no one was injured.

Both trains were eastbound. The engineer on the Overland, knowing the Portland train was in the vicinity, was running under control, not to exceed ten miles an hour, officials said.

The engine of the Overland and the observation car of the Portland were somewhat damaged. Passengers were only slightly shaken up.

L. A. Times' Bubble About Trotzky's Fall Shattered

More details of the successful Lenin Memorial meetings in Los Angeles have come by mail. In spite of rain Symphony Hall and a hall at the building for disabled veterans were jammed to the doors.

Ella Reeves Bloor spoke on the need of educating our children to the ideals of Nicolai Lenin. Russian, Yiddish, German and Spanish speakers followed, giving the meetings the international character, linguistically, and every other way.

Every mention of the name of Lenin was applauded. The vicious Los Angeles Times, commenting on the death of Lenin, took comfort in the Petrograd dispatches telling of the "fall" of Trotzky. Unfortunately for the comfort of the Times Trotzky's position as military commissar has just been confirmed by the Russian government and the unity of the administration under Rykov guarantees a continuation of proletarian power.

NEW YORK. — Meetings of the French branch of the Workers Party are held Tuesday evening, each week, at 8:30, at 143 East 103d street.

EXPERTS HUNT OIL PROFITS IN BROKERS' BOOKS

Look for Speculations by High Officials

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Federal trade commission experts have been turned loose on books of Washington brokers, hunting for huge profits believed made by governmnet officials thru trading in oil stock just before the Teapot Dome lease became public.

Members of the senate committee investigating Teapot Dome called in the trade commission's experts to go thru brokers' records when the brokers objected to submitting their books to the committee on the ground that they were too voluminous to be taken to the capital.

Senator Walsh, chief investigator on the senate public lands committee, which is in charge of the inquiry into the naval oil leasing scandal, has been trying for months to trace down rumors that there was big speculation by officials before the lease was announced.

Chairman Lenroot announced that hearings of the committee have been postponed for several days out of respect to the memory of ex-President Wilson. Lenroot made no effort to have passed today a resolution continuing the powers of the committee.

This was planned to meet objection of former Secretary of the Interior Fall, charged with improper actions in connection with the leases. Fall refused to testify before the committee Saturday and passage of a new empowering resolution is necessary for the committee to compel him to tell his story.

Meantime Atlee Pomerene, the new Democratic counsel selected by President Coolidge to aid in court action for cancellation of the leases, held a series of conferences with senators. He began an immediate study of the evidence and suit is expected to be filed possibly within the week.

Letters to 'The Daily'

Against the Color Line.

To The DAILY WORKER: In the January 29 issue of The DAILY WORKER there appeared an article by Lovett-Fort-Whiteman, entitled, "The Negro in the Industries," where he charges that the white worker excludes the negro from his unions. Enclosed you will find a clipping from the International Molders' Journal, where it shows that the Molders' Union takes in any worker regardless of his race, color or religion, providing he served four years as an apprentice at the trade, or if he works at a machine takes him in sooner, but as a machine operator. The United Mine Workers takes in colored folks, too. So if you would rectify that statement by Lovett-Fort-Whiteman, in regard to this matter, it would clarify the issue considerably in regard to the white and colored workers.—JOHN TOMASI.

St. Paul or Bust!

The professional politicians, the pussyfooters, the gum-shoers, the office-seekers, and political traders in general are moving heaven and earth in an effort to "kill" the May 30th unity meet to be held at St. Paul.

A little handful of their tribe met at Washington the other day. After carefully examining the premises to see that no "comoonists" were lurking about, they went on record for "postponement of the May 30th convention until after the Democrat and Republican conventions." Such a proposal is nothing more than the vilest treason to the interests of the wage-workers and farmers, and must not be given consideration, if the farmer-labor movement is to succeed.

Certain followers of this aggregation attempted to put across a similar measure at the Denver farmer-labor convention, but were howled out of court. "Exclude the reds" was the slogan of this element at Denver, but they found that the real dirt farmers and wage-earners would tolerate no such disruptive efforts when the conference went on record as opposed to the barring of any progressive elements from the St. Paul convention.

The May 30th convention is an attempt on the part of the workers and farmers to do something for themselves. They are not going to St. Paul to establish a party of professional office seekers. The political job-hunters who go to St. Paul will get further if they conduct themselves accordingly.

The Lewis Convention

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—"For WHAT PURPOSE does the delegate arise?" is a phrase that is familiar to the ears of any miner or other person that has sat in a miners' convention since the one in 1919 at Cleveland, O.

Those are the words that must be answered by every delegate to a miners' convention since John L. Lewis began to ACT as President of the United Mine Workers of America in 1919.

Not only must that query be answered, but the answer must meet the approval of Lewis before the delegate is accorded the privilege of speaking, for Lewis rules with an iron heel. Just as familiar as the query is his stereotyped answer for when one mingles with a group of men who have attended conventions of this numerically strong union, he often hears the remarks of Lewis used in a jocular way, and so much so that many miners who have never been to a convention, and who have never seen or heard Lewis in action, will answer to that query the words "SIT DOWN, THE DELEGATE IS NOT IN ORDER".

Those are the familiar words of Lewis and he uses them so often that it would not be surprising if he disturbs his slumber during the night by thinking he is presiding over a miners convention.

To call him a DEMAGOGUE or a TYRANT would be putting it mildly, and I doubt seriously if one possessing a vocabulary the equal of Lewis' own could find words sufficiently strong to properly classify him.

Lewis has done more than any other one person to bring about the present state of affairs in the miners union, and it is only a matter of time until he will pass into oblivion, as far as the miners union is concerned.

The "wonderful victory" he is claiming over the rank and file, is not a victory, it was a slaughter, and he knows better than any other person that as soon as the delegates return home and report, that the reaction will be such as to rock the very foundation of the miners union. In that convention on every issue he took the same identical position that one would expect an agent of WALL STREET to take, and his action on the Ku Klux Klan when he made his voice conspicuous by its silence, he showed conclusively that he was either in favor of it or else he is afraid of the "NIGHTY" gang, whichever guess is right is sufficient proof that he is not a fit person to lead a labor organization.

The same goes for Murray and Green. By their acts they shall be known. The beginning of the end of that regime has begun, and when, and not until the end of the tyrant reign is passed, the old United Mine Workers of America will be able to march to greater glories for the men who pay the DUES.

"Sub" Campaign Is Catching the Imagination of Chicago Militants

"Why wait until February 10?" seems to be the only complaint concerning the great DAILY WORKER subscription campaign which was announced for Chicago in yesterday's issue of THE DAILY WORKER. Otherwise the news of the campaign has been received with universal satisfaction.

"One thousand new readers by March 10" has caught the imagination of the present readers of the only militant daily in America and scores of them are "set to go" as soon as the word is given.

The managers of the campaign advise those who are impatient to get started, not to wait but to get some good practice for the campaign proper by collecting subs in the meantime.

A considerable difference of opinion has been created over the matter of prizes for the winners of the campaign. It is argued that no matter who gets the most subs, the working-class is the winner if the campaign goes over big, which seems to be taken for granted. However, THE DAILY WORKER has resolved to give prizes of material worth to those who make the best record during the subscription drive and the vote falls on the determination of what the prize shall be. One ambitious comrade who expects to be a contender for first prize suggests that be a portable typewriter. The campaign managers are open to other suggestions. Bring them to the campaign meeting which will be held at the Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division Ct., Thursday evening, Feb. 7, at 8:15 P. M. Every militant in Chicago who wants to help THE DAILY WORKER grow will be there.

LETTISH WORK DEMAND AMER RECOGNIZE RUS

Tell How Riga M factures Lies

Smith Hall, Hamlin and Madi St., Chicago, was crowded to capac with Lettish workers from Chic and vicinity, where a mass meeti was held to discuss the question o recognition of the Russian Soviet government and opening of trade relations between this country and th government of the Russian people Many of those present were new arrivals from Latvia, the neighboring country of Russia.

Speakers told how in Riga, the capital city of Latvia, lies and slanders were fabricated and propagated for the purpose to poison the minds of the Latvian workers against the Soviet Government. Having come to the United States, they find that the same lies are circulated here and many these lies given official recognition.

At the end of the meeting, following resolution was read and adopted by acclamation:

RESOLVED, by a mass meeting of several hundred Letts, originally from Latvia, assembled in Smith Hall, Chicago, Ill., Saturday, Feb. 2, 1924, that we are in favor of full recognition of the Russian Soviet Government by the Government of the United States and that diplomatic and trade relations between these two countries be established without further delay, for the benefit of the people of these United States and the people of Soviet Russia.

RESOLVED to declare our conviction and belief, that the allegations against the Russian Soviet Government and is nothing short of czarist propaganda, carried on by czarist elements in Europe and in this country or in their behalf, by the paid agents, and be it further

RESOLVED that a copy of the resolution be sent to Senator Borah, Washington, D. C., and copies given to the press.

Tribune, Leading Faker, Squeals at Russ Censor

The Chicago Tribune, which been caught red handed in the gr est lies against the Soviet Republ now finds its correspondent forbi den in Russia unless he complies wi certain censorship provisions.

The Tribune's correspondent pu his refusal to accept the Russi conditions on the basis of a devotion to the principles of free press and untrammelled correspondence.

One of the worst instances of Tribune news faking on Russia was its publication in 1921 of a street-fighting picture alleged to have been taken during certain made-out-of-whole-cloth 1921 riots. The picture was actually dug out of Tribune files. It first appeared in 1917.

The Tribune will be little perturbed by the absence of a Russian correspondent. It can lie just as well from the outside. Furthermore the Tribune has such a provincial news policy, that the loss of some Russian news will make little difference in view of its sewer flood of Chicago scandal and crime news.

Bandits Get Big Sum.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 4.—Between $10,000 and $15,000 was obtained by bandits in daylight holdup followed by a revolver battle here today.

The money was the Saturday and Sunday receipts of the Finkelstein and Ruben Theatres in St. Paul.

The bandits, believed to be at least five in number, apparently had been waiting for the bank messengers to leave the movie offices.

UNINVITED GUESTS AT MINERS' CONVENTION

By NATALIE GOMEZ and KITTY HARRIS.

"DAILY WORKER, 3 cents a copy," was the first sound that greeted the miners at the opening of the Miners' Convention in Tomlinson Hall, Indianapolis, Ind. The sight of two girls with bundles of THE DAILY was very unusual among a crowd of sturdy, hard-handed coal-diggers. Many of them stopped and, after eying us curiously, bought the paper. Most of them did not even know that it was a labor paper and we had to answer all sorts of questions about it. It was not long tho before they found out that the DAILY WORKER was not just a labor paper but, as many remarked, "the best labor paper they have ever seen."

At first our sales were limited to the group of so-called reds, most of whom, with the exception of the Workers Party members, saw the paper for the first time. Steadily our sales began to increase. Even those who did not boast any radical sympathies, bought the paper regularly, because, as they themselves said, "it was the only paper that gave a detailed and correct report of the convention and news of the labor world." After three days we were able to sell from 450 to 500 copies a day and many of the delegates gave us 5, 10 and even 25 cents for a copy. They regarded the paper as an absolute necessity. If we happened to be a few minutes later than usual, we would find a crowd anxiously waiting for us on the street. Praises and compliments were showered on the paper—too many to quote here. A large number of miners asked us to send the paper home every day during the convention, assuring us that once their friends get to know "The Daily" they will be sure to subscribe.

The DAILY WORKER was not the only thing we sold. At every meeting held by the progressives and the Workers Party we had a table with a selection of all the latest magazines, party pamphlets, books and a few of Upton Sinclair's novels. It was all very new to the miners and they bought freely, fascinated by the range of subjects dealt with in the pamphlets and books.

It was the unanimous opinion of the comrades in Indianapolis that The DAILY WORKER had a very significant effect on the convention. It helped the progressives to shape their minds and the influence was evident that a mere handful of about 25 or 30 party members had solidified a group of hundreds who voted with them on every issue. The propaganda value of "The Daily" was not confined to the convention. Many of the miners coming from districts where there is no Party organization realized the necessity of forming it and were discussing ways and means of circulating The DAILY WORKER in their locality as a start in this work. We expect that the results of getting this large body of miners, coming from every mining district of the country, acquainted with The DAILY WORKER, will be felt in the near future. As one of the comrades said, "the advertising value cannot be figured in dollars and cents." (Speaking of dollars and cents, the total amount of literature sold was $340.00.)

In closing, we want to extend ou appreciations to the miners wh supported The DAILY WORKE and the splendid attitude that they displayed to us personally. With the exception of a few rather nasty remarks from the officials we have never received anything but the most cordial and comradely treatment from the rank and file of the delegation. And their farewell words were: "Hope to see you at the next convention!"

TON CULTURE HAST AT RISE F RED ACTIVITY

shevism Is Winning in the U. S. A.

By H. M. WICKS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass.—Staid and conser-ative Boston, always alert to add to s laurels as defender of that meta-hysical entity called "Americanism" as made the startling discovery that he Department of Commerce at Washington is under the domination of a Bolshevik sympathizer, Mr. Herbert Hoover. This was revealed to the writer and William Simons, organizer of District 1, Workers Party of America, by an elegant lady acting as a guide at an anti-Red display, held at 280 Dartmouth Street, this city. Before visiting this address, we had been under the impression that Bolshevism was gaining in the United States, but we never before had the slightest inkling of the number of people that had been affected by this revolutionary propaganda.

Displays Weekly Worker

A full page article in the BOSTON TRANSCRIPT of January 24, dealing with the Red menace to the United States and containing a reproduction of the first page of the Weekly Worker containing the proclamation of the Workers Party regarding the Hughes forgery against Soviet Russia, concluded with the information that an exhibit of Revolutionary literature and other forms of propaganda was being held at the Dartmouth Street address which was open to the public.

We decided to investigate, so we started out the next morning in quest of the place which we located in the aristocratic Back Bay district of Boston. Upon entering the room we were greeted by a middle aged lady who informed us that an admission price of fifty cents was required. We invested the required amount and entered a room with walls profusely decorated with newspapers, posters, proclamations, etc. Four large tables contained pamphlets, books and leaflets alleged to have emanated from Red sources. A sec-nd lady somewhat more aged than e first escorted us around the room xplaining the sinister machinations f those horrible Bolsheviks who are t to wreck our sublime government.

"Young Comrade" Exhibited

he lady asked us precisely what were interested in and we said othing in particular, but we were urious to see the whole display. Not nowing where to start her expose we ggested that propaganda in the hools was rather interesting, so she rst selected a pamphlet issued by the Workers Educational Bureau, an institution founded by Matthew Woll of the Gompers dynasty. This she informed us was one of the most diabolical conspiracies for the propagation of Bolshevism under the guise of education that is known. Nearby were copies of the "Young Comrade" with heavy underscoring in pencil of a paragraph dealing with young workers ignoring gods in the sky and concentrating upon the problems of their every-day life here.

The inconsistency of the display and the simple naivete of the lady was revealed when she next showed us an hysterical folder issued by the A. F. of L. containing all the banalities of the Chester Wright-William English Walling libels against Soviet Russia and the Communist International. When informed that the Workers Educational folder was issued by the A. F. of L. the lady merely muttered an inaudible sentence and hastened to show us the rest of the exhibit. Next we were shown a page of the New York Times, containing an article by the notorious renegade Socialist and preverter of Marx, John Spargo, wherein he reviled the Soviet regime and hailed American democracy as the protector of humanity.

Hoover a Bolshevik

Mr. Herbert Hoover, we were informed is a dangerous Red sympathizer and succeeded in obtaining an appropriation of "taxpayers money" for the famine in Russia. She also related how Hoover and the big packers, principally Armour & Co., are in a conspiracy to repeat the performance with the German famine as an excuse. According to our hysterical guide the packers have a large surplus of meat they want to get rid of and Hoover is trying to assist them rob the government by purchasing this surplus at "government prices"—hatever those are. This so astonished us that we remained speechless on the subject.

Next the lady assailed the Rev. L. O. Hartmann, editor of Zion Herald, and amidst many innuendos and suspicious gestures conveyed the information that Rev. Hartmann was seriously suspected of radical connections too horrible to mention.

Again she turned to the Young Workers League and displayed a copy of the Young Worker, a weekly publication of the League. She expressed grave forebodings over the future of the youth of the country if such propaganda were permitted. Asked if she thought this was also from foreign sources, she surprised us by saying, "Well, it is hard to tell, but you Americans can realize what this means." Evidently she thought us safe with her confidences, so she said she was a Canadian, but that she had been here since she was very young—obviously a long time ago. She implied that she considered herself still a Canadian by referring to us as "you Americans."

Exhibits Daily Worker

On one table was a complete file of the Daily Worker and the lady said this was a particularly ominous development—a Communist Daily paper. The Federated Press bulletin was also prominently displayed.

Another table contained a display of Communist literature, Communist Party membership cards, stamps, buttons, etc. A copy of Bishop Brown's "Communism and Christianism" was displayed and the guide almost forgot she was an elegant lady in heaping vituperation upon the Bishop. He had disgraced "the cloth" and as an Episcopalean, she resented such impudence. When she showed us a display of literature under the head of "Feminism" we were regaled with the sinister machinations of Miss Alice Paul of the Woman's Party who is endeavoring to destroy the American home. The elegant guide had much to say derogatory to "these maiden ladies" who talk about how to run a home; the implication being that the conduct of homes is the exclusive prerogative of New England ladies of the Back Bay district. A peculiar twist of the lady's particular form of reaction was exhibited in her denunciation of the Woman's Party effort to introduce an "equal rights" bill in various state legislatures on the ground that such a bill would destroy the protection of women in the home. In her opposition to that bill she was unconsciously supporting the agitation of the Women's Trade Union League, which is fighting the bill as a reactionary measure because it would take away the protective legislation for women in industry. Altho this bill of the Woman's Party was viciously reactionary, she imagined it contained a threat of Bolshevism.

Anti-religious posters next incited her fury. There were a group of posters from the Communist Party of Russia depicting the tributes paid by the peasantry to the priests on the occasions of birth, baptism, marriage, and death. On another poster which she exhibited and which was mentioned in the Transcript the day before was a cartoon depicting a workman with a large hammer climbing up the stairs of heaven menacing a row of grotesque figures with flowing beards that could be seen shrinking back from the top of the ladder. The figures were labelled God, St. Peter, Gabriel, etc. The lady fairly gasped and for a time it seemed she would collapse of apoplexy trying to describe her fear of such propaganda.

Promised Expose a Fraud

The article in the Transcript the evening before conveyed the notion that proof of Secretary of State Hughes charges against Soviet Russia, could be obtained at this "exhibit," but when we asked to see them we were told they were not there, but that they had evidence that they existed in Washington, D. C. Of course we considered it useless to tell the lady that her wonderful "exhibit" was merely a collection of well known publications, issued openy and that they could be obtained anywhere. A few foreign language pamphlets had been contributed by Boris Brasol and by the pen prostitute R. M. Whitney, who recently peddled some stale documents to the Transcript for pelf.

Our guide told us that another woman, a Mrs. Frothingham, one of the Back Bay residents who moves in the most ancient circles in Boston, really knew all about this thing and that she was sorry she was absent, as we could get a great real of startling information from her.

If Mrs. Frothingham is more naive than our guide, she must be totally bereft of what passes for human intelligence. The husbands of such women must find it very easy to concoct fairy tales that are acceptable when they decide to enjoy some of their nights away from home.

Such people are hang-overs from the old days of Boston, when the detestible textile bourgeois originated their "culture" based upon the unrequited slavery of men, women and children in the mills of New England. They still strive to preserve the shell of their former cultural surroundings and resent alike the intrusion of heavy industry and the revolt of the proletariat that accompanies it. Hence they direct their attacks upon both. Tho today most of the husbands of such women have abandoned the control of textile mills and devote their time to clipping coupons, the women cling to the old textile psychology.

When not engaged in conducting rummage sales and other "charitable" work they have heretofore spent their time gossiping about their married companions who have been seduced by the husbands of their set. The Red expose has given them a new thrill and now these elegant Bostonians spend their time repeating every idle tale, every libel concocted by the swinish inebriates serving as foreign correspondents in the counter-revolutionary cess-pools of Old Europe and enlarging upon the plagiarisms of Walling, Wright and Spargo, creatures who are incapable of concocting their own lies.

The Power Column

The Bulwark of THE DAILY WORKER.

"I want to help make THE DAILY WORKER grow." That is the slogan that is being adopted by hundreds of the livest militants in the country, adopted and put into practice to such an extent that in the three weeks of its existence, the circulation of THE DAILY WORKER has been increased more than 50 per cent.

As the army of DAILY WORKER agents increases in numbers and in efficiency the circulation of THE DAILY WORKER also increases and becomes solidified. The bulwark of THE DAILY WORKER is "The-I-want-to-help-THE DAILY WORKER-grow" battalion.

Just what impetus is given to the circulation increase in those localities where THE DAILY WORKER agents are best organized and on the job has already been shown in the comparison between the new subscribers secured in "organized" and "unorganized" territory. In Detroit, in Cleveland, Toledo, in far away Los Angeles where The DAILY WORKER agents have really been organized and are functioning in an organized manner, the circulation has already reached more than double the figure which had been reached by the Weekly Worker circulation. In small cities, particularly those in which there are strong Finnish Workers Party branches whose organization had been perfected in behalf of the Finnish dailies, The DAILY WORKER circulation has increased five and in some cases tenfold. And unfortunately in other localities, some of them where the militant movement is in other respects strong and thriving, The DAILY WORKER circulation has hardly increased at all, simply because no organized effort has been made to bring The DAILY WORKER to the notice of the working class.

Recruits for the "I want to make The DAILY WORKER grow" battalion are wanted in every city and town. Every militant man or woman, boy or girl, who carries within him the flame of rebellion and the desire for working class progress is eligible for membership in its ranks. Those who really do want to participate in the building of the strength of the working class thru the extension of the circulation and influence of The DAILY WORKER will write to The DAILY WORKER business manager and ask, "Tell me how I can help."

Kansas City Has Suggestion.

Nelson Sorenson, city agent for The DAILY WORKER in Kansas City, Mo., makes an excellent suggestion. "In looking over the list of DAILY WORKER subscribers in Kansas City," writes Comrade Sorenson, "I note a number of names and addresses which are incorrect. Please make the changes as noted. We can build our circulation more rapidly and on a firmer foundation on the basis of 100 per cent service to our subscribers."

Nothing can be more important for the welfare of The DAILY WORKER than such service as Comrade Sorenson suggests. We want to be sure that every subscriber receives his paper promptly and regularly. An accredited city agent can secure at any time a list of The DAILY WORKER subscribers in his city. With this in his possession he will not only be able to assure first-rate service for all subscribers but also he will be able to know what subscriptions are expiring and thus be able to secure the renewals.

What suggestions have you to make for the betterment of The DAILY WORKER administration? What methods have you found work best in building The DAILY WORKER circulation. Send them to THE POWER COLUMN and give the rest of The DAILY WORKER boosters the benefit of your experience.

LIBERTIES' UNION DEFIES LEGION TO WRECK MEETINGS

Threatens Court Action Against Vandals

Court action against the American Legion if it interferes with Lenin memorial meetings scheduled in various parts of the country was forecast in a protest wired to John R. Quinn, national commander of the American Legion, by the American Civil Liberties Union today claiming that "the rights of free speech and peaceful assemblage are at stake."

Protests against threatened Legion interference were also wired to the mayors of Ansonia, Bridgeport, New Haven, Hartford and Stamford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass.

The protests were sent following the breaking up by armed members of the Legion of a Lenin memorial meeting in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., on Sunday, and after press dispatches indicated that local Legion posts contemplated action in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

In reply to one of the Union's telegrams, Mayor John C. Mead of Ansonia has promised that the Lenin memorial meeting scheduled for Sunday at the city hall under the auspices of the Workers Party "will be permitted to go on despite opposition," if conducted in a lawful manner.

The attention of the Legion commandant was called to the resolution adopted by the Legion's San Francisco convention, aimed at the Ku Klux Klan, which characterized as "un-American, a menace to our liberties, and destructive of our fundamental law any group of individuals, or organization, which creates or fosters radical, religious, or class strife among our people; or which takes into its own hands the enforcement of the law, determination of guilt, or infliction of punishment."

Suits for felonious assaults are already being filed by attorneys for the Civil Liberties Union against members of the American Legion in Wilkes-Barre, as well as against Mayor Daniel L. Hart of that city, who is alleged to have furnished the raiders with police assistance.

In a telegram to the Union Mayor Hart declared he would not tolerate "any organization meeting in Wilkes Barre which is opposed by the American Legion. All meetings of this character in the future will be submitted to the Legion committees for approval before they are permitted."

Prof. Harry F. Ward, chairman of the Civil Liberties Union, issued a statement in which he said: "No more dangerous precedent can be set than to turn over the regulation of free speech and assembly to a military organization. The meetings in question are within the law. No statute prohibits American citizens from meeting to mourn the death of any person."

Home Rule Gives Mayor Czar's Power, Says N. Y. Labor

By FREDERICK KUH

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

NEW YORK—Vigorous opposition developed against the proposed Home Rule Enabling Act during a hearing before the special commission of the state assembly. In general, the bill envisages a large transfer of power from the state to city and town governments.

While the bill will probably be overhauled and greatly modified, its ultimate passage is considered certain. The hearings at Albany, however, have evoked hostile criticism of the bill from important labor groups.

The substance of this criticism is that it would grant mayors "czaristic" power, that it would enable municipal governments to perpetuate their rule indefinitely, and that taxpayers would be unable to stem the spendthrift habits of prodigal local legislatures.

Speaking before the assemblymen, John M. O'Hanlon, chief of the State Federation of Labor, warned them that the bill, as now drafted, neglects the referendum as a method of popular government. The Labor spokesman insisted that all charter amendments be submitted to the voters by referendum. He demanded emphatically that legislative power in New York City be vested in the Board of Aldermen.

Klan, Not Russia, Menaces America, Says Arbitrator

The Arbitrator, a monthly liberal publication, sees more likelihood of the Ku Klux Klan taking over the American government than the Soviets and says:

"Even now senators are afraid to come out openly against the invisible empire, altho they speak all they know and more about Russia."

America's refusal to discuss Russia's invitation to a claim conference that would bring acknowledgement, not only of America's claims against Russia but Russia's claims against America creates the suspicion in the Arbitrator's mind that America did send troops to Russia and did lend money to be used against the Soviets and did propagandize for the violent overthrow of the Russian government.

Death of Lenin Brings a Rush to Communist Party

MOSCOW. — Thousands of workers have applied for admission to the ranks of the Communist Party since the passing of its great leader. Lenin's death has aroused a tremendous sympathetic response from the peasants and industrial workers and brought home to them the role of the organization in the salvation of Russia during the days of the revolution and counter revolution and recent changing economic conditions.

News of the recognition of the Soviet Government by the British labor administration was received quietly in Moscow, as something expected. It is felt to show that the international position of Russia is stronger than ever—in spite of the death of Lenin.

The Soviet Congress passed a resolution in reply extending a fraternal greeting to British labor.

Press comment is that America must speed up recognition or it will be left far behind in the race for trade.

For Recognition of Soviet Russia!

NEW YORK. — As the result of a recent referendum, the May convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union will be held in Boston. The returns showed Baltimore limping in a lame second. President Sigman has appointed a committee to complete arrangements for the convention.

Amalgamation Is Making Progress in Shoe Industry

HAVERHILL, Mass.—The agitation for amalgamation in the shoe industry has resulted in a referendum vote in the United Shoe Workers of America, favoring amalgamation with the Shoe Workers Protective Union.

The amalgamation will give the enlarged Shoe Workers Union a membership estimated at 27,000; headquarters of the enlarged union will be located in Boston, where the officials of the two organizations met today to make the final canvass of the vote.

The United Shoe Workers of America has locals in Lynn, Rochester, N. Y., Brockton, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

The Brockton District Shoe Workers Union, which was the outcome of the boot and shoe autocracy, has made every effort to bring about amalgamation of the numerous independent shoe unions and deserves the credit of the present "merger" of two of the unions, which will follow the Amalgamated and the Brockton District following suit of the United and combining the membership of all four.

It is believed by active members who have carried on the work for amalgamation under severe handicaps that a campaign for the organization of the shoe industry can now be launched with good prospects of success.

FORWARD'S LIES AGAINST RUSSIAN RELIEF NAILED

Repetition of Stale Slander Gets Reply

(By F. S. R. Press Service)

The Jewish Daily Forward has again opened fire against the Friends of Soviet Russia, singing the same old song.

On January 28, 1924, they say: "The Friends of Soviet Russia pretended they were collecting for Russia, but in reality they used the money for Communist propaganda."

That's nothing new. The British ex-spy said it in a speech before the Chicago Chamber of Commerce. The American Legion has said it. The Department of Justice said it. The Jewish Daily Forward said it many times last year, and says it again today. The secretary of the Civic Federation said it, and finally convinced the district attorney of New York to subpoenae our books, and office staff. We were summoned to the office of the district attorney, questioned and released—but the books were kept.

Charges Found False.

A committee of five nationally known men investigates these charges made by this same paper a year ago, and exonerated us. Their findings were printed in leaflet form both in English and in Jewish. The committee consisted of Robert Morse Lovett of the New Republic and the University of Chicago; Timothy Healy of the Stationery Firemen and Engineers' Union; Norman Thomas of the League for Industrial Democracy and member of the Socialist Party and Roger N. Baldwin of the Civil Liberties Union.

Our books were at the office of the district attorney of New York for six months where expert accountants were at work on them, trying to find some reason for justifying these charges. They were returned to our office on November 20, 1923, WITHOUT ANY CHARGES.

We have published regularly financial statements of our accounts in our official organ.

Accounts Were Published.

In the issue of September 1, 1922 (end of the first fiscal year), we published a detailed account of the 17 shiploads of food, medicine, machinery and clothing sent to Russia, which totalled $725,000. In the issue of September, 1923, end of the second fiscal year, we published detailed account of the 16 shiploads totalling $50,000. In addition to this, cash has been remitted as per our printed reports.

The Jewish Daily Forward, on the other hand, has sponsored and helped a Jewish People's Relief Committee, which has never been officially investigated.

Challenge Forward.

We chalelnge the Forward to open the books of this relief committee to the same investigating committee.

We challenge the Forward to publish audited financial reports of their relief committee.

We challenge the Forward to explain to the public why it accepted advertisements from the Russian Relief Forwarders.

This company took money from hundreds of Jewish workers and promised to send their packages, duty-free, to their relatives in Russia. Instead, the packages were left to rot on the docks and the senders were never reimbursed. We have been informed that the responsible people of this company are being prosecuted. But the Forward has said nothing about this scandal, tho it was responsible, since it was upon their recommendation that these workers were swindled.

We challenge the Jewish Daily Forward to explain why they do not tell their readers about these "Relief Forwarders."

Fight to Release Communists In Pa. State Prisons

Repeal of the Flynn Anti-Sedition Law, the release of four men serving long terms under the statute, and the curbing of local police power to choke off meetings are aimed at in a campaign to "establish the right to think and speak" in Pennsylvania, Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, told an audience at the Open Forum of Harrisburg, state capitol.

The Civil Liberties Union, Baldwin announced, will file petitions this month for the pardon of the four men, all of whom are in Western Penitentiary. Joseph Martinowich and Israel Blankstein, communists, and Charles Spinack and Steve Zonoff, members of the Union of Russian Workers, are the men involved, serving terms up to five years.

Ordinary civil rights, Baldwin stated, are trodden under foot by the industrial interests of Pennsylvania. The situation has brought the union, he said, into a series of fights for the rights of free speech and assemblage.

"The closed soft coal mining districts dominated by the coal companies," he declared, "together with the steel towns of Western Pennsylvania, are places where ordinary civil rights are so difficult of exercise that the issue crops out time and again. We have sent our lawyers and speakers into these districts on several occasions to aid the workers in testing their rights against privately-controlled authorities."

Secret Diplomacy Hides Facts in Big Loans to Mexicans

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY.—Two hundred million pesos ($100,000,000) are to be loaned to Mexico if the plans of American bankers and the federal government here are carried thru.

For more than two weeks, Franklin Helm, banking agent, and for more than a week, J. M. Buckner, a "higher up," have been hanging around the Hotel Regis here, tighter than clams to interviewers.

But I have learned that they are negotiating the above loan, that they do not want to pay the first 5,000,000 pesos in almighty dollars but in the form of 100,000 rifles and abundant ammunition for the same (incidentally, the rifles coming here require American bullets).

Then they are planning to deliver 45,000,000 pesos in dollars to make up the first quarter of the total. But what I cannot find out is what strings are to be tied to the spending of that 45,000,000, nor what "effective guarantees" are to be made for the collecting of the loan and what concessions of Mexican sovereignty the bankers are fishing for.

The state department of the United States has full knowledge of the projected loan, its prospective terms and the state of negotiations. A full agreement has not yet been reached here.

WASHINGTON. — A model workmen's compensation bill with state insurance fund features is proposed for the District of Columbia by the legislative council of the labor forces here. It is likely to pass the house with progressive and Democratic support, and to have at least a chance of passage in the senate before the national election.

Watch the "Daily Worker" for the first installment of "A Week," the great epic of the Russian revolution, by the brilliant young Russian writer, Iury Libedinsky. It will start soon.

QUAINT SIDE SHOW CONVENTION HELD BY EX-FORD MEN

To Fight Money Devil Without Hen's Dough

By TOM MATTHEWS

OMAHA, Neb.—The citizens of Omaha and adjacent territories were treated to an amusement festival last week, when the national convention of the combined Independent Progressive Party, American Economic League, Peoples' Progressive Party, and Ford-for-President Clubs held forth at Hotel Castle.

After solemnly deciding that Henry Ford could not be their candidate for the Presidency (Henry having slammed the door in their face) this aggregation of side-show artists came to the conclusion that they would have to choose from their own ranks Messiahs who would buckle on the armor of Righteousness, and go forth to do battle with the horrid "Money Power."

Roy Harrop to Rescue

Roy M. Harrop, of the big words and long promises held the center of the stage as is his usual custom. After flaying the Shylocks who "strangle the life blood from the nation thru their control of the currency" the valiant Roy proceeded to advise his flock that "all the banks were certain to fail, from the Big Banks in Omaha, to the bank in Podunk Center." He did not say that far-sighted progressives should withdraw their money and entrust it to the tender care of Genius Harrop, but who would dare to question the motives of such a sterling champion of the "people?"

Every One Does Stunt

After the "delegates" had exhibited their particular stunts in turn, the National Convention gravely proceeded to choose Presidential nominees. They themselves being the "real progressives" they could not aFord to wait for the St. Paul meet on May 30th, that being only a Red Plot anyway.

Robert R. Pointer of Detroit, a self-confessed friend of Henry Ford, modestly offered himself as a sacrifice for the cause, and received the Presidential nomination. Roy Harrop could not be left out in the cold, cruel world, so he was rewarded for his manly attempts to "do good" by being made the party nominee for vice-president.

To Invade Wall Street

Meantime, Harrop announces that the headquarters of the "party" will be removed to New York City, where the fight will be carried directly to the door of the "Money Power." Just who will be the goat for the expenses is not as yet quite clear. If the faithful can be frightened into withdrawing their shekels from the "banks of the money kings" mere matters of expense should present no obstacles, at least not to the undaunted Harrop.

Vigorous, Virile Viking Music at Popular Concert

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

Dazzling brilliance and honeyed sentimentality characterized the popular concert of the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Orchestra Hall Thursday evening. Mr. Stock's conducting arm has been injured, and so Mr. DeLamarter directed most of the program.

The major composition was Mendelssohn's Italian symphony. It is a cheerful, refined work, but rather spineless in melody and development, and not in the least suggestive of Italian music, or of things Italian.

As an encore to this DeLamarter played Godard's "Adagio Pathetique," which turns the ninety men of the orchestra into one great, singing, lyrical voice, and building up into a climax of powerful tone.

Then came some vigorous, virile Viking music in the Sigurd Jorsalfar suite of Grieg, and the same master's Solveig's song, in the Peer Gynt music. Two movements of the Sigurd were played, the prelude, and the pompous march.

Mr. Stock, himself, directed the second half of the program, with his left hand, because his right was in a sling. The orchestra played the suite of Spanish dances from Massenet's opera "Le Cid." This is a veritable musical hot tamale, with excited Spaniards in red costume dancing furiously all the way thru it.

As an encore we were treated to one of the worst things in the repertory, the love scene from Glazounov's "Ruses d' Amour." This gives a cello and a violin the chance to wail at each other most sickeningly.

The concert closed with the finale of "Das Rheingold," by Wagner. The music depicts, as only Wagner could make music depict, the grand and solemn entry of the gods into Valhalla. It contains Wagner's most lamentable failure. As the gods are passing in stately fashion over the rainbow bridge into the castle, they are supposed to hear the Rhinemaidens weeping over their lost gold. Now, these Rhinemaidens have a most operatic habit of weeping in three-part harmony. All the dramatic value of their part in the story of "Das Rheingold" is thus lost thru the stupidity of the music which they sing. In the concert version, played by the orchestra, their cries of harmonic anguish are given to three violins.

Ashleigh Writes About Strike of British Railroad Workers

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON.—I am writing this in London, on the first day of the strike of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, a strike on a national scale, which was called last night, at the stroke of twelve. To-day is the 21st of January.

And it is tonight that the vote of "No Confidence" in the Baldwin Government will be carried in the House of Commons, and tomorrow Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor Party, will be invited by the king to form a Labor government. Events are moving fast in Britain now.

The dispute had its origin in 1922, when the railway employers stated that they desired certain alterations made in the wage agreement existing between the companies and the unions. This agreement was made after the great strike of September, 1919. It provided certain basic rates of pay for the various grades, and also allowed for a sliding scale, computed according to the cost of living, for additional wages above the basic rates. According to this sliding scale, the wages on the railroads are now almost at the basic rate figures.

Three Railroad Unions.

There are three unions operating in the railway industry: the National Union of Railwaymen, which also includes some firemen and engineers, and is an industrial union; the Railway Clerks' Association, which, as the name implies, is confined to the clerical workers on the railroads; and the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen.

In 1922, the employers' demands for a reduction of wages were opposed by the three unions, and the companies did not press their demands. They bided their time. About six months ago, they resumed their offensive on the standard of living of the railway workers.

The matter came up before the Central Wages Board, upon which the unions and the employers are equally represented. It resulted in a disagreement. The matter was then referred to the National Wages Board. This board, which was created by the Railway Act of 1921, is composed of six representatives of the employers. Six representatives of the unions (two representatives from each of the three unions), four representatives of the users of the railroads (our old friends, the "public"), and an "independent" chairman, who is at present Sir William Mackenzie. The chairman is, however, a member of the employing class. Thus, the union representatives are in a minority of six to eleven. It is the old, old story.

Board Purely Consultative.

The National Wages Board has no power to enforce its decisions. It is a purely consultative body, formed in the hope that the differences between the employers and workers, on the railways, may be settled there, thru negotiations, and thus strikes may be avoided. Its decisions are, however, by no means binding. It may be compared to the adjustment machinery set up in the United States before the mining strike, except that it has a more official status.

The board issued a decision which was adverse to certain grades of the railroad workers. The National Union of Railway men accepted the decisions, thru its delegate conference, a body which has been criticised by some of the N. U. R. membership as being unrepresentative and reactionary. This conference accepted the board's findings by 59 votes to 20. The Railway Clerks' executive also accepted the award after a "canvass of feeling" among its members. The Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen took a ballot of its members, which resulted in a majority of 23,919 for the rejection of the award. This was an overwhelming majority. It should be noted that the A. S. L. E. F. was the only one of the three unions which took a real ballot of its membership on the matter.

The A. S. L. E. F. claims that the award would mean a loss to firemen on mileage trains of from nine to eighteen shillings a week, and that the wages of engineers would be reduced by eleven to twenty-two shillings weekly.

Face Loss In Wages.

Other drivers, not on mileage rates, would lose about six shillings a week. The award would also cause reductions in Sunday and overtime rates.

When the ballot against the award was returned, the A. S. L. E. F. tried, in every possible way, to avoid a strike. The employers were asked, again and again, to reopen negotiations. This they refused to do, and the railroad companies stated definitely that the new rates would be enforced on Sunday, Jan. 20. After repeated efforts to come to a settlement, on the part of the union, a strike was ordered.

In the meantime, the conduct of the reactionary leaders of the other railway union, the National Union of Railwaymen (N. U. R.) has caused great dissatisfaction and protest among their own members, as well as among the organized workers generally. In the great railway strike of 1919, when the N. U. R. came out against the employers, the A. S. L. E. F. had had its demands settled satisfactorily. Nevertheless, the A. S. L. E. F. also struck, out of sympathy with the N. U. R. men. But now the N. U. R. leaders have done their utmost to discredit the strike.

Thomas Plays His Role.

J. H. Thomas, of some notoriety as an arrant reactionary, has issued statements regarding the strike which are hardly credible, as coming from a leader of labor. In today's newspapers, he is credited with having said that "the strike is a complete fiasco." He, together with Cramp, industrial secretary of the N. U. R., has issued a manifesto to the N. U. R. membership stating that every member of the N. U. R. is expected to remain at work during the strike. Bromley, the leader of the A. S. L. E. F., has replied with spirit to the statements of Thomas, and has stated that all N. U. R. engineers and firemen who join the strike will receive strike benefits from the A. S. L. E. F.

The Labor Party executive has shown its distaste for the strike, which will, it evidently considers, embarrass the incoming Labor government. The "Daily Herald," in its editorial article today, adopts a most lukewarm tone. The strike is characterized as "regrettable," and it is hinted that the representatives of the A. S. L. E. F. did not sufficiently stress the men's grievance before the Wages Board. It also mentions the difference of opinion on the strike among the leaders of the various railway unions, and also states that these differences exist among the rank and file. The leader is mainly devoted to showing that the findings of the Wages Board are not binding, and that the men on strike, therefore, are not acting constitutionally. So far, so good. But the whole tone of the article is that of a prim parent chiding an erratic child.

The article opens with the statement: "We regard strikes as regrettable necessities at certain junctures so long as our present system endures. Not all are necessary; not all are prudent." Such a statement might be perfectly correct, in principle, but to print it at the very time that thousands of exploited workers are going into a desperate struggle to preserve their meager standard of living, is to affect the morale of the strikers most adversely. The "Daily Herald" is the official organ of the labor movement, political and industrial. It should have supported whole-heartedly the efforts of the members of the A. S. L. E. F. once they had decided to strike. The men are up against the tremendous forces of British capitalism, and the "Daily Herald" issues no call for their support, no ringing appeal for solidarity!

Support Their Own Ambitions.

Already the reformists and careerists of the Labor Party are showing their colors. They are rendering the task of the Communists easy by already exposing themselves as men who would subordinate the industrial movement of the workers, the mass action of the workers, to their parliamentary ambitions.

At present, despite Thomas's base statement to the contrary, the strike is succeeding. Reports, in the capitalist press, already show that the service on the railroads has been crippled. Bromley states that the strike will not reach its peak until Thursday. But already the country is witnessing the beginning of a great industrial struggle.

And, despite the treachery of Thomas, the membership of the N. U. R. is showing itself sound and wholesome. News is already coming in, from various localities, of engineers and firemen, who are members of the N. U. R., joining the strike. Protests against Thomas's action are arriving daily from N. U. R. branches.

The Communist Party of Great Britain, and the British Bureau of the Red International of Labour Unions, are in the fight to the finish, in support of the striking workers. The policy of the Party and the Bureau is as follows:

1. The immediate extension of the strike to all engineers and firemen who are members of the N. U. R., and to all other grades of railway workers. A general strike of all workers in the railroad transportation industry, is the slogan of the Party.

2. The further extension of the strike to road transport workers. This is to affect the thousands of workers in the motor road transport service. Already arrangements have been made by the state and the capitalists to replace railroad transport as much as possible by automobile transport. This puts the automobile transport workers in an excellent strategic position to force a betterment of their own conditions, as well as to show solidarity with the railroad workers, by striking.

3. Trades and Labor Councils in all localities are called upon by the Communist Party and the R. I. L. U. immediately to set up councils of action to co-ordinate all strike activities, and to bring together the workers of the various railway unions, as well as workers in other industries, in order to extend and support the strike. This will be the machinery for expressing the will of the masses for solidaric action, and for exerting rank-and-file pressure upon various leaders, and also to broaden the present strike out into a great mass movement.

Not an Isolated Strike.

This railway strike is no isolated event. Britain is approaching a period of tremendous working-class activity. It is the second wave, after the apathy and discouragement which came after the tragic betrayal of Black Friday in 1921.

Predicts Dockers' Strike.

A dock workers' nation-wide strike may be expected in the beginning of February. The miners have voted by a huge majority for the termination of their agreement with the bosses. A miners' strike appears inevitable in the near future.

Thus the great masses of the British workers, in the key industries of railroad and marine transportation, and of mining, are moving, are preparing for gigantic struggles with the master class.

The Labor government will have a difficult road to travel. It will soon be seen just how loyal to the workers' interests are the labor leaders who will form the new cabinet.

Shows the Fight Is On.

The second wave, of which Comrade Zinovieff has written, is beginning to touch Britain. The forces of the British proletariat are preparing for Titanic struggles, of which the present strike is the first.

The Communist Party and the Red International of Labor Unions are facing tremendous tasks in Britain, to win the workers to the adoption of a militant policy, to tear down the barriers of craft-union isolation, and to mobilize the workers for the impending battles with one of the strongest sections of the capitalist class in the world.

The fight is on; on with the fight!

Shipstead Shows Bank Failures and Number of Bankrupt Farmers Grow

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Senator Shipstead of Minnesota, in his maiden speech on the floor, declared that the western banks are being forced to close their doors, and the number of bankrupt farmers is being rapidly increased, by the government's policy of raising the rate it pays for money.

Under direction of Secretary Mellon, the interest rate of 4½ per cent, compounded semi-annually, is offered with Treasury savings certificates payable in five years. This has forced up the rate charged by banks to borrowers, and the farmers are less able than before to pay interest on loans.

He pointed out that a high interest rate is now being paid by the Treasury on $5,000,000,000 of floating and unfounding debt, and that there seems to be a concerted effort on the part of the Treasury and the federal reserve banks to maintain high rates.

Youth Views

Lack of School Space Encourages Industrial Home-Work

With the increasing number of child workers, the educational departments of state and federal government combine in urging a better school attendance of the children. The U. S. government issues special leaflets telling the parents to let their children stay in school despite unemployment.

The futility of such appeals, of course, is striking, when it is remembered that a child cannot go to school barefooted in winter, and that a breakfastless youngster makes a backward pupil, not to say a sick one.

But what amount of argument can cover up the fact that there are not enough seats for the children who are sent to school? In New York all sorts of makeshifts are adopted to crowd in a few hours of worthless study each day for thousands of children for whom no proper schooling provisions were made.

In Chicago the good news is handed out that now only 53,000 out of 312,000 public school children are not cared for properly. This means that more than one quarter of the children do not receive full school time, and many of them get only a half-day's attendance.

The conditions prevailing in the public schools in the large industrial centers of the United States encourage intensified exploitation of the children. In the poorer workers' homes, the parents utilize the time the children are home by keeping them busy at work at the many forms of industrial home-work doled out by nearly all of the smaller manufacturing establishments.

Exploit Mere Babies

What excuse has capitalism for existing in this country, when two year old children are forced to work? That mere babies help eke out a miserable existence was brought out in testimony before the New York Welfare Commission.

Of 2,000 families investigated, most of them did not have more than from $300 to $400 a year to maintain life.

The degradation of home work in the tenements, not only in New York, but thruout all the eastern manufacturing states, has been pointed out again and again by the Young Workers' League of America. The boss's political machinery does not even make a pretence of looking into such things.

We thought that American capitalism was at its worst in exploiting five and six year old kiddies for ten and twelve hours a day, but when we hear that two year old babies help make profits, we are sure that American capitalism, tho it has outlived its usefulness from an economic and political point of view, can still afford abundant surprises in new forms of brutalities.

FEWER JOBS AND LOWER WAGES IN WISCONSIN

122 Seek Every 100 Jobs Offered

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

Fewer jobs and lower earnings characterize the December report of the Wisconsin industrial commission. The number of employes on factory payrolls fell 1.3 per cent between November and December and reached a point 7 per cent below the high point of July. At the same time the number of applicants for each 100 jobs offered rose to 122. This means idle men looking for work.

Large reductions, says the report, are especially noted in building, highway and railroad construction work, while the whole list of industrial classifications is marked by declining employment except in the case of industries that are in season at this time of the year.

The total number of workers reported on factory payrolls in December was 79,757 as compared with 85,479 in July and 77,999 a year ago.

The sharp drop in employment in certain industries such as canning and preserving is seasonal. But in other important industries the number employed is very considerably below that in December, 1922. Thus manufacturers of brick, tile and cement blocks are employing 29 per cent fewer men than a year ago. Iron and steel plants report a drop of 23 per cent in the number of employes as compared with December, 1922. Decreases of 7 per cent were reported by foundries and machine shops, automobile plants and furniture makers. The tanning industry has 12 per cent and the boot and shoe industry 21 per cent fewer workers. While flour mills and railroad construction work are employing respectively 32 per cent and 25 per cent fewer men than a ye ago.

During December, 1923, the erage weekly pay envelope amou ed to $24.30, a decrease of 2.6 p cent from November and of 3 p cent from the high point of th year. The amount is still approxi mately 4 per cent higher than in December, 1922. The sharpest fall ing off in average earnings is foun among the metal trades with a decline from $29.40 to $27.80, or 5½ per cent. Workers in the automobile industry suffered a drop of over 27 per cent, their average pay fal ing from $28.75 to $20.86.

House Progressives in New Alliance with Democrats

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Progressives in the House have given formal notice that they will join with the democrats in defeating the Mellon plan of reduction of taxes on the rich.

Longworth, Gillett and their associates in the Old Guard in the House, are facing the same stone wall they faced in the rules fight—they cannot muster enough votes to carry any measure on which the Progressives can induce the democrats to take the opposition.

The Tribune and Wilson

The Chicago Tribune editorial on the death of Wilson is an illuminating screed. It is almost two columns long but it can be summarized in 13 words:

The Chicago Tribune liked Wilson, the war-maker, but it hated Wilson, the peace-maker. It says:

> Our chief admiration for Mr. Wilson is for the manner in which he drove the war activities once we were committed. That determination was evolved from his character. He used conscription. He furnished the allies with what they needed—men, money, and materials in the amounts needed.
> Weakness at this time might have ruined us. A man less determined to have his own way, less impervious to what was said of him, might have flinched at conscripting soldiers. He might have tried to fight the war with volunteers. He might even have tried to fight it with money and materials. He might have tried to spare the nation human sacrifices or to limit the expenditure of human life.
> Then we should have entered a losing war and have been among the losers, just in time to be in the wreckage. Conscription was his big decision and, whether he realized it or not, was his most dangerous one. Hughes might have had serious draft riots. From Wilson the people took the draft with hardly a murmur, and the war was won right then.

We call particular attention to the last sentence, quoted. This is the tribute paid by merican industrial capitalism to the liberal liberals who betrayed the confused masses hat saw in him an apostle of peace. It is damning testimony added to much already at hand to show the treacherous role played by middle-class liberals in times of great crisis.

It is in the fact that Wilson cajoled the masses into acting as docile cannon-fodder that The Tribune finds something admirable and its approval begins and ends with this shameful and bloody achievement of the Wilson administration.

The Mexican and domestic policies of Wilson bring editorial curses from The Tribune as es the internationalism of the House of organ that the Wilson mind rationalized as e league of nations.

We cannot understand the bitter hatred of pokesmen of industrial capital like the McCormick owned Tribune unless we are cogizant of the division on the question of for- policy in the ranks of the industrial and cial overlords.

e group, industrial capitalists, wants to e the American adventures in imperial- o the Western hemisphere; the other, e capitalists, see in Europe the most fer- field for investment and exploitation. There is much overlapping and interlocking of interest in these two groups but not enough to erase entirely this division.

Wilson, middle-class liberal, was elected as e advocate of a return to competition in dustry; his book, "The New Freedom," is e last wail of an expiring middle class altho discontented and unclear working class ccepted it as a defense of them.

Wilson soon found that the middle class does ot and cannot rule this nation. He had to choose between imperialism in Europe and the home-grown variety. He chose the former and ended by earning the undying enmity of both groups.

The liberals of the middle class in high office, or out of office for that matter, make their peace with heavy industry and finance-capital only when they are the smoke-screen behind which imperialism hides its mailed fist until such time as war comes as the inevitable result of the conflict of nations arising from the rivalry for new areas to loot.

Oil On Troubled Waters

The more the Senate looks into the now famous Teapot Oil Dome Leases the more men of high political prominence are involved.

The Teapot Oil scandal is an event of inestimable political importance. Now we are told that McAdoo, the white hope of the Democrats for the coming campaign and the presidential choice of many a reactionary labor leader, has also come in on about a quarter of a million dollars of Doheny's oil money. It has already been established that the Harding regime was not the only one involved in the deal. The trail of oil has been traced by some of our senatorial bloodhounds to several administrations preceding the Coolidge ascension. No one delights in talking ill of the memory of the dead, or saying harsh words about the dying, but the fact of the matter is that the Wilson administration and the Harding and Coolidge regimes have been thrown into this political oil well and have hit bottom. Secretaries of the Navy, Secretaries of War, nd Cabinet officers have already had their st political clothes damaged, if not alto- ther destroyed. Garrison, Gregory, McAdoo, Daugherty, Denby, and Fall are as all-clusive a galaxy of democratic and republican capitalist political handmaids as can be corralled in the country at any moment. These are only a few of the unmasked agents of the employing class to date. Should the investigation really proceed with seriousness and thoroness many senators, congressmen, and more cabinet officers will be involved. The fact that Secretary of State Hughes has rushed into print to proclaim that no oil has been splashed on his whiskers, coupled with the excited repetition of the Hughes disclaimor by the present incumbent of Fall's portfolio of the Secretaryship of the Interior, Mr. Work, shows very plainly that more than two cabinet officers are involved in the corrupt transaction.

We are especially concerned with the arrival on the oil scene of that excessively advertised fake progressive, McAdoo, loyal lackey of Doheny, servant of the biggest San Francisco bankers and guardian of the country's treasury at the time when hundreds of millions of dollars were spent to organize counter-revolutions and pogroms in Soviet Russia.

The McAdoo boom is doomed. We have no doubt that many wavering worshippers of McAdoo will now drop in disgust their illusions as to his being the standard-bearer of liberalism in November. No matter how McAdoo pulls out of this mess, it is obvious that his political goose has already been cooked in the boiling oil of the teapot. As far as McAdoo's chance of getting the democratic nomination is concerned, one can safely prepare to plant an iron cross on the grave of the Californian's presidential aspirations. This should increase the likelihood of an organizational split in the republican party and a substantial desertion from the democratic party to a new group arising from the rift in the two dominant capitalist organizations.

What the final outcome of the Teapot affair will be, is yet too early to say. One fact has already been definitely established: Overwhelming evidence has been presented proving beyond refutation that both the democratic and the republican parties are the menial servants of the employing class. When four presidential administrations are involved in so titanic a scandal as this Teapot Oil Dome steal, it is plain to everybody that our government agents are only merchandise in the capitalist market. The disclosures in the Teapot affair have already convicted the United States government of being owned outright, whether democrats or republicans, reactionaries or constructive progressives are at its helm, by the Big Business interests,—the ruling capitalist class.

Poor Davis Publicity

The capitalist press is worried about the exposure of Secretary of Labor Davis as labor's enemy at the U. M. W. of A. convention by the Progressive Miners International Committee.

It will be recalled that a leaflet calling attention to the blacklist and fingerprint laws against foreign-born workers advocated by Davis was distributed in the convention and that when Davis rose to speak he was hissed and booed.

The employers' press hastened to explain that the secretary of labor has been misunderstood by the coal miners, the inference being that the miners were too ignorant to appreciate what the moosehearted secretary of labor was trying to do for them.

An Indianapolis paper carried a particularly ingenuous explanation of the unfortunate situation that had arisen. It states that Davis has only "suggested that in the event of economic necessity foreign laborers above the quotas for their respective countries be admitted under bond, their employers to provide them with passage money back home when their employment was ended. Such persons would be required to report to government officials at intervals. Foreigners have to do this in nearly all European countries. What Davis suggested is now being done to a large extent, but it does not have the sanction of the law."

The emphasis is ours.

This inspired explanation of the Davis proposals will bring little comfort to the person it is supposed to whitewash. It sustains every contention made by the Workers Party of America relative to the slave character of the legislation sponsored by Davis.

What would be the status of foreign-born workers admitted under bond? They would be serfs who would have to do anything the employers or the government ordered them to do—robotised strikebreakers.

They would report to government officials at regular intervals—that is, they would be constantly terrorized.

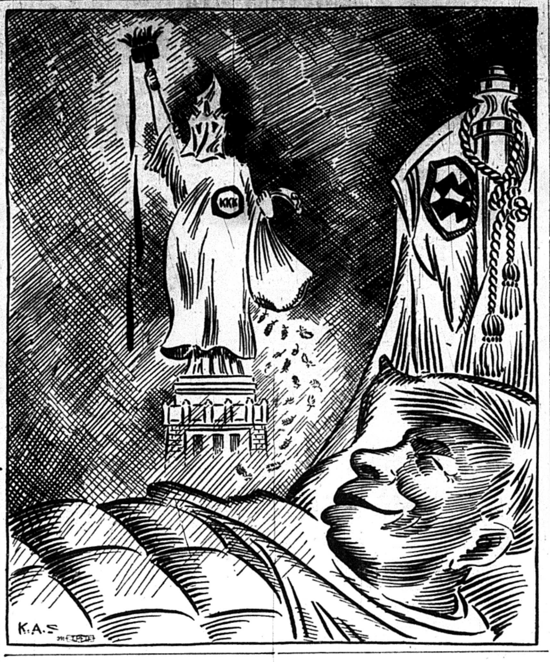
The Davis proposals go farther than this, however, and urge the same provision for foreign-born workers already in America.

That these serfs are being imported into this country in violation of law is a fact and almost a matter of public knowledge. What Davis proposes to do is to legalize a traffic in human flesh that is prohibited not only by the constitution of the United States, but by federal and state laws. He wants to establish, because he is carrying out the orders of his steel trust masters, a nation-wide contract labor and slave system similar to the redemptioner and bond slave system that makes such a black blot on the pages of early American history and which the labor movement of this country succeeded in abolishing after a long struggle.

Secretary of Labor Davis had better consult with his press agents before they do any more explaining.

The latest Teapot Dome disclosures tend to show that the favorite song of cabinet officials, during their sessions for the last five years, has been "Cheer, Cheer, The Gang's Oil Here."

A DREAM OF THE KU KLUX KLAN



Peace Time Health Protection in Russia

By N. SEMASHKO

IT was not only during the civil war that the Russian People's Commissariat for Health was faced with extraordinary "military" duties, for after its conclusion, epidemic disease, as a result of war, famine and blockade, was widely prevalent thruout the country, and considerable resources and concentrated medical effort was demanded to combat it.

During the present year, thanks to the consolidation of the Soviet system and the suppression of epidemic diseases, the People's Commissariat for Health has been able for the first time to proceed to systematic peace-time work.

There is still one widely prevalent disease which menaces the population of Russia—malaria. Malaria, which was very rife in certain parts of Russia in pre-war days (the Caucausus, Turkestan, and the Volga region, for instance) has since the war become still more widespread—a phenomenon to be observed in the majority of the European countries. According to the incomplete statistics, based on registered cases alone, (the registration of malaria has been declared compulsory by the Soviet Government) 3 million instances of malaria occur every year. The Soviet Government set up three new Institutes for Tropical Diseases (in Moscow, Kharkov, and Erivain) to conduct the fight against malaria and about 100 malaria stations in various parts of the country are engaged in the practical work.

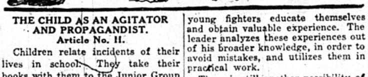
Apart from malaria and the ordinary infectious diseases of children, the situation of the Soviet Union, as far as epidemic disease is concerned, may at present be regarded as satisfactory. But the People's Commissariat for Health is not resting on its laurels it has decided to take advantage of the lull in epidemic disease, in order to proceed to the improvement of the general health conditions of the workers of the Republic.

Among the most important measures of a general sanitary character adopted are the improvement of workshop and housing sanitation, town planning, and better water supply and drainage (Petrograd has now for the first time a rational water supply system).

Next comes the campaign against social diseases, e. g., tuberculosis and syphilis. Both these diseases are a little more prevalent since the war, altho, thanks to the agricultural character of Russia, not to such an extent as in other countries. A net work of anti-tuberculosis and anti-venereal disease clinics, the first of their kind in Russia, have been organized, and there is not now a provincial capital town where clinics of both types are not to be found.

The third group of measures concerns the future generation. It embraces the protection of the mother, the infant and the child, and, in particular, the protection of the health of the factory and workshop apprentice. For the protection of the health of the mother and the infant, a net work of creches, consulting clinics, milk stations, and mothers' and children's homes has been set up. One or the other of these institutions is to be found in every large factory and workshop. A special decree of the Council of People's Commissaries provides for the annual medical inspection of juveniles occupied in school or in factories and workshops; weak or invalid juveniles are either transferred to other employment or are sent for treatment to rest homes or sanatoria. Great attention is paid to the development of physical culture; a Supreme Council for Physical Culture of the People's Commissariat for Health has been set up in connection with the Presidium of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee in order to direct and control this work. Physical exercises are becoming extremely popular in the country, especially among the young people.

Such in brief are the ordinary tasks which the People's Commissariat for Health has set itself at the present moment.



THE CHILD AS AN AGITATOR AND PROPAGANDIST.

Article No. 11.

Children relate incidents of their lives in school. They take their books with them to the Junior Group meetings, and there the leaders explain to them a story from history—even from the Bible—from the communist point of view. Later the children rise in school and ask the teacher pertinent questions, thus transforming the usual class methods of instruction into a discussion. When the teacher speaks of Julius Caesar and the mighty Roman empire the children mention Spartacus and the fight of the gladiators against Rome. They thus do not only confuse the teacher—who often has forgotten what he knew on these subjects—but, more important, they arouse the interest of the other children who will ask from whence this knowledge was derived. Thus these children hear of the Junior Groups and what is being done there. The Young Comrades are distributed, and new members recruited.

The conflicts that arise in the schools are the most difficult but at the same time the most important features of the work of the Junior Groups. It is the task of the communist educators and leaders to help the children—not to give them orders, but to help them—in the sharp collisions that will arise with teachers and principals. The first beginning is with propaganda work—the distribution of the Young Comrade and agitation for the Junior Groups. Reactionary instruction, incitement against the unemployed, against strikers and communists, glorification of war, often provoke those children who have already a communist conception and will arouse vehement discussions. They ask the teachers questions and will utter their protests. In some cases the majority of the pupils will revolt against reactionary or brutal teachers. In other cases a solitary little rebel may be defeated and forced to submit to the power of the teacher. In such a case the group supports the child and helps him thru his difficult time. But he is not allowed to believe or feel that he is acting according to someone's command. Everything that he does is done on his own initiative, done for himself and his playmate. A feeling of responsibility in the struggle is of the utmost importance for a militant education.

There are many ways in which the young fighters educate themselves and obtain valuable experience. The leader analyzes these experiences out of his broader knowledge, in order to avoid mistakes, and utilizes them in practical work.

There is still another possibility of the children's participation in the class struggle, and that is when a teacher is locked out or dismissed on account of his sympathy for the workers. Such cases have occurred in England, France and even in our "own free democratic" America. The children are enlightened on these state of affairs and encouraged to support these teachers.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IT was rather significant that the last act of John L. Lewis at the 29th consecutive and 6th biennial convention of the United Mine Workers of America was to break his gavel. The convention did not adjourn. It simply came to an end. The broken gavel played such a conspicuous if inglorious part during the convention that it did not care to continue even a mute existence, when its master's action brought a riot instead of adjournment.

It seems that the more a person knows about a constitution the easier he finds violating it. There is not a paragraph in the miners' little book of laws that John L. Lewis cannot quote on the slightest provocation and woe unto the miner who in his zeal in behalf of his fellow workers hurts the boss's feelings or steps on the corns of the "sacred contract." There is nothing in the constitution that prohibits a president from submitting to a majority vote. Lewis announces the vote when his tellers do not make any miscalculation. But when they make a mistake and tell the truth, John remains dumb.

The Nation regrets the demise of the Freeman, which is scheduled to take place on March 5. One of the most noteworthy contributions made by the Freeman to the American working class movement was its tribute to The DAILY WORKER, published in a recent issue. Liberals are continually regretting that this world is older than it is. A paper that wastes its time in being merely brilliant without having a constructive policy to reshape this world can expect no better fate than an early grave.

Arthur Brisbane is disgusted with Ramsay MacDonald because the latter announced that the British government would call off its airplanes that have hitherto been whiling away the weary hours dropping bombs on villages somewhere in India. Brisbane thinks this shows lack of governing ability on the part of MacDonald. The Hearst scribbler, press agent of John D. Rockefeller, is of the opinion that the only way to convince savages that law and order was made for them is to make rebellion costly. They cannot be convinced by argument so they must be massacred. Here we have an example of a pen prostitute who poses as a progressive but is actually one of the most dangerous enemies of human freedom. He is akin to the so-called progressives in the labor movement who mouth the phrases of reform but are actually tarred with the same brush as the reactionaries.

The Nation finds solace in the thought that Ramsay MacDonald's cabinet is a pacifist one. How a government can hold down the rebellious subjects of the British Empire by moral suasion will test the alleged pacifism of Ramsay MacDonald. All governments—even that of Ramsay MacDonald—are maintained by force and whether they like it or not, if they desire to exist they must use force. So long as society is based on the rule of one class by another the ruling class will hold its place in the saddle with guns and bayonets and more modern weapons of destruction. The liberals are not angry over class rule. What they kick against is the machinery that all governments must use to a more or less degree in order to prevent the oppressed class from dropping them into the nearest sewer. What concerns us is not exactly the size of the army but who controls it. If the labor party government now existing on the sufferance of the liberal party in England really represented the workers it would not be finicky about the use of force. It would be more concerned with abolishing the robber system of capitalism which could not hold its power twenty-four hours without armies and navies.

Is MacDonald Already Betraying?

Remarkable reports come from England which show that the Labor cabinet headed by MacDonald, is already beginning to pursue the way of betrayal.

One of the most important points of the program of the Labor Party, was the immediate and unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia, as long as it was still "the Opposition of His Majesty." But now that it has become the "government of His Majesty" the recognition of Soviet Russia is no longer so pressing. It is beginning to discover hardships. The Daily Mail writes the following about that matter:

"It is unikely that Mr. MacDonald will take any precipitate action toward recognition, permanent officials of the foreign office and an examination of documents on file there having convinced him such a step would not be in the best interests of the country. He is anxious for recognition as soon as possible and is engaged in making the necessary preliminary inquiries."

This hesitancy of the Labor government has immediately produced discontent in the Labor Party. Neil MacLean, who is M. P. from Glasgow writes the following outburst against the Labor government in the official organ of the Labor Party, in the Labor Herald:

"What is this nonsense about inevitable delays and preliminary formalities before the Russian government can be recognized? Five days sufficed to recognize Greece after Venizelos took office. What could be done in the case of Greece could be done in the case of Russia. If the permanent officials pretend otherwise they are sabotaging, and their sabotage must be stopped swiftly and ruthlessly or this government is damned."

The conservative bureaucracy of the English government is sabotaging recognition of Soviet Russia and MacDonald, instead of destroying the old bureaucracy, submits to it. It is not likely that the Labor government can definitely postpone the recognition of Soviet Russia. The pressure of the laboring masses is too great. The promises of the Labor Party while it was the opposition were too clear and definite, and even one part of the English capitalists is in favor of recognition of Soviet Russia by England. But that MacDonald hesitates and investigates, shows clearly the true reactionary spirit of the leader of the Labor Party. And the fact that MacDonald is already beginning to fall under the influence of the old bureaucracy of the state shows clearly that a real Labor government is not possible without the destruction of the capitalist state apparatus and the setting up of a new proletarian state.

DIRT FARMERS BOLT COOLIDGE'S CONFERENCE

Irate Tillers of Soil in March on the White House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Dissatisfied with President Coolidge's conference to devise methods of relieving distressed agriculture and banking in the Northwest, which they bolted yesterday, "dirt farmer" members of the conference today appealed directly to the President. The dirt farmers charge that the Coolidge scheme is planned to offer relief to the bankers but not for the bankrupt farmers. The statement of President Coolidge, that has aroused the ire of the dirt farmers, was as follows: "It will serve no useful purpose to lend money to a farmer who is in such a position that at any moment mortgage holders and general creditors can fall upon him, sell his lands and seize his property."

SEEKING NEW WITNESSES IN TEAPOT PROBE

Senator Among Those Who Were in on Clean-Up

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—John F. King, former republican national committeeman from Connecticut today was subpoenaed by the senate committee investigating the Teapot Dome oil leases.

At the same time subpoenaes were issued for Guy Stevens and Thomas Lee of New York. These men will be asked to throw some light on former Secretary Fall's dealings with the Teapot Dome and other oil leasing matters which resulted in large profits by persons close to the government.

White House Officials.

The senate committee today was engaged in checking over the list of names of government officials who are said to have "cleaned up" oil stock transactions. The list includes former White House officials, a senator, and at least two men high in government departments.

This latest move, Senator Walsh believes, is the most important phase of the case he has yet brought up.

No subpoena has yet been issued for the senator whose name is said to appear on the list, it was announced at Walsh's office today. There is some uncertainty whether one will be accused, it was said, due to specifications of the law on "senatorial immunity."

Order Fall to Appear.

Albert B. Fall, it was announced, has been ordered to appear again before the senate committee on Friday. If he still refuses to tell his story of his connections with the naval oil leases, steps will be taken immediately to have him held in contempt.

Harry Sinclair will be subpoenaed before the committee as soon as his boat from Europe docks, it was said today.

Hunt for Pipe Line

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 5.—Government officials investigating the Teapot Dome scandal will make an effort to find the source of the so-called Wall Street Pipe Line into Washington, which has enabled many persons to make a fortune on the stock exchange.

In the meantime, the senate committee investigating the Teapot Dome lease has subpoenaed Carl G. Biggerman, assistant cashier of the Chase National Bank of New York, in an effort to trace the persons who profited by the rise in the value of Sinclair Oil stock. The rise occurred after the Teapot Dome lease was secured by Harry Sinclair, of the Sinclair Oil Company.

Biggerman has been directed to appear Thursday with bank records of credits made to Sinclair and his attorney, Col. J. W. Zevely. The records wanted by the committee date from Sept. 1, 1921, to June 7, 1923. The lease was signed April 7, 1922.

These records, the committee believes, will show what money, if any, was transferred to Washington for

FRANCE FACES BOOST IN TAXES OR BANKRUPTCY

Communist Hits Fascist Methods of Poincare

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Altho facing a general election, the Poincare administration has been forced to admit that increased taxation is the only actual resource of the French government.

What Germany owes on the reparations account will no longer be listed on paper as a national asset.

Poincare, who has placed his increased tax measure before the French chamber, is meeting strenuous opposition. The program was declared unconstitutional by Deputy Laffont, Communist member. He said it resembled Fascist methods.

"We know how Fascism started in other countries—beginning by decreeing special laws and ending by seizing dictatorial powers," Laffont declared in the midst of a heated debate in the chamber.

Poincare, it is generally believed, has decided on the new program because of broad hints from American statesmen that France must begin at once to consider means of paying her own debts. His action is also inspired in part by the meeting of the international experts to study the programs of reparations.

Above all these factors, however, is the sensational drop in the value of the French franc at the outset of the new year. Poincare is anxious that there be no repetition of this decline.

The annual return from taxable sources will be increased approximately one billion francs by the program suggested by Poincare.

N. P. LEAGUE OPENS MEET IN NO. DAK.

Militants Will Fight for Class Political Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, No. Dak., Feb. 5—The convention of the Nonpartisan League of North Dakota opens here tomorrow. This without question will prove the most important convention ever held by the Nonpartisan League, and the eyes of the farmers thruout the great Northwest will be on Bismarck while the convention is in session.

Facing a condition which daily grows worse and with no hope of salvation extended by the two parties of capitalism the exploited farmers of North Dakota are looking to a political alliance between industrial and rural workers as the only solution of the problems that confront them today.

Promises Betrayed.

The farm value of the leading crops have fallen by almost $75,000,000 from the low point reached in 1922. Seven thousand farms foreclosed last year. This in the state of North Dakota alone.

Desperate efforts will be made at this convention by the old guard of the Nonpartisan League to block the formation of a Farmer-Labor Party, the demand for which has become overwhelming in North Dakota particularly since Calvin Coolidge took their two senators Ladd and Frazier for a trip on the Mayflower. These two senators have proven themselves broken reeds in Washington. They were responsible to nobody but themselves. The looseness of the Nonpartisan League allows no effective control over those who are elected on its slogans. What the farmers now need is a party that will have the political death warrant of its representatives signed just as soon as they betray their constituents and desert to the enemy camp.

"Mayflower" Farmers Taboo.

It has often been stated that nobody came out of Buckingham Palace, London as pure as when he entered. And it can also be said without fear of contradiction that farmer representatives who spend much time in the company of Calvin Coolidge, the money trust president, cannot at the same time show much energy in fighting the battles of the farmers whose enemies the Wall Street capitalists are.

The candidates for office on the capitalist ticket are now expressing much concern over the farmers' woes. They are leaving a trail of promises behind them as they go on one spellbinding campaign after another.

The farmers who are meeting in Bismarck are not lacking in reasons sufficiently convincing to warrant a complete repudiation of the suicidal policy of entering into deals with the republican and democrat parties, the parties of Big Business, the parties of Wall Street, of Teapot Dome and Standard Oil. With the present lack of political machinery the North Dakota farmers are powerless in the grasp of the capitalist politicians who can play ducks and drakes with their hopes and desires because they have no effective political club to bring them to terms.

Heed Militant Organization.

Like buzzards flying over a battlefield ready to feast on the corpses of the slain the political vultures of the capitalist parties are prowling among the wreckage of bankrupt farms ready to make whatever capital they

FARMERS! JOIN THE FIGHT AGAINST ALL YOUR ENEMIES

To the Delegates of the North Dakota Non-Partisan League Convention:

You are gathered in the most important convention that your organization has ever held.

The eyes of the farmers of your state, of the farmers of the entire Northwest, of the farming masses of the whole country are on you.

The condition of the farmers thruout the country, and especially the farmers of your state, are critical and steadily getting worse. The farm value of your leading crops has fallen by almost $75,000,000 from the low point reached in 1922. The last year has seen about 7,000 farms foreclosed in your state. One out of every ten North Dakota farmers has been driven off the farms by the high tribute levied on them by the big bankers, railway magnates, and burdensome taxes.

Serious dangers are besetting you from many sides. After Roy W. Frazier, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, returned from Washington he called a meeting of his Committee and brought about that "shamful and scandal transaction" resulting in the indorsement of Coolidge—the same President Coolidge who has told the farmers to go shuffling for themselves, and has done everything in his power to help the big bankers, manufacturers and railway magnates, who are responsible for the hopeless conditions in which millions of rural and city workers now find themselves.

President Coolidge may be a good Teapot politician but he is not a friend of the farmers, who are today in desperate straits. This crime is all the more shameful and scandalous in view of Chairman Frazier's statement that the League members were a majority and had control of the actions of the committee.

Your two senators, Ladd and Frazier, have also been flirting with Coolidge, who is too busy protecting himself and his Cabinet members involved in the Teapot Dome scandal to think of effective farm relief.

Senators Ladd and Frazier have taken too many trips on the President's peace ship, the Mayflower, to be able to wage an aggressive fight against Coolidge's policy of letting the farmer go shuffling for himself.

In Congress you have today such representatives as Burtness, who is an out and out reactionary, who has fought you consistently and bitterly, and is closely associated thru his own banks with such sworn enemies of the farmers as the National City Bank of New York, the Continental and Commercial Bank of Chicago, and the Minneapolis and St. Paul bankers playing the game of the big grain gamblers.

Your Governor today, Mr. Nestos, is a lackey of the big industrial and financial interests of the East and is an uncompromising foe of the farmers. You recall how he was wined and dined by Wall Street and the New York Chamber of Commerce last November. You know how this Governor Nestos with the help of the majority of your state, house and senate, has robbed the public school districts of your state of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

This critical situation, in which you find yourself toda beset by dangers and enemies, is due to the fact that you a not organized well enough to fight your enemies.

It's high time that you drop forever that suicidal policy of entering into deals with the republican and democratic parties—the parties of Coolidge and Fall, McAdoo and Gregory, Denby and Doheny, Sinclair and Daugherty. These two parties are the agencies of the big business interests that have for years been exploiting and oppressing the country and city working masses and robbing the country's wealth for the grain gamblers, railway, steel, and oil kings, as shown in the Teapot Dome steal.

It's high time that you supplant your present weak Non-Partisan League machinery with a strong unified political party of the rural and industrial working masses. It is high time that you farmers of North Dakota get together and organize yourselves into a virile political party, completely apart and independent of the republican and democratic parties of Wall St.

Delegates! Farmers! Don't be misled by any false cries of unity! Don't fall for Roy Frazier's fake slogan of "harmony of all factions" and thus fall for Coolidge. This is a most dangerous policy and will mean only more misery, more degradation, more bankruptcies, for you. Supporting Coolidge, no matter what trick is employed to get you into this trap, means more power to the bankers and railway capitalists.

Get together at this convention into a real fighting party! Adopt a program of action; a program solely in the interests of those who have to work for a living! Demand the five-year moratorium on all farm-mortgages. Repudiate the fraudulent farm-relief program drawn up by Coolidge and Mellon after a conference with your senators and congressmen and Eastern bankers. Beware of this new attempt to give the mighty industrial and financial overlords a strangle-hold on your farms, on your lives.

Delegates! Farmers! Workers! Turn your present shadow of an organization into a fighting political party that shall take its place in the monster national Farmer-Labor Convention of the farmers and workers of the whole country, to be held in St. Paul, Minnesota, on May 30th, for the purpose of building a mighty national political party of the farmers and workers give battle to your common enemies—the capitalist exploit and their puppet government.

U. S. PLUTES CINCH HOLD ON FAR EAST

House of Morgan Loans Japs Huge Sum

By FREDERICK KUH
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

NEW YORK. — The American empire is having another twinge of growing pains. The Federated Press learns on excellent Wall Street authority that arrangements are virtually completed for an American banking syndicate loan to Japan, the reported sum ranging from $50,000,000 to $70,000,000. J. P. Morgan & Co. will head the bankers' consortium which is to execute the deal with the Japanese government.

The loan will be consummated in the form of credits for reconstruction purposes to repair the damage in the wake of the catastrophic earthquake. It will be stipulated that a large proportion, if not the total amount of the loan, must be expended upon materials purchased in the United States. It is understood that certain great American industrial groups will participate in the loan on condition that their industries are favored with fat contracts.

Government Backs Pact

Negotiations for the loan have been going on secretely for several months. At the outset of this year, it was reported that a Japanese financier had arrived in New York, entrusted with an official mission from the Tokio government. Interviewed, the Japanese banker denied the official purpose attributed to his voyage and blandly remarked that his visit was simply that of a tourist. The disclosure that he was engaging in conferences with members of the Morgan firm soon put an end to this canard.

This weeks visit of Thomas W. Lamont, chief of the Morgan concern, to Washington, where he consulted with Hughes and other cabinet members, is believed to have sealed the Japanese bargain and secured the approval of the Coolidge administration for the transaction.

The conclusion, towards which these symptoms pointed, was confirmed a few days ago, when the Japanese yen, which was tumbling on the money market, suddenly regained its stability, and has remained stationary since.

Japs Forced to Yield.

The allotment of the loan to Morgan puts an end to the bitter rivalry of five international money-lending syndicates, which were competing for the Japanese loan. The Japanese government is known to have been unwilling to accept the Morgan proposal and to guarantee it, as long as Morgan insisted upon concluding the loan with cities damaged or destroyed by earthquake. It is believed, however, that the Tokio government yielded on this point, and that the loan will assume the form desired by Morgan.

It is premature to state the political effects of the loan. Some time ago, the Moscow daily, "Isvestia," anticipated this deal, and expressed the conviction that the price of an American loan would be a Japanese pledge to abstain from recognizing the Soviets. It may be held that the concurrence of Hughes substantiates that theory.

Concessions In China?

It is both more actual and more likely that the political and economic prize which is to fall to the American government and to Wall Street, will be Japanese concessions to American private interests in China. Details of these aspects of the loan are, of course, being withheld from the American public.

Coming close upon the heels of the dispatch of American naval missions to Central and South America, American intervention in the Mexican civil struggle, U. S. naval maneuvers in the Panama Canal, the appointment of an American controller of Hungary's financial and economic fate, and reported negotiations for a Wall Street credit to Germany, this latest emergence of American imperialism in the Far East suggests the flying start obtained by America's empire-builders during the brief days of 1924.

Whither this index points is amply illustrated in the history of all great empires from the Roman to the British, with their stories of oppression and wars, invariably culminating in an era of misery and disintegration at home. Will American Labor learn this lesson before it is too late?

Film Censorship to Be Knifed by New York Senate

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK. — It is considered certain that a bill to repeal the state motion picture censorship law, introduced into the upper house at Albany yesterday, will be passed by the senate. In all likelihood, however, the anti-censorship measure will encounter grave obstacles in the assembly. Opponents of the repeal bill insist that censorship is essential to prevent the "glorification of vice" in the films. The same state senators have remained silent as to the "glorification of vice" by the U. S. Navy and Interior Departments.

RUM FLOWS FREE AS RICH REVEL AT PALM BEACH

Plutes Guzzle Only Best Stuff

PALM BEACH, Fla.—The idle rich who make Palm Beach their winter headquarters will spend about $50,000,000 this winter seeking pleasure and excitement. This is a conservative estimate of the amount that will be spent here.

Hotels and bootleggers will get most of the money. A lot of it will be lost in gambling. Clothes and the upkeep of yachts will get more of it.

One of the hotels here is the largest resort hotel in the world and charges about $20 a day for a room. The people who really spend the money are the ones who have "cottages" here. One family consisting of two decrepit old persons have a magnificent palace with scores of servants. They have four Rolls-Royces, and a yacht.

This is the heaven of the bootleggers. They run their "stuff" direct from the British West Indies and sell it at enormous prices. Nothing but the best is drunk here.

No one has been able to figure out the number of workers slaving in the north it takes to create the wealth that is spent here in a few weeks during the winter. It is well that the idle rich who spend their time and the workers wealth here are well out of sight of the workers or there would be a social explosion.

The traitors to the exploited farmers in the Nonpartisan League will attempt to sell out their class to the highest capitalist bidder. Trips on the Mayflower, entertainments at fashionable homes where the wives and daughters of senatorial "dirt"-farmers will rub elbows and swap pleasant nothings with the women parasites who neither weave nor spin but live in luxury on the labor of the farmers' wives and the women who work in the city mills, milking contests and other innocent forms of recreation will soon "milk" the farmers' representatives of the principles which they once held unless the farmers have a political organization strong and disciplined that will give orders to its elected servants and not take orders from them.

On to May 30th!

This is the message that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party brings to the exploited farmers who are meeting in Bismarck. Organize a political party, join with similar parties in other states, link your efforts with the workers in the cities and participate in the great national convention that will be held in St. Paul, Minnesota on May 30th, to create a political farmer-labor alliance on a national scale that will prove invincible, that will be the first ambitious forward move on the part of the farmers and industrial workers of the United States to take the government into their own hands and prepare the ground for the emancipation of the exploited farmers and workers from farm foreclosures, unemployment and poverty.

Lewis Too Much For Mother Jones; Missed Convention

(By The Federated Press)

INDIANAPOLIS. — Mother Jones was not in attendance at the 29th convention of the miners' union, which adjourned here February 2. It is probably the first national meeting of the miners that has not heard an address from their most beloved leader. "Her boys," as she always called them, expected her to show up at some unexpected moment, as is usually her custom. Illness prevented her from making the long trip from Washington, D. C., where she is completing a book on her experinces in the labor movement.

TRACHTENBERG, LORE, ARRESTED AT LENIN MEETING

Newark Police Seize Communist Speakers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J.—In high handed fashion Newark police officials broke up an open air meeting in Lenin's honor and arrested Ludwig Lore, Alexander Trachtenberg and Comrade Epstein. The speakers were later released on $50 bail each, but the Workers Party does not regard the incident as closed and will test the right of the police to stop workers' meetings.

Suits for damages aggregating $30,000 are now pending in the Essex County Circuit Court against Police Captain Ebert for similar action Jan. 11, when he broke up a meeting at which William Z. Foster and Bishop Paul Jones were to speak. That case is being handled by the American Civil Liberties' Union.

Praise of Lenin Angers Police

The Lenin meeting, just interrupted, was held under the auspices of the Workers Party. The crowd was assembled outside of the Labor Lyceum, in consequence of the refusal of authorities to grant permission for a meeting inside. Lore had just concluded a eulogy of the proletarian regime in Russia, where the workers were behind the government, as was the case in no other country, when a police detective interrupted and said the meeting must stop because no permit had been given for it.

Insisting on the right of free speech, Lore continued, pointing out that the police ukase represented the same kind of reactionary powers that Lenin had fought.

Haul Down Speakers

Captain Seabold came down on the detectives S. O. S. and Lore was again ordered to stop speaking and again refused. The police took him from the stand and thrust him into the patrol wagon.

Trachtenberg began to speak, was likewise arrested. Epstein took the speaker's stand, but was hauled down before he could begin.

The arbitrary action of the police achieved a result they had not expected; it brought greater publicity for the Lenin Memorial meeting and the Workers Party and has stirred up thousands of additional sympathizers.

Legion Balked at Kansas City.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The Kansas City branch of the Workers Party held a very successful Lenin Memorial meeting in Musicians Hall here. Earl Browder, editor of the Labor Herald, Louise Byers and John Mihelic spoke.

The American Legion threatened to break up the meeting when it was announced, but must have thought better of it since nothing was either seen or heard of them at the meeting.

The Lenin Memorial meeting was supported and attended by so many local unionists that the Legion seemed to be willing to let it proceed in order not to antagonize the unionists any more than they have been antagonized.

Virginia Bray Is Dead; Supported Many Famous Stars

FREEPORT, Ill., Feb. 5.—Virginia Bray, 68, who died late yesterday at her home here, was an actress for more than forty years, having supported many old time stars, including Booth, Barrett, Joseph Jefferson, Denman Thompson and Sol Smith Russell.

She began her stage career at 16, as a member of the McVicker Theatre Stock Company, Chicago, playing for three years in Shakespearian drama. Later she played in stock companies in Boston, Pittsburgh, New York, Washington and other cities.

She was a member of the Sol Smith Russell Company, which, it is believed, was first dramatic company to travel to the Pacific coast over the then new Northern Pacific railroad, the final 120 miles of the journey to Portland, Ore., having been made by stage coach.

Inquisition Turns Screws Tighter at the Folsom Prison

(By The Federated Press)

REPRESA, Cal.—A new rule has been made at Folsom prison that no books, magazines or newspapers may be sent to prisoners from the outside, even from the publishers. The only gift allowed is money, and the warden will then "use his own discretion" as to what reading matter may be purchased.

This is obviously a retaliation by Warden Smith on the criminal syndicalism and other labor prisoners, because of the charges preferred against him for the beating of Louis Allen. Smith is a close adherent of Governor Richardson, and since the accusations of ill treatment were made the governor has brought about changes in the prison board which gives him a majority, which is favorable to the warden.

U. S. PLUTES WILL SAVE MILLIONS BY MELLON TAX PLAN

25 Per Cent Reduction Is Approved

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5th. — The Coolidge administration today pushed thru the ways and means committee its plan for a twenty-five per cent tax reduction and made it retroactive to include 1923 incomes.

This bill, framed by Mellon, secretary of the treasury, relieves twenty-one millionaires including Mellon, of $12,000,000 in taxes and throws the burden on the small taxpayers.

When Mellon desired President Harding to veto the soldiers bonus, he estimated there would be a deficit of $700,000,000 for the first fiscal year, but within a year his report showed a surplus of $320,000,000 only a smal error of $1,000,000,000, but it answered his purpose.

Dough to Buy Solons.

Mellon fought like a wild cat against a higher tax rate on the swollen fortunes of the millionaire supporters of the Coolidge administration. Millions come in handy during political campaigns and the wealthy patrons of strike breaker Coolidge may hope to be in a position to eliminate the grease from their hero's political garments which splashed out of the open Teapot.

Can Pay Bootleg Bills.

The secretary of the treasury contends that a reduction of taxes on the incomes of millionaires will make these gentleman feel more comfortable, will raise the morale of investors, reduce the cost of living and contribute to the general well-being of society. In Mellon's opinion the only class that counts for anything in society is the capitalists class. That is the class that Mellon, Coolidge and Hughes represent and it is to their credit that they commit their robbery in a thoroly class conscious manner.

How the cost of living will be reduced for anybody except Mellon and his twenty fellow plutes by his tax-bill is not evident.

Milk Producers Elect President on Fighting Platform

Plans for another clash with Chicago milk dealers were made at a meeting of the Chicago Milk Producers' Association, held at the La Salle Hotel. The milk producers, who recently conducted a fifteen-day strike, intend to go to the mat with the dealers April 1st, when the present contract covering winter deliveries, expires.

Plans were also made to organize the truck drivers who haul the milk from the country creameries to the city.

The association will study plans for keeping the milk supply uniform both summer and winter.

Frank S. Green, mayor of Woodstock, Ill., was elected president for the year on a platform of fighting leadership, defeating Frank Holt, who was said to be ultra conservative.

NO OIL ON HIM HIRAM WILL TELL DAKOTA FARMERS

Forgets His Assent to Doheny Steal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FARGO, N. D.—Hiram Johnson is coming to the Dakotas to tell the busted wheat farmers that every one is an oil crook but himself.

Says his North Dakota manager, Usher L. Burdick, a Fargo attorney:

"And now with Teapot Dome spreading the oil smear over our great statesmen, North Dakota is read to join in the fight to scotch the 'invisible government.'"

Burdick's words fall cold on busted wheat farmers who remind each other that the invisible government of oil in California was so invisible that Edward L. Doheny took over the 300,000,000 barrel naval oil reserve, No. 1, of California without Bull Moose Hiram making any protest.

The California knight will heal the ills of the farmers, says Mr. Burdick, who then proceeds to give a harrowing picture of these ills: "In McKenzie county, west of the Missouri river," says Burdick, "mortgages have been foreclosed this year on 39 per cent of all farms," and a lot more of the same tenor.

Farmer sentiment, however, is largely centering around the more definite program of the left wingers who demand a five-year moratorium on all mortgage debts of working farmers as an alternative to the rhetorical progressivism of Hiram Johnson, which has no definite proposals for freeing them from the bankers' grip.

Abie Cahan's Daily Rag Refused An Ad For Lenin Meeting

NEW YORK CITY. — The New York Forward, the yellowest of yellow Socialist sheets, had the affrontery to refuse to accept a paid advertisement announcing the Lenin memorial meeting of February 4 at the Madison Square Garden. (Special to The Daily Worker)

BOMBAY, India. — Mohanda Ghandi has been freed by the British Labor Government after nearly two years' penal servitude for his leadership of the great non co-operationist movement.

Ghandi was sentenced to six years in March, 1922, on a charge of sedition after the non co-operationists had caused the virtual break down of British authority in many parts of India. British officials were barred from delivery of food by Hindoos and from other services; natives were quitting transportation and other industries on which British rule descended and taxes were not paid.

CITIES LINKED BY RADIO AS STORM RAGES THRU LAND

Ill Wind Blows Good to Unemployed

Radio was the voice in the storm that raged so furiously thru the country yesterday. But for the new invention towns would have been isolated from each other as telegraph wires went down in the blizzard.

Squads of telephone and telegraph repair men fought their way thru snow drifts ranging in depth up to ten feet to the foundered wires in a desperate effort to link scores of cities which had lost touch with Chicago and surrounding towns.

Word from Milwaukee tells of an impending milk famine as trucks gave up the attempt to progress along the highways blocked with snow. In Chicago two persons were killed and 25 seriously injured when a locomotive hit a street car at West 49th street and South Kedzie avenue in the midst of driving sleet.

One good thing the storm has done is to furnish employment for penniless workers who were putting in a wretched winter in Chicago without work.

Thousands of snow shovelers were hired to clear the tracks for street cars and other vehicles and by business houses to clear off their front pavements.

So the storm was an ill wind that blew some people some good.

Great Social Drama, "R. U. R." to Be Staged by Defense Council

"R. U. R.", the powerful social drama by Karel Capek, is coming to Chicago again. This time, however, it will be given in its proper setting. Instead of being presented as just another ordinary theatrical venture, with the ring of its appeal smothered in the indolent atmosphere of the bourgeois playhouse, "R. U. R." will be put on in a huge labor hall before masses of working men and women.

With the two-fold motive of stimulating proletarian culture and raising some of the funds needed for the Michigan defense, the Labor Defense Council recently secured from the Theater Guild of New York, the right to produce "R. U. R." in Chicago. The Theater Guild showed a fine willingness to co-operate and even agreed to give up its usual royalties, in view of the purpose for which the play is to be given. Several days ago, the original manuscript arrived at the Labor Defense Council office, together with stage-directions and actors' parts. Present plans contemplate the giving of three performances in various parts of the city, during the month of April.

The production as planned will be complete in every detail. Every attempt will be made to give just such a performance as the author would wish. Arrangements have been made with the Studio Players, 826 N. Clark St., who will direct the production and furnish the leading players. Rehearsals are to begin at once.

"R. U. R.", was first presented in Prague, Checho-Slovakia, some years ago, where it created an immediate sensation. Critics were unanimous in recognizing the dramatic power of the play as well as its marked originality of treatment, but the monarchist press declared that "the effect on the workers might be bad." Unfortunately the workers have never had a favorable opportunity of seeing it, as it has never been presented under working class auspices (at least not so far as we know.)

The Theater Guild, an organization which in the brief period of its existence has made many noteworthy contributions to the American stage, brought "R. U. R." to this country somewhat over a year ago. The play ran for many months in New York and was looked upon as both a dramatic and financial success. The bourgeois theater-going gentry did not appreciate the grim significance of "R. U. R."; as a matter of fact, they did not understand the drama at all. Perhaps that is why it was such a success. The play was brought to Chicago last winter, repeating the success of its New York engagement.

Germans Don't Mourn.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON. — No crocodile tears for Woodrow Wilson are being shed by the German embassy. By order of the Berlin government the embassy officials are displaying no flags at half mast nor any other signs of mourning for the war lord who broke his promises to the German people by abandoning the 14 points on the basis of which they had laid down their arms after overthrowing the kaiser.

"The betrayer of Germany" is the title given Wilson in German newspapers, according to cables from Berlin.

The Germans' resolute defiance of hypocritical conventions occasioned dissatisfaction on the part of those who expected a unanimous appearance of grief from the diplomatic corps, but plaudits from Americans who were disgusted with all the furor over the return to clay of the man who sent hundreds of thousands there before him.

One American mayor has refused to join in the volume of official sobbing that is coming from office holders thruout the land.

This was Mayor Daniel Hoan of Milwaukee who refused to send any telegram of condolence for the los of Wilson. The Milwaukee American Legion has declared that it will pass a vote of condemnation but the dispatches do not indicate that the mayor is troubled by their attitude.

The feeling of many Americans was expressed by a newspaperman here who pointed out that no one but his family and a few friends mourn when a citizen who has played square with his fellows dies and there is no reason for extr tears when a fellow of another kind dies.

DETROIT HOLDS HUGE MEETING IN HONOR OF LENIN

6,000 Workers in Big Demonstration

By STANLEY BOONE
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT.—Detroit workers, with great songs and great words, gathered in the largest auditorium in Detroit to pay a special tribute to Lenin, 6,000 men, women and children assembling in Arena Gardens behind the combined Russian and Ukranian choruses in a memorial service without precedent here. Hundreds were turned away.

C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers Party of America, and Dennis E. Batt, editor of the Detroit Labor News, organ of the Detroit Federation of Labor, were the speakers. On one side of the platform light played on a portrait of the dead leader, draped in red and black. Outward from the platform stretched the deep rectangle of unquiet faces, rising at last where the gallery cut upward to the roof.

Ruthenberg followed Batt on the program and was greeted with three successive choruses of applause that he had difficulty in quieting. Outbursts of emotion came again and again when the speakers were telling of Lenin and his place in history.

Former Revolts Were Blind.

Ruthenberg traced the efforts of the world's exploited millions, since the ancient Greek slave state, to cast off oppression and achieve freedom, first pointing out that a knowledge of this background was essential to an understanding of Lenin's life. Previous revolts had been emotional and blind, he said. Slave and serf revolted when their suffering grew unbearable. It was Lenin's work to adjust revolutionary effort not only to desire and principle but scientific plan.

The point was stressed by Batt that, whereas Lenin saw effects take place in his own life-time at least equal to those seen by Napoleon, Washington, Caesar and Alexander, the effects with which he had to do were not dependent on the presence of his own personality. Lenin, the Marxian, could not give his life to a plan which he did not believe would survive him.

Need of Communist Vanguard.

Tho his immediate revolutionary tactic was hinted in the slogan that swept Russia, "All Power to the Soviets", Lenin saw that there must also be developed a revolutionary vanguard in a Communist Party, a body of the most enlightened men and women of the movement, to advise and to guide and to lead and to carry their discipline to the point of facing imprisonment or death if so ordered, Ruthenberg said. And now we could turn to any country of Europe or Asia and find there, whether in England or Bulgaria, the party of Lenin leading the struggle of the workers toward the ideal of freedom. It was so in Japan and China.

"And we must not forget that here in America we have a Communist Party, the Workers Party, the party of Lenin . . ."

Join Workers Party!

Those present who felt deeply the significance of the gathering, the purpose and the admiration and the hope which had brought them together, could do no better in passing out the door to their homes than apply for membership in the Workers Party, by filling out an application that they might obtain there, Ruthenberg added. He defined also the purpose of the Communist International and its relationship, in Lenin's mind, with the Russian Revolution and the revolution of the workers everywhere against capitalist exploitation by imperial states.

As Comrade Batt explained, Ruthenberg concluded, Lenin began early in his life to plan and work for the revolution. To this ideal and this plan he gave his great intelligence, his great courage. He was always a soldier on its fighting front, demanding, planning and looking toward the dictatorship of the proletariat. Let the thousands who were present follow in his footsteps.

A Finnish band played intermittently, sometimes an accompaniment to the voices of the magnificent choirs. Full throated human voices and sounded brass opened and closed the services with The International and the Funeral March of the Russian Revolution.

"Long Live The Revolution".

A resolution, read by Edgar Owens, district organizer of the Workers Party, chairman of the meeting, written by the Detroit Lenin Memorial Committee and adopted with a crash of hand clapping, conveyed to the Central Executive Committees of the Communist International and the Communist Party of Russia the following condolence "in the loss of our beloved leader":

"We, the workers of Detroit, do on this solemn occasion offer our heartfelt tribute to the memory of the great leader of the international working class, Vladimir Ilyitch Ulianov,—Lenin. In accord with the conscious workers of the world we express our sorrow for the loss of our beloved and incomparable leader and pledge ourselves to struggle unceasingly for the victory of the workers' revolution. Comrade Lenin is dead. But his ideas, as expressed in the Communist International, live and are leading the toiling masses of the world to freedom from the yoke of capitalist slavery. Eternal glory to the memory of Lenin! Long live the workers' revolution!"

World Farmers' Council Sends Greeting to the Daily Worker

General Secretary Dombal, on behalf of the International Farmers' Council, has sent the greeting of the world's farmers to THE DAILY WORKER. It is in full as follows:

Farmers and Workers of All Countries, Unite!

INTERNATIONAL FARMERS' COUNCIL
General Secretariat.
Moscow, Staraya Ploschad, Boyarsky Dvor
3rd Floor, Room 69
No. 43
December 10, 1923

To The Daily Worker:

Comrades and Brothers: The International Farmers' Council is the first in the history of international farmers' organization. The aim of this "Farmers' International" is to fight for the emancipation of the millions of people working on the land from the yoke of capitalism. The peasantry, altho they represent a great force, comprising hundreds of millions in all parts of the world, are unable to bring about their own emancipation, because they are not in a position to capture the industrial centers and manage industry, on which primarily depends the existence and development of modern society. Only in union with the working class, which alone is capable of taking possession of the cities, centres of culture and the administration of industry, can the peasantry secure the satisfaction of all their just demands and requirements. Therefore, the representatives of the farming classes of forty nationalities of various countries, assembled in October 1923 at the first International Farmers' Conference in Moscow, adopted the following chief slogan of our organization: "Peasants and Workers of all countries, unite!", and passed a resolution to fight the capitalists and landowners in fraternal union with the working class for the establishment all over the world of Workers' and Peasants' Governments and an international union of workers' and peasants' republics. Only in common efforts can the toiling classes of town and country throw off the yoke of the capitalist parasites. Only in collaboration can the workers and farmers guarantee to mankind peaceful labor and prosperity.

We greet your labor organ in the name of millions of organized farmers in various parts of the world, and hope it will help bring about a union between the workers and the farming classes in the interest of common victory.

With fraternal greetings,
GENERAL SECRETARIAT.
DOMBAL.

Polish Communist Party Greets "The Daily"

To THE DAILY WORKER:

Comrades: The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Poland has instructed me to congratulate you heartily on the acquisition of a new and powerful weapon in the struggle for Communism and revolution in America—the establishment of the first communist daily in the Anglo-Saxon world.

For the last few years we have been following your struggle with the greatest attention. This was due, not only to ordinary international solidarity, because you are a section of our common international front, but also to the fact that, in spite of the enormous difference between Poland and America, a number of questions which occupy you are also playing an important role in our revolutionary work.

We are, since the establishment of the United Polish Republic in November 1918, an ILLEGAL party. But altho our enemies have CONDEMNED US to illegality, we are taking advantage of every opportunity to act PUBLICLY and to PROPAGATE AMONG THE MASSES THE IDEAS OF COMMUNISM wherever workers congregate—in trade unions, in co-operatives and in educational organizations. After a period of forced illegality, you have succeeded in establishing a legal Communist Party in the form of the "WORKERS PARTY." Our enemies have hitherto prevented us to follow your example—we must therefore continue the struggle FOR THE WORKERS' RIGHT TO HAVE A LEGAL COMMUNIST PARTY. In this struggle we take advantage of the experience gained in the prolonged struggle against czarism. Two figures will perhaps give you a clear idea of our present position: 2,000 Communists are incarcerated in Polish Republican prisons. At the recent parliamentary election 126 thousand votes were given for the Communist candidates in the few constituencies where the Communist lists were not annulled. Two Communists were elected to the Seim.

Another question, in which we are as much interested as you, is—THE CONQUEST OF THE TRADE UNIONS which are under the leadership of reformists and of traitors to the working class. On this field too, we have profited by the experiences you have acquired under the leadership of comrade FOSTER.

In spite of a considerable industrial development, Poland is an agrarian country, most of its 30 million inhabitants being peasants. We have brought forward the slogans of SOLIDARITY BETWEEN THE URBAN PROLETARIAT AND THE POOR PEASANTRY and of the WORKERS' AND PEASANTS' GOVERNMENT. Therefore, we follow with the greatest interest your struggle for the establishment and development of a mass party destined to unify MILLIONS OF WORKERS AND FARMERS.

Poland is an imperialist country which contains, beside the purely Polish population, a number of national minorities annexed by force—Ukrainians, White Russians, Lithuanians, Jews and Germans who are partly scattered thruout Poland and partly inhabit territories according to separate nationalities. On behalf of these nationalities we have brought forward, not only a demand for full NATIONAL EQUALITY on all the fields of social life, but also a demand for their full RIGHT TO SELF-DETERMINATION including separation from the Polish State, especially for Ukrainians, White Russians and Lithuanians. But our Party, which organizes in its own ranks, workers belonging to all these nationalities, has also adopted the slogan of WORKERS' SOLIDARITY REGARDLESS OF NATIONALITY. Our Party advocates the establishment of an IRON PHALANX AGAINST THE COMMON ENEMY—the Polish bourgeoisie and the Polish junkers. We strongly recommend our compatriots who have emigrated to America to adopt this slogan.

We have also another and a considerable grievance in common with you: we too are as yet without a DAILY and have a strong desire to have such an organ. But our difficulties are not the same as yours. Our movement, in spite of all persecutions, is strong enough to maintain not only one but several dailies in the main proletarian centres. But our enemy, the Polish government of capitalists and junkers, has prohibited all Communist publications. The Government knows full well that if we had a legal press, this would spell ruin to the entire social-democratic press and to the treacherous social democracy altogether, on which the bourgeoisie places all its hopes in the struggle with the working class.

Thus, comrades, you can see that altho physically the whole of capitalist Central and Western Europe, separates us, we are after all members of one family. We assure you that every success of yours gives joy to us in this country.

THEREFORE, I EXPRESS ONCE MORE OUR HEARTY CONGRATULATIONS ON THE APPEARANCE OF THE FIRST NUMBER OF YOUR "WORKERS' DAILY!"

H. WALECKI,
On Behalf of the Central Committee of the Polish Communist Party.

Labor Federation Directory Work of Hammersmark

The Labor Union Directory and Buyers' Guide, edited by Sam Hammersmark for the Chicago Federation of Labor, is now available, and contains a mass of information for those who want to patronize merchants who sell union label goods. Hammersmark, who is now the advertising manager of the DAILY WORKER, has made many additions to the directory issued last year.

The unions are listed in alphabetical order, under the title of the national and international unions, except in cases of labor and federal unions not connected with international unions, which are listed alphabetically under locals affiliated directly with the American Federation of Labor.

The local unions of international unions are arranged in numerical order. Unions not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor are listed in the same order, but in a separate section.

The directory is complete and exact and is the only official directory of the Chicago labor movement.

The directory is of 136 pages and contains information every active trade unionist needs and can secure from no other source.

Farmers Pledge Themselves to Work of Lenin

MT. VERNON, Wash. — The untimely death of labor's greatest champion must spur us on in his work, says the Skagit County unit of the Western Progressive Farmers in the following resolution:

WHEREAS, The best way to honor those who have given their lives for the emancipation of labor is to continue the struggle for freedom with increased vigor, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That we, members of Skagit County Unit, Western Progressive Farmers of Washington, in session hereby express our sorrow at the untimely death of labor's greatest champion, and we pledge ourselves anew to the great task before the producers of America, the abolition of all forms of exploitation, and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' republic.

CANADIANS CRY TO GOVERNMENT IN BANK CRISIS

Ask New Laws to Protect Deposits

By JOHN ROBUR
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

OTTAWA.—The pressure on the Canadian government to take some steps to give small depositors security in the banks is increasing. A deputation representing the depositors of the Home Bank, which failed, waited on the cabinet and, not receiving an assurance of action to satisfy them, left with a promise to renew the campaign in parliament. The deputation asked the government to pay the losses itself, or loan the banks as a whole $17,000,000—half to be used to pay the depositors and the other half to be invested to earn a fund to repay the government loan.

A $12,000,000 Failure.

The Home Bank's $12,000,000 failure, involving heavy losses of savings to people of small means, has brought to a head an agitation for banking reform which has been in progress for some years in Canada. In the last couple of years other banks have had to accept heavy losses to their shareholders and one large bank had to merge with another to prevent catastrophe.

There are two main complaints against the Canadian banking system; that it does not provide safety for savings, and that it has monopoly tendencies. In 1917 there were 21 chartered banks in Canada, each having branches thruout the dominion. Today, allowing for mergers authorized but not completed, there are only 14.

Proposals for reform include guarantee of deposits and establishment of an independent board to control banks' loan policy.

Higher Tariff Asked.

OTTAWA. — The manufacturers of Canada are in no way disposed to yield their vested rights to protection by tariff duties.

Last session the Canadian parliament reduced the duties slightly on goods coming direct to Canada from Great Britain, and already the Canadian shoe manufacturers are crying out against the invasion of their market by English shoes. The bogey of the Canadian shoe men used to be American footwear, but now the English maker is the enemy. A speaker at a shoe trade convention in Montreal the other day demanded that the government put up the duty on shoes.

Owens Writes on Question of Social Equality and Negro

To The DAILY WORKER: The capitalist newspapers of the United States constantly state that Negroes must not be accorded social equality. Whenever Negroes make a stand for civil rights and equal accommodations in places of amusement, hotels, restaurants and on public conveyances the capitalist papers, such as the Chicago Tribune, assert that Negroes are fighting for social equality.

The bugaboo of social equality is always mentioned by the southern capitalists as the one condition that must not exist between Negroes and whites. (They mean Negro, and white workers, however.)

The late President Harding said in his Birmingham speech on the Negro problem, that there must not be and cannot be any social equality between Negroes and whites.

Social equality does not exist among all white people nor all Negroes. Neither does it exist between Negroes and whites. Every person, regardless of race or color, is free to choose his own friends. The son of J. P. Morgan will not marry the daughter of his father's butler, despite the fact that all are white; neither will Mr. Rockefeller's daughter marry her father's chauffeur.

The white teamsters or street car employes of Chicago do not and had better not attend the social functions of the Chicago capitalists at the LaSalle and Blackstone hotels. A white worker cannot even enter by the front door at the Hotel LaSalle.

Negro stock yard workers do not fraternize or associate with the Negro bankers, realtors or professional men.

A Negro worker would be unanimously black-balled if he would have the audacity to try to join the Appotomax Club composed of Negro business men, real estate sharks and would-be capitalists.

People in a restaurant, on a street car or attending a theater do not engage in conversations with each other if they are not acquainted, regardless of race or color.

Men are often arrested for speaking to women whom they have never been introduced to. No one except a fool will go to another person's private party or residence unless he or she has received an invitation.

Social equality is used like the mythical "public," by the capitalists and their lackeys to confuse and obscure the real issue.

Negroes, however, must demand every right enjoyed by every other citizen, including their constitutional right and also their natural right in public life to go, eat, sleep wherever they please and above all, to to love or marry whomsoever they please, regardless of race or color.

In private life of course, Negroes should go, eat, and sleep wherever they are invited.

If it is all right for a southern white man to associate with Negro women and young ladies, in my opinion it is doubly O. K. for Negro men to associate with white women and young ladies. What is good for the goose is still better for the gander.—GORDON OWENS, Chicago.

New York Pledged to Raise $100,000 for German Relief

NEW YORK.—The drive for German relief under the direction of the New York branch of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany is meeting with great success in the various local unions.

At a recent conference of the F. S. R. and W. G. delegates from more than two hundred unions, fraternal groups and political organizatons pledged to raise $100,000. Already the New York branch is well in its way to raise that sum.

One of the most successful means for raising funds for the German workers it has been found since the campaign for $100,000 was started is shop collection. The workers in the shops and factories are always willing to help their comrades in other countries.

It is planned to have a house to house collection carried on very soon by which means the F. S. R. and W. G. hope to raise considerable money and acquaint the workers with the plight of their fellows in Germany.

This King Offered to Sleep on Cot on Her Front Porch

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 5.—Asa G. Candler, millionaire Coca Cola king, would have been willing to sleep on the sleeping porch of Mrs. Onezima de Bouchel, according to a letter read in court here during Mrs. de Bouchel's breach of promise suit.

The letter, Mrs. de Bouchel said, was written by Candler while she was in Reno, Nev., obtaining a divorce, in June, 1922. He was planning to visit her, she said, and declared if the hotels were crowded he would be satisfied to sleep on her porch.

"I love you better than all the world," Candler declared in another letter read in behalf of Mrs. de Bouchel.

Submission of evidence was completed Monday.

Mrs. de Bouchel is suing on the grounds Candler promised to marry her and then withdrew after the wedding invitations had been mailed.

Tributes to the Daily Worker

The DAILY WORKER has received a letter as follows:

Endicott, N. Y., Jan. 31, 1924.

To The DAILY WORKER: Again I notify you to discontinue The DAILY WORKER paper to my address. I feel it is a disgrace to any home to have it found there. Such hideous pictures and reading matter in nothing but fault finding and advocating something to create dissatisfaction among the workers.

You might give that stuff to foreigners and other ignorant class of people of which you should be ashamed but the world in general laugh you to scorn.

And we must all put up with the many disagreeable things you bring to pass thru the labor union.

Yours truly,
R. C. MAXWELL.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: We quite agree with the writer that to send such an individual a publication that appeals to reason comes under the heading of "cruel and unusual punishment." We have heard from this person before. He lives in the company-owned shoe town of Endicott, N. Y., where everything from the grocery store to the church is owned by the great shoe producing firm of Endicott-Johnson

Some radical who knows what kind of a mental bankrupt R. C. Maxwell is, and who is not burdened with a tender conscience that rebels at causing pain to low forms of animal life, evidently has placed the gentleman on the mailing list of The DAILY WORKER.

Owned body and soul by the corporation that owns the town in which he lives, Mr. Maxwell in his ignorance resents the efforts of The DAILY WORKER to make this world a better place to live even if in doing so creatures of his type will be automatically benefited. The DAILY WORKER is under no necessity to creating dissatisfaction among the workers.

The dissatisfaction is created by the capitalist system and we simply direct it along lines that will produce the best results and bring about a condition where dissatisfaction will be eliminated with the elimination of the capitalist system which, along with other evils, produces such types as Mr. Maxwell.)

No Embalming Fluid for Daily Worker.

Comrade Michael T. Berry, of Lynn, Mass., an active participant in the revolutionary working class movement in America for over thirty years, and still active in struggles, likes The DAILY WORKER. He writes: "Congratulations on The DAILY WORKER. It is a fine contribution to the cause of the proletariat. Long may it live and prosper is my wishes. It has the spirit; it talks in a way that leads one to believe that it is in no way connected with the coffin trust. It has a spirit and a vim and may it never tire until its mission is realized."

Jews Are Urged to Colonize in Soviet Russia

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK.—Colonization of Jews in Soviet Russia is to be encouraged by an organization of Jewish labor and relief organizations in America. At the head of this movement are the "Ort"—a group devoted to furthering manual and agricultural labor among Jews in Russia—and the All-Russian Jewish Public committee.

An attempt will be made to raise a Russian Jewish loan to finance the colonization of Jews on free land offered by the Soviet government for this purpose. It is proposed that the loan be guaranteed by products of the agricultural communities.

Night Work for Women, Goal of N. Y. Lawmaker

NEW YORK.—Assemblyman Stanley of Geneseo, N. Y., has introduced a bill into the state legislature to nullify the laws protecting women from night work in industry.

Stanley would like to see women laborers work after 10 p. m. He wishes to see New York revert to the days when nighthood was in flower. Another Stanley once wrote a distinguished book called "In Darkest Africa." The Stanley from Geneseo apparently wishes to write a sequel, entitled "In Darkest Albany." The State Federation of Labor is taking measures to see that Stanley's intention is thwarted.

"Sane" Lewis Policies

"The American Coal Miner" is an Indianapolis monthly magazine, published by one K. C. Adams, whose columns, as well as a careful survey can establish, are devoted to promoting the personal fortunes of John L. Lewis.

The January number carries a full page picture of Brother Lewis on the front cover and several articles fulsomely praising Brother Lewis and his policies.

Printed on an excellent grade of calendered paper, the magazine is attractive typographically and evidently is an expensive undertaking. The most interesting part of the magazine, however, is the large number of large advertisements of coal companies—companies who employ the miners Brother Lewis is supposed to represent.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company, one of the largest in America, has a full page advertisement on the reverse of the cover that carries the picture of Brother Lewis.

The Valley Camp Coal Company, Cleveland, Ohio, has all of Page 4.

Foundry and furnace coke companies are represented by W. H. Warner and Company who have all of Page 6.

Peale, Peacock and Keer, who advertise "Thirty-one Miles," have all of Page 48, the outside cover-page.

M. A. Hanna and Company have Page 47, the inside cover page, all to themselves.

The United States Coal Company and the Crowe Coal Company divide Page 45.

Walter Bledsoe and Company have half of Page 44.

The Youghiogheny and Ohio Coal Company, the Maynard Coal Company, the J. H. Weaver Coal Company, the Claycraft Mining and Brick Company, divide Page 43 with the Birmingham Trust and Savings Company.

Page 42 is split between the Pursglove Coal Mining Company and the Maher Collieries Company.

Page 41 carries two small advertisements of coal companies.

The first article in the January issue of the American Coal Miner is entitled:

Lewis Administration Wins Miners' Approval. Sane Wage Policy Adopted by Committee.

Further comment would be superfluous.

"In the Public Interest"

The record of the class struggle in the United States is replete with instances in which the capitalists committed their most outrageous crimes against the oppressed workers and farmers and hid them behind a smoke screen of "public interest." The policy pursued by the oil-spotless Hughes in the Department of State campaign against Russian recognition is a rare example of this hypocritical policy.

When Hughes' agent was asked by Senator Borah during one of the sessions of the Senate sub-committee hearings for information regarding the expenditure of Russian money on Communist propaganda in the United States, he replied that he could not release this information to the public "in the public interest." This reply met with laughter from the committee and the audience. It was an old, hackneyed bluff and was accepted as such by everybody present.

Now the Senate Committee wants the letters on Soviet Russia sent the State Department by Governor Goodrich of Indiana. The answer of the State Department is again a blunt refusal to give the information. Mr. Hughes again says that the publication of this letter "would be incompatible with the public interest." As to other letters requested by Borah, Hughes passes the buck to the War Department. This is a stupid way of attempting to pull out of a difficulty. Everybody knows that the War Department will follow the example set by Hughes. It will refuse to make public war "secrets."

It is plain to every one that if the letters in question contained information justifying the Hughes policy they would have been made public long ago. Obviously, the letters contain damning evidence concerning the policy of the State Department. Mr. Hughes as the spokesman of the Standard Oil interests in the Teapot Dome Cabinet, is arrogating to himself the the position of guardian of the public welfare only to hide his sordid services to the capitalists of this country in their hostile policy towards Soviet Russia.

One of the chief mourners at the bier of Wilson is Brother Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor. He never wavered in his loyalty even when secret service agents of the Wilsonian department of justice were breaking the steel strike.

Where Is LaFollette?

Senator LaFollette symbolizes the hopelessness and helplessness of the middle class. The senator from Wisconsin personifies the inaction, hesitancy, indecision and lack of political initiative which are so characteristic of the petty capitalist owners whose champion he is.

Never in his long career has LaFollette had such a splendid chance to strike telling blows against all the powerful interests he has for many years denounced in the bitterest words. Yet, how has LaFollette availed himself of his opportunities to do what he has been saying he wants to do? He has thrown away practically every chance that came begging at his political door.

It was LaFollette who really started the whole Tea Pot Dome Oil affair. It was La Follette's resolution in the last Congress that set fire to the oil edifice of Fall and Denby. But today LaFollette has lost the initiative and is no longer the leading character in this most important political drama. Except for his demand to probe the stock profits of the oil companies involved in the scandal, LaFollette has not fired a single barrage into the camp of Coolidge, Lodge and Smoot.

In the debate on the question of Soviet Russia, Senator LaFollette again threw over the brink an opportunity to hit his enemies very hard. Even in the all-important tax issue La Follette has not measured up to the situation. His lieutenant Frear, in the house, has done much more in driving back Mellon than the whole flock of "radical" Senators has done to date.

"Fighting Bob" has made a cardinal mistake in the present fight. LaFollette has put all his eggs in one basket. He has staked his all on the railroad question. Under the present circumstances with Teapot oil spattering every corner of the United States and with the tax question begging for action, there is very little likelihood of getting any decision on the railroad problem, important as it may be.

All LaFollette has done to date on this hobby of his is to give more power to the Democrats. Even if the strenuously objectionable Section 15-a of the Esch-Cummins Act should be repealed that will not automatically bring about a reduction in freight rates. But no one would seriously consider for a moment that Coolidge will permit the repeal of this section. Senator Robinson, the democratic whip, has publicly announced his opposition to LaFollette's railroad program and railway evaluation scheme. Senator Smith, the Chairman of the Commerce Committee, whom LaFollette has put on the map of politics, has declared privately that tho he is opposed to certain features of the Transportation Act of 1920, he is not prepared to go along with LaFollette and is not ready to make a vigorous attack on the Esch-Cummins law.

The outstanding weakness of LaFollette's failure to date was well summed up by one of the leading spirits of the insurgents when he said: "The whole trouble is that we haven't yet been able to map out a definite program."

These are significant words. They tell the reason for LaFollette's not measuring up to the numerous opportunities that have presented themselves to him in recent months. If there are any workers and farmers who are anxious to put their faith in LaFollette leadership in the coming election struggles against the big bankers and industrialists, they would do well first to examine LaFollette's repeated throwing away of chances to strike their enemies; LaFollette's complete inability to take the initiative and wage an offensive struggle against the reactionaries.

The Blood In Steel

The United States Steel Corporation has announced the payment of an extra half per cent dividend on its common stock for the fourth quarter of the business year.

This is significant in view of the introduction of the eight-hour working day in most of the Steel Trust's mills. Last Spring Gary and his handpicked impartial experts whined over the proposal to abolish the 12-hour day and proclaimed far and wide that the shorter workday would ruin all chances of the "brains" of the industry being duly rewarded. Indeed, no one took Gary and his satellites seriously. Least of all did they take themselves seriously, for these "experts" knew they were outraging the truth.

It is obvious that the steel workers have been producing such fabulous profits for their masters that not even a reduction in the working period can materially dent the capitalist profits. But the Steel Barons refused to take any chances on declaring vacations in the industry of extra-dividends. When the intolerable working hours were cut, they slashed wages. Hence, it is no surprise to find that the United States Steel Corporation increased its net profits last year by more than seventy million dollars, or an increase of 70% over 1922 and a grand total of $179,650,910. This is the banner year in the history of the Steel Trust, except for the War years.

The story of the rise of the Steel Empire reads like the story of the rise of a kingdom of pirates. The Steel edifice rests on the crushed bodies of the hundreds of thousands of overworked and underpaid workingmen toiling in the hell-holes of the mills. The titanic profits amassed by the steel capitalists, are only the congealed sweat and blood of the workers ground in their deadening daily toil.

Brotherly co-operation unmarred by partisan prejudices marks the manner in which prominent democrats and republicans have worked for the oil interests, according to Mr. Doheny's recent interesting revelations.

Legion Commander Learns Limitations of Free Speech

THE practical limitations of our so-called democratic rights were vividly presented in a row between the managers of the radio broadcasting station at Albany, N. Y., and a speaker, who made use of their apparatus, to express his views on a vital public question.

He was told that when he reached a certain portion of his speech he was to signal the attendant, and that he would be cut off, while the attendant announced that the speech was completed. In the words of Hindenburg: "Schluss."

Had it been a representative of a workers' organization, he would never even have been allowed to come near the transmitter. Certainly his protest would not have been carried by the big daily press. But this speaker happened to be J. R. Quinn, National Commander of the American Legion. He was broadcasting a speech, setting forth the Legion's present position in favor of the bonus, and the "objectionable" part of his speech was a criticism of Secretary Mellon. He protested, but his speech was censored just the same. Officials of the Radio Corporation of America announced that musical programs were never interfered with, but that all speeches were subject to control. We should like to see someone try to broadcast "The Internationale."

Commander Quinn has received an important lesson in the limitations of the democratic process for which he, presumably, stands very strongly. This belief in no way interferes with his local posts when they disrupt workers' memorial meetings in honor of the greatest international figure of our day. But he has learned from experience that the ownership and control of the means of disseminating opinion very effectively chokes that free expression upon which alone democratic processes can be based. The radio is an effective propaganda medium. Thanks to private ownership, it can now be used for Mellon, but not against him. For Big Business, but not against it. And, within these limitations, for the Legion, and not against it. Mr. Quinn, hot under the collar at the curtailment of his own "right of free speech," would not lift a finger to help permit the broadcasting of an opinion that he did not share.

But the discomfiture of the Legionaire should help awaken the workers to a realization of what they are up against. Thanks to high cost of broadcasting apparatus, and legal restrictions, the workers have not yet been able to use the radio to spread the truth about their cause. The cheap receiving apparatus is within their means—with it, they get the other fellow's dope, which they are unable to answer. The labor movement will have to find some way to use the radio in self defense.

What is true of the radio is also true of the big printing press. Its cost is prohibitive to the mass of the workers, only by the greatest sacrifices can they keep their weekly, and now their first daily paper alive. The existence of this mouthpiece of their cause is their only defense against the avalanche of falsehood poured upon them daily by their capitalist opponents.

One of the fundamental Workers Party tenets, which the Legion tries to choke off from utterance, is that the private ownership and control of the means of production and distribution of news is incompatible with the existence of democracy. Will Commander Quinn agree to this on the basis of his radio experience in Albany? Well, what applies to news, applies also to bread and to jobs.

Workers, get wise to yourselves. Support your press and make conquest of the radio.

Unemployment and Child Welfare

By JOHN HARVEY

During the industrial depression of 1921-'22, the children's bureau of the United States Department of Labor collected some very interesting statistics regarding the effect of unemployment on the welfare of the children.

In transmitting the report to Secretary of Labor Davis, Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau, said:

"Large groups of children suffer, not from temporary, but permanent losses, as a result of a period of industrial depression. Those who are interested in raising the standard of our citizenship thru better care of the children of the country cannot regard as outside the field of their concern proposals for preventing unemployment and, failing in a program of prevention, measures which are necessary for safeguarding the children during a period of unemployment."

Now, that we are fast approaching a new period of industrial depression, it would be interesting to make inquiries as to the fate of this report, which Secretary Davis filed away when it was forwarded to him some time ago, and the existence of which he has undoubtedly forgotten by now.

That Secretary of Labor Davis could consider such a report seriously for a moment, would be both a contradiction and an impossibility. Firstly: He is one of the staunchest and most reactionary supporters of the capitalist system. As such, unless entirely ignorant of the system which he supports, he must know that unemployment is a phenomenon of capitalism that is inseparable from it. Secondly. As a member of the cabinet, headed by our strike-breaker president, he cannot be entirely ignorant of the strike-breaking and labor-humbling aspect of the 1921-'22 industrial depression. He will remember that in all those journals which express the will of the industrialists, there appeared again and again orders to take advantage of this period of industrial depression to smash the gains that labor had made during the period of war-time prosperity. To make this union-breaking, wage-reducing drive reach the maximum of success, the artificial creation of unemployment was at many times necessary. Thus the capitalists, including Mr. Davis, aggravated the already serious unemployment which Mr. Davis in the future is requested to prevent.

This report, tho prepared under Mr. Davis' department during the very same year he and his friends were increasing the amount of unemployment and smashing the unions, contains some valuable data. Racine, Wisconsin, and Springfield, Massachusetts, in different sections of the country, with different industrial backgrounds, were the cities chosen for the investigation.

The report shows clearly what a hard year it was, even for the families of fairly prosperous, skilled workers. What the condition was of the unskilled laborer can be imagined. A representative case among those investigated was that of a worker and family which, at the beginning of this year owned their house and had a thousand dollars in the bank. The father, who had been getting as high as $175 a month, lost his job. At the end of the year the same family had no money in the bank, and a mortgage which they had taken out on the house during the year, was about to be foreclosed.

Of course, for a time, unemployment was so bad there were not even jobs for children, but during this period children were usually given the preference for any jobs that were open. On this point the report says: "some children, during all the time when men and women were so desperately in need of employment, left school and secured work."

But the report fails to touch upon a serious consequence of this year of unemployment—a condition directly affecting the youth. When there was a shortage of labor the industrialists were not in a position to differentiate much between workers. But, with this period of unemployment; both thru the selective discharging of workers at the first of the year and selective hiring when the period of depression was ending, they were able to greatly increase the proportion of young workers. In this way, aside from the dealing of an effective blow at the unions, a new wage standard was established for the unskilled workers, and those old workers who returned to work found themselves being paid a wage which formerly had been the pay of a young worker only. Also, as a result of the added chance, the employer now had to choose his workers, the number of women and girls in the industries was greatly increased.

So we see that this period of unemployment has had a more permanent effect on the welfare of the children thru the greatly decreased income of the working-class family—which will leave a mark manifesting itself in the health and education of the working-class children for some time to come—probably as long as Mr. Davis and his like continue to "prevent unemployment" while upholding the capitalist system.

Now, that we are already arriving at another period of what may be, perhaps, even more serious unemployment, we can fairly ask, altho the department of labor has no solutions for the unemployment problem, that they, at least, get ready their investigators for a new undertaking.

LENIN

Rest, Comrade, rest! Thy long day's work is o'er;
Lay down the torch thy hand has borne so long.
Close now thine eyes, and let thy spirit soar
Thru the wide Earth, borne on our funeral song.

Toward that cold grave beneath the Kremlin's wall
The thoughts of millions of the workers turn.
Thy silent tongue still sounds it's clarion call;
And in their souls the answering pulses burn.

Hunted, maligned, a fugitive on earth;
Fighting the workers' battle to the end;
Thru wars, thru plots, thru Famine's grisly dearth;
Faithful to death, thy spirit did not bend.

A hired assassin dealt the coward's blow
That robbed us of thee, Comrade — that removed Thee from our ranks, and laid thy body low;
But left thy mem'ry ten times more beloved.

What fools they be who think that by such deed
They stem the Revolution's mighty flood.
Let them beware! For he who runs may read
The answer to their holocaust of blood.

Sleep, Comrade, sleep! Nor fear the Work was vain
In which thy life was spent for others' sake;
The torch from thy dead hand we raise again;
And carry onward—till the full Day break.

Laying the Foundation for Militarism

Oh, no, America is not a militarist country.

But, anyway, if you are one in about a thousand and get a chance to go to high school or college, they hand you this pleasant note:

"Have you been told that you must take this two year basic course in the Reserve Officers Training Corps, either in high school or college, if you expect to to graduate from any recognized college or university?"

This is taken from an actual notice that was passed out in one of the Chicago high schools. One thing is certain in high school or college, you must become a reserve officer.

If the War Department learned nothing from the war it discovered that so highly developed an imperialist nation as the United States might be plunged into war without much warning and that a trained officer body is necessary, especially in a country that does not have compulsory, general military training. The plans now resting in the desks of the General Staff are framed to facilitate quick mobilization. From the factories and mines, from the mills and farms would come the millions of overworked, exploited youth as soldiers; from the colleges and high schools would come a ready-made officer corps to lead the machine-made soldiers to slaughter.

Everything but outright compulsory military training for a period of years is on the program of the United States War Department. The American financiers and big capitalists are frantic in their appeal for a large and efficient fighting force. One of the vital problems they have to face is military man power. A swollen military budget has not yet affected this country to the extent that this disease has spread is slow poison thru France, but if certain generals who have the backing of most of the big industrialists and financeers were to have their way, the United States would have an available military force of from 5 to 6 million.

The groundwork of the future American super-army and navy is already laid in the educational institutions. The Citizen's Military Training Camps is but one of the supporting beams; and the rest of the structure is in the building.

THE JUNIOR GROUP AS A CENTER OF ENERGY

Article No. 12.

The child is even less able than the adult worker to conduct an individual struggle. It is useless to speak to him, as an individual, of courage and daring. The conditions under which he can fight must be created. He must realize that he is not alone, but that he is supported by his organization, the Junior Group, and that back of this stand the adult organizations—the Young Workers League, the Workers Party, the trades unions, the parents' conferences, and others. Only as a part of such an organization, only with the confidence that the solidarity that all his comrades give him, can he be expected to use his natural courage and self confidence and profess communism on all occasions, in spite of mockery or force.

Only thru this sense of solidarity will the children be enabled to use what they observe in the streets and in the schools and what they learn in the Junior Groups. Only thus will they become active and militant instead of submissive. Then their questions become, not "What can I do?" or "What shall I do?" but instead, "What can we do?" "Where shall we begin the struggle?" The children are ready for action. The Junior Groups indicate the route to be followed. To learn and to act—knowledge and struggle—these are the two factors that are amalgamated into one in the minds of the children.

TO THE CHILD EXPLOITERS

"No fledgling feeds the father bird,

The impudence of the British Labor Party in forming a government against the wishes of Samuel Gompers is now overshadowed by their still more henious crime of recognizing the Soviet Government. Will Chester Wright and the other journalist stool-pigeons of the Gompers political hosehold who act as liason officers between the Department of Justice and the public, begin a series of exposures, showing the British Labor Party and the Russian Communist Party working hand in hand to bring about the downfall of the tottering throne of the Gompers royal family in the American labor movement?

* * * *

Had John L. Lewis known that the British Labor Party would recognize Soviet Russia unconditionally, without insisting that the workers of Russia pay the debts loaned by English plutes to the Czar to keep the Russian workers in subjection, would he send a cable to the British Labor Party congratulating them on assuming direction of the government?

* * * *

The British Labor Party is—also responsible for a number of European nations of more or less independence—considerably less—scurrying to tip their hats to the respresentatives of the Soviet Republic. Austria turned over the old Russian embassy to the new rulers of Russia. Norway is getting ready to sign on the dotted line. While Mussolini, the Italian Fascist chief was going over the treaty he was preparing to sign with the Soviet envoy in Rome, a message arrived from Moscow, ordering the Soviet representative there to send the treaty to the Kremlin for revision. Poincare is liable to be dropped in a few weeks which may place France on the list of governments that have recognized the Soviet government. How long can the fossilized Gompers and his capitalistic allies in America prevent the White House from withholding Russian recognition?

The Lettish workers who recently met in Chicago and exposed Riga, the capital of that country, as a capitalist press cess-pool, have performed a public duty as our liberal contemporaries would put it. Many of the workers who took part in the meeting are recent arrivals from Latvia, and were able to tell from experience the conditions under which the workers of that country live and th efforts made by the bourgeois flunkeys who rule Latvia, to poison the minds of the workers against the Soviet Republic. American worker are confronted with the same pro blem as are the workers of Latvia.

The workers of Belfast, Ireland, the chief stronghold of reaction in Ireland, have organized a real live labor party and promise to give the overlords of shipbuilding, linen and whiskey something to ponder over in the near future. The rise to power of the British Labor Party has encouraged labor everywhere in the British Isles to make more serious efforts to achieve ultimate emancipation. The bogey of "Home Rule" can no longer work in Belfast, an now that the Orangemen are politically separated from the Catholics o the South, some other red herring must be discovered to lead the workers off on a wrong track. The workers in the south of Ireland are also learning that the so-called Free State did not bring them freedom. They are now more persecuted than ever, the Irish army being used to break strikes, something that was never even attempted in the south of Ireland by the British army. Labor in Ireland is learning from a dearly bought experience, and the day is approaching when labor on both banks of the Boyne,—long the Mason and Dixie line of Ireland—will join hands, bury their religious differences and establish a United Workers Republi on the ruins of capitalism.

The term "progressive" does n seem to convey and meaning in this country any more. In England, many Lords and Sirs are more advanced in their views than allege progressives. Here in America the labor movement is infested with hordes of leaders who have until now proudly flaunted the progressive banner. There is an old saying, something to the effect that at one touch of sorrow all the world is akin. can be said with more truth at on touch of "red", progressives and reactionaries are akin. The Workers Party will either smoke the progressives out or smoke them in.

SOUTH ILLINOIS DELEGATES FOR LEWIS RECALL

Plan to Keep Up Fight to Reinstate Howat

By MAX SHACHTMAN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHRISTOPHER, Ill.—The impeachment of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America and the reinstatement of Alexander Howat into the union by the calling of a special international convention will soon be the primary issue in the locals of the United Mine Workers, according to statements made to me by returned delegates to the convention of the union which has just been adjourned at Indianapolis.

Richard Swift, delegate from Local 3613, Valier, Ill., and executive committee member of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, declared that Lewis had refused to give Howat a hearing to which any expelled member of the union is entitled.

"The convention was a step forward only in the sense that President Lewis showed himself up by not allowing the men who had grievances to give their views and side of the case to the real pick men, the miners. Especially is this true on the Howat case. I believe that my local will be for this special convention which was the demand of the more than 1,100 delegates who remained after Lewis had arbitrarily adjourned the convention."

Milton Cochran, a young delegate from Local 1782, Royalton, Ill., also stated that he was in favor of a special convention.

"Howat was not dealt fairly with," he said, "and I'm for a convention to take up his case fairly."

Similar opinions were expressed by delegates Hisaih Winn and A. Parker, both of Valier, Ill., and by "Baldy" Jim Myrick of Royalton.

Swift, speaking on the convention action with regard to allowing Lewis to continue with his power of appointing organizers, said:

"We had the majority vote on that question against leaving the appointive power to Lewis, but they refused to recognize us as a majority. While the roll call was being taken, Savage, district president of Ohio, caucused with his delegates and instructed them to vote with the administration. This was done in the face of the union rule that no convention delegate is to be intimidated into voting one way or the other on any question. The same thing, however, was done with the delegates from West Virginia, Oklahoma, Maryland, Iowa, district One of Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Kentucky, Texas, Arkansas and Missouri. Oklahoma was divided on the question."

It was the general opinion among the delegates interviewed and the miners of Ziegler, Christopher, West Frankfort and other southern Illinois camps, that Illinois would line up solidly for the special international convention.

As Arley Staples, president of the United Mine Workers of America local at Christopher, Ill., assured me, "You can count on Christopher."

Farmers! Workers! Organize Your Party

tatives of industrial workers and farmers, to state clearly what the farmers and workers would seek to achieve in this convention and the principles which would guide them.

Need for Farmer-Labor Party

That the city workers and the farmers must organize and enter the political arena thru a party which will fight their political struggles has become so clear in recent years that it seems almost impossible that there is still a single industrial worker or farmer who does not know that the rotten, corrupt Republican and Democraticic parties will never do anything in their interest. Both old parties represent the interests of the big employer, the banks, the marketing organizations—in a word, the capitalists—who are robbing the industrial workers and farmers alike.

The two old parties use the government against the industrial workers, against the farmers and for the capitalists.

When the industrial workers strike for higher wages, the government helps the big employers put down the strike thru injunctions, courts and soldiers. In 1922, the mines and railroad centers were filled with soldiers by the government, to help the coal operators and railroad owners whip the miners and railroad shopmen, who were striking for a decent standard of living. The government used its railroad board against the railroad workers. It secured the Daugherty injunction, taking from the shopmen every right given them under the constitution, cancelling at one stroke of a pen the right to assemble, to speak, to write, to organize and to use their own money for strike purposes.

The farmers felt the power of the government during the period of deflation, to such an extent that hundreds of thousands of farmers, yes millions, were driven from the land and into bankruptcy. The farmers know that all the laws passed by Congress about the railroads, marketing facilities and banking are drawn so as to help the railroads, the grain elevator owners and other marketing organizations, and the bankers, but no help comes from the government for the millions of suffering, bankrupt farmers and those who are on the verge of bankruptcy.

The capitalists do not only use the government against the industrial workers and farmers, they use the government for themselves. Just now they are trying to escape the taxes they must pay on their big incomes and load these taxes on the backs of the workers and farmers thru the Mellon plan. The shocking, shameful exposure of the looting of the country thru bribery of Republican and Democratic office holders alike, by the big oil interests, maed public in the Teapot Dome scandal, show clearly what use the capitalists make of the government.

Movement for Farmer-Labor Party

It is the facts and experiences stated above which have developed the ever-growing movement for a farmer-labor party, thru which the farmers and city workers can fight their political battles against the capitalistic parties.

This movement found its first great nation-wide expression in the July 3d convention of last year, in which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was organized. Since that time the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has carried on a campaign for even a greater convention and a stronger party for the presidential election this year.

There must be a farmer-labor ticket in the election this year. The farmers and city workers must nominate candidates and adopt a platform representing their interests. There must be great campaigns against the old parties, against their policies and their candidates, and for the farmers and industrial workers.

In the endeavor to achieve this end the Federated Farmer-Labor Party established connections with all the existing farmer-labor parties in an effort to bring them together in one great nation-wide farmer-labor party. When the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party called a conference in November, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party immediately responded and entered into an agreement with the Farmer-Labor Party of Washington, The Farmer-Labor Party of Montana, the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota, the Committee of 48, the Progressive Party of Idaho, and the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, to call the May 30th Convention.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party believes that, in the May 30th Convention, the farmers and industrial workers have the opportunity to unite all the units of the farmer-labor party movement in one great, nation-wide Farmer-Labor Party.

What Kind of Party?

What kind of a party is to be organized May 30th? This is an important question for the industrial workers and farmers. We believe that it is our duty to make clear the two forces which will struggle for supremacy in the May 30th Convention.

Not only the workers in the industries and the exploited farmers are discontented with the rule of the capitalists thru the old parties. The small business men, professional men and the rich, well-to-do farmers are also dissatisfied with the way the government is used by the big capitalists. Every industrial worker and exploited farmer must understand that there is a difference between the movement against the old parties by the small business men and well-to-do farmers and the movement for a party to represent the interests of the workers and poorer farmers.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party fights in the interest of the industrial workers and the poorer, exploited farmers. Magnus Johnson, Shipstead, Frazier, Brookhart, La Follette, and other so-called progressives, represent the small business men and well-to-do farmers. The platform of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party stands for the interests of the indutrial workers and poorer-exploited farmers. The measures proposed by the so-called progressives are measures in the interests of the small busines men and well-to-do farmers.

Both the progressives who want a Third Party, which will be a small business man's and well-to-do farmers' party, and the industrial workers and poorer, exploited farmers, will come to the May 30th Convention. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party will stand for the interests of the industrial workers and exploited farmers in the convention. It will carry on a campaign to win the support for the convention by the industrial workers and poorer, exploited farmers, so that the candidates and platform will represent the interests of this group, and not the small business men and well-to-do farmers.

Shall Convention Be Delayed?

A proposal has been made by Wm. Mahoney, chairman of the Working People's Non-Partisan League of Minnesota, after conferences with La Follette, Magnus Johnson, Shipstead, and others of the progressives, that the May 30th Convention be postponed until after the old party conventions.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party is unalterably opposed to such a delay. The only reason for such a delay is to give the La Follette, Frazier, Brookhart, Magnus Johnson and Shipstead group an opportunity to see which way the cat will jump in the old party conventions.

The industrial workers and exploited farmers have no interest in waiting for the old party conventions. No matter who is nominated in these conventions and what platforms are adopted, the candidates and platforms will be for the capitalists and against the workers and farmers.

If La Follette and other so-called progressives are for the workers, let them prove it by cutting loose from the old parties and aligning themselves with the Farmer-Labor Party NOW. The workers and farmers have nothing to gain from backstairs political deals. The road lies clear before them.—TO ORGANIZE A CLASS FARMER-LABOR PARTY.

Forward to the Class Party.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party calls upon all workers organizations, all organizations of farmers, to join in the struggle for a farmer-labor party representing the interests of the industrial workers and exploited farmers.

It urges that every organization of workers and farmers now begin the work in support of the May 30th Convention, and to make that convention a great gathering of the exploited groups who suffer under the rule of the big capitalists and their government.

Forward to May 30th and a class Farmer-Labor Party! Forward in the struggle which will bring the Workers and Farmers Government of the United States!

Federated Farmer-Labor Party,
JOSEPH MANLEY,
National Secretary.

LEWIS MACHINE IGNORED VITAL JOB QUESTIONS

Passed Buck on Car Pushing and Slate

By PAT H. TUOHY
(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—There was great dissatisfaction among the miners' delegates over the lack of consideration given by the administration to job grievances, chief among which are the pushing of mine cars and the payment for removing slate and other "dead work."

These are generally passed over by the scale committee, by referring them back to the districts—as internal grievances. Yet the fact that these job questions are matters of national interest is shown by the resolutions coming from practically all districts.

The pushing of cars by the unions has been an issue in previous conventions and will continue to be so, as long as the buck can be passed. It is a vital issue that cannot be ignored.

Miners Permanently Injured

From Wyoming, most bitter complaints have come about the pushing of cars, not only as to the danger to life but because it so frequently reduces the earning power. Illinois District No. 12, voices the same complaint. With the installation of large cars, men are unable to handle them and many men have been permanently injured and wages have been reduced because of it. From numerous other districts we have had the same complaint.

The slate issue is a sore grievance. From Districts No. 5, and No. 6, especially, come bitter complaints because miners must remove slate to a thickness of one foot before receiving any pay. That is because the payment, on a tonnage basis for coal loaded, does not make provision for this "dead work" which is a necessary part of the miner's labor. This is a crying shame. Many times men are compelled to work all day for nothing.

Not "District Grievances"

These matters are not merely "district grievances" and should not be passed over so lightly by the board as such. I as a miner have no particular district in which to work. I may be working at one time in a district where none of these grievances exist and may lose my job, the mine may shut down, and I may be forced to go into another district where the slate issue is a serious matter. Then the fact that I am compelled to seek employment where these conditions prevail makes me realize that these co-called "district grievances" are national problems and that the national scale committee should be instructed to handle them as such.

How long shall these vital problems be side-tracked as minor internal grievances, merely to escape responsibility and to rid the scale committee of a vexing problem.

Make Poland Dry, Says Sokolowski; Had Fine Cellar

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK. — The sad, sad story of how prohibition agents raided the Washington apartment of Dr. V. Sokolowski, secretary of the Polish Legation to the United States, has experienced an amazing turn.

Sokolowski was caught with the goods. His apartment was found to resemble the wine cellars of the Polish nobility. Row upon row of liquor-filled bottles were discovered. It was whispered abroad that Sokolowski's supply was not entirely for home consumption. It was even alleged that Sokolowski was engaged in a prosperous avocation to diplomacy. Sokolowski left the country under a moist cloud of suspicion.

And now one of his friends, Congressman William D. Upshaw, has written Sokolowski a well-meaning letter. Congressman Upshaw expresses "his great pleasure" at having known Sokolowski. One wonders just what stimulated Upshaw to pen this appreciation. Anyway, he refers to Sokolowski as a "high-toned gentleman." One can fairly hear the high tones emanating from clinking glasses. Upshaw ends his letter with a "God-bless-you" flourish, reminiscent of toasts delivered in pro-Volstead days.

Dr. Sokolowski has returned to Poland. He is stated to have announced that he will be a total abstainer. He intends to devote himself to furthering the prohibition movement in Poland.

We would like to offer an award of one quart of the finest Polish liquor to any reader who can solve this riddle: What volume of business must a bootlegger do before he can afford to become a devout prohibition leader?

Co-op Pays 16% Dividend

KINCAID, Ill.—While the big corporations of the country were dividing their profit plums the first of the year, miners of this village were receiving a 16% dividend of their own. And that 16% was not capitalist toll taken from their fellow workers. It was their reward for membership in the local Workmen's Co-operative Association, which runs the Rochdale stores here.

Each member received dividends according to the amount of his purchases. Members had already made a great saving by trading at the co-operative stores where prices are lower than in other stores of the community.

Summary of Coal Miners' Convention

The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock, Jan. 22nd, in Tomlinson Hall, Indianapolis, Ind., John Smith, president, Indianapolis Central Labor union presiding. Corporation Counsel Taylor Groniger and Taylor president Indiana F. of L. greeted the delegates.

John L. Lewis read this report and announced the names of several committee appointments. Vice President Murray and Secretary Green read their reports which were referred to the committee of officers reports.

The reports of the officers consisted mainly in tirades against the radicals, boosts for long term contracts and harmony between miners and operators. The committee on officers reports eulogised the executive officers. About one hour was devoted to a mutual admiration act.

The report of the resolutions committee was the most hotly contested of any that came before the convention. The first of importance was the one dealing with Soviet Russia. Twelve resolutions were received on this question from local unions thruout the country. The committee substituted for these a hodge podge which started out by declaring for the principle of self determination, that the Russian people had a right to determine their own form of government provided they pay what the Czar owed to Pierpont Morgan. The resolution ended with a wail—very likely written by the Socialist Kennedy—that "self-appointed leaders" were striking at the foundations of "our government" and spreading the same doctrines that helped render impotent the Socialist Party, etc.

Eighteen resolutions were submitted demanding the formation of a labor party. The committee substituted an emaciated caricature which admitted that the labor party idea has passed the visionary stage and can be made a reality, but in doing so they did not believe in antagonizing the Republican and Democrat parties which are their friends. Efforts to form "legitimate" labor parties should not be discouraged but it was considered unwise to affiliate the miners' union with any political organization at this time. The members of the miners' union are granted under the constitution, civil, religious and political liberties of opinion which the resolutions committee did not want to see abridged.

We should, however, be ready, the report continued, to unite our political strength just as has been done in other countries, therefore it was recommended that the executive officers of the United Mine Workers of America be instructed to continue their efforts and co-operate with such other organizations composing the American Federation of Labor, farmers organizations and other unaffiliated organizations "constructive in character" for the purpose of bringing about a cohesive political movement. The report wound up by recommending the secretary to send a cablegram to Ramsay MacDonald congratulating British labor on their success.

The committee congratulated the British workers on their success in accomplishing something the miners were not allowed to do by their officials, that is, make a real move to organize a labor party in the U. S.

On the question of the nationalization of mines the committee introduced a substitute which merely urged a continuation of research work. John Brophy, whose report on the nationalization of mines was so severely criticized by John L. Lewis, never opened his mouth in support of real nationalization.

The Lewis administration was successful by a liberal use of red paint in having its action on the Nova Scotia case sustained. The lifting of that district's autonomy and the expulsion of its officers was an act of treachery hardly without parallel in the history of organized labor.

Referred the question of a cessation of work in case of war to the International Mining Congress for universal action. So far as it lies in the power of the officials of the United Mine Workers this means universal inaction.

The convention passed a resolution restricting alien immigration and a strict enforcement of the laws on the Pacific Coast against the smuggling of aliens.

The convention endorsed the industrial form of organization as opposed to craft unionism but did not recommend any active steps toward this end merely hoping for its "orderly introduction into other industries of the country under the banner of the American Federation of Labor."

Voted to urge the release of all political prisoners. The committee did not know that there were any still in prison.

The resolutions committee brought in a resolution denouncing both the Amsterdam and Red Trade Union Internationals, claiming both were critical of the American labor movement. The report was adopted.

Passed a resolution demanding the repeal of all criminal syndicalist laws.

Voted to continue the appointive power after a roll call vote.

Voted down the recommendation of the Lewis machine to eliminate the clause from the constitution prohibiting membership in the union to a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Voted one thousand dollars to the Tom Mooney Defense Fund. An amendment to increase the sum to $2,000 was ruled out of order by Chairman Lewis.

Delegates hissed and booed secretary of Labor Davis and distributed circulars exposing his anti-labor record.

Adopted the report of the scale committee giving power to the representatives of the union to secure the best possible agreement on the basis of no reduction in wages, a four year contract, the concurrent termination of all contracts in the bituminous fields and the submission of any agreement reached with the operators to a referendum vote of the membership for ratification.

Elected Thomas Kennedy of District 7 and Walter Nesbit District 12, delegates to International Mining Congress.

Decided to hold the next convention on third Tuesday in January, 1926.

Ended in uproar and disorder when Lewis refused to announce vote on Howat appeal.

CANADA TO GET RUSSIAN TRADE AS U. S. DELAYS

Dominion Is Eager for Soviet Commerce

By F. W. GERRISH
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONTREAL, Canada.—It has been recently announced that the Soviet Republic Trade Delegation to Canada is now in London arranging to sail for Canada. The significance of this is very great as it means that the workers of Russia will ignore the Capitalists of the United States and will concentrate their efforts for placing Russia in the highest possible state of material efficiency in Canada.

From the propaganda carried on in the Press, some individuals have the idea that Russia is a wild and woolly wilderness sparsely peopled by ferocious savages wearing luxuriant whiskers accompanied by a corresponding absence of soap. The real fact is that the Soviet Republic represents the one hundred and thirty million peasants and workers organized under a political and economic system that is destined to spread all over the world within a few years.

The trade delegation from the Soviet Republic which is supposed to have destroyed the resources of Russia is actually preparing to purchase large quantities of Canadian commodities for the people of Russia and to pay for them in a way that most of the Capitalist States of the world cannot do. In addition these purchases will go a long way towards the alleviation of unemployment in Canada.

These facts are well-known to the big business firms in Canada, who will hasten to make friends with the Mammon of unrighteousness but, thru the columns of THE DAILY WORKER, these facts can be made known to a wider circle. Your readers in their respective localities have opportunities of spreading this information both for the encouragement of their principles and also for the reason of putting the Trade Delegation in touch with the greatest possible variety of suppliers of the commodities they are buying.

I would therefore suggest that THE DAILY WORKER, publish all possible information in advance of sailing as to the movements of the Trade Delegation, as service in aid of the Soviet Republic is one of the greatest possible means of helping the Communist Cause. In April, 1918, I was connected with the "Beaver" which was the first newspaper in Canada, to support the Soviet Republic. On August 11th, 1920, in the Montreal Labour Temple, I presided over the first public meeting in Canada, to protest against Canadian and British assistance to Poland. To me the moral aspect of the Russian Revolution is and always will be, more than the fluctuating measure of material success it reaches, but at the same time we should always be ready to broadcast the great material achievements of the workers of Russia, in the face of hardships paralleled in the history of the world.

Do American Workers Know a Good Thing When They See It?

WE SAY THEY DO AND CITE A RECORD OF A 50 PER CENT INCREASE IN THE DAILY WORKER CIRCULATION DURING THE LAST TWO WEEKS TO PROVE IT.

Cynics and pessimists and renegades excuse their impotency by bewailing the lack of intelligence and class-consciousness of American workers. The reception which THE DAILY WORKER has received everywhere it has appeared, disproves this conception once and for all.

There are hundreds of thousands of American workers, rebels at heart, who have been looking for a daily newspaper just like THE DAILY WORKER.

How to notify these thousands that THE DAILY WORKER is here, how to make them aware that at last there IS a daily labor paper that supplies all the newspaper needs of the working-class is the big problem which THE DAILY WORKER must solve.

Those who now read THE DAILY WORKER are the ones who can reach these thousands for us.

If every reader of THE DAILY WORKER will make it his business to distribute copies of the paper among the workers he meets, will advertise THE DAILY WORKER everywhere as

the problem will be solved and for every thousand workers now participating in the struggles for working class emancipation there will be TENS OF THOUSANDS, each of them a militant fighter in labor's cause.

For a limited time THE DAILY WORKER will send FREE to anyone making the request, a bundle of sample copies of THE DAILY WORKER for free distribution.

USE THE COUPON BELOW IN ORDERING

THE DAILY WORKER,

SOLONS SHIVER AS EX-SLEUTH SLOAN SOUGHT IN PROBE

List of Stock Sales to Politicians Wanted

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — Class government, exploiting the many for the corrupt enrichment of the few, is on the defensive in Washington at last, and, as it retreats, step by step, before the enraged public opinion that is sweeping in from every quarter of the country, leaders of the two capitalist party organizations are in a state closely resembling panic. The oil scandal has engulfed so many of the political marionettes of Big Business that they are terrified for the result next November. Hardened old cynics concede that "Something must be done, and done quick."

Fall Fools Nobody

Nobody is fooled by Albert Fall's refusal, on the day following the exposure of McAdoo's oil connection, to testify before the Senate committee. Official Washington has heard that Fall has been threatening to "tell everything," and before the inquiry gets off the front pages of the daily press, he will probably follow that impulse. In the meantime, the committee has prepared to tap the richest vein of evidence yet opened—the books of stock brokers in Washington, for the period just preceding and following the grant of the naval oil lease.

If the truth is secured from these brokers' records, the country will learn whether a ring of "insiders" got a lot of the $100,000,000 of Mammoth Oil stock, and whether they made big money by selling it to the public at 60—before it dropped to around 40. Also, whether they manipulated the market, and with what result. There is a general suspicion that the names of senators and members of Congress will be found on the books of the stockbrokers, not only for that particular period, but later.

Sleuth Sells Stocks.

Samuel Ungeleider, of Ohio, who opened a brokerage office here at the beginning of the Harding administration, and placed James Sloane, former secret-service guard to presidents, in charge, has been summoned to bring his books here. Sloane, last seen in Ohio, has also been subpoenaed. It is forecast that their testimony will prove as sensational as that of Doheny or Fall or Roosevelt, in disclosing the leaders of national political life, behind the scenes, gambling on the stock market, with the aid of gigantic private interests, whose ends they were serving while under salary from the nation.

"I wish I knew how to re-draw and political map for the 1924 campaign, so that it would stay put for a week or two," said a veteran political writer, after the McAdoo sensation was sprung.

"Wait until Fall has pulled the hypocrites into the oil tank with him, and wait until the stock brokers' books are examined," was the reply of a still older and more experienced writer. "This thing may simply force the creation of a new party in the United States within a few months."

Populace Aroused

Letters pouring in from California, Arizona, Colorado, Washington, Texas, Iowa, South Dakota, Illinois—all tell the same story—the country is not merely shocked, it is distrustful of congressmen and senators who have slept happily above this stink of corruption and crime in the federal government, heedless of La Follette's warning of its peril to the national welfare. They are angry, and they threaten to leave the old parties.

Facing these dangers, the party leaders may be expected to try to reach an agreement to quietly reduce the scope of the investigation, and to discover that the Senate should get back to regular legislative activities. But any such attempts will be resisted by the progressive group in both parties, and will be defeated. Something approaching a revolution in public feeling toward thefts of public property has been started, and it will not be stopped half way.

"You know, the worst thing about this oil probe," said a former Taft lieutenant, now serving as a reactionary adviser at the capitol, "is that it makes the people lose all faith in their government."

He recalled that the Ballinger affair was enough to make anyone anxious; the affair of Lorimer's purchased election shook the Republican machine; Newberry was all they could stand, even on the heels of the 7,000,000 majority in 1920. Now, they had just got off the Ferbes scandal in the Veterans' Bureau to plunge head-foremost into Teapot Dome and the wrecking of reputations of "big men" in both old parties.

Something should be done! The people might lose confidence in their government!

Wooden Fire Escapes Threaten Chicago School Children's Lives; 700 "Portable" Schools Big Peril

The lives of Chicago school children unfortunate enough to be alloted to the 120 "branch school" buildings in use here are in peril. These "branch schools" are frame affairs that constitute a constant and a grave fire hazard. There are 700 "portable" school buildings in use. More than 20,000 children attend classes in these portable and branch school buildings.

Those are facts established by the DAILY WORKER yesterday. The name portable applied to the buildings used as schools by the board of education is a misnomer. They are not portable and only in limited sense buildings. Shack would be a better word to apply to them.

Schools Like Hovels.

They are one story metal affairs looking and built like small garages. In winter they are very cold because they are not built to be permanent. They are for the most part heated by coal stoves in the middle of the one room. They can seat fifty children. Often more are crowded in. They have no toilet facilities, the pupils are forced to go out into the yard and into the main school building.

The board of education has said that portable buildings are only temporary makeshifts. Yet in many places they have been in use for years. The board of education will not make additions or alterations on any school building which is not able to prove its need by the use of portables.

Many of the so-called branch schools are even worse than portables as far as sanitary arrangements and heating are concerned. Some are heated by furnaces—theoretically. Almost all have in the various rooms large coal stoves to act as auxilliary heating plants.

Wooden Fire Escape.

A branch school that is in many ways better than most is Branch No. 1 of the Mayfair school at 4353 Lawrence avenue. It has three rooms and 132 pupils. The building is of brick and was erected in 1899. It has a wooden fire escape for the one room on the second floor. The boys' toilet in the basement is even worse than most such toilets. It is dark, dirty and ill-smelling.

The building stands in the center of a large vacant block and when cold north winds blow, such as were blowing yesterday, it is impossible to keep the place heated.

Branch No. 1 of the McPherson school at N. Robey street and Winnemac avenue is a more typical example of the branch school. Altho it has six rooms only two of them are in use. They are used by the two lowest grades.

The building is frame and has wooden fire escapes. The main floor is well above the street level. The fact that only two rooms are used increases the heating problem. All the rooms and the large halls must be heated if the two rooms used and the halls are to be made warm enough to be habitable. Here, too, there are stoves in each room to back up the furnaces. It has been found necessary to use the stoves often this winter in spite of the fact that there are three furnaces kept going.

The entire basement is damp and ill-smelling as are the usual run of school toilets.

Wooden Fire Escapes Again.

The danger from fire is increased in this building by the fact that there are three and often five separate fires going at the same time. Then the pupils are very young childern and the "fire escapes" are wood.

The building was erected in 1893 and is as dry as timber. There are only two teachers to 90 children.

Fire Inspectors from the board of education were at this school last week and said that it passed their tests. They said in fact that it was one of the safest branches in the city.

The DAILY WORKER will report on some of the branches that the fire inspectors think are worse than the McPherson branch school and which hey still pass.

CALIFORNIA AND IDAHO BACK DOWN ON PERSECUTIONS

Syndicalism Prisoners Winning Cases

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK. — News issued by the Civil Liberties Union here describes the ups and downs of political inquisition during the past few days.

What is termed a "concession to good sense" is cited in a recent decision of the Idaho Supreme Court in a criminal syndicalist case. Considering Richard Moore's application for a writ of habeas corpus, the Idaho bench held that the word "sabotage" in the state criminal syndicalist code does not include "striking on the job."

Meanwhile, the first unreserved acquital of I. W. W.'s in Sacramento occurred lately, when Sam Oberman, Ed Higgins and E. McRae were found not guilty of criminal syndicalism in the Superior Court of Sacramento county.

The seamy side of political justice is shown in the case of Louis J. Morris and Bocho Kojuharoff, arrested last summer for selling I. W. W. papers on the streets of Los Angeles in violation of an injunction. They have just been sentenced to fines of $250 each, or ninety-day jail terms. Similar reports arrive from Shreveport, La., where E. L. Connelly and Joe Cherry, both I. W. W.'s, lost their appeal of a vagrancy conviction. The men, who claimed they were merely traveling to New Orleans, were sentenced to ninety days on the parish farm. From Wisconsin comes news that Bronislaw Synzmaniak, a Russian communist, who has been fighting deportation since his arrest in the 1920 "Red raids," was deported a few days ago.

Couldn't Find Good Landlord with Microscope

"A meeting of all the New York landlords, who have lowered rents during the past year, will be held tomorrow, at the Hotel Blank in the third telephone booth.

Chicago's Sub Campaign for Daily Real Communist Contest

The subscription campaign to secure one thousand new readers for THE DAILY WORKER in Chicago is rapidly developing into a veritable contest among all of the Chicago militants.

Apart from the general interest that has been aroused amongst those who "want to make THE DAILY WORKER grow" a real competitive spirit has been created and the drive will be a test to determine which among the Chicago militants can perform the greatest service to THE DAILY WORKER and to the militant labor movement.

The working class will be the recipient of the real first prize in the strength which it will draw to itself as a result of the increment to the already rapidly growing DAILY WORKER circulation.

However, those who participate in the campaign will have material rewards in store for them in the shape of commissions, for the subs they secure and valuable prizes for those who make the best record.

The suggestion as reported in yesterday's DAILY WORKER that the first prize for the individual turning in the greatest number of subs be a portable typewriter has been receiving considerable support. It seems that there are many live wires who are confidently expecting to carry off first honors and many of these have stated that they would value a typewriter above any other prize of similar material worth.

Tomorrow night, Feb. 7, in the headquarters of the Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division St., the campaign will really get under way, with a meeting of all of the Chicago DAILY WORKER agents and those who wish to participate in the campaign. At this meeting, detailed and definite plans and rules for the campaign will be decided upon.

Governor Says Politicians Spend Hours with Eels

NEW YORK. — Notwithstanding the fact that financial affairs are doubtless the more slippery of the two, and the hardest to grasp, New York legislators devote more attention to eels and how to catch 'em than to the state's budget. This is the burden of the caustic remarks delivered by Governor Smith in a speech before the Albany chamber of commerce.

"The members of the legislature," declared the governor, "will spend two hours in debating a bill regulating the taking of eels from some river, while they give the annual appropriation bill but a moment's notice."

Apparently, it did not occur to the governor that the intense concern manifested for the eel is due to the fellow-feeling of certain legislators for that fish.

Lenin Memorial, in Gary, Steel City, Crowds Big Hall

GARY, Ind. — Robert Minor spoke in honor of Nicolai Lenin at a meeting that crowded Croatian Hall. Revolutionary airs were played by the orchestra of the Young Workers' League of Chicago.

Minor drew the contrast between Lenin, who represented the vigorous, rising proletarian movement and the late war president, who represented the decadent capitalist class. The crowd responded with emotion to every mention of Lenin.

The Workers Party is developing a vigorous movement in the steel city.

Dark Rooms To Live In; Lot of Many Workers, Facts Show

families unfold a picture of misery, congestion, denial of the most elementary needs to the children of the working class, disease-breeding conditions, and a break-down of the general standards of living.

My own investigation only adds evidence of an unspeakable environment which must be abolished without delay if a disastrous calamity is to be avoided for the working masses of America's greatest city.

Conditions Horrify Investigators.

If one should walk thru a typical hall of the apartment houses inhabitated by the majority of the workingmen or even lower middle class and "white-collar slaves" he is greeted by grime and soot. The halls are dark; the paper is hanging off the walls. Clogged dumbwaiters, garbage piled deep in the cellars, and unbearable stench are common in the houses inhabited by the workers in the East Side, Harlem, Chelsea, Lenox, and many Bronx sections. Baby carriages, broken furniture, and old clothes are very often stored under the hall stairways.

I took a ride on the Second Avenue Elevated railroad and noted the tenements occupied by the workers. The fire escapes gave the impression of hailing scales of rust. They were all loaded with the belongings of the people who could not find sufficient room in their flats. It seemed almost unbelievable how many human beings could occupy such abominable shacks, such firetraps. Yet a vacant flat is at a premium even in this section of the city.

What They Call Homes.

The writer visited a worker's home at 193 Orchard street, in the heart of the working class section of the Lower East Side. Entering Mrs. B—n's house, I found a dark, stuffy, uncomfortable two-room flat. The ceilings were cracked. The holes in the walls were stuffed with rags to keep the draught out. The windows had no weather strips and their ropes were broken. The bedroom floors were full of holes.

Going over to a tenement, 294-300 Cherry Street, I entered a building which gave one the impression of being a big abandoned armory. Here I interviewed another tenant who had made repeated vain efforts to have the Tenement House Department compel the landlord to end the abominable conditions. The Hudson Guild is now intervening in the tenant's behalf. I found that the ceilings were filthy and the walls had not been painted for years. In the toilets the ceilings not only had their plaster off but their boards were coming down. There was no water in the toilets.

Father Ottavio Sylvester of the Parish of the Lady of Pompeii and St. Joseph's Chapel, testifying before the Housing Commission, told of the situation amongst the Italian workers in Brooklyn in these words: "The conditions are abominable, without light, without air, without anything; very small rooms where there are four, five, and six children some times, something terrible. The condition of Johnson Avenue, all of the rear houses in the same condition, toilets in yards, no baths, no heat."

In picturing the housing conditions in Harlem, one social investigator cited the following typical household 52 W. 112th Street): "When the tenant cooks, the pipes in the house are so bad that when the burner in the gas range is burning, she cannot have the other one. When the party on the first floor is getting water, she has to wait until they are all thru washing and doing their work before she can get water."

And Miss Blackman of the United Hebrew Charities, narrating her experiences before the State Commission said, in part: "Mrs. K. lived in an apartment where the chief amusement of the two younger children, aged 10 and two and a half years, was to crawl thru the holes in the wall; Mrs. P. lived in an apartment where the gas jet fell every once in a while and had to be dodged by members of the household."

Landlords Stop Repairs.

Since the housing shortage has become acute the landlords have begun to take advantage of the tenants and have stopped practically all repairing of the dilapidated houses in which hundreds of thousands of workers are compelled to live.

"The present investigation reports with monotonous regularity that absolutely no repairing is done by the landlords; tenants in all the blocks have to do their own repairing and renovating, and have spent from $25.00 to $150.00, and in a few instances even more, to make their apartments habitable." The Housing Commission report then quotes a tenant: "We expect nothing from the landlord; not even a door-knob." Continuing its summary of the situation the Housing Commission pointed out: "When the plumbing is out of order, when the sink is broken, when the window panes are broken, when the plaster on the ceiling falls, when the roof leaks so that it is impossible to live in the room, the condition either remains or the tenant repairs it at his own expense. Even new tenants have had to move into an apartment which the landlord promised to clean up, but refuses to do so now that the tenant is in. 'We could not wait for the landlord and so did our own painting. We removed eight layers of paper from the walls.' In some instances the tenants repair upon promises of refund from landlord, but instead of refund they are asked for increase of rent. In general, no repairs have been made for three years."

In the preliminary report Director of Investigations Gove brings the intolerable situation home very effectively when he says: "The present investigation shows that houses and apartments in bad repair are not limited to the poorest blocks or to the old law tenements. From all blocks come reports of the landlords' refusal to repair falling plaster and broken ceilings, bad plumbing, leaking pipes, floors rotting from leaks, broken windowpanes, walls and ceilings excessively dirty, leaking roofs.

"The 1919-1920 report stated that the then existing emergency was only partially responsible for the bad housing conditions. The 1922 investigation shows that a progressive aggravation of these conditions has been going on. The apartments are in a state of worse repair than they were in 1920. It is easy to trace the connection between the increase of bad housing conditions and the housing emergency."

Dangerous Congestion.

The extent of congestion from which the workers are suffering is inestimable. Before the housing crisis grew to its serious present proportions, when Dr. Royal C. Copeland, now United States senator, was commissioner of health, there were, according to the latter's estimate, at least 100,000 families that had been forced to double up. Dr. Copeland then said: "We have one square mile in the city where live 500,000 people, in the Lower East Side. There are thousands of families living there, twelve persons in three rooms, and four sleeping in the kitchen; and in hundreds of these homes they live in inside rooms without any light or ventilation."

The present health commissioner, Dr. Frank G. Monaghan, told the Housing Commission at its hearings last October that the survey of congestion made by his department "showed conclusively that homes had been broken up, doubling up of families had resulted, the lodger evil had increased by leaps and bounds, vacancies were few and far between, and the rent demanded for these vacant apartments was beyond the reach of those requiring homes, or a considerable portion of the vacancies were in a state of disrepair, making their use as habitations almost impossible."

Miss Ethel Ader of the Fairplay Rent Association told the Commission of a case where three related families lived in six rooms because "they could not any of them alone afford to pay the increase which the landlords demanded."

Mr. Bailey Burritt, the general director of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, told the State commission that his wide experience led him to believe that at least 40 per cent of the families were living in overcrowded conditions." Mr. Burrit further said: "The overcrowding of tenement houses has been accentuated. Many families have been obliged to go to the small homes of their relatives, already overcrowded by the original tenants. Among our allowance families occupying three-room apartments, 20 per cent of those families number seven or more individuals living in three rooms." Mr. Burret told of many instances where eight, nine, ten, and even twelve people were living in three rooms.

The Amalagamated Clothing Workers made a survey of the housing conditions among 320 of its members. Mr. Harry K. Herwitz told the Commission that his investigation showed 35 per cent of the clothing workers living in two and three rooms. In one case there were persons in three rooms and in two other cases there were six persons in two rooms.

Crowding Widespread.

A popular verse in New York runs:

"The trouble with this town is that There's too much family to a flat."

The survey made by the State Commission covered not only the poorest sections but also those blocks consisting of new law tenements in which the better paid workers were living. Yet the commission stated: "More than cold statistics confront the investigator as he opens the door of an apartment. Here is a four-room flat at one end of which is a front room, getting dim light from a narrow street, at the other end a kitchen with one window getting light from a court. In between are two small dark compartments called bedrooms. The rooms run consecutively, access from the front room to the rear being only thru the middle rooms, and in this amount of space covering approximately 250 square feet, lived ten people—four adults (two boarders) and six children."

Eat In Shifts.

Director Gove thus completes the picture of life in this apartment: "They eat in the kitchen—in shifts. They sleep—father, mother and the baby under three years of age in the front room, the baby sharing their bed. There are two bedrooms left for five children and two boarders. The boarders demand a room for themselves. They pay $8.00 a month, hence the two boys and their little sister of five sleep in one bedroom; and the two elder girls of 14 and 12 must sleep in the kitchen. The washing facilities for the whole family is the kitchen sink."

The Report describes the intolerable conditions of another apartment in this fashion: "The narration of the details of the wretched conditions under which this family is perforce living indicates not only a violation of all the principles of decency and sanitation, but challenges the very principle of the law of Archimedes. Of course all rooms are filled with beds, folded, unfolded or makeshift. In the small dark bedroom, lighted and ventilated by a small opening in the wall, is a three-quarter bed in which sleep two boys of fourteen and ten and a girl of thirteen. To describe these conditions as 'detrimental to the public health and morals' is no idle phrase. These conditions mean being cramped in body and soul, they mean irritation and racked nerves, they mean contagion and infection. The indiscriminate sharing of rooms by both sexes and all ages, and the lack of privacy—these results of overcrowding are a menace to morality. It is true they existed in 1920; they are aggravated today."

But perhaps the most complete picture of the dangerous housing situation confronting the working people of New York was made by Dr. Haven Emerson in the Department of Health survey of congestion. Said Dr. Emerson:

"Thousands and thousands of people in the city are sleeping and living in apartments so dark that gaslight must be burned all day; so airless that in summer the families are forced to sleep on the roofs; so foul-smelling because of garbage in the hallways, in courts and streets, and because of adjoining stables or factories, that one of the only two windows in the whole flat has to be kept shut. The tenants must climb five or six flights of stairs to dispose of garbage, for the dumbwaiters are seldom in repair. Toilets for two to five families are in the halls or in the yards. The sanitary condition of the toilet is indescribable. There is insufficient water, neglected plumbing, no ventilation or light—these tell the condition without further description."

(The Third Article will deal with the harmful effects the present housing difficulties have had on the children, the families, the social life, the health and the general standards of living of the workers.)

SOUTH ILLINOIS DELEGATES FOR LEWIS RECALL

Plan to Keep Up Fight to Reinstate Howat

By MAX SHACHTMAN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHRISTOPHER, Ill.—The impeachment of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America and the reinstatement of Alexander Howat into the union by the calling of a special international convention will soon be the primary issue in the locals of the United Mine Workers, according to statements made to me by returned delegates to the convention of the union which has just been adjourned at Indianapolis.

Richard Swift, delegate from Local 3613, Valier, Ill., and executive committee member of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, declared that Lewis had refused to give Howat a hearing to which any expelled member of the union is entitled.

"The convention was a step forward only in the sense that President Lewis showed himself up by not allowing the men who had grievances to give their views and side of the case to the real pick men, the miners. Especially is this true on the Howat case. I believe that any local will be for this special convention which was the demand of the more than 1,100 delegates who remained after Lewis had arbitrarily adjourned the convention."

Milton Cochran, a young delegate from Local 1782, Royalton, Ill., also stated that he was in favor of a special convention.

"Howat was not dealt fairly with," he said, "and I'm for a convention to take up his case fairly."

Similar opinions were expressed by delegates Hisaih Winn and A. Parker, both of Valier, Ill., and by "Baldy" Jim Myrick of Royalton.

Swift, speaking on the convention action with regard to allowing Lewis to continue with his power of appointing organizers, said:

"We had the majority vote on that question against leaving the appointive power to Lewis, but they refused to recognize us as a majority. While the roll call was being taken, Savage, district president of Ohio, caucused with his delegates and instructed them to vote with the administration. This was done in the face of the union rule that no convention delegate is to be intimidated into voting one way or the other on any question. The same thing, however, was done with the delegates from West Virginia, Oklahoma, Maryland, Iowa, district One of Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Kentucky, Texas, Arkansas and Missouri. Oklahoma was divided on the question."

It was the general opinion among the delegates interviewed and the miners of Ziegler, Christopher, West Frankfort and other southern Illinois camps, that Illinois would line up solidly for the special international convention.

As Arley Staples, president of the United Mine Workers of America local at Christopher, Ill., assured me, "You can count on Christopher."

"Real Journalism," Is Commendation for Wilson Story

To THE DAILY WORKER: I wish to give the highest commendation to your masterly handling of the Woodrow Wilson Death Episode, both editorially and in the news columns. This is real American Daily Journalism as it should be without fear or favor.

I wish to suggest a new Special Department in the "Worker" that will do more to crystallize a sound viewpoint in the minds of your readers than all the abstract economic and political philosophy that has ever been written, viz: a daily department headlined, "Capitalist Wreckage," wherein the real life stories in short outline shall be given of the workers whose careers are ending daily in the Coroner's Office, Police Stations, Morgue, Jails, Courts, Prosecuting Attorneys office, etc., where the "harpies of the capitalist press" daily congregate to find "gruesome entertainment" for their depraved and perverted readers who are taught to see nothing more than "news exploitation" in this daily grind of capitalist wreckage.—J. Farmers! Workers! Organize Your Party tatives of industrial workers and farmers, to state clearly what the farmers and workers would seek to achieve in this convention and the principles which would guide them.

Need for Farmer-Labor Party

That the city workers and the farmers must organize and enter the political arena thru a party which will fight their political struggles has become so clear in recent years that it seems almost impossible that there is still a single industrial worker or farmer who does not know that the rotten, corrupt Republican and Democraticle parties will never do anything in their interest. Both old parties represent the interests of the big employer, the banks, the marketing organizations—in a word, the capitalists—who are robbing the industrial workers and farmers alike.

The two old parties use the government against the industrial workers, against the farmers and for the capitalists.

When the industrial workers strike for higher wages, the government helps the big employers put down the strike thru injunctions, courts and soldiers. In 1922, the mines and railroad centers were filled with soldiers by the government, to help the coal operators and railroad owners whip the miners and railroad shopmen, who were striking for a decent standard of living. The government used its railroad board against the railroad workers. It secured the Daugherty injunction, taking from the shopmen every right given them under the constitution, cancelling at one stroke of a pen the right to assemble, to speak, to write, to organize and to use their own money for strike purposes.

The farmers felt the power of the government during the period of deflation, to such an extent that hundreds of thousands of farmers, yes millions, were driven from the land and into bankruptcy. The farmers know that all the laws passed by Congress about the railroads, marketing facilities and banking are drawn so as to help the railroads, the grain elevator owners and other marketing organizations, and the bankers, but no help comes from the government for the millions of suffering, bankrupt farmers and those who are on the verge of bankruptcy.

The capitalists do not only use the government against the industrial workers and farmers, they use the government for themselves. Just now they are trying to escape the taxes they must pay on their big incomes and load these taxes on the backs of the workers and farmers thru the Mellon plan. The shocking, shameful exposure of the looting of the country thru bribery of Republican and Democratic office holders alike, by the big oil interests, maed public in the Teapot Dome scandal, show clearly what use the capitalists make of the government.

Movement for Farmer-Labor Party

It is the facts and experiences stated above which have developed the ever-growing movement for a farmer-labor party, thru which the farmers and city workers can fight their political battles against the capitalistic parties.

This movement found its first great nation-wide expression in the July 3d convention of last year, in which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was organized. Since that time the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has carried on a campaign for even a greater convention and a stronger party for the presidential election this year.

There must be a farmer-labor ticket in the election this year. The farmers and city workers must nominate candidates and adopt a platform representing their interests. There must be great campaigns against the old parties, against their policies and their candidates, and for the farmers and industrial workers.

In the endeavor to achieve this end the Federated Farmer-Labor Party established connections with all the existing farmer-labor parties in an effort to bring them together in one great nation-wide farmer-labor party. When the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party called a conference in November, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party immediately responded and entered into an agreement with the Farmer-Labor Party of Washington, The Farmer-Labor Party of Montana, the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota, the Committee of 48, the Progressive Party of Idaho, and the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, to call the May 30th Convention.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party believes that, in the May 30th Convention, the farmers and industrial workers have the opportunity to unite all the units of the farmer-labor party movement in one great, nation-wide Farmer-Labor Party.

What Kind of Party?

What kind of a party is to be organized May 30th? This is an important question for the industrial workers and farmers. We believe that it is our duty to make clear the two forces which will struggle for supremacy in the May 30th Convention.

Not only the workers in the industries and the exploited farmers are discontented with the rule of the capitalists thru the old parties. The small business men, professional men and the rich, well-to-do farmers are also dissatisfied with the way the government is used by the big capitalists. Every industrial worker and exploited farmer must understand that there is a difference between the movement against the old parties by the small business men and well-to-do farmers and the movement for a party to represent the interests of the workers and poorer farmers.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party fights in the interest of the industrial workers and the poorer, exploited farmers. Magnus Johnson, Shipstead, Frazier, Brookhart, La Follette, and other so-called progressives, represent the small business men and well-to-do farmers. The platform of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party stands for the interests of the indutrial workers and poorer-exploited farmers. The measures proposed by the so-called progressives are measures in the interests of the small busines men and well-to-do farmers.

Both the progressives who want a Third Party, which will be a small business man's and well-to-do farmers' party, and the industrial workers and poorer, exploited farmers, will come to the May 30th Convention. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party will stand for the interests of the industrial workers and exploited farmers in the convention. It will carry on a campaign to win the support for the convention by the industrial workers and poorer, exploited farmers, so that the candidates and platform will represent the interests of this group, and not the small business men and well-to-do farmers.

Shall Convention Be Delayed?

A proposal has been made by Wm. Mahoney, chairman of the Working People's Non-Partisan League of Minnesota, after conferences with La Follette, Magnus Johnson, Shipstead, and others of the progressives, that the May 30th Convention be postponed until after the old party conventions.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party is unalterably opposed to such a delay. The only reason for such a delay is to give the La Follette, Frazier, Brookhart, Magnus Johnson and Shipstead group an opportunity to see which way the cat will jump in the old party conventions.

The industrial workers and exploited farmers have no interest in waiting for the old party conventions. No matter who is nominated in these conventions and what platforms are adopted, the candidates and platforms will be for the capitalists and against the workers and farmers.

If La Follette and other so-called progressives are for the workers, let them prove it by cutting loose from the old parties and aligning themselves with the Farmer-Labor Party NOW. The workers and farmers have nothing to gain from backstairs political deals. The road lies clear before them.—TO ORGANIZE A CLASS FARMER-LABOR PARTY.

Forward to the Class Party.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party calls upon all workers organizations, all organizations of farmers, to join in the struggle for a farmer-labor party representing the interests of the industrial workers and exploited farmers.

It urges that every organization of workers and farmers now begin the work in support of the May 30th Convention, and to make that convention a great gathering of the exploited groups who suffer under the rule of the big capitalists and their government.

Forward to May 30th and a class Farmer-Labor Party! Forward in the struggle which will bring the Workers and Farmers Government of the United States!

Federated Farmer-Labor Party,
JOSEPH MANLEY,
National Secretary.

LEWIS MACHINE IGNORED VITAL JOB QUESTIONS

Passed Buck on Car Pushing and Slate

By PAT H. TUOHY
(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—There was great dissatisfaction among the miners' delegates over the lack of consideration given by the administration to job grievances, chief among which are the pushing of mine cars and the payment for removing slate and other "dead work."

These are generally passed over by the scale committee, by referring them back to the districts—as internal grievances. Yet the fact that these job questions are matters of national interest is shown by the resolutions coming from practically all districts.

The pushing of cars by the unions has been an issue in previous conventions and will continue to be so, as long as the buck can be passed. It is a vital issue that cannot be ignored.

Miners Permanently Injured

From Wyoming, most bitter complaints have come about the pushing of cars, not only as to the danger to life but because it so frequently reduces the earning power. Illinois District No. 12, voices the same complaint. With the installation of large cars, men are unable to handle them and many men have been permanently injured and wages have been reduced because of it. From numerous other districts we have had the same complaint.

The slate issue is a sore grievance. From Districts No. 5, and No. 6, especially, come bitter complaints because miners must remove slate to a thickness of one foot before receiving any pay. That is because the payment, on a tonnage basis for coal loaded, does not make provision for this "dead work" which is a necessary part of the miner's labor. This is a crying shame. Many times men are compelled to work all day for nothing.

Not "District Grievances"

These matters are not merely "district grievances" and should not be passed over so lightly by the board as such. I as a miner have no particular district in which to work. I may be working at one time in a district where none of these grievances exist and may lose my job, the mine may shut down, and I may be forced to go into another district where the slate issue is a serious matter. Then the fact that I am compelled to seek employment where these conditions prevail makes me realize that these co-called "district grievances" are national problems and that the national scale committee should be instructed to handle them as such.

How long shall these vital problems be side-tracked as minor internal grievances, merely to escape responsibility and to rid the scale committee of a vexing problem.

Make Poland Dry, Says Sokolowski; Had Fine Cellar

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK. — The sad, sad story of how prohibition agents raided the Washington apartment of Dr. V. Sokolowski, secretary of the Polish Legation to the United States, has experienced an amazing turn.

Sokolowski was caught with the goods. His apartment was found to resemble the wine cellars of the Polish nobility. Row upon row of liquor-filled bottles were discovered. It was whispered abroad that Sokolowski's supply was not entirely for home consumption. It was even alleged that Sokolowski was engaged in a prosperous avocation to diplomacy. Sokolowski left the country under a moist cloud of suspicion.

And now one of his friends, Congressman William D. Upshaw, has written Sokolowski a well-meaning letter. Congressman Upshaw expresses "his great pleasure" at having known Sokolowski. One wonders just what stimulated Upshaw to pen this appreciation. Anyway, he refers to Sokolowski as a "high-toned gentleman." One can fairly hear the high tones emanating from clinking glasses. Upshaw ends his letter with a "God-bless-you" flourish, reminiscent of toasts delivered in pro-Volstead days.

Dr. Sokolowski has returned to Poland. He is stated to have announced that he will be a total abstainer. He intends to devote himself to furthering the prohibition movement in Poland.

We would like to offer an award of one quart of the finest Polish liquor to any reader who can solve this riddle: What volume of business must a bootlegger do before he can afford to become a devout prohibition leader?

Co-op Pays 16% Dividend

KINCAID, Ill.—While the big corporations of the country were dividing their profit plums the first of the year, miners of this village were receiving a 16% dividend of their own. And that 16% was not capitalist toll taken from their fellow workers. It was their reward for membership in the local Workmen's Co-operative Association, which runs the Rochdale stores here.

Each member received dividends according to the amount of his purchases. Members had already made a great saving by trading at the cooperative stores where prices are lower than in other stores of the community.

Summary of Coal Miners' Convention

The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock, Jan. 22nd, in Tomlinson Hall, Indianapolis, Ind., John Smith, president, Indianapolis Central Labor union presiding. Corporation Counsel Taylor Groniger and Taylor president Indiana F. of L. greeted the delegates.

John L. Lewis read this report and announced the names of several committee appointments. Vice President Murray and Secretary Green read their reports which were referred to the committee of officers reports.

The reports of the officers consisted mainly in tirades against the radicals, boosts for long term contracts and harmony between miners and operators. The committee on officers reports eulogised the executive officers. About one hour was devoted to a mutual admiration act.

The report of the resolutions committee was the most hotly contested of any that came before the convention. The first of importance was the one dealing with Soviet Russia. Twelve resolutions were received on this question from local unions thruout the country. The committee substituted for these a hodge podge which started out by declaring for the principle of self determination, that the Russian people had a right to determine their own form of government provided they pay what the Czar owed to Pierpont Morgan. The resolution ended with a wail—very likely written by the Socialist Kennedy—that "self-appointed leaders" were striking at the foundations of "our government" and spreading the same doctrines that helped render impotent the Socialist Party, etc.

Eighteen resolutions were submitted demanding the formation of a labor party. The committee substituted an emaciated caricature which admitted that the labor party idea has passed the visionary stage and can be made a reality, but in doing so they did not believe in antagonizing the Republican and Democrat parties which are their friends. Efforts to form "legitimate" labor parties should not be discouraged but it was considered unwise to affiliate the miners' union with any political organization at this time. The members of the miners' union are granted under the constitution, civil, religious and political liberties of opinion which the resolutions committee did not want to see abridged.

We should, however, be ready, the report continued, to unite our political strength just as has been done in other countries, therefore it was recommended that the executive officers of the United Mine Workers of America be instructed to continue their efforts and co-operate with such other organizations composing the American Federation of Labor, farmers organizations and other unaffiliated organizations "constructive in character" for the purpose of bringing about a cohesive political movement. The report wound up by recommending the secretary to send a cablegram to Ramsay MacDonald congratulating British labor on their success.

The committee congratulated the British workers on their success in accomplishing something the miners were not allowed to do by their officials, that is, make a real move to organize a labor party in the U. S.

On the question of the nationalization of mines the committee introduced a substitute which merely urged a continuation of research work. John Brophy, whose report on the nationalization of mines was so severely criticized by John L. Lewis, never opened his mouth in support of real nationalization.

The Lewis administration was successful by a liberal use of red paint in having its action on the Nova Scotia case sustained. The lifting of that district's autonomy and the expulsion of its officers was an act of treachery hardly without parallel in the history of organized labor.

Referred the question of a cessation of work in case of war to the International Mining Congress for universal action. So far as it lies in the power of the officials of the United Mine Workers this means universal inaction.

The convention passed a resolution restricting alien immigration and a strict enforcement of the laws on the Pacific Coast against the smuggling of aliens.

The convention endorsed the industrial form of organization as opposed to craft unionism but did not recommend any active steps toward this end merely hoping for its "orderly introduction into other industries of the country under the banner of the American Federation of Labor."

Voted to urge the release of all political prisoners. The committee did not know that there were any still in prison.

The resolutions committee brought in a resolution denouncing both the Amsterdam and Red Trade Union Internationals, claiming both were critical of the American labor movement. The report was adopted.

Passed a resolution demanding the repeal of all criminal syndicalist laws.

The convention listened to former president John P. White sing his own praises.

Voted to continue the appointive power after a roll call vote.

Voted down the recommendation of the Lewis machine to eliminate the clause from the constitution prohibiting membership in the union to a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Voted one thousand dollars to the Tom Mooney Defense Fund. An amendment to increase the sum to $2,000 was ruled out of order by Chairman Lewis.

Delegates hissed and booed secretary of Labor Davis and distributed circulars exposing his anti-labor record.

Adopted the report of the scale committee giving power to the representatives of the union to secure the best possible agreement on the basis of no reduction in wages, a four year contract, the concurrent termination of all contracts in the bituminous fields and the submission of any agreement reached with the operators to a referendum vote of the membership for ratification.

Elected Thomas Kennedy of District 7 and Walter Nesbit District 12, delegates to International Mining Congress.

Decided to hold the next convention on third Tuesday in January, 1926.

Ended in uproar and disorder when Lewis refused to announce vote on Howat appeal.

CANADA TO GET RUSSIAN TRADE AS U. S. DELAYS

Dominion Is Eager for Soviet Commerce

By F. W. GERRISH
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONTREAL, Canada.—It has been recently announced that the Soviet Republic Trade Delegation to Canada is now in London arranging to sail for Canada. The significance of this is very great as it means that the workers of Russia will ignore the Capitalists of the United States and will concentrate their efforts for placing Russia in the highest possible state of material efficiency in Canada.

From the propaganda carried on in the Press, some individuals have the idea that Russia is a wild and woolly wilderness sparsely peopled by ferocious savages wearing luxuriant whiskers accompanied by a corresponding absence of soap. The real fact is that the Soviet Republic represents the one hundred and thirty million peasants and workers organized under a political and economic system that is destined to spread all over the world within a few years.

The trade delegation from the Soviet Republic which is supposed to have destroyed the resources of Russia is actually preparing to purchase large quantities of Canadian commodities for the people of Russia and to pay for them in a way that most of the Capitalist States of the world cannot do. In addition these purchases will go a long way towards the alleviation of unemployment in Canada.

These facts are well-known to the big business firms in Canada, who will hasten to make friends with the Mammon of unrighteousness but, thru the columns of THE DAILY WORKER, these facts can be made known to a wider circle. Your readers in their respective localities have opportunities of spreading this information both for the encouragement of their principles and also for the reason of putting the Trade Delegation in touch with the greatest possible variety of suppliers of the commodities they are buying.

I would therefore suggest that THE DAILY WORKER, publish all possible information in advance of sailing as to the movements of the Trade Delegation, as service in aid of the Soviet Republic is one of the greatest possible means of helping the Communist Cause. In April, 1918, I was connected with the "Beaver", which was the first newspaper in Canada, to support the Soviet Republic. On August 11th, 1920, in the Montreal Labour Temple, I presided over the first public meeting in Canada, to protest against Canadian and British assistance to Poland. To me the moral aspect of the Russian Revolution is and always will be, more than the fluctuating measure of material success it reaches, but at the same time we should always be ready to broadcast the great material achievements of the workers of Russia, in the face of hardships paralleled in the history of the world.

Do American Workers Know a Good Thing When They See It?

WE SAY THEY DO AND CITE A RECORD OF A 50 PER CENT INCREASE IN THE DAILY WORKER CIRCULATION DURING THE LAST TWO WEEKS TO PROVE IT.

Cynics and pessimists and renegades excuse their impotency by bewailing the lack of intelligence and class-consciousness of American workers. The reception which THE DAILY WORKER has received everywhere it has appeared, disproves this conception once and for all.

There are hundreds of thousands of American workers, rebels at heart, who have been looking for a daily newspaper just like THE DAILY WORKER.

How to notify these thousands that THE DAILY WORKER is here, how to make them aware that at last there IS a daily labor paper that supplies all the newspaper needs of the working-class is the big problem which THE DAILY WORKER must solve.

Those who now read THE DAILY WORKER are the ones who can reach these thousands for us.

If every reader of THE DAILY WORKER will make it his business to distribute copies of the paper among the workers he meets, will advertise THE DAILY WORKER everywhere as

the problem will be solved and for every thousand workers now participating in the struggles for working class emancipation there will be TENS OF THOUSANDS, each of them a militant fighter in labor's cause.

NEW YORK.—The greatest revolutionary demonstration in the history of New York took place here, at Madison Square Garden, when 15,000 workers pledged themselves to carry on the work of Nicolai Lenin, in whose honor they had gathered.

Ten thousand men and women were turned away from the doors, full to overflowing an hour before the meeting began. Police reserves on the job said they had never seen anything like it in all their experience. The overflow crowd was gathered up by WoWrkers Party ushers and assembled in Central Opera House which was hastily engaged.

Solemnity Gives Way to Cheers

Inside the mighty Garden, the masses filled every available bit of space in the great arena and in the galleries which rise tier after tier along the walls.

They sat down in an atmosphere of solemn emotion that was deepened by the strains of the Russian funeral march played by the Russian Symphony Orchestra, but before the meeting was over their enthusiasm for Lenin's cause overcame their original grief and they were cheering the call of the Russian workers to carry on the fight for world revolution to which Lenin had dedicated his life.

Proletarian Unity, Says Radiogram

The message from the executive of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics was read by Chairman Benjamin Gitlow in an interval in the speaking program:

"We have lost in Lenin the captain of our vessel," began the Moscow radiogram. "That loss is irreplaceable, because in all the world there never was such luminous pain, such mighty effort, such inflexible will as that of Lenin who led our government safely thru its worst dangers. Henceforth his work is set on the right road.

"Hundreds of thousands of comrades of Vladimir Ilyitch, firmly support the mighty banner. Already it is transfiguring the whole world. Proletariat of all lands unite!

"Comrades and brothers raise higher our red flag. Know no hesitation in the struggle for liberty. The proletariat never can lose.

"Proletariat of all lands unite!"

Calls to Battle, Not Mourn

Gitlow, as he opened the meeting, was quick to change the emotional tone from the solemn one of mourning to the fervency of struggle and triumph.

Begining with the announcement that 10,000 people had been unable to find room in the overflowing arena he declared that was proof positive that Lenin was not only the leader of the Russian masses but of the masses thruout the world.

"Lenin was head of our international revolutionary movement," continued Gitlow, "yet the movement instead of being weakened, has taken on new life and ever greater

Degrading Housing Conditions Endanger Health of Children and Working Class Grown-Ups

The degrading housing conditions and the high rents have left a shamefully indellible imprint on the development of the children, their education, the home life, the health, and the general standard of living of the working class families.

These miserable conditions are growing worse. There is no immediate sign of even the faintest relief. The crisis is drifting towards a calamity.

With exceptions of extreme rarity no constructive measures to alleviate the acute situation have been suggested to date. What we have had so far is mainly a flood of talk and attempts by the very governmental agents of the employing class largely

Long List of New Sensations Is Promised in Oil Probe Renewal

WASHINGTON.—New evidence, indicating huge expenditures by oil interests to influence government officials, is claimed by a senate investigator.

More names today were about to be involved in the ever widening whirlpool of oil that threatens the political lives of men high in both major parties.

So far is the new evidence extending that pressure is being brought upon the Senate Investigating Committee to "ease up" in its relentless inquiry before it goes too far.

Developments today included:

1.—Announcement that William G. McAdoo, a democratic president candidate, former Secretary of the Navy Daniels, and George Creel, Chairman of the Bureau of Public Information during the war, would appear Friday, if possible, to explain the connection of their names in the inquiry.

2.—Decision of the Progressive group to oppose the selection of Atlee Pomerene and Silas Strawn as special presidential counsel to bring court action.

3.—Planning of a renewed attack upon Secretary of the Navy Denby as soon as the Senate reconvenes tomorrow.

4.—Summoning of John T. King for a time head of the presidential campaign of General Leonard Wood, in connection with expenditures of money to influence government oil policy.

The next step in the scandai will be adoption of a resolution in the Senate tomorrow continuing the power of the oil committee.

JUDGE DECLARES COOLIDGE CAN'T HALT GRAFT QUIZ

Amazing Revelations as Thieves Quarrel

"If charges of misconduct in connection with the operation of the United States Veterans' Bureau are supported, it is your duty to indict, no matter who is hit. The president himself cannot stop you in your deliberations." With this charge, Judge George A. Carpenter today opened the special grand jury investigation here of the Veterans' Bureau, under the administration of Col. Charles R. Forbes.

In instructing the jury, Judge Carpenter said that "this is the most important case which has been presented to a grand jury in 100 years."

"If you find that any officials of the Veterans' Bureau received any money outside their salaries, they are guilty of bribery and it is your duty to indict them," the jury was told.

In his charge, Judge Carpenter read the Langley act of 1922, appropriating $17,000,000 for construction of Veterans' Hospitals. The state charges graft and corruption accompanied distribution of the Langley act fund.

The special grand jury investigation, under Special Assistant Attorney General Crim, is the outgrowth of a senate committee investigation last summer, in which evidence to support charges of corruption involving Forbes, former director, and others, was unearthed.

STATES ATTORNEY CROWE BACKED BY OPEN SHOPPERS

Landis Award Ring Praise Their Lackey

Robert Crowe, States Attorney, tool of the open shoppers of Chicago and professional Irish patriot, is a candidate for re-election. He is backed by the executive committee of the Employers' Association of Chicago as crooked an aggregation of exploiters as ever hoisted the banner of legalized burglary over their executive desks.

Darling of Landis' Ring.

Mr. Crowe is the darling of the Landis' award ring of this city, chief among his supporters being T. E. Donnelly, chairman of the committee to enforce the Landis' award, James A. Patten, the dealer in imaginary wheat and Erza Warner of Sprague, Warner and Company.

The prosecutor was entertained a few days ago at the Union League Club. The president of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, was chairman and in glowing terms he eulogized Crowe as a man who rendered great service to the business elements of Chicago in fighting the unions in the building trades and prosecuting labor leaders.

The employing class of Chicago and Illinois have used their judges to good advantage in the big fights against labor for the past two years particularly. All capitalist judges serve the class that pays their campaign bills and grooms them for office. They realize the importance of controlling the judiciary and they work hard to secure that control. Injunctions are very valuable during strikes and when the bosses cannot beat the workers directly in open battle they can defeat them by bringing the arm of the government into action on their side by way of the judicial chamber.

A Hopeless Policy.

The labor fakers, instead of calling on the workers to vote as they strike and place a labor judicial ticket in the field, drool like dotards about the merits of the non-partisan method of voting for "the best man" on the capitalist ticket. This was the burden of a speech delivered by John L. Walker at the Chicago Federation of Labor last Sunday. This policy is hopeless and will benefit nobody but individual labor fakers and the employers.

PANICKY OIL CROOKS TRY TO HALT QUIZ

Say Teapot Probe is Merely Aiding Radicals

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—While the Teapot Dome investigation halts for the funeral of Woodrow Wilson frantic efforts are being made by powerful interests and individuals involved by the disclosures to prevent further probing. The fact that both democrats and republicans are now known to be threatened by additional and sensational evidence has given new hope to the "hush" brigade.

The argument is used that no good purpose can be served by adding to the public unrest caused by the disclosures. "The respect for our government is being shaken and a continuation would simply play into the hands of the radicals who have already made great capital out of this unfortunate affair," said one ex-newspaperman who is known to be on the payroll of the oil interests as a publicity man.

If the efforts of the lobbyists to suspend the hearings is unsuccessful, when the committee resumes its session on Friday, Washington is due for the most sensational developments of the scandal.

Four well-known senators, William G. McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury; John T. King, former national republican committeeman and manager of General Wood's campaign; Carl K. Biggerman of the Chase National Bank, ex-Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, George Creel, publicity man for the Wilson administration, and Samuel Ungerleider, who ran a brokerage office in the Willard Hotel, will all be called before the committee.

A public statement issued by Senator Norris, which is taken here as the reply of the investigating committee to the "hush" brigade, has thrown additional consternation into the ranks of senators and congressmen known to be friendly to the oil interests. The Nebraska senator urges that the officers of the New York Stock Exchange be subpoenaed and forced to produce the books showing the number of shares dealt in from day to day. If these books do not show the names of the officials who bought or sold the stocks in question Senator Norris suggests that the Washington stock brokers be likewise subpoenaed and made to divulge the names of their clients.

The testimony of John T. King is expected to show that the Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico was a Doheny organization, with King as its head, which by the payments of large sums to government officials influenced the government's policy. King is to be asked whether officials and former officials of the government were on the payroll of the association.

Meanwhile, Coolidge is wrestling with the knotty problems raised by Denby's admission that he knew nothing of the California naval oil reserve leases. The retention or the resignation of Denby is said to have split the cabinet.

The friends of William McAdoo are to hold a conference here today to determine whether in the light of his admitted connection with the Doheny affair, after his resignation from the Wilson cabinet, he shall stay in the presidential race.

PACIFIST OF 1916 BURIED AS THE WAR DRUMS BEAT

Mob Forces Germans To Lower Flag

WASHINGTON. — The unknown soldier will not have to lie thru eternity side by side with the war maker who sent him to his death. The government's invitation to entomb Woodrow Wilson side by side with the anonymous casualty of his great war was rejected and the late president was interred on the other side of the Potomac River.

Woodrow Wilson's body was lowered into a vault in Bethlehem Chapel in the uncompleted Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, where dignitaries of the Episcopal Church are sleeping. He was buried shortly after noon, while government offices closed in Washington; the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade were shut down for the afternoon and millions of workers thruout the country were ordered to stop their industrial activities for one minute—during the lunch hour period—in homage to the dust that was returning to dust.

Threats Lower German Flag

Flags were half masted on all the embassies in Washington. The German diplomatic corps yielded to the threats of a mob of "hundred percenters" that gathered in front of the embassy and to the attacks in American newspapers, and drooped the German flag against the earlier orders of their home government, which had forbidden homage to their nation's enemy.

At the last moment came word that the huge form of Chief Justice Taft would not be seen among the honorary pallbearers. The only surviving ex-president was assailed with indigestion and unable to go thru with his duties in the services. Deep regret was felt by Wilson's friends, because of the bond of sympathy that was known to exist between the two men, in spite of party lines. Taft, a conservative republican, was placed in the highest judician post in the nation by Wilson because of his policies, and Wilson is said never to have breathed a word of regret against the Chief Justice's adjudication of the issues that came before him.

Senator Lodge was also excluded by illness.

Atmosphere of War!

It was a private funeral, with only a selected list of several hundred persons admitted to the inner sanctuary, but all the atmosphere of war hovered over the occasion.

The very bible which Bishop Freeman used was redolent of militarism. It was a khaki covered volume sent him from France by one of his "buddies," as the late president called the warriors.

Altho the multimillionaires composed the cortege of honorary pallbearers, the actual carriers of the late president's body were soldiers, sailors and marines, chosen from the troops Wilson was lord over during wartime.

Following closely behind the body on the way to the hearse came the honorary pallbearers themselves —

43 MINERS DROWNED IN HUGE FLOOD

Powder Blast Blows Bottom Out of Adjoining Lake

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BRAINERD, Minn., Feb. 6. —A powder blast blew the bottom out of a lake and let it flow into the Milford mine, causing the death of 43 miners, officials believed today.

Working in the 165 foot level of the shaft mine, the men had only brief warning of the oncoming flood.

Matt Kangas, one who escaped, said a sudden rush of wind blew off his cap and blew out his miner's lamp. Then he heard a sickening rush of water and muck that sounded like a battery of "a hundred flivvers," Kangas said.

"I replaced my cap, and as the suction stopped re-lit my lamp," he said.

The Lake Is Coming In.

"Young Frank Hvratin rushed by and shouted: 'The lake is coming in.'

"Another gust of air blew out my lamp again and I made a dash for the ladder. At my heels came the slimy, oozing muck.

"On the ladder ahead of me were Emil Keino, Jack Ravanich, Mike Rusovich and young Hvratin. Ahead of him was a Brainerd man.

"Bringing up the rear was Garry Hosford."

Hope of Rescue Abandoned.

All hope for the rescue of any of the 43 men buried in the Milford mine near here was abandoned today.

Trapped far down in the workings when a nearby lake emptied its water into the pit, only six of the 49 workers escaped death. The survivors reached the top in a skip which started its ascent just before the water started into the mine.

Thirty Days to Empty Mine.

Pumping equipment, manned by a score of rescue workers, started work during the night to pump the water from the pit. It will take 30 days, officials estimated, before the mine is emptied.

The mine, operated by the White Marsh Mining company, was a shaft working. Nearby was a small lake, whose bottom was within a few feet of one of the deep horizontal tunnels. When the lake's bottom gave way, the water rushed in upon the workers, filling the mine before they had an opportunity to escape. Within a few minutes the water filled the pit to its mouth.

The disaster occurred at 3:30 yesterday afternoon, just as the miners were about to go off duty. When word of the cave-in reached Crosby, all work in the little mining town was halted as its inhabitants hurried to the scene to assist in the

Chicago Sub Campaign Starts Feb. 10, Meeting of All Participants Tonight

Tonight, at the Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division St., the meeting which is to put the finishing touches on the plan for the Chicago DAILY WORKER subscription campaign, will be held.

Whether this campaign with its slogan of "1000 New Chicago Subscribers By March 10", will develop into a veritable DAILY WORKER landslide, which will give THE DAILY WORKER a circulation larger than that ever had by any labor paper in Chicago, will depend on the response the militants give to the invitation to be present at this meeting.

The Chicago campaign is of the greatest importance to the welfare of the labor movement in Chicago. The knowledge that the welfare of the labor movement depends tremendously on the DAILY WORKER circulation is becoming more and more evident. Where there is a large group of DAILY WORKER readers, there is a strong militant labor movement, has been evidenced by the showing made by progressives at the United Mine Workers' convention where 500 papers were sold and nearly all the delegates were reading THE DAILY WORKER every day.

The subscription campaign in Chicago has far more than local significance. The "I-want-to-make-THE DAILY WORKER-grow" battalions all over the country are watching with keen interest the outcome of the Chicago drive with a view of putting into practice everywhere the plans worked out in Chicago. What value successful activities in one locality have in stimulating activities in another district is already shown by the fact that the Chicago campaign itself is profiting from the example and experiences of the Detroit Boost Our Press campaign which is being waged so successfully at the present time.

Tonight at the Russian Technical School, 1902 W. Division St., the militant class conscious workers will assemble in the knowledge that THE DAILY WORKER subscription campaign in Chicago is one of the most important ventures in which they could participate.

COOLIDGE MOVED IN RURAL CRISIS TO AID STERLING

Senator Threatened by Bank Failures

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON. — Senator Sterling, sponsor of one of the most vicious of the anti-alien bills and an old guard republican like Kellogg of Minnesota, comes up for reelection this year. This is held to be the real motive for the hurried conference called by the president but there is no evidence as yet that the administration measures have so stemmed the rising tide of rural discontent as to have saved Sterling.

President Coolidge did not move for relief of the critical condition in the western states arising out of the long series of bank failures until an ultimatum had been sent by administration supporters, it was learned today.

The flood of messages that overwhelmed senators and congressmen and which caused a near-panic in the White House left no doubt as to the desperate character of the situation in the agricultural states. In Sioux Falls, S. D., for instance, a businessman's association sent the following wire: "This is no time for dilly-dallying. South Dakota needs aid instantly. A delay of even a few hours might result in further disaster and calamity. If complete financial ruin is to be avoided, there must be immediate relief from federal or other outside soufces."

Not even the Teapot Dome scandal outweighs in importance the situation in the western states aggravated by bank failures but directly due to the fact that farmers were forced to sell their wheat and other produce at less than it cost them to raise it; 75 and 80 cents is said to be the average price obtained at the elevator.

The farmers are worse than broke and as they are the basis of the economic structure in these states everyone else is broke. They are unable to pay taxes, their notes at the banks or their bills at the merchants. There have been thousands of foreclosures for taxes alone and formerly populous farming sections are now deserted; the land on which money has been loaned as improved property is worthless because it is not being tilled.

In North Dakota, according to Senator Ladd, in eighteen months preceding Dec. 1, 1923, two hundred banks failed. In Montana, according to Senator Wheeler, of [illegible] banks in existence on Jan. 1, 192[illegible]0 per cent are no longer in business and not 10 per cent of these could be open if the bank examiners forced them to comply with the banking laws. All told, there has been a total of something like 500 bank failures in the last few months in Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota.

It is not the plight of the farmers, however, dangerous as it is, that shoved the administration into action. It is the fact that many administration supporters are stockholders in national banks that have failed in this section and can be held under the banking law for "double liability."

They are saying unkind things about the Coolidge administration. With the farmers hostile, the future for Sterling, whom the republicans need badly, is not any too bright.

Sears-Roebuck Foundation's Job Is Bared; It Counts the Chickens

If all the chickens raised in the United States last year were lined up tail to tail they would reach around the world six times, with 182 full grown hens left over, the Sears-Roebuck Foundation estimated today.

If the eggs laid by this flock last year were gathered into cases and packed for shipping they would make a train of 170,070 cars reaching from Chicago to New York City and back again as far as Pittsburg, the statistician stated.

All of which means that the chicken industry has reached the stage of a billion dollar industry, the Foundation stated.

"Long Live Leninism"

masses are inspired. This is symbolic of the fact that the revolutionary movement can never be destroyed in the future by anything that may happen.

Ruthenberg Speaks

C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers Party, was given a great ovation as he arose:

"Since the first written record, men have sacrificed that people might be free," he began. "If you go back to Greece, you find slaves revolting so they could play a part in a free society. If you read history thru the thousand years of feudalism, you will find an exploited class struggling to be free. At all times there have been dreams in men's hearts that oppressed and oppressor would be no more.

"When future historians write the record of these years, they will write Nicolai Lenin down as leader of that movement that led the workers into the struggle to abolish capitalism from the face of the earth.

"Lenin fought for the workers everywhere; other statesmen fought for the right of individuals. Lenin gave the workers' world his life. He gave his life organizing the working class into a party that could fight for soviet republics in every country upon principles followed by the Communist Party.

Sees Soviet America Coming

"The German Workers Republic will be followed by the Workers Party of America, establishing a soviet United States.

"It was Lenin, who in the early days of the Russian revolution recognized that the bourgeois state must be replaced by soviets."

Concluding Ruthenberg said, that workers' America will struggle with the Philippines against American imperialists, and will fight everywhere to abolish American capitalism and build a communist society.

Beethoven's music filled the interim until Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkeszeitung, German communist daily of New York, arose, saying:

Lore, On Lenin the Statesman

"Today we pay homage to Nicolai Lenin, the greatest statesman of the age. Lloyd George, Bethmann Hollweg, Clemenceau and Asquith were merely politicians. They live just for today and make decisions for the momentary interests their class represents.

"Nicolai Lenin was not only the greatest of statesmen, but the great proletarian statesman. Everything he did was determined by the interests of the working class of the world over. If we can point to the greatest concrete achievement of Lenin, it is that he turned the concept for working class solidarity into a living, pulsing reality.

"In Lenin's memory the world's workers will stand together thru good fortune and bad, in war, in peace, in joy, in sorrow. In his memory the last vestige of national hatreds will disappear. In his memory, the working class of the world will pledge its support to Soviet Russia as the first great exponent of the oppressed rising to power and determining their own destinies."

Numerous Telegrams Read.

Here followed reading of numerous telegrams from locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and other labor organizations and workmen's circles, expressing their sorrow at Lenin's loss and their determination to carry on his work.

Then the chairmen called for a cessation of the cheering and began to read the call to world solidarity that had been radiogrammed by the workers of Russia. The air was charged with the electricity of repressed emotion as the audience listened breathlessly, then the huge shouting as 15,000 voices acclaimed the slogan, "The Proletariat Never Never Can Lose. Proletariat of All Lands Unite."

Chopin's funeral march again set the solemn note and then the chairman sent the battalion of collectors thru the crowd. The sum of $1,500 was raised.

"Long Live the International!"

With unanimous vote the assemblage then decided to send the following respones to the Soviet Republic, promising anew their fealty to the communist international:

"In monster mass memorial meeting 20,000 New York workers expressed their sorrow at the death of the greatest proletarian revolutionist, Nicolai Lenin. They pledge their support to the Soviet Republic in its valiant struggle against world imperialist capitalism and they resolve to do their full duty in bringing about the world revolution which will emancipate the international working class.

"Long live the communist international!

"Long live Soviet Russia."

"Long Live Leninism!"

Lenin's portrait, with the inscription, "Lenin is Dead, Long Live Leninism," which stood on the platform expressed the sentiments of the audience by this time. The genuine grief they felt at the loss of their leader was submerged in the ecstacy of determination to carry on his work and they joined in crying out the slogan.

Moissaye Olgin, the next speaker, talked in Jewish, and exhorted the thousands present to engrave this motto on their hearts.

"Join Lenin's Party," Says Foster.

William Z. Foster followed with an appeal for membership in the Workers Party that crystallized the feeling of the sympathizers present.

He first paid a tribute to Lenin's great revolutionary brain.

"Lenin was not only a great thinker: he was also a great strategist. I have no hesitation in saying that Lenin's action at Brest-Litovsk saved the Russian revolution. Lenin was brave enough to go to the workers and appeal that they allow a certain percentage of capitalism to return to Russia. It required a courageous man to do that. Lenin by that piece of strategy saved Russia.

"The Workers Party is the party of Lenin. If you believe in what Lenin taught, in what he did, you can express it, if it amounts to anything, only by joining the Workers Party. The Workers Party follows out the principles of Lenin's strategy. It is the only party in America, both in the political and industrial fields, with a correct policy for the workers."

Gompers Is Booed.

The enthusiasm that greeted the name of Lenin suddenly turned to boos as Foster introduced the name of Gompers, with the remark:

"Russia has its Lenin; America its Gompers.

"Gompers has not changed his mind in forty years," went on Foster. "Under Gompers' political zero policy not enough political influence has been developed to elect a dog catcher.

"If you have come here in the spirit of emulation of Lenin's work you will join the Workers Party. I hope that this, the greatest meeting ever held in New York, will triple the membership of the Workers Party. Join the party of Lenin and help forward the revolutionary movement."

Forward Boycotts Lenin News.

The gigantic Garden demonstration evoked news stories and comment in all New York's papers, except the Jewish Daily Forward, which completely ignored the affair.

The New York Times declared that Foster urged 15,000 people to join the party of Lenin and further the work of revolution in the United States. And the New York World reported that Madison Square Garden glowed red. Packed to limit it echoed shouts of thousands who arose to their feet to cheer Chairman Benjamin Gitlow and the slogan. "Lenin is Dead: Long Live Leninism!"

NO STRINGS TO RUSS RECOGNITION, SAYS MAC DONALD

LONDON. — "Recognition of Russia by Britain is absolute," said Premier Ramsay MacDonald in an interview today. "There is no string to it. We have given Russia our formal recognition. Personally I object to the use of language which cannot be understood by the men in the street, but I understand that the soviet attaches some importance to the use of the phrase 'de jure' and for that reason I am willing to subscribe to it." He says he wants to make the league of nations a living force, with Russia and Germany as members.

Aid to Starving Germans Brought by Shop Chairman

The campaign of the Jewish Daily Forward against the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany, does not seem to be producing any results. That was indicated at the office of the F. S. R., when Freda Reicher, shop chairman in the Lowenthal dress shop, brought in a contribution of $15. She had read the Forward but she was anxious to help the starving workers in Germany that she took up a collection in her shop for the F. S. R. and decided to inquire if the charges of the Forward were true. When she was told the facts she said that she intended to do all she could to help them in their work of assisting the German workers.

The F. S. R. is continually receiving letters and contributions from workers who have collected money from their friends. Many of them are not affiliated with any organization working for German relief. They received yesterday a contribution of $5 from Mr. A. Hanna of Cleveland, Ohio, who also sent a contribution of $5 from Mr. Albina Smreker also of Cleveland.

Jay Lovestone will address two meetings in Detroit on Sunday, Feb. 10. At 3 p. m. he will speak at the House of the Masses on the subject: "Who Owns Congress"; at 8 p. m. he will speak at the East Ferry Street Hall at a mass meeting under the auspices of the South Slavish, Polish and English Branches.

Daugherty's Special Assistant Feared Attorney-General Would Suppress Duplication of Bonds

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Wholesale duplication of liberty bonds of every issue since 1918 in the National Bureau of Printing and Engraving and the implication of many treasury officials are included in startling charges made by Charles B. Brewer, special assistant to Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, in a suit filed in District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Brewer sued after he had charged the Department of Justice with attempting to seize evidence he had collected at personal request of President Coolidge and the late President Harding.

Feared Suppression.

He declared he had refused to surrender the documents to the Department of Justice because he feared they would be suppressed and he would be discredited.

Brewer, in his suit, asked for an injunction restraining Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Attorney-General Daugherty, Under-Secretary of the Treasury Winston, and acting Attorney-General Seymour from destroying nearly $1,000,000 in duplicate bonds which, he says, he collected in his hunt for evidence.

Representative King, Illinois, today announced he will become a party to the suit. Evidence has been turned over to King which he says supports Brewers' charges that:

"Conditions at the bureau of engraving in March, 1922, are well nigh appalling.

All Knowledge Suppressed.

"Knowledge of duplicate bonds was suppressed by treasury officials and the secret service.

"Half of the surrendered bonds were destroyed when known to be duplicates.

"Between June 27, 1921, and May 22, 1922, forty-five million bonds, face value of over $10,000,000,000, were destroyed, hundreds of which were recorded as duplicates.

"Bonds issued in packages from the treasury have been found to be spurious.

"The president was defied and this investigation has been thwarted and nearly blocked by the treasury department."

Workers Will Run Paper that Boss Drove on Rocks

MEXICO CITY.—A new experiment in newspaper publishing is being tried here with El Mundo, the only afternoon daily with the exception of an illustrated paper. It is to be run as a cooperative by the workers who have so far been employed by it.

The paper began as an anti-labor sheet, paying reduced wages. It gradually drifted toward the rocks. As it was going under, the workers unionized from the editor to the errand boy, took it over as a cooperative enterprise. Its present circulation is only 10,000. The workers are highly enthusiastic about the opportunity.

Dakota Banker Suicide.

RAPID CITY, S. D. — Harry Wentz, former president of the South Dakota Bankers' Association, committed suicide at his home late yesterday.

Wentz had been suffering from a nervous breakdown for the past year.

Six South Dakota banks of which he was president were reported in good condition by examiners today.

Wentz carried $100,000 life insurance, police were informed.

An increased DAILY WORKER circulation means a stronger labor movement.

Argentine Jews in Sharp Line-up on Class Issues

(By The Federated Press)

BUENOS AIRES.—Class divisions in the big Jewish population of Argentina have become so acute that the organizations of Jewish workers are calling for a boycott upon all so-called philanthropic organizations of Argentinian Jewish business men. The latter, according to the proletarian Jews, have been used to sabotage Russian relief, to smash Hebrew trades unions and to fight the battles of the employers generally under the guise of philanthrophy.

In a manifesto issued by the workers the Zionist central committee and the Right Poale Zion have been particularly singled out for boycott. The workers charge that the Zionist central committee collected funds for relief of the flood of Jewish immigrants to Argentina, and then used the funds to recruit such immigrants as strikebreakers in struck factories; that the committee secured funds from the Jewish Cabinet Makers' union under promise that all immigrant cabinet makers would be put in touch with the union for jobs and then sent such cabinet makers to the bosses' open shop employment agency.

The manifesto continues with an attack on the Jewish bourgeois press, and more particularly the daily, Die Yidische Zeitung, charged with publishing false reports on the Jewish workers movement and appealing to the police to raid union and party halls.

Yucatan Fascist Rulers Bar All Radical Parties

MEXICO CITY.—The aims of the counter-revolution in Yucatan are well illustrated by a decree passed by the rebel government there on Dec. 24. The decree renders illegal and prohibits all meetings of Socialist or Communist organizations thruout the state.

Five hundred thousand hectares of land distributed to the peasants of Yucatan, peonage abolished, the hennequin commission (an enterprise in state capitalism with socialistic coloring), a law limiting rentals to 6 per cent of the proved value of the real estate, the vote of the formerly disfranchised Indian made effective, a divorce law with divorce at the desire of either party without the slandering and defaming of the other—such is the answer of the Mexican daily, "El Diario," to the question: "Why did they kill Felipe Carrillo?"

The International Ladies Garmen Workers' Union will demand a five day 40-hour week and continuanc of the present 44-hour wage scale an unemployment insurance pla and a union controlled employmen bureau when the present agreemen with the dress manufacturers of Chicago expires Feb. 15th.

These demands were voted on a a meeting of the International hel at Schoenhofen Hall, Milwaukee an Ashland avenues, Monday night More than a thousand members o the union attended the meeting an the demands which are to be presented to the bosses by the joint boar of the union were adopted. The join board of the union was authorized t call a strike if they are unable t get the manufacturers to agree t the demands. About 5,000 worker and 200 manufacturers will be affected by the new agreement.

International union officials sai yesterday that they expected th manufacturers to sign the ne agreement without the necessity o calling a strike.

The unemployment insuranc scheme which the union wants, wil differ from the scheme now in forc in the mens' clothing industry in tha only the bosses will pay into th fund. The bosses will be expecte to assure the union and the worker that they will furnish a give amount of work a year. They wil pay a given amount in to the unemployment fund each week and i they fail to give the workers in thei shop the amount of work they agree to they will be forced to pay the from this fund. If they do give th workers the amount of work the agreed to give, the money they pa into the insurance fund will be returned to them.

Negotiations were begun betwee union officials and the Chicago Dres Manufacturers yesterday looking t a settlement on the basis of the ne demands.

With a 40-hour week on the pa basis of 44 hours work the hourl wage rate will be increased about 15 per cent.

Rank and File for Expelled.

The rank and file of the unionists at the meeting expressed their desire that the members of the union who have been expelled for their militant attitude, against the union officials, be reinstated before any strike was called.

The people who had been expelled were permitted to atend the meeting. This was the first time that expelled members were permitted to attend any union mass meeting.

Low Prices, High Profits, Record of People's Mine

BRISBANE, Queensland.—Despite the fact that it sold its output at $5 per ton below the price charged by the private coal barons, the Queensland state owned coal mine at Bowen made a profit of $26,850 for the last fiscal year. At another state owned coal mine at Styx river, the output was sold at $8 a ton cheaper than the price previously charged by private coal operators.

The Queensland labor government is developing other coal mines in the state, and aims at supplying the state's entire needs from the state owned mines at less than half the price previously charged by private enterprise.

responsible for the tragic state of affairs to twist the sufferings of the masses into capitalist political campaign material.

Children Undernourished.

United States Senator Copeland presented the State Housing Commission of New York with some dismal statistics on the havoc wrought with the development of the children of the working class by the high rents and unspeakable housing conditions.

According to Dr. Copeland there are at least 200,000 undernourished children in the public schools of New York City. In Public School No. 73 on Lafayette Street, which is an "average" school attended by workers' children, at least 70% of the children are undernourished.

That the plight of the children of the wage earners is becoming ever more grave was made plain to the Commission by Dr. J. L. Blumenthal of the Department of Health. This investigator showed that the malnutrition of the children has been increasing continually since 1916 and has already reached menacing dimensions. Dr. Blumenthal emphasized the fact that when people are compelled to pay rents beyond their income and are thus driven to cut down on their food budget or live in uninhabitable rooms there are bound to arise malnutrition and all the dangerous after-effects of crowded sleeping.

Mona Caruso, a social worker of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, told the Commission that: "The children in most cases are undernourished. The families are not able to buy the proper food." Sophie Irene Loeb, President of the Board of Child Welfare of New York City, laid special stress on this phase of the sufferings of the working class when she declared before the State investigators: "I believe that in most of our families there is malnutrition because they have to pay the terrific rent. The rent has got to be paid because they know that if they do not pay the rent they will be evicted. The children do not get enough proper food. They do not get enough nourishment because of these high rents."

The writer visited one of the New York Public Schools in the Chelsea district to find out what effect the malnutrition had on the pupils. The Principal of Public School Number — in telling me of the harmful effects of undernourishment on the children said: "The high rents have a detrimental influence on the children in many ways. When the child is not withdrawn from school because of economic pressure aggravated by the excessive rent bills his scholarship is very often handicapped by malnutrition. An underfed child cannot be expected to have proper interest in and pay sufficient attention to studies. There is no denial to the fact that a sickly child can't make a good pupil despite the fact that the natural abilities may be of a high order."

Overcrowding Disastrous to Children

The extreme congestion prevailing in the working class districts is especially disastrous to the welfare of the children. Miss Edith B. Coff, social worker at the Madison House, testified before the Housing Commission about the effects of overcrowding on child life. "We find that the children do not sleep. There is no privacy, the gas is burning until twelve and one o'clock. Everyone is talking; everyone is walking. The street is noisy, and the child does not fall asleep until twelve, half-past twelve and one. I have gone up time and again to my families and helped put a child to sleep and then I knew how little really I can expect of the mother who has three or four other children, to put that child to sleep at eight o'clock. They sleep there together, four in the back bedroom, with one window, and they are naturally restless. When they get up in the morning they are not able to eat their breakfast because they did not sleep. They did not have any air. They get up tired and nervous and disturbed."

Miss Coff went on to tell the Commission that in the investigation made of the physical conditions of 400 children in the neighborhood of the Madison House, 102 children, aged 5 to 12, were under weight from 5 to 17 pounds. Miss Coff said that for an East side child to be under weight five or six pounds is quite normal.

Dr. Bosky of the Beth Israel Hospital on the East side declared that the housing conditions and not actual neglect is the main cause for this tragic condition in which the children of the workers find themselves.

Dr. Haven Emerson, professor of public health at Columbia University, stated to the Commission that if New York City had had the same favorable conditions of occupancy as the cities of the Pacific coast have, there would have been no increase in infant mortality.

Juvenile Delinquency Aggravated.

The miserable neighborhood environment to which many of the workers' children are subject has had a most harmful influence on the bringing up of the boys and girls in the working class districts.

Judge Edward F. Boyle of the Children's Court submitted startling evidence to State Industrial Commissioner Bernard L. Shientag on the manner in which the welfare of the children of the workers in the congested sections of the city is being imperiled because of the housing crisis. We cite two cases of the twenty set forth by the Judge. They are typical.

"Girl 13 years old alleged to have had improper relations with a male boarder in the home. The family conduct a small candy store and live in three rooms in the rear of it. The family consist of parents and six children, all living in the overcrowded quarters indicated and in addition for a time they had a male boarder. The adult went scot free because of lack of proof. The parents insist that they cannot afford to obtain another home and it was necessary to commit the girl to an institution."

"Boy 14 years old brought to court by his mother for staying out at night and for being a truant. The mother blames it on unwholesome neighborhood companions. The father earns about $25.00 per week. Nothing very bad about the boy, his sole trouble seems to be a disposition to 'play hookey' from school, and he was placed on probation. The family consists of parents and 12 children, all living in three small rooms in the rear of a tenement; poorly ventilated and dark. All fourteen sleep in two rooms, both parents are decent and respectable but they cannot possibly change home conditions because they cannot afford any higher rent."

Family Life at Low Ebb.

Because of the housing shortage and the high rents, the extent to which families are forced to take in lodgers to make ends meet has increased tremendously.

Miss Bromley, an experienced social worker of the Hudson Guild, described the evils of "boarders" for me in these words: "Many homes have been further destroyed in this section (Chelsea) by rooming houses and roomers. To the landlords it is often a paying proposition to turn their buildings into rooming houses. But these tendencies have further destroyed family life. When a home is converted into a lodging place it interferes not only with the home so changed but also with other peoples' homes. The neighboring mothers don't want their daughters accosted and approached by strange men."

Miss Davidson of the same institution told me another disruptive influence on the workingmen's family life arising directly out of the housing difficulties: "Often houses are being turned into rendezvous for hootch in order to meet the rent expenses. On —— West 28th Street there is a house where the present rental is $30; in 1919 it was $18. Now there are roomers in this home. The neighbors say that hootch is being made there. The children are being accosted. Strange people come around to ask all sorts of questions. The parents are alarmed."

The seriousness of the deplorable conditions is well summed up by Judge Boyle in his letter to the Housing Cimmission. We quote in part: "Nowadays the prospect of re-establishing a home in New York for people of small means, especially where there are children, is so remote as to be almost negligible. Rents are either too high or the sort of place that may be obtained is generally so deplorably bad that there is practically no choice remaining.

"Families are 'doubled up' in small apartments to such an extent which was never before experienced in this city. Some of the results of this practice are too shocking to describe.

"Girls more and more and in proportion as the home space is preempted, because of the existing congestion in housing, are substituting hallways for the old fashioned parlor or living room in which to find place for the entertainment of their companions—male and female.

"In greater numbers than ever, there will be found in the small apartments of the poor, the male lodger or lodgers (always a menace). As a rule the best room in the home is his, while the family itself is relegated to the meagre quarters remaining; too often only a kitchen, but usually a bedroom or two, invariably overcrowded. One cannot in decency here specify some of the results of this kind of living, if it may be described as such."

Standards of Living Lowered.

Low as the standard of living of the average workingman may be, the intolerable housing conditions tend to make it still lower. Evidence of such a lowering of the workers' standards was submitted to the Commission by Miss Sophie Irene Loeb in her testimony showing that the elementary practice of taking a bath is often entirely dropped "not only because there are no bathrooms, but because of the utter lack of privacy. The kitchen is the only room warm enough for the purpose, and the only room with runing water, and it is difficult to find time when it is not occupied by the family."

What this degradaiion of the workers means in their every-day life is vividly illustrated by the following case pictured to me by Miss Bromley of the Hudson Guild: "The mother is working in a paper box factory. She has four daughters and three sons. In addition to these she takes care of an orphan boy and takes in washing to get along. We called her "Swedish Nightingale." Recently we had the mother move her family to a new apartment. When we showed her little boy Eddie the bathtub, we said to him: 'Guess you'll have to sleep here.' Eddie immediately asked: 'Who with?'"

Grave Menace to Health.

There is a superabundance of authoritative statistical and medical information showing that amongst families living under bad housing conditions the general mortality and sickness are very high and costly.

"The Italians in our neighborhood are doubling up in cellars and are living under conditions which are absolutely a menace to health and safety," said Miss Manning of the Housing Committee of the Women's City Club to the Commission.

Overcrowding brings on exhaustion. Insufficient rest for the breadwinners unavoidably brings on sickness, colds, and infectious diseases, according to Mr. Burrit, a prominent social investigator.

Dr. Emerson, formerly New York Health Commissioner, has found that "room crowding is probably the most important factor in the spread of those diseases—of the respiratory tract, notably pneumonia, bronchitis, influenza and tuberculosis."

Dr. Watson F. Walker, former Deputy Health Commissioner of Detroit, supports this conclusion of Dr. Emerson, and says further that the lack of light, the human organism is subjected to in poor housing and environment has a harmful effect on the development of the human body. This is plainly shown in the recent investigations of the problem of rickets.

The significance of these dangers is brought to the fore very effectively by J. Byron Deacon, Director of the New York Tuberculosis Association, in his letter to the State Housing Commission, when he says: "When to the burden of overcrowding is added that of high rents, the deleterious effects are intensified. High rents decrease the moneys available for food and clothing, and by consequence the health level of the population must be lowered."

(The next article will deal with the exorbitant rents, the workers are fored to pay.)

OBREGON PARTY FACES SPLIT OVER ASSASSINATION

Labor Leader Charged with Act

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY.—A split is threatening in the civil forces of the federal government where a serious difference of opinion has arisen over the poorly named question of "direct action." The rumors to that effect took open form a few days ago when Vitto Alesio Robles, staunch government supporter, ex-minister of labor, and senator with socialistic tendencies, offered a motion to impeach Luis N. Morones, deputy and leader of the Laborista party, so that his dismissal from the chamber might deprive him of his parliamentary privilege of exemption from arrest. He might then be called to account for the murder of another senator for which Robles declared Morones responsible.

The break became more open when Jose Vasconcelos, minister of education in the cabinet, tendered his resignation by telegraph to President Obregon. He refused to make a statement, but it is well understood that the same question is involved.

The senator who was murdered outside the senate chambers a few days previously, was Field Jurado, Cooperatista. It is generally felt, that the assassination was political and his opponents charge Morones with the moral responsibility. They base their charge on a chain of circumstantial evidence beginning with the murder of Felipe Carrillo by the facsisti in Yucatan, followed by threats of vengeance on the part of Morones and other prominent labor leaders.

These threats gradually took the form of a punitive expedition to Yucatan on the one hand, and of using "direct action" against the senators and representatives who, altho partisans of the counter-revolution, remained in the national congress to block legislation and particularly to block the ratification of the claims convention between Mexico and the United States. These senators could not legally be touched because of their parliamentary exemption.

Leaders of the Mexican Federation of Labor gave notice publicly that if these friends of the counter-revolution did not cease their obstruction they would be made to. The federation leaders telegraphed to the president on the western front, asking him to furnish train facilities to the parliamentary fascisti so that they might go and join the counter-revolution "where they belonged."

Senator Field Jurado then wrote a letter to Morones which is reported to declare that he would be in the senate on such a day and every day thereafter and that he would do his utmost to block the work of the government till de LaHuerta should become president of Mexico. He was there at the appointed hour and time and so was an automobile with armed men. When he left the senate house shots fired from the auto ended his life. The auto disappeared.

Immediately there was strong difference of opinion expressed on the matter. One faction of the civil government declared that such vengeance degraded the supporters of the government to the same level as the murderers of Felipe Carrillo. These included such men as Vasconcelos, Alesio Robles and others. The president from the battlefield issued a statement condemning the murder and requesting that every effort be made to apprehend and punish the responsible parties. Vasconcelos resigned when more than a week had passed and no arrests had been made. The text of his resignation is not yet public but I have reason to believe that it refers specifically to the murder of Senator Field and protests absolute loyalty to General Obregon.

Enemies of the growing domination of the Laborista party within the central government are working the opportunity for all it's worth trying to force the government to repudiate Morones.

CANADIAN LABOR IN DEMAND FOR EIGHT-HOUR DAY

Nation-wide Campaign Is Launched

(By The Federated Press)

TORONTO. — The eight hour day, a general minimum wage law, and unemployment insurance were the main demands presented here to the Provincial government by the Trades and Labor Council, as a part of a Dominion-wide campaign of organized labor, for those achievements.

In agreement with the plan mapped out in last September's union conferences in Vancouver, B. C., as to what demands should be made additional to the three aforementioned points, the legislature requests included amendments to the various labor effecting laws, as for instance, to the Ontario Workers' Compensation Act, extending the operation of that law to all workers irrespective of who their employer may be; to the Mothers' Allowance Act, so as to include widows with one child; to the Minimum Wage Act, as to include all young persons of both sexes, and to the Municipal Act, so that municipalities would be unable to compete for industries by offering reduced or fixed assessments.

Beside smaller matters, as sanitary measures in barber shops, forbidding of the operation of one-hand street cars, the request was made for at least one labor representative in the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

Women's Peace Union Asks Amendment to Stop Waging of War

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — Proposing a constitutional amendment which would forbid the making or carrying on of war, either by the federal government or by any of the state governments, the Women's Peace Union has sent a delegation to Washington to start its campaign. One senator, whose name was not disclosed, promptly endorsed the idea.

Miss Elihor Byrns, lawyer, of New York City, directed the drafting of the measure. It provides that "War for any purpose shall be illegal, and neither the United States nor any state shall prepare for, declare, engage in, carry on, or in any way sanction war or other armed conflict, expedition, invasion or undertaking within or without the United States or any state."

Moreover it forbids the governments, both federal, state and subdivisional, and corporations, associations and persons within the United States jurisdiction to train, maintain, hire, manufacture, use, or authorize the use of an army, militia or other armed force, or of armed ships, machines, or other armaments; nor shall taxes be levied for any such purpose, nor shall arms or munitions be transported.

This measure is the expression of the "absolutist" opposition to war. The Woman's Peace Union was formed two and a half years ago in Canada, and has a membership pledge which debars its members from taking any part, direct or indirect, in supporting or sanctioning any war, international or civil, or in supporting relief organizations that condone war.

How Lewis Henchmen Terrorized Delegates at Miners' Convention

To THE DAILY WORKER: As a duly elected delegate I believe the Daily Worker will give me space to explain something that went on at our convention.

After the report of the committee on Constitution was defeated and the delegates by a majority voted against the appointive power from the International President the payrollers put thru a vote for a roll call.

As secretary Green proceeded to call the names the President of District six (Ohio) called a special meeting of the delegates from that district in the rear of the hall. William Roy, Vice-president of that district, took the floor and began to speak for the machine by telling the men that if they were against the committee's report they were not voting for their union. Anybody voting against the committee was a "red". If the committee's report was voted down on the roll call it would be a menace to the organization, Roy declared.

Delegate Watkins, another one of John L. Lewis' tools, took the floor and flayed the "reds" but never mentioned the "yellows". When one of the delegates called a halt on the flow of hot air, Watkins proceeded to curse him fluently and vigorously and threatened to beat him. The other thugs then surrounedd the progressive who wanted each delegate to have the privilege of voting as he pleased. But he was not intimidated and voted "no" which was in his opinion for the best interests of the United Mine Workers of America.—A Delegate, Indianapolis, Ind.

Propaganda of the Kept Press Fans Race Riot Danger

To The DAILY WORKER: Never in the history of Chicago has such a vicious anti-Negro propaganda been propagated, as that which is being at present conducted by the terror-stricken, frantic, exploiting capitalists and their lackeys. It is an established fact that ever-dying organism puts up its greatest fight to continue to live just before death comes. Quite so with the capitalists.

The gutter sheet, the Herald and Examiner, heralds every crime that a Negro commits, in big, black letters, always having the word Negro in headline. The Daily News tells how vicious Negroes are holding pretty young white girls in slavery, forcing them to cater to Negro men for a price. The unspeakable Chicago Tribune in reporting an affair in which a Negro defending himself from white ruffians shoots one of them, headlines the news item, "Negro shoots rich man's son."

The filthy, weak lies of the Ku Klux Klan "Dawn" and "The Star" descend to the lowest possible depths in creating prejudice against Negroes, by continually playing upon the delicate strings of sex, telling of the increase of Negro men and white women associations.

This deadly poison gas of the concubine kept press of the capitalists is being inhaled by white workers. Within the space of a few weeks Negro men escorting their light skinned Negro wives have been set upon by whites, who thought that the Negroes were with white women.

If the Kluxers really desire to keep the white women pure, as they say they do, let them start a campaign for living wages and cheap room rent for white girls and women workers. Prostitutes, regardless of their color, are in the game for money and all money looks alike to them, whether a Negro or white person possesses it.

The writer, who lives near 43rd street and Grand boulevard, is often approached on the boulevard at night by cute little bobbed hair pink things inviting me to go with them and enjoy myself. One even gave me advance notice that her price was five dollars.

In view of the above facts it is imperative that Negro and white class conscious workers do all in their power to increase the circulation of The DAILY WORKER among the black and white workers of Chicago and thereby prevent the capitalist press from starting another race riot which would cause both groups of workers to suffer terribly.—Gordon W. Owens, Chicago.

Cachin and French Capitalism.

Marcel Cachin, leader of the French Communist Party is again the object of an attempt by the French government to strangle Communist propaganda. He is charged by the government with inciting the military to disobedience by means of articles published in the Communist press during December. Once before the government attempted to prosecute Marcel Cachin, when he returned from the Conference of Essen where German Communists met together with French Communists to devise a program of action against the imperialist French government and its invasion of the Ruhr. At that time Poincare failed to get action against Cachin, and so he is trying again.

FIVE AND FIFTY.

If fifty men did all the work,
And gave the price to five,
And let those five make all the rules,
You'd say the fifty men were fools—
Unfit to be alive.

And if you heard complaining cries
From fifty brawny men,
Blaming the five for graft and greed,
Injustice, cruelty indeed—
What would you call them then?

Not by their own superior force
Do five on fifty live,
But by election and assent,
And privilege and government—
Powers that the fifty give.

If fifty men are really fools,
And five have all the brains,
The five must rule as we now find;
But if the fifty have the mind—
Why don't they take the reins?

RAGING STORM IS BOON TO JOBLESS; SHOVELERS BUSY

But Many Workers Suffer Without Coal

With the assistance of hundreds of extra snow shovelers from the ranks of the unemployed, Chicago is well on its way today toward digging itself out of the first serious snow storm that has hit the city this winter. The two day blizzard which has just passed was welcomed by the hundreds of migratory workers along Madison St. who were on the job ready to go to work for the city shovelling snow. This is the first time this winter that the street cleaning department has been compelled to hire many extra workers.

Suffering was generally thruout the poorer districts of the city. The stockyards and steel district charity organizations received scores of calls for coal and food. As has happened during every cold spell this winter the charity organizations were not able to fill all the requests for coal. Many families were unable to send their children to school thru the snow because they did not have decent shoes.

Two people were killed and many others injured when a train hit a street car at a grade crossing at west 49th St. and Kedzie Ave.

Railroad, telegraph and telephone service thruout the Middle west was almost brought to a standstill by the storm. Telegraph and telephone wires were reported down all along the line. Both the United Press and the Associated Press were compelled to use radio to get news dispatches to their client papers. Dozens of trains were stalled, in the snow drifts.

The weather bureau reports that the storm has passed.

43 Miners Lose Lives When Lake Floods Deep Pit

long work of recovering the bodies of the dead.

Many Hopelessly Trapped.

When the wall of water first hissed its way into the working, those who managed to escape climbed along seven feet of vertical wall to the skip and started the ascent.

As they moved slowly to the top and safety, they heard below them the frantic shouts of their comrades, hopelessly trapped in the pit. The water came in so rapidly, however, that the last cries from the drowning men had ceased before the survivors reached the top.

Most of the victims were young married men, according to officials of the mining company.

When the townspeople arrived, they looked helplessly at the mouth of the shaft. Just below the top was the murky water that had enveloped its victims. There was nothing to do. From the first moment no hope was entertained that any would be saved.

While friends and relatives of the victims looked on today, two giant pumps were taking out the water, 6,000 gallons a minute. It will be a week, officials said, before the water is taken from the principal shaft and much longer before the mine is completely emptied.

Chicago Gets Plea for Help.

Orders to rush relief supplies to the scene of the mine disaster in Crow County, Minnesota, were broadcast by radio from central headquarters of the American Red Cross here today.

Mrs. Marjorie Bell, Red Cross Liason representative at the United States Veteran Bureau, Minneapolis, was directed to take charge of the relief work.

J. A. O. Preus, governor of Minnesota, was notified of the action by the Red Cross.

Pacifist of 1916 Is Buried to Beating of Drums of War

Gregory and Burleson There

Thomas W. Gregory, attorney general under Wilson, who conducted the prosecutions against free speech, so essential to the conduct of an unpopular war, came in the throng, and Albert S. Burleson, former postmaster general, and censor of newspapers and magazines, followed in close succession.

President and Mrs. Coolidge were there.

Cannons roared as the late war chief was laid away, and it was over. Wilson had passed from the earthly stage, just a few years after the multitudes who perished on the battlefield at his bidding in the "war for democracy."

Protect the Foreign Born!

$4,000,000 Voted School Board Yet Firetraps Still Stand While Fake Cry of "Poverty" Is Raised

The last legitimate excuse the members of the school board might have against abolishing the present firetraps that imperil the lives of thousands of working class children and building fireproof and hygienic structures was stripped from them when the people of Chicago voted them millions of additional revenues at the last election.

By a vote of the people the tax rate was increased from 75 cents to $1.00 on each $100 of taxable property, for the express purpose of providing for new and safer school buildings. The new tax rate provides for something like $4,000,000 additional revenue—yet nothing is done.

Fake Cry of Poverty.

Cries of "economy" and "save money" are the answers of the Chicago board of education to pleas of parents in the firetrap school neighborhoods. They justified their refusal to build by saying that they had no money. They sang this song of poverty before the new tax rate went thru and they still continue to sing the same song—while the parents who have protested see the lives of their sons and daughters endangered and know that if they fail to send their little ones into the firetraps that the truant officer may come and they may themselves be arrested, instead of the authorities who are to blame.

The DAILY WORKER in exposing this firetrap condition is exposing nothing new. The schools of Chicago have not become unsanitary, dangerous firetraps overnight. For more than 30 years the city's growth has been outstripping the school system. The school board continues to do nothing now as it has done nothing in the past, but its culpability is all the greater since the additional source of revenue was voted the school board for a construction program.

Mayor Hazards Kids Lives.

The only statement of a city official on the condition of the public schools was the recent message of the mayor to the city council in which he said that he realized the seriousness of the situation but that he would not close any of the schools. He hoped that until next vacation tragedy might be averted and then he would advocate emergency action. In two months he proposed to remedy a situation that has been growing on the city for more than 30 years.

The plans of the present board of education to meet the situation facing them in the public schools is to have a white washing investigation conducted and to assure the workers that there is nothing to be alarmed about.

50 Firetraps, Admits Engineer.

The chief engineer of the board of education has warned the people of Chicago that there is something to be alarmed about. The bureau of fire prevention says the same thing. They say that more than fifty of the buildings used as schools are a menace to life.

The attitude of the present board of education on the building crisis in the schools is expressed in the program advanced by the superintendent of schools regarding additions and repairs on old buildings. According to this program only such changes as will be needed at once will be made. Additions will be made only where proof exists of the need for additional space. The measure of proof being the use of portable buildings or the double shift system in schools asking additional space.

Millions To Spend; Do Nothing.

At the present time the school board gets $12,000,000. Under the new tax they will get $16,000,000. They have not outlined a plan for spending either amount.

School districts that can show political influence to the city officials and politicians can get things from the board of education. Working class districts that cannot muster the politicians go without.

To replace the present old school buildings with new, decent and adequate structures it is essential that a complete building program be made out. A program that will have no place for political influence but will consider only the needs of the working class districts.

To build new schools the board of education has at its disposal tens of millions of dollars and yet it has no plan on which it works in spending this money.

Whitewashing Continues

The whitewashing investigation of public schools being conducted by the board of education into the fire hazards of school buildings continues. The same reports are being made. "Nothing startling" has been discovered. The three fire inspectors who are conducting the investigation under the direction of Daniel Burns, business manager of the board, are busy visiting schools and whitewashing the board of education. More than fifty schools have been "inspected" yet nothing has been found wrong and indications are that the inspectors do not intend to find anything wrong, or if they do it will not be made public.

While the board of education can find nothing wrong with the public schools the DAILY WORKER'S investigation bares conditions showing that the bureau of fire prevention of the fire department spoke mildly in stating that when they reported to the mayor that more than fifty public school buildings are fire traps.

An 1880 Firetrap.

Yesterday the investigator of the DAILY WORKER visited the Stanley branch of Lane Technical High school at Huron and Franklin Sts. This building was erected in 1880 and is as bad from the point of fire hazards as any building visited by the DAILY WORKER investigator. It is three stories high with old fashioned fire escapes of the tube slide style.

The school is used only by boys and has 12 rooms and 400 pupils. The neighborhood is a factory district and fires in the district are frequent.

Wooden Stairways.

The halls and stairs are dark and all wood. There are many small halls between rooms and wooden lockers are crowded into most of them. The boys who go to the school are mostly around fourteen or fifteen years old. That is just the age when many boys begin to smoke a little and carry matches.

The toilets are in the basement. They are as dark, as damp and as illy ventilated as any such place could be.

The entire building from basement to roof is of the poorly designed ramblingly constructed type of building usual in 1880 and unsuited to any sort of public use. There seems to be no way of remodeling such buildings to make them safe and fire proof short of tearing them down, and building over again.

The elevated railroad passes the school on one side and its noise must interfere with classes. If the school were a few blocks east it would be in an ideal location for a school building. This would not be a hardship for the present pupils as many of them already live some distance from the school.

The school building is a fire trap and is located in a neighborhood not suitable for a school. It is overcrowded and the sanitary conditions are rotten.

Wires Down in North Dakota Delays News of N. P. Convention

Owing to the sever snow storm which has swept with particular severity thru the North West, Joseph Manley, representative of the Federated Farmer Labor Party and correspondent of the DAILY WORKER at the Bismark, North Dakota convention of the Non-Partisan League, was unable to communicate by telegram with the office, the wires being down. As we go to press the Western Union advises us that heroic efforts are being made to put up the wires and they expect by tomorrow to have the lines between Chicago and North Dakota open.

LEWIS ORDERS HI TOOL BARRETT TO MEET WITH BESCO

British Empire Steel C Now Defiant

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONTREAL. — Following " master's voice"—in this case a te gram from Indianapolis—Silby Ba rett, provisional president of Distri 26 of the United Mine Workers, a rived here today, heading a delega tion of three, to re-new negotiation with the British Empire Steel Corpo ration as to the ending of the strike in the Nova Scotia coal pits.

Roy Wolvin and other High Priests already have been in session here for a few days, issuing statements to the press, lying as to what wages the miners are getting. The course things are going to take now seems quite clear when learning that the board of directors of Besco had "thoroly considered the Cape Breton coal situation and regretted that the miners of district 26 had rejected the offer to restore the 1923 rates, under which they were working when operations were suspended." It "concurred in President Wolvin's view that the limit of generosity had been reached and there is no prospect of any further concessions."

However, doesn't it seem a remarkable coincidence that as often as Besco is in danger to get beaten by the Nova Scotia rank and file, John L. Lewis promptly saves the day.

"If it can be done by education THE DAILY WORKER can do it".

Fur Bosses Yield Concessions to Workers in N. Y.

NEW YORK. — Negotiations between the International Fur Workers' Union and the Manufacturers' Association in New York, after two months, culminated in a settlement which offers concessions to the union. The terms include:

Twelve and a half per cent increases on all minimum wage scales; establishment of an unemployment fund; regulations for contracting shops; establishment of apprenticeship system and limitation of learners.

In view of the seasonal nature of this industry, a special clause is introduced into the agreement, stipulating that, in addition to the three months' provision for division of work, the conference committee in the fur industry is to devise means, in an emergency situation in the trade to mitigate or reduce unemployment. The importance of this latter arrangement becomes clear when coupled with the fact that, at the present moment, three-fourths of the workers engaged in the fur trade here are out of work.

The agreement, which immediately affects about [illegible] workers in New York, will be submitted to a referendum of the workers without delay. Its acceptance is considered probable. In this case, about 7,500 fur workers, now unemployed, will return to the shops. Rejection of the scheme would entail a strike.

In a statement to the Federated Press, Morris Kaufman, president of the union, characterizes the settlement as a "splendid victory for the union." He adds that "the membership is overjoyed at the successful outcome of the negotiations."

THE DEMANDS OF THE CHILDREN

Article No. 13

The most important struggle of the Junior Groups is against the tyranny of school discipline. Now and then we hear tales of how the children were beaten in the schools, or that they were punished by being given special work to be done, or by being prevented from speaking. The child is hurt not only by the suppression of his own personality but he feels as well the injustice when a school-mate is punished. This is especially strong when a child is punished for being backward in his classes. The children revolt against this and hate the teacher who torments a child for this reason.

The Junior Groups show the children how to convert this secret hatred and pent-up anger into a conscious struggle against corporal punishment; against the assumed right of a teacher to beat a child; against punishment by an overdose of home work; against military school discipline; and for democracy in the school; for pupils' councils; for the right of the children to establish their own system of discipline, for the abolition of a rigid curriculum.

We are not giving the child new and strange terms. We only help to formulate what the child itself thinks and wills, and we do not formulate what the child itself thinks and wills, and we do not formulate for him but with him, by discussing these matters openly and frankly and leading him to the correct conclusions.

The communist children will always demand. They demand from the bourgeois authorities and from the school bureaucracy, as well as from the organizations and institutions of the working class itself—the Party, the trade unions, the cooperatives. Of the former they demand the fulfilment of their wishes; of the latter they demand help in the struggle. They will demand not what they are told by adults, but what arises from their own experience, what they realize to be their own needs—and some of the demands that arise out of their inner consciousness will be startlingly clear.

Pedagogs and petty bourgeoisie and reformist socialists assert: "Children have nothing to demand. They have to ask for what they want, and to be grateful for what they receive. They have not yet done anything. It is their job to become something, somebodies. It is the duty of the adults to care for the children. Adults know much better what children need. The adults have the power, and hence the wisdom. How can children make political and social demands?"

How these poor hysterical people lament over the abuse of the children; over the way in which children are being taught to become "phrasemongers, talking machines, party soldiers."

We do not invent children's demands. We merely help the children to do it—to help the children in the formulation of their wishes and demands and in the struggle to obtain them.

BUFFALO LABOR CLOSES RANKS AT LENIN MEETING

ll Factions Unite in Leader's Honor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Workers arty, Socialist Party, Proletarian arty, Buffalo Labor Party, and orkmen's Circle groups joined anks here in Memorial for Lenin, ringing out an audience that crowded the auditorium of the Labor Lyceum. Orators representing various shades of political opinion put aside their differences. All spoke in praise of the great revolutionary leader, and the audience sang the "Red Flag" enthusiastically.

Eustace Reynolds spoke briefly on the deep impression Lenin's death had made on the world.

C. M. O'Brien of Rochester followed, declaring: "The men who conceived and brought to fruitition the Russian revolution were gifted with the highest standard of intelligence known to have been possessed by any set of men in similar position." Of these men, according to the speaker, "Lenin was the most brilliant and the most astute."

Pat Quinlan, editor of The New Age of Buffalo, spokesman for the Socialist Party, described Lenin in action as he had seen him in Russia.

Kirkpatrick Indicts Capitalists

A powerful indictment of the capitalist governments of the world in their persecution of the workmen's republic of Russia, was made by George R. Kirkpatrick, vice presidential candidate of the Socialist Party in 1916. He expressed his admiration of the splendid proletarian leadership of Lenin, and said: "Up to date, Lenin and his co-operators have accomplished the biggest single job in the political affairs of mankind."

Rudolph Katz of Buffalo, speaking for the Workers' Party, said: "We are not here to mourn, but to gather new courage and inspiration to carry on the great work for which Lenin lived, and for which he died. Lenin was of the working class, and, tho men of great intellectual capacity have appeared before among the workers, they have nearly always used their powers to further the interests of the oppressors. We are not hero worshippers, but we recognize that men like Lenin are entitled to the respect and admiration of mankind. During the life of Lenin the capitalist press maligned him, but now they fill their columns with belated praise.

Quotes From Lenin

"As Lenin himself wrote in 'The State of Revolution,' 'During the lifetime of great revolutionaries, the oppressing classes invariably have meted out to them relentless persecution, and have received their teachings with the most savage hostility, with most furious hatred, and with a ruthless campaign of lies and slanders. After their death, however, attempts are usually made to turn them into harmless saints, canonizing them, as it were, investing their names with a certain halo by way of 'consolation' to the oppressed classes, with the object of duping them; while at the same time emasculating and degrading the real essence of their revolutionary theories, blunting their revolutionary edge.'"

Appeal for funds to feed the starving children of Germany was made by Frank Herzog of Buffalo, and met with generous response.

German Seamen Continue Strike in Ports of British Isles with 75 Ships and 1,200 Men Idle

By GEORGE HARDY.

LONDON.—German seamen are still on strike in the ports of the British Isles. Over 75 ships are tied up, involving, according to latest reports, 1,200 men. The strike is now in its third week and the seamen are as firm as ever in their stand for a wage commensurate with the necessities of life.

They are asking for British rates of pay. They are determined to save their wives and families from the starvation and misery now prevailing at home.

In order to understand this strike we must know something of the struggle of the workers since the Armistice.

It was the seamen who contributed marvelously to the German revolution in 1918. The sailors of Kiel revolted and in all the ports they were in the forefront, which made the Weimer constitution possible. But since then they have always been betrayed by the Social Democrats. Noske at the very start established his policy which has characterized the rule of Social Democracy and the bureaucracy of central trade unions ever since.

He congratulated them at Kiel upon their achievements in saving the revolution, which kept him and his colleagues in power during the Kapp Putsch, but when they continued to fight to make a complete working class revolution, he replied with machine guns the very next day.

The history of the last five years is one of bloody suppression.

Last Year the Worst.

The last year has been the worst for the German seamen since they helped to dethrone the Kaiser. The rapid decline of the mark has affected seamen most, as they received their wages upon returning to the home port. Sailors who were away on a three months' voyage had not enough to even buy one loaf of bread.

And even with the established rate at the time of signing, their wages were below that of the Chinese many times. Despite these facts, the leaders of the reactionary unions refused to make common cause when the Deutsche Shiffahrtsbund—the German Seamen's Union—of the R. I. L. U. went on strike, and the seamen were beaten back to their ships.

Exasperated and desperate, in August they again revolted. The dockers and seamen struck. The roll of dead after three days struggle left its mark upon the memories of starving women and consumptive children. The Hamburg State in control of Social Democrats; and their blood-thirsty chief of police was responsible for the death of our German fellow workers. A slight increase in wages was given, but the continued fall of the mark had taken it away in a few days. Then the sailors' wives must stand around the shops with empty baskets. Prices had risen, their money was valueless. Again the familiar phrases were heard everywhere: "Keine Brot! Keine Kartoffel!" (No bread! No potatoes!) The union offices invaded by sobbing women asking for aid for their children.

Again Forced to Revolt.

This went on and on. Until again in October the workers were forced to revolt. Cuno's government had fallen in August and Stresseman's rule had produced nothing better. The vacillating policy of the Social Democrats had paved the way for ultimately, their complete elimination from the government. The suffering was unendurable and bread prices rose in one day from 35 to 450 millard marks. The last week in October, a culmination to their suffering, found the workers of Hamburg behind the barricades fighting a desperate battle for bread. They lost the battle physically with 67 dead and many wounded, but not until they had inflicted great losses upon the forces of Capital.

The outcome of all this is: the seamen have been forced to take action outside of Germany. The white guards of Noske are impotent when the sailors take international action. They have found another place to strike in, where the bullets of the Reichwehr and Green Police cannot be used against them.

Contrary to the statements made that British shipowners are supporting the strike and that the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union called the men out, the sailors arrived at their decision thru circumstances entirely German. They contemplated intermittently striking at foreign ports, to escape the conditions cited. And the British shipping Federation indicates clearly that they regard the strike as a dangerous precedent. In this method of striking, they see a danger, that will probably lead to similar action on the part of British seamen. It is against all maritime law internationally, and, as they say: "involves a repudiation of legally binding contracts." They were willing to harass German shipping, but now the strike assumes larger proportions they line up on the side of the German shipowners—they are internationalists when dealing with labor.

Try to Cut Wages.

Everywhere the shipowners are attempting to nibble down wages. And Inchape Ellermann and Pirries, etc., use the fact that German wages are only 2 pounds 18 shillings a month to justify another slash into British seamen's rates. "We cannot compete internationally" is their cry. Recently, Lord Inchape said, "If we are to keep our ships at sea and cover our working expenses, it may be necessary to make further reductions." But he also stated to the shareholders' meeting, "We are able to suggest a payment of 12 per cent free of income tax, as we did a year ago." They will fight the seamen and dockers because they are not satisfied making millions of pounds. They desire to have us work under similar conditions to the Germans.

But there is an indication that class consciousness is on the increase. The dockers at the Victoria and Surrey commercial docks struck in aid of the German seamen. They resumed work on condition that the consul and the brokers summon the German owners to negotiate. The owners refused. But the representatives of the strikers, who were sent for from Hamburg, after touring British ports, report that the men are standing firm and are determined to win. Their demands for 9 pounds per month should insure the support of all the workers of Britain. The internationalization of seamen's wages has long engaged the attention of progressive seamen. And because both the International Transport Workers Federation and the Red International of Labor Unions have decided upon this in international congress, the strikers have their support. Also, this is an international class fight with the shipowners.

British Arrange Meetings.

The British Bureau of the Red International Labor Unions is arranging meetings in aid of the strikers, families, and all workers everywhere should rally and give their whole-hearted support. The principle of international solidarity, for once should be realized among seamen. Not only because British rates are menaced as long as the slave conditions remain, in German ships, but as a signal for an international union among seamen. Just as the strikers in Britain are always called traitors, etc., the ironical German press states that the seamen after being starved and murdered, with their sisters driven to the streets in despair, are now called "traitors" and "disloyalists" and "tools in the hands of an enemy." At the same time the Fascist dictator raids the offices of the Deutsche Schiffahrtsbund and renders this seamen's union illegal because of its international principles and international action.

Strikes are on in American, Chilian and Australian ports. The Australian Seamen's Union affiliated to the R. I. L. U., is supporting the strikers. British workers, especially seamen and dock workers, aid your struggling fellow workers, lest Lord Inchape makes good his threats.

Stand solid for international solidarity.

MINING HAZARD GREATER IN U. S. THAN IN ENGLAND

Profits More Concern Here Than Life

That the work of a coal miner in America is considerably more dangerous than similar work in England is the conclusion reached by J. T. Ryan, vice president of the Mine Safety Appliance Company of Pittsburgh, who has recently made a study of mining conditions in the British Isles.

The inspection department of the English mines is composed of efficient and well paid men with power to enforce its decrees. The salary of British mine inspectors is double that of American mining inspectors. Such tragedies as the mine fatality in Johnston City, would result in a summary chopping of political heads should the negligence that was displayed in the Illinois mine be proved against a British coal mining company.

Indianapolis Neglected Miners

At the miners'' convention in Indianapolis which just terminated the officials of that organization devoted much time to denouncing the radicals and very little to the important question of working conditions under which heading the most important is the question of safety.

The following is an excerpt from a statement made by Mr. Ryan:

"During 1921 there were employed at the mines in Great Britain and Ireland, 1,156,938 men. Of this number, 924,629 worked underground. Their underground accidents were:

	Killed	Injured
Explosions of fire-damp or coal dust.	19	50
Falls of ground.....	383	31,047
Shaft accidents	26	590
Haulage accidents ..	170	17,524
Miscellaneous	84	29,471

"In 1921 only nineteen men were killed by explosion of firedamp and coal dust. Ten deaths were caused by naked lights, five by matches or smoking, one by shot-firing (flame of explosive), one by safety lamp in defective condition and four by miscellaneous and unknown causes. The same difficulty in determining what is a gaseous mine is encountered there as here.

Davy Safety Lamp Scrapped

"The result of permitting the use of mixed light mines is shown by the above table, in which ten of the nineteen explosion fatalities were electric—is much higher than in America. In 1920 there were 924,629 workers undergroud, and of these 635,127 were equipped with flame safety lamps and 245,900 with electric safety lamps, or a total of 881,027 protected with closed lights. The electric lamps is replacing the flame lamp at the rate of about 30,000 per year, and the Davy safety lamp, still looked upon by some mining men in this country as a safe and efficient lamp, is no longer permitted in Great Britain, its native home. There are about 10,000 still in use in this country.

"The first definite regulations covering rescue work were made in 1913, amended in 1914 and extended by general regulation in 1920.

Approved Rescue Apparatus.

"Briefly, the requirements are that all coal mines and all oil shale mines shall have the protection of approved rescue apparatus and trained brigades. Each mine may have its own individual rescue station; the number of brigades is regulated by the number of employes. Or a group of companies may combine to form a central rescue station, the requirements being that the central rescue station must maintain a permanent rescue corps to serve all the mines within a radius of ten miles from the station. The central rescue station idea is a popular one, and the great majority of the mines operate under such protection. This central rescue station idea is worked out to greater advantage in Great Britain than in this country, as there are usually a greater number of mines in a given area, all connected by fine, level roads.

"These central rescue stations are manned with from two to sixteen permanent employes, depending upon the number of brigades which come to the station for training. The stations having sixteen permanent employes are combination rescue and fire stations and are located in the fields where there is considerable trouble with underground fires. In these districts they have found it worth while to have a crew of at least eight men immediately available to answer fire calls. The stations are also equipped to take care of surface fires; this protection makes possible a material reduction in fire insurance premiums.

Fire Hazard Greatest

"There are comparatively few explosions; the majority of the calls on rescue stations are for mine fires, most of which are caused by spontaneous combustion. In some areas this danger of spontaneous fire is so great that a single stick of timber left in the goaf may start a fire, so that all timber must be removed regardless of cost. Underground fires in general are quite different from those in the United States. Active, fierce-burning fires such as occur in our mines, worked on the room and pillar system, are infrequent. Consequently methods of fighting and controlling are different."

Secretary of Postal Clerks Says He Wants to Get into Congress

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — Thomas F. Flaherty, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, who came here 10 years ago from San Francisco to work for legislative measures to help the postal workers, is among the labor men who are candidates for the seat in Congress occupied from 1912 to 1922 by John I. Nolan and now held by Mrs. Nolan.

He proposes that a conference of all candidates be held, with representatives of the entire labor movement of the San Francisco district, to select one of them to make the race against the business candidate. Labor controls the district when it is not divided.

Lawrence Flaherty, head of the Building Trades Council, and James Mullen, editor of the Labor Clarion, are also running.

POLICEMAN TURNS TABLES ON LEGION AT NIAGARA FALLS

Cop They Called Puts Them Out

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NIAGARA FALLS. — Legionaires failed to break up the Lenin Memorial meeting here because of the tact and courage of the chairman who took them on in debate, instead of rough and tumble, and completely routed them. And the cop they called to close the meeting chased them out instead.

The ex-service disrupters, a dozen strong, attended the Hippodrome Hall memorial meeting, which the Workers Party had organized and sat down together, with two secret service men at their sides, whispering advice in their ears. A resolution for the recognition of Soviet Russia brought them into action.

Legionaires Oppose Russ Recognition

When the ex-service men voted against the resolution vociferously, the speaker, Louis Slotkin, thought there might be some misunderstanding, knowing that there were many foreign-speaking Socialists and Communists in the hall, so he called for a count of the vote. This same group voted in the negative again, whereupon they were challenged by the chairman, Peter Hansen, of Buffalo, to give a reason for their opposition. They at first refused, but after Slotkin made a second speech explaining the reasons why the United States should recognize Soviet Russia, a hostile speaker of their number arose and hurled a rapid fire of questions, grounded on the flimsy lies of the capitalist press about the working class government of Russia. The spokesman was evidently quite sincere. He had simply swallowed that bait of the capitalists, hook, line and sinker, and after his questions had warmed him up a bit, he delivered himself of an impassioned speech of appeal to the audience to convince it of the errors of its ways. The audience laughed at him but Slotkin took the questions, one by one, and answered them out of his fund of knowledge of the meaning of Communism, and its beginnings in Russia, so that the Legionaires had not a word of come-back to offer. Their spokesman, in his Henry Dubb-like way, contented himself with invectives about the wrong-doing of the "Reds" in trying to "undermine the government." It was pointed out to him that ex-service men had very little for which to thank a government that had sent them to France to lay down their lives, while at home it permitted Big Business to rob the nation wholesale, and when the soldiers returned, jobless and penniless, had not one cent to spend on a soldiers' bonus.

Out In the Open.

"We are not out to 'undermine' the government," said the chairman, "for we work in the open. But we agree with the Declaration of Independence—a document in whose principles even you 100-per Americans profess to believe—when it says that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of the life, liberty and happiness of men, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute a new government which shall function in its interest. And for my part, I prefer a workers and farmers' government operating in the interests of the great mass of the population, the working class, than a political government corrupt to the core, which serves only the interests of a small group who own everything, and do nothing." The audience applauded.

Cop Chases Disturbers Out.

He was followed by Joseph Sgovio of Buffalo, who took the floor in defense of the resolution to recognize Soviet Russia, but about this time the ex-service men, who had already risen to leave the hall, began passing personal remarks to embarrass the speaker, and a policeman who had been summoned by the Legionaires, dispersed the crowd.

For a wonder, the bluecoat took the part of those holding the meeting, radicals tho they were, and the defenders of capitalist reaction were the first to have their oratory nipped in the bud, and hustled out of the hall.

Pomerene, Trust Tool, Is Coolidge Choice as Prober

(By The Federated Press)

CLEVELAND.—Former Sen. Atlee Pomerene of Ohio, appointed by President Coolidge as special counsel for the investigation of the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills oil lease, is a tool of big business and an enemy of the workers, according to labor spokesmen here.

As the "liberal" lieutenant governor of Ohio in 1910, he secured his election by the state legislature to the senate with professions of love for the common people. Once in the senate, he served the big corporations so well that he was defeated for re-election in the last election, largely by an appeal sent out to the railway workers of the state by the transportation brotherhods urging his defeat because of his anti-labor record and his advocay of the Esch-Cummins law.

In a statement recently filed with trust companies in the country, and the interstate commerce commission, he admitted that he is now the attorney for 15 railroad companies. He is also a director and attorney for one of the largest banking and trust companies in the country, and connected with a host of lesser corporate interests closely enmeshed with the big banking powers.

UNION WITH LONG NAME GETS SHORT PAY FOR MEMBERS

Canadian Pacific Ry. Rejects Wage Demand

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONTREAL. — After having negotiations with the "International Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes" delayed from last October until now, the Canadian Pacific Railway finally admitted its poor white collar slaves a few revisions of certain rules and working conditions, not even granting them the slight general wage increase, originally demanded.

Officials Betray Workers.

It is, however, worth while to observe that the agreement, signed between the management of the Eastern lines of the C. P. R. and the Brotherhood was not reached until the convention of the organization, which was held here recently, gave the newly elected officers a free hand "to bring about such terms as in their opinion seemed justified."

Thus, with sacrifixion of their main requests, they agreed upon minor points as, for instance, overtime payment after the eighth hour instead of after nine hours; changes in rules, including those in connection with the basis of overtime payment for Sunday and holiday work; revision of seniority clauses, etc.

Company Gains Time

The only success for the men, so far, is that the new agreement covers additional staffs and employes who have not been included in previous contracts. But even here matters, as re-classifications of certain positions, wage revisions effecting those positions, etc., have been left for further discussions, the policy followed by the C. R. P. being quite clear as gaining time in delaying negotiations as long as possible.

The Brotherhood, not being a subject to the conciliation board, known as "Board of Adjustment No. 1," the request was made during the process of negotiations by the union to establish a paritatic Board of Appeal, who had to dispose of differences and grievances which should arise out of the new agreement. The company promised consideration of this plan, restraining it by a clause commanding intervention by the government if a mutual understanding should not be achieved.

Clerks, Not Carriers, Affiliate with the Postal International

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — Affiliation of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks with the Postal, Telegraph and Telephone Workers' International Secretariat at Vienna has been announced to the other affiliated members thruout the world, according to a notice received at the Postoffice Clerks' national office here.

The secretariat states that the National Association of Letter Carriers have failed to affiliate, but that another effort to persuade them to do so will be made when President E. J. Gainor visits the British Trade Union Congress next September.

Teamsters On Strike

BELLEVILLE, Ill.—Union teamsters, numbering more than 300, are on strike here for an increase of wages and a reduction of working hours. The strike was called when the employers refused to sign the new agreement. The old scale was 60 to 65 cents an hour, the men working ten hours a day. The new agreement provides a nine-hour day and a pay rate of 70 to 75 cents an hour, with time and a half for overtime. The employers' side was weakened when some of the number broke ranks, settled with the strikers, sending about 75 drivers back to work.

The Daily Worker

Another attempt to publish a daily paper dedicated solely to the working class is being made in Chicago with the launching of The Daily Worker.

The Daily Worker will be the mouthpiece of the Communists in this country and, as such, will not get and does not expect to get any support from any other source than the workers.

The advertising revenue will be nothing, except as it is derived from sources in sympathy with the radical wing of the Labor movement.

Those who have launched this venture, do so with their eyes open and with no illusions. They realize that the success of The Daily Worker depends upon the support it will get from the rank and file.

The rank and file of the Communists and all those who are in sympathy with them must be made to understand that this daily venture will stand or fall according to the financial and moral support that they give it.

Up to the present time, no English speaking class-conscious daily has been able to survive as such. Most of them have sunk. The one or two that have survived have been forced to trim their sails or sink, because of the lack of support from the workers.

The radical workers in this country and especially in Chicago, now have an opportunity to demonstrate their real strength and intelligence.

A lot of noise has been made. The success of The Daily Worker will show whether or not there is anything back of the noise.

Can't Blame Carmen for Defective Cars on Surface Lines

To the DAILY WORKER: It has been my experience during the last few days to witness some of the bad rolling stock that the Chicago Surface Lines have put on the Halsted Street line during this small snowstorm.

Monday night, as I was on my way towards home from work, I was delayed by several hours. One of the cars on Route No. 18—from Halsted-26th to Halsted-Broadway—had left the track and was at right angles to the North-bound and South-bound tracks.

Tuesday night, at the corner of Halsted and 31st St., a south-bound, 111th-Sacramento, car left the tracks and impeded traffic for a number of hours.

Wednesday morning, at the corner of Van Buren and Halsted St., a south-bound car, Route No. 18, car No. 825, left the tracks and again I suffered the humiliating experience of sitting in a poorly-heated car.

In speaking to some of the motormen and conductors on the cars, I learned that the Chicago Surface Lines had placed on many defective cars.

"The motorman should not be blamed for the accidents or delays on any of these lines. The cars are damned rotten, the switches aren't cleaned. We haven't a decent rag to clean our windows with. How in Hell can we avoid accidents?" said one of the motormen.

I believe the DAILY WORKER should conduct an expose of the condition and shape of the rolling stock that the company has placed on the lines where the workers must go to and from work. In the three cases mentioned above I found defective flanges on the wheels of the cars. I have worked for the New York Central and the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroads in their round-houses and know what I am talking about.

The DAILY WORKER should expose the traction company, just as it exposed the Public School System of Chicago.—John Victor Ellis, Chicago.

AUSTRIANS SEAL PACT RECOGNIZING SOVIET RUSSIA

Norway and Italy Are Coming Next

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA. — Austria's recognition of Russia, announced today, indicates a change in the allied front towards the Soviet Republic. The Austrian government is a creature of the League of Nations which dictates its policies. The new Russian diplomatic corps will be installed in the buildings once used by the Russian Imperial embassy. Reports from Roumania indicate an early alliance between that country and Russia.

CHRISTIANA. — Recognition of Russia by Norway is looked for in one or two days. Practically all barriers have been broken down in negotiations between the two governments. The Norwegians have long resented their failure to obtain a suitable share in the Russian trade passing out thru the Baltic.

Mussolini Eager for Treaty

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME.—Italian government and commercial circles are impatiently waiting for the revised text of the Italian-Russian treaty which will come from Moscow. Just as Mussolini had finished drafting a pact with the Soviets Premier Rykov demanded that the treaty should be sent to him for revision.

As prepared by Mussolini the treaty carried substantial oil concessions to Italy and it is believed that the Soviets will pare down Rome's demands in this particular.

Mussolini is anxious to establish relations with Moscow as soon as possible. Russian trade is a necessity to the commercial solvency of Italy and Black Sea wheat is imperatively needed by the peole of this peninsula.

The Fascist chief's hostility to communism which for a long time caused him to resist the economic trend towards Soviet recognition has been overborne by the economic necessities. His eagerness is sharpened by Britain's recognition of Russia.

WORKERS' RULE IS CRUSHED BY A SAXON YELLOW

Socialist Premier Destroys Labor Unions

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

DRESDEN, Saxony. — "Law and order" have been re-established in Saxony, next to the Rhine and Ruhr regions, the most important industrial areas in Germany. Capitalist law and order, of course. We were assured of this again and again during a three-day visit arranged by the Foreign Press Club of Berlin. The Saxon premier, Heldt, a right wing Socialist, Military Commander Mueller, the president of the Saxony Manufacturers' Association, and numerous other men in the industrial and commercial and governmental life of Saxony made it a point to assure us that the last vestiges of the "Zeigner era," when Socialists and Communists formed a coalition government, have disappeared.

C. P. Illegal.

The radical workers' government has been crushed. The Communist party as such is illegal. A new coalition government has been formed, made up of Socialists, Centrists, Democrats, and the Volkspartei, party of big business. The unheard of situation has developed that the Socialist deputies in the state assembly have undertaken to form and sanction this coalition despite the fact that a state party convention a few days previously specificlly instructed them not to do so. They took orders from Berlin, however, from the national executive, in preference to orders from their own rank and file assembled in convention.

At social gatherings—and we were showered with attentions by the hospitable Saxon folk—the uniform was much in evidence, as were also decorations and iron crosses and other insignia of military glory. One felt that these festivities were possible only because they rested upon bayonets.

Yellows Lose Seats

During the last day of our stay municipal elections took place thruout Saxony. Everything was orderly and quiet. The military saw to that. But the result was a total upsetting of the political apple cart. Dresden Socialists, thus far represented by 30 out of the 72 members of the city council, have lost 11 seats—2 to the Communists, 2 to the Independent Socialists, and 1 to the Democrats. The German Nationalists, formerly represented by 30, have lost 7 seats to the Deutschvoelkisch party of extreme nationalists.

In other words, the real winners in the election have been the two parties that have been declared illegal—the Communists and the "Voelkische." One may conjecture what might have been the result had these two parties been able to put their whole propaganda apparatus into play.

In other cities the Socialists lost heavily, while the gain for the Communists was not sufficient to assure a working class majority. All in all, there has been enough of a swing to the right to make possible a non-working class majority in almost every city council in Saxony.

On the surface, therefore, everything seems to be headed in the direction of intrenching an era of capitalist law and order. But the military commander, General Mueller, is not as confident as he seems to be. It so chanced that I was seated opposite him at one of the informal gatherings, and that a Dresden textile manufacturer next to me suggested to him that it was high time he "clean up" the industrial town of Chemnitz.

Fears Propaganda.

"That's a very red nest," the general replied, "and I don't think it would be very wise to quarter our troops there. The contact with the poulation might weaken the discipline in the army."

On another occasion General Meuller admitted that military force, while capable of restoring law and order, is unable to bring peace and bread. At a reception to the foreign newspaper men, General Mueller, after sounding the praises of the troops in establishing a normalcy, declared:

"There remains for me one enemy whom I cannot fight with guns and cannon—it is distress. There is terrible distress thruout Saxony." He then proceeded to give a catalog of facts and figures regarding conditions in Saxony that left no doubt as to the appalling nature of the catastrophe that has overtaken the workers.

Keep Up the Fight

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 6. — New legal steps were discussed today by Mrs. Onezima de Bouchei and her attorneys, following a jury verdict in favor of Asa G. Candler, 72, millionaire, whom she sued for $500,000 for breach of promise. The jury sided with the Coca Cola King after less than a half hour of deliberation.

Movie Heroine Dies.

Lillian Drew, one of the earliest heroines of the movies, died at a local hospital Monday from an overdose of veronal, it was learned last night. News of the former movie star's death was delayed due to the fact she was registered at the hospital as Helen Calvert, her name in private life.

Porto Ricans Fight Absentee Ownership, Need School Funds

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Santiago Iglesias, head of the Free Federation of Workers in Porto Rico, now here with the official commission asking Congress to permit Porto Rico to elect its own governor and make a new constitution, will also ask Congress to provide a loan of $50,000,000 to Porto Rico for a term of 50 years.

"Two-thirds of the wealth produced in our island is sent out to the absentee land-owners," says Iglesias, "and we cannot, under present conditions, maintain a civilized standard of living. Either we must have this help, and rid ourselves of absentee holdings, or we must sink still lower in the scale of misery. We need the money for schools, public health, sanitation, housing improvements, woman and child welfare, and other similar things."

A bill which Iglesias will have introduced in Congress provides for the enforcement of the law of 1900, forbidding absentee ownership of lands, but raising the amount of exemption from 500 to 1,000 acres. It would impose additional and progressive taxation on all lands over 500 acres in extent held by outside interests and corporations. It would empower the Porto Rican legislature to lay double taxes on the property and incomes of non-residents.

The Unionist and Republican party members of the commission have refused to join Iglesias in this measure.

Demand It.

To The DAILY WORKER: The DAILY WORKER is just what the workers need. No further proof is needed than that the New Bedford News Co., 967 Purchase St., New Bedford, refuses to sell it. There is quite a demand for it but in the words of the storekeeper "it is too socialistic. The New York Call was all right but this paper is too red."

New Bedford readers are urged to demand The DAILY WORKER from the New Bedford News Co.

UNTRAINED SCABS ON DOCKS CAUSE FATAL ACCIDENTS

Many Dockers Hurt Since Strike Defeat

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C.—This port is working its record number of ships and the longshore workers, disrupted by the defeat of the recent strike are being mercilessly speeded up without regard to life or limb.

There have been more accidents on the waterfront in the last three months than in practically the whole existence of this place as a deep sea port, which dates back some 20 years. To such an extent have waterfront fatalities increased that the Compensation Board of British Columbia has increased the compensation assessment on longshore workers from 5% to 6% and if the present rate of accidents keeps up there is every indication of a further increase in the rate.

Under the union waterfront the men were able to take such precautions as experience had taught them were necessary for their safety, but now that inexperienced scabs are allowed to work with them they are unable to observe these rules as the scab speeds up regardless of his own safety or that of his fellow workers. No sooner has a sling-load of cargo been raised from the wharf when an empty sling is being filled underneath. The hatch tenders who give the signals to the winch drivers for the lowering or raising of the cargo-sling are in many instances inexperienced and the lives of the men in the hold of the ship are at the mercy of their ignorance.

A short time ago two men were killed outright and two others seriously injured due to the inefficiency of scab hatch tenders who are attempting to place the blame on the stevedore foreman, the only union man engaged on this vessel. This man has been remanded for trial.

Gompers In Panama

Brother Samuel Gompers has wanted to visit the Canal Zone for a long time and the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor gave him the opportunity to do it in an official capacity.

Brother Gompers journeyed to the Canal Zone and made a speech to the assembled government employees. We are certain of some things that were said by Brother Gompers because they were given much approving comment by labor journals which are his staunch supporters. Otherwise we would have picked them as utterances of the unctuous Mr. Hughes, our well-known secretary of state. For the edification of our readers we reproduce one of these Gompersian gems:

> I suggest this thought to you—be well prepared physically to protect the canal against any enemy. The greatest danger is not from without, the greatest menace is that of a discontent within. What is an essential requisite is that the men and women working and living in this Zone shall be so thoroly devoted to the spirit of the canal, the purpose of the canal—not merely its commercial value, but its value as an outpost and protector of our institutions and our civilization and anything and everything that contributes toward the acceleration of that spirit, the exuberance of that spirit should be done to inspire a devotion to these ideals and purposes, making permanent forever and ever the advance of the American ideals of civilization.

We defy anyone to show any difference in thought in this rhetorical Koh-i-Noor from the public pronouncements of Otto Kahn, Elbert H. Gary, Charles Schwab, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge or any of our vociferous imperialists.

Such sentiments are merely our old friend Deutschland ueber Alles, translated into Americanese for more palatable consumption by the populace. In practice they provide a General Wood in the Philippines, a General Smedley Butler in Haiti—the instruments by which is made "permanent forever and ever the advance of the American ideals of civilization."

Millions of bankrupt farmers, child labor, injunctions, soaring prices, unemployment, a Teapot Dome scandal, are sufficient proof that American ideals—which can be nothing else than the ideals of the ruling class—are something that are brought out for those special occasions when a great skepticism is abroad in the land and the rulers feel a little uneasy.

It is no accident that Samuel Gompers at such a time voices the catch-phrases of American imperialism in one of its most important outposts.

Profits and Human Life

Forty-three miners were trapped and drowned when the bottom fell out of a pond and flooded a mine in Crosby, Minnesota, adding another tragedy to the many resulting from criminal negligence of American mine owners and of the government, whose duty it is to see that the necessary precautions are taken to safeguard the lives of the workers.

Under the profit system hundreds of thousands are needlessly sacrificed every year to Mammon. The capitalists care little for the lives of workers who roll up their profits. The wage-slave does not cost the employer anything in the form of an investment. The worker comes to the boss and offers his labor-power for sale. The boss purchases it and at the end of the day or the week pays back that slave in wages a portion of the value he created for his master. This enables the slave to go to the nearest hot-dog emporium and secure some fodder that will give him back some of the energy he expended in enriching the boss. If the slave swallows a pup's tooth or a cat's claw, treacherously hidden under the skin of a frankfort and goes to the happy hunting ground, five or six perfectly sound wage-slaves will be fighting for the job he left after him on the following day.

Wage-slaves being cheap the boss does not feel much concern over their tenure of life or the conditions under which they work, unless forced to do so by the organized power of the workers. He resists to the last any effort on the part of the workers to make their wishes count in the manner of their employment. He calls it "interfering with his right to run his property as he sees fit." In his opinion the workers should have nothing at all to say as to how they should be employed. Wherever the workers are not organized their wages are lower and their work performed under greater hazard than where they are organized. Even where unions are recognized conditions are [illegible]d enough.

In Crosby, Minn., the men had no union. While in that section last summer the writer investigated the conditions under which the miners worked and found them deplorable. They were completely at the mercy of the boss. Any miner who showed a desire to form a union, if discovered, was summarily discharged. We now see the result. The miners without organization were not able to compel the employer to protect them against the danger which rested overhead and the inevitable happened.

There may be another investigation. Somebody wlil be blamed and the incident will be soon forgotten. But so long as the capitalist system exists human life—that of the workers—will be held cheap, because the capitalist system is concerned alone with profit. The workers must organize in order to protect their lives now against the criminal greed of the bosses and to ultimately abolish the capitalist system and establish workers' rule in its stead.

A Slimy Turncoat

One of the slickest political vaudeville artists now doing big time on the Gompers circuit, is John L. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor and former socialist and farmer laborite. For long a believer in independent working class political action he had the honor and esteem of the class conscious workers of the state of Illinois and of thousands thruout the country who looked on him as one of those who would bring the labor movement out of the political quicksands into which the fatal policy of Samuel Gompers has led it.

But Walker's conversion is now complete. No reformed roue, has ever thumped his craw in repentance for his past sins with more mock sincerity than his political pulpit pounder who now wears sack cloth and ashes for the sin of having ever aided and abetted in inducing the wage slaves to rise to their feet, stand erect and tell the political parties of capitalism to go to hell.

At the last meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Walker bleated loud and long, and the burden of his effort was that the workers should vote for the best man no matter on what ticket he ran, ad nauseam. John Fitzpatrick, one of the parents of the Farmer-Labor movemet, sat silently by while his political baby was being assassinated.

The only vigorous defenders of the labor party movement today are the communists. The workers will soon learn that shysters like Walker have given up the fight, not because they have changed their opinions, but because they have followed the line of least resistance into the camp of the capitalists and their labor lieutenants. The labor party movement is marching on and the ranting of turncoats of the Walker type will not stop it.

Barometer of Politics

It's an old story that there is a mighty close connection between the ballot box and the balance sheet. The energetic campaigns waged by our legislative wizards prove that. But the most eloquent proof of the unity of the Stock Exchange and the White House is afforded by several angles of the Teapot Dome Steal:

When Fall was negotiating the deal with his generous friend, Harry Sinclair, the Harding administration and its millionaire cabinet were in their glory. The Stock Exchange was a most accurate barometer of the progress of the negotiations and reflected the politics of the affair very vividly.

In checking up the transactions in Sinclair Oil stocks on the New York Exchange between January 1st, 1922, and April 18th of that year, one finds that the 4,491,000 shares of capital common stock outstanding in this period increased about $16 a piece or a total of about $71,000,000. The lease was drawn up in Sinclair's New York office on April 3rd and signed in Washington on April 7th, 1922. On April 18th, the Department of Interior publicly admitted that the lease was consummated. An analysis shows that between these two dates the Sinclair stock advanced about nine points or about $40,000,000 for the entire capital stock.

While the secret negotiations were going on, trading in Sinclair Oil stock was unsteady and moderate. Once the lease was signed Sinclair shares were at a premium on the Exchange. An examination of the New York Stock Exchange records discloses the most instructive information on this point. In January, 1923, only 193,800 shares changed hands; but in April the total sales reached the dizzy height of 1,203,800. This high point was 25 per cent above the total capitalization of the company. From April 1st to June 1st of 1922, the shares rose from $24 to $38.75 a piece.

These cold figures may yet tell a hot story of the dealings of many prominent Congressmen, Senators and Cabinet officers. Of course, there is a likelihood that many of our Washington heroes had their friends, office boys and other unknown people buy Sinclair stock for them in order to avoid detection in a possible investigation. This is an old trick. But the above figures alone are irrefutable evidence that the Stock Exchange is the best barometer of our national politics today.

The recognition of Soviet Russia by the Labor Party government of Great Britain will undoubtedly be taken by Brother Gompers as additional proof of the unmitigated evil of independent working class political action.

"To Make Mexico Civilized"

By CONRAD LUIS GRASS
(A Veteran of the Spanish-American War)

THE menace of United States intervention in Mexico is close, very close.

And this intervention is not aimed solely at Mexico, but has the other aim, of distracting the workers of this country and keeping them befuddled concerning their own welfare and interest.

Our government's intervention in the Philippines reeks of blood, murder, torture, rape, treachery, and all the crimes the Kaiser and his clique of militarists were accused of by our respectable financeers, war mongers and gullible citizens. The intervention in the Philippines has almost evaporated from the minds of the American people, and those who are planning to garrison the Mexican republic with American soldiers, would rather let it evaporate entirely.

Let us read some of the pages which tell of that imperialist adventure in the Philippines. Here is the testimony of Richard O'Brien, formerly of Company M., 26th Volunteers:

"It was the 27th of December, 1901, the anniversary of my birth and I shall never forget the scenes I witnessed that day as long as I live and even beyond, into eternity.

"As we approached the town, the word was passed along the line that there would be no prisoners taken. We were told to shoot every living thing in sight.

"The noise of our firing brought the villagers of their doors. They made no hostile move, they had no weapons in their hands, they made no offensive show, but they were shot down like so many dogs.

"We used dum-dum bullets. They are split at the nose and when they come in contact with anything, they flatten out and wherever a Filipino was hit, you could shove your fist thru the wound.

"A mother with her babe at her side, pleaded for mercy. She stood in the doorway of her burning home which was fired. It was sure death to come out, it was sure death to remain.

"She faced the flames and entered that burning house with her children and, not a hand of 'our boys in blue' was raised to save her. The flames enveloped her and her babies, consumed them and turned them into a charred mass. She feared the soldiers in blue more than she did the devouring flames.

"For twenty miles around that section and district, the order was to devastate, destroy and kill every man, woman and child; and it was done.

"The commander of that district boasted of it and the words, 'and it was done' are his."

How human and gallant!

Sergeant Edward and Private Wier go on record and narrate that in April, 1909, they were ordered by the commanding officer, Lieutenant Arnold, to torture the prisoners:

"We placed the prisoners on their backs and poured ice water down their throat until the body is so distended to cause great suffering, which is intensified by the fear of the victims that their stomach will burst. Pressure then is applied to the pit of the stomach until the water is forced out and expelled thru the mouth, then more water is forced down.

"The victims either give up the desired information or die."

These massacres, these murders, these human beings tortured to death, were done for military purposes by "our boys in blue" and the army of occupation, to get information, or guns from the Filipinos. These atrocities were excused by the executives then in office, and countenanced by the United States senate who made the bluff to investigate and punish the guilty.

Perhaps the Mexicans will resent our gentle method of civilization and perhaps they are not as docile as the Filipinos and maybe they have civilization methods more horrible then we used in the Philippines.

They, the executive of this, my country are still civilizing the Philippines. There are nasty reports about Governor Wood, that he carries affairs with arrogant and despotic hand. This is being hushed and the word has gone out to "soft-pedal it."

The Filipinos were promised independence long, long ago. It is still a promise.

But the Mexican, the soldiers in the field, who are but the citizens, will not be fooled by the extended velvet paw of the United States capitalists. They saw that paw turned into a mailed fist in the Philippines and they, the Mexicans are wary.

These editors who prate intervention, know that it will take 500,000 American soldiers to subjugate the Mexican.

They term it Intervention, these gentlemen of the associated press, but they mean—war! bloody war!

They mouth, beautiful phrases for "humanity's sake," knowing that the sword will spill innocent blood, not only of the Mexican, but the gullible American youth, who will be tricked in the fray, that it will be a great adventure.

The Mexican is determined to be free, independent and work out his own salvation. In that determination, he is ready to give up his life.

When the invaders again plant their feet on Mexican soil, they will meet a united front, revolutionists and Federals will appear and all that the invaders will meet will be, the united forces of the Mexican people who will fight to the last man for their Independence and Freedom.

The Bloody Regime in Bulgaria

A GOOD picture can be formed of the unspeakable atrocities against revolting workers and peasants committed by the Fascist Tsankoff government in Bulgaria, from letters sent to Bulgarian workers living in this country.

One letter reads: "You know already that on the 9th day of June, 1923, thru a coup d'etat of the military clique and the mercenary Macedonians, the government fell into the hands of the bankrupt capitalist parties which in the past, thru their nationalist policies, ruined the Bulgarian nation and burdened the people with heavy and impossible taxes and reparation debts. The same marauders put the Bulgarian people in an unspeakable condition, they forced them to live in the mountains, filled up the prisons and created military courts to prosecute and persecute them, believing that, by this means, they can destroy the Bulgarian National Peasants' Federation—a powerful national unit which has under its flag one-half of the Bulgarian people—and, after that, undertook to destroy the Communist Party by mass arrests of all their most prominent members and by killing others without warning, all of which started on September 12, 1923, at 6 p. m.

"This action of the government deeply provoked the Bulgarian people, and it forced the peasants and the Communists into revolt. On September 12, 1923, the Communist press was suppressed, the party's property confiscated. General freedom of the press had ceased to exist on June 9, 1923, and together with it also freedom of speech, organization and assemblage. All these rights of the people had been suppressed. The people from the villages and the cities revolted, but the government, with volunteers—Macedonian irregulars, some traitors, supporters of reaction and corruption in Bulgaria—together with General Wrangel's bandits, armed with cannons, machine guns and modern war equipment, met us in the battleleld, and we were defeated. Many of us were saved by crossing the boundary line into Serbia. But what happened the next day? Terror, murder, pillaging and bloodshed! They got all that were left alive in our village; took eleven of them and shot them without trial. The next day, in the same way, they shot twelve men. In the same way, in the village of Sotochino, they killed sixteen men. Bulgaria is a real hell now."

And this is from another letter: "In the City of Lom and the districts of Ferdinand and Bercovica, more than 3,000 people were executed without trial. Many villages were wiped out. With machine guns they are shooting people in the villages in groups of 40 to 50, people from 15 to 60 years of age. Some of them were burned alive, as in the case of the revolutionist Kuncheff, from the village of Jelezna, district of Bercovica; others were skinned alive, as in the case of the teacher, Bobanoff, from the village of Provala, district of Ferdinand; some were beheaded with saws, as in the case of the member of our parliament, Goron Botota, from the village of Ljuta, district of Ferdinand. But the City of Lom has the highest record of all this vandalism. Lom is the grave of the revolution. More than 2,000 people were packed on a barge and hauled into the middle of the River Danube and thrown into the water, and there was a committee of military and civil representatives who pulled them out in groups of ten persons, and then shot them with machine guns and threw them back into the river."

Hold Workers as Hostages in Arkansas

THE latest way by which the government coerces workingmen is by keeping a number of them hostages. Gov. Thomas C. McRae, of Arkansas, granted "furloughs" to Vurlen Orr and Luther Wise, railway strikers serving terms in the Arkansas state penitentiary for alleged sabotage, but the two men released on "furlough" will not get full pardons unless the terms of an agreement reached between striking shopmen and the Missouri and Northern Arkansas Railroad are kept by the union.

This means that their freedom has been made dependent on the carrying out of a strike agreement. And if the agreement is not adhered to Governor McRae would then jail two innocent men. This means that a governor has been given the right to barter with the freedom of human beings to force settlement of a strike.

Orr and Wise are innocent of the action charged against them. The reason they pleaded guilty was because a mob—the same mob which had lynched E. C. Gregor the night before—was waiting outside the courthouse. Their sentences of 7 to 10 years was not cut short by Governor McRae because the governor has made himself virtually an agent of the railroad by condoning for months a shocking state of violence because it was organized in the railroad's interest.

New York Is Shellshocked

By J. O. BENTALL.

AFTER the scare headlines in the daily papers here, over the story of a Bolshevik revolution and a new Wall Street Red Plot, we settled down to the usual humdrum of daily toil and struggle. We figured that, for some time to come, we might be let alone to have our nerves rested a bit.

But, no.

The entire police department and the whole army of secret service men are still popping up everywhere and stare at each other like shellshocked soldiers of the Argonne.

All because one night several weeks ago the Junior Section of the Young Workers' League let one of its members go home after a meeting with some revolutionary literature in his pockets.

It was a boy, and he was 11 years old. He had taken part in a dramatic production at the meeting and now, at 11 o'clock, he was on his way home. The police spied him. Stopped him. Who are you? Where did you come from? Where are you going? What have you in your pockets? What have you in your head?

All these questions come as a result of a bearing that indicated that the boy was not worried about anything the police wanted to know, and because he had replied he had more dangerous stuff in his that he had more dangerous stuff in his head than in his pockets.

Then it was that the whistle blew for more police. Three burly cops came—all puffing and scared as jackrabbits.

They made a thoro search of the prisoner. Horrors! See what he has! A copy of "The Red Flag" and one of "The International." Also a membership card in the Junior section of the Young Workers' League. More horrors!

A call for the patrol. Get him to the Tombs. Quick. Now we know that he is dangerous, a hardened criminal. Five cops guarded the fellow so he might not make his get-away.

He was landed in the hole and kept there all night. A "dick" stayed with him all the time. He asked all sorts of questions and got as fine answers as he never expected. The trouble with the affair was that the cop was just about a normal Bolshevik by the following morning.

Then the judge said:

"Why were you out so late in the night?"

"Why don't you worry about the children in the factories who have to work all night?" came the pert reply from the youngster.

"Are you not thankful that you live in such a grand and glorious country?" asked the judge. "As far as I know, there is no such a thing as the land of the free and the home of the brave anywhere near this old town," argued the young fellow.

This lad of 11, Leo Granoff by name, got into a very deep dispute with the judge—much too deep for the puzzled judge. The child talked about the repeal of the child labor law by the Supreme Court, and wanted to know who was to protect the kids when the courts wouldn't. Which the judge could not answer.

The judge tried to show how every boy could become a millionaire, if he only let the Bolshevik idea alone and worked faithfully for a good boss. To which Leo shot the final shot: "Well, when I get to be a millionaire, I will buy you a pair of skates." And everybody in the court room agreed that they would enjoy to see the skids put under the old judge.

At a Liebknecht memorial meeting, Leo was the star orator, and made a great speech. This young rebel is an example of the Junior Section, membership which promises some opposition to the present system, all right. As a result, Leo needs never to go home alone any more, for three to six policemen are always on his trail. And will be until the workers put the skids under the whole cowardly system.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

The World's Greatest Liar alias the Chicago Tribune during the intervals between its campaigns for an invasion of Mexico and the featuring of salacious clerical scandals, features yarns about Soviet Russia furnished by one of its paid liars stationed at Riga. This prevaricator is particularly angry these days because of the refusal of the Soviet embassy at Berlin to vise the passport of the Tribune correspondent unless he gave a guarantee that he would not act the part of a stool pigeon as his predecessor had done. Unwilling to give such a written statement he was refused admittance.

• • • •

The Tribune in a great spasm of frankness declared that the Tribune correspondent refused to go to Russia unless he was granted freedom to write the truth. As a matter of fact the correspondent of the Chicago Daily News in a statement to his paper when another Tribune correspondent was kicked out of Russia declared that the Soviet authorities allowed him the fullest freedom in writing and sending his despatches, a privilege he used to the fullest extent. The Tribune correspondent was expelled because he acted as paid liar of the enemies of Soviet Russia.

• • • •

In connection with this it is pertinent to call attention to the fact that France was and is conducting anti-Soviet propaganda and also has formed a ring of enemies around the Russian republic. The French government pays its agents with money and honors and Paul Williams, one of the European correspondents of the Tribune, was given the much coveted decoration of the Legion of Honor in return for his French propaganda.

• • • •

In yesterday's issue the Chicago Tribune carried a six column head entitled "Russian Army in Revolt; Moscow Threatened." The dispatch carries a London date line in order to give it more authority and is signed by John Steele. But the yarn emanated from Riga and was conceived in the mental cess pool of the London Daily Mail's Riga correspondent. That city has been exposed so often as a rendezvous for journalistic prostitutes that the Tribune changed the date line to London.

• • • •

Now about the "revolt!" The Red Army that is planning to seize Moscow is biding its time until the spring thaw sets in and will march on the city early in April, perhaps on April Fools' day. The Soviet government is rushing "Tartar and Mongolian" hordes toward Moscow in preparation for the grand revolt. Czarist officers have almost gained control of the Red Army. The rebellious troops are preparing for a campaign of slaughtering Jews, risings are planned in Kronstad. And so on ad nauseum.

• • • •

The Tribune does not expect any intelligent person to believe this bunk. It is published for the benefit of these readers who never dig below the headline and also as balm for the wounded feelings of the rabid anti-Soviet elements who are grinding their teeth with rage over the recognition of Russia by the British government. Let them lie and rage. The product of the superheated imaginations of underworld characters and unemployed stool pigeons will not convince the working class that the Soviet Republic of Russia which has successfully battled against the capitalist class of the world and beat them to a standstill will now surrender their liberties into the hands of the degenerate human wreckage which has escaped the fate of the Czar and now floats on the troubled political waters of Europe like sewage from a sunken ship.

• • • •

"Organized labor in America is getting wiser," says Scrutator in the February 6, issue of the Chicago Tribune, "when an organization containing such untamed and unassimilated elements as the miners' union can come to a realization that labor's pay is limited by what the traffic will bear." John L. Lewis endeared himself to every enemy of the working class when at the Indianapolis convention he crusaded against the militant elements in the miners' union who thought more of the welfare of the union members than of the employers. So long as our labor leaders think of the interests of the employers first and those of the workers last they will receive the plaudits of the press agents of capitalism. Is not the support of Lewis by the capitalist press the best possible evidence in support of the charges made against him by the communists? Daniel O'Connel, the great Irish orator, once said that when he was complimented by the British government he went home that evening and examined his conscience. If John L. Lewis followed O'Connel's example he would be continually examining what passes with him for a conscience.

• • • •

William Gibbs McAdoo, once the Crown Prince of Woodrow Wilson, is now an empty political oil can. Not because he committed any serious crime under the capitalist system, but because he got so much money for being Wilson's son-in-law that the other disappointed suitors got jealous and went after his scalp. Doheny paid him $250,000 for being Miss Wilson's husband and what other emoluments came his way have not yet reached the public ear. The American voters show no mercy to a politician who is discovered in the act of receiving money for assisting a helpless trust in distress.

Wilson Bared As Backer of Ruhr Invasion; Oil Scandal Has Rival in Treasury Exposure

NEW EXPOSE HITS LOOTING OF TREASURY

Gigantic Liberty Bond Frauds Stuns Even Washington

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—A gigantic bond fraud involving high government and treasury officials threw Washington into another fit of political delirium tremens when Charles B. Brewer, special assistant attorney-general, uncovered evidence of duplication of liberty bonds unning into millions of dollars.

"Where will the graft orgy stop it? is the question now asked in the hotel lobbies at Washington. Almost the entire Coolidge cabinet is involved already in the War Veteran's Bureau and Teapot Dome scandals. Now the probers have reached the treasury.

Consternation reigns in official circles. Nobody knows where the next bomb is going to fall.

Evidence of a duplication of Liberty bonds was examined by a congressional committee yesterday. The committee will decide:

1.—Whether Brewer's evidence should be presented to a grand jury at once, or

2.—Whether a congressional investigation will precede court action.

Those who have followed Brewer's investigation for more than a year opposed to a Congressional investigation. They say it is more likely to end in a white wash and a covering-up process than getting at the facts. A close guard is kept on the treasury vaults where the evidence is stored.

Senator King, after a preliminary inspection of the evidence presented by Brewer declared that he was convinced there was something rotten in the treasury and the bureau of printing and engraving. He favored immediate grand jury action, else the constant flow of corruption in Washington would sap the confidence of the people of this country in the government.

Demand Mellon Reveal Facts.

Demand that Secretary Mellon reveal facts on duplication of millions dollars worth of government bonds was made in the House today by Representative La Guardia of New York.

La Guardia, who yesterday examined the spurious bonds collected by Charles B. Brewer, Department of Justice investigator, introduced two resolutions designed to force Secretary Mellon to reveal the alleged duplicate bonds to Congress.

The resolutions called on Mellon to report to the House the number, amount and serial numbers of all government bonds and treasury certificates issued since 1917 and the number of bonds redeemed and destroyed.

This information, La Guardia intends to check against the evidence collected by Brewer. Brewer's evidence is now in the hands of Representative King, Illinois.

WIDOWS STAY AT FLOODED GRAVE OF IRON WORKERS

Survivors in Disaster Suffer in Bitter Cold

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CROSBY, Minn.—While the pumps which have been working ever since the Milford mine was flooded, when the bottom of Foley lake dropped into the mine were keeping up their steady pumping to drain the flooded galleries, the wives and families of the miners who were killed kept a vigil in the next shafthead. Thirty-four widows and more than 100 orphans have been standing at the mine head waiting.

They are keeping a hopeless watch. It is estimated that it will take at least three weeks for the two electric pumps, which are at work to pump the mine dry and transfer the water almost a mile to another lake.

But nothing can convince the wives of the men who were killed to leave the scene of the disaster. The women stand silent except when they must hush the cries of the children.

Keep Vigil In Cold.

A driving north wind and a blinding sleet snow clouded the bare hills near the Milford mine. The mercury is below zero but the women and children continue to stand and watch the water being pumped from the mine.

The homes of the miners are as cheerless and bare as the cold hills. Many of them have little food and less coal. The homes are mere shanties covered with tar paper.

The men who tend the pumps work in short shifts because of the bitter cold. When they pass the women who stand at the shaft house they ask them to go to their homes, but are greeted with silence. The seven men who escaped death in the mine are the hardest workers at the pumps.

Gave Life For Fellows.

They remember the heroic action of Clinton Harris, shipman of the mine, who was working on the lowest level of the mine when the flood broke. He stood at his post sounding the bell which warned the others of danger and called to them to run till the slime and water had engulfed him. Everybody "on the range" is talking today of but one thing—the heroism of Harris, when they talk at all.

When representatives of the mining company, who operate the mine, went among the families of the miners who were killed and assured them that they would be taken care of financially by the state workmen's compensation law, they turned away with out a word, the bitterness they felt plainly visible on their faces.

For the most part, the families of the dead will have to depend on charity for food and coal. The slim wages of the iron miners did not permit any saving.

No Sleep Since Disaster

Mrs. Valentine Cole, whose husband was one of the miners killed, is typical of how the families of the men killed were affected. Mrs. Cole sits with her seven months old baby on her lap, and her four year old son standing beside her. She sits and moans and rocks her body back and forth. She has not slept since the disaster. She goes to the little two-room shanty that is her home and prepares food for her two children. Then she comes back to the shafthead and sits. At night she puts the children to bed and comes to sit and wait.

Carl Ravord, 14, was made an orphan when his father was killed in the mine. His mother has been dead more than ten years. He wanders about on the mine workings with a set face, saying an occasional word to the men working the pumps, and asking the women who stand at the shafthead to go home. Carl's uncle, Gasper Revord, was also drowned.

HERE IS STATEMENT OF LLOYD GEORGE THAT STARTED THE STORM

Here is the statement made by Lloyd George in an interview which has aroused statesmen in England, France and the United States:

"There was the proposal for 15 years military occupation of the Rhine frontier by the allies. I was opposed to it. I was called away to London. When I returned I found that Wilson had surrendered to Clemenceau and thus the French gained that right to occupy the Rhine country. I have only quite recently discovered that during my absence in London, Clemenceau and Wilson signed a secret compact on this question."

DENBY'S PICNIC SPOILED

WASHINGTON.—The Teapot Dome scandal has called off Secretary of the Navy Denby's proposed trip to Cuba to watch fleet maneuvers.

A large company of American newspaper editors, invited by Denby to be his guests on the trip, will sail Sunday from Charleston, S. C., without their host.

Denby's office announced he had decided to remain in Washington because of the Senate investigation. The editors will be gone three weeks.

"BIG THREE" SECRET PACT STIRS WORLD

Wilson, Lloyd George Agreed to Ruhr Drive

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON.—A tremendous furor swept the British Isles and the continent today, on the heels of a charge by ex-premier Lloyd George that Woodrow Wilson and Clemenceau, during peace conference days, fixed up a secret pact behind his back whereby the American president agreed to occupation of the Rhineland by French troops for 15 years.

A sensation such as the Teapot Dome oil scandal created in the United States involved one after another of the prominent figures, who helped make the Versailles treaty.

Busy As Bee-Hives

The French and British foreign offices were busy as beehives; the former issued a flat denial of Lloyd George's charge; the latter put the matter up to the former prime minister for further explanation.

From Paris came an interview with "The Tiger," Clemenceau, denying Llody George's assertion; Andre Tardieu, who played a prominent part in peace conference proceedings, did not know of the pact.

The British press today printed at length everything Washington, New York, Paris and London had to say in conection with the alleged secret pact.

Meanwhile Lloyd George was pressed to produce the pact, or at least to answer the indignant denial of the French foreign office. He promised a statement later today.

What happened, in a nut shell, was this:

The French foreign offiice intends to publish a series of "yellow book," dealing with the making of the Peace of Versailles and sent Great Britain proofs, asking permission to publish them. These were sent on to Lloyd George, "out of courtesy, because in conjunction with President Wilson and Premier Clemenceau, he had been concerned in a discussion of the matter."

The "Yellow Book," presumably was to be France's apologia for occupation of the Rhineland and Ruhr. It was to show that Wilson and Lloyd George agreed.

Whether or not this is what the "Yellow Book" proofs contained, Lloyd George, upon receiving them, coincident with the death of Wilson, stated to newspaper correspondents that the secret pact agreeing to ocupation of the Rhine had been made while he was away from Paris.

The British foreign office has asked Lloyd George to reply to the French denials of his charge and announced it will probably get consent of the MacDonald government to publication of the "Yellow Book."

* * * *

Clemenceau Denies Story

PARIS.—Bristling savagely one minute, gruffly good-natured the next, Georges Clemenceau gave the lie direct to a statement credited to Lloyd George in an interview in the London Chronicle to the effect that "The Tiger" and Woodrow Wilson signed a secret pact during Versailles days.

"I never signed a secret treaty with anybody. I cannot understand Lloyd George's object is saying so," Clemenceau growled.

* * * *

Hunt In Wilson's Files.

Woodrow Wilson's private files may yield up an answer to the controversy now raging between London and Paris over Lloyd George's charge that Wilson and Clemenceau arranged a secret pact on the Rhineland occupation, while Lloyd George's back was turned.

What will now be done with those letters depends upon Mrs. Wilson's wishes. No decision will be reached for the present, it was indicated today.

Ford Needs 2,000,000 Tons Steel.

DETROIT, Mich.—Henry Ford will need 2,000,000 tons of steel in 1924, it is estimated by his statisticians, if the proposed schedule of 10,000 cars a day is carried thru. This means that the Ford factories will consume about 5 per cent of the total steel production of the United States, during the coming year.

Work Daily for "The Daily!"

"The Big Three"—Liars

Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau—Betrayers of the Peace.

NOT the death of Woodrow Wilson, but the intended publication by the French government of a "Yellow Book" is responsible for the flood of charges, counter-charges and denials by capitalism's statesmen that now fill the press of the world and give additional insight into the workings of the international system of oppression and plunder.

The French government intended to show by documentary evidence that both Lloyd George and Woodrow Wilson agreed to the military guarantees for the payment of reparations that resulted in the occupation of the Ruhr and Rhineland, that disrupted the industrial and financial machinery of the capitalist world and that brought unimaginable misery, disease and starvation to millions of men, women and children in and out of Germany long after the war was ended and a peace treaty signed.

* * * *

Lloyd George has denounced the Ruhr invasion. He toured the United States to arouse sentiment against it and he made it an issue in the election campaign just fought in Great Britain.

Woodrow Wilson, the apostle of "a peace of understanding and not of vengeance," who posed as a friend of the German people, is now seen to have been not, as many thought, a weak opponent of French capitalism's bloody program, but one of the sponsors of that program.

We care not at all whether Woodrow Wilson and Clemenceau hatched this devilish scheme without consulting the slimy little spokesman of British imperialism; we do not care by what back-stairs maneuvering and bed-room diplomacy the plan of murdering untold numbers of workingmen and women and their children was brought into being so that the patriots of the stock markets and the exchanges could collect their interest and dividends.

We are not interested in knowing whether Lloyd George or his secretary were present when the lives of millions of workers and their children were weighed against the fortunes of the class that made the war but did not fight it. Nor are we interested in knowing whether the three men, Clemenceau, Wilson and Lloyd George, representing the great capitalist powers, had breakfasted well that morning and appeared with smiling faces and a white carnation in the buttonholes of their frock-coats.

* * * *

What we are interested in knowing, and it is well for the masses in England and America to know, is that during and for a long time after the war, they had at the head of their governments men who posed as humanitarian liberals, who denounced the bloodthirstyness of Clemenceau, who appealed to the peoples of the world in the name of justice and brotherhood, who stood forth as the champions of oppressed nationalities and who all the time were arranging, consulting upon and agreeing to a program of mass starvation and murder, enforced by bayonets and machine-guns, without parallel in the world's bloody history.

What was the object of this program, providing for the invasion and occupation of a conquered country which had acknowledged its defeat, overthrown the monarchy which had driven them to the shambles and set up the kind of government which the Wilsons and Lloyd Georges favored?

Its sole object, after the amount of reparations had been set at an impossible figure, the German people disarmed and back at work, was to enslave them to the Franco-German industrialists and financiers, to make them work at the point of the bayonet for the rest of their lives for their own and foreign masters.

Conceived in infamy, this scheme has all but brought France and England to bankruptcy, in the United States has ruined hundreds of thousands of farmers by demoralizing currency system and destroying markets.

Woodrow Wilson is dead and every effort is being made to enshrine him in the national sanctuary; Clemenceau and Lloyd George still live to curse their countries, but no maudlin regard for the memory of the dead or respect for the living should prevent the workers and farmers of the world from learning the lessons taught by the controversial deluge that floods the embassies of capitalist government the world over as one cornered diplomat tries to clear his skirts by laying the blame on a dead man and another, just as guilty, but more honest, involves both the dead and the living in the responsibility for the plot against the workers of all the world.

* * * *

The Teapot Dome scandal shows us our rulers participating in an outright theft of the nation's wealth. The governmental machinery of capitalism no longer works smoothly at home and the masses get a peep at their rulers without their robes of state.

The governmental machinery of capitalism no longer works smoothly in international affairs and the masses have an opportunity of seeing how their rulers have, as a political gesture—a "compromise," if you please—sold into slavery millions of workers and farmers of other lands while at home they voiced noble sentiments and called upon God to testify to their utter righteousness.

Let the good work go on. It began when the halo of divine right was torn from the brow of a king and the rising capitalist class came into its own.

It will end when, tired of the exploitation and wars carried on under the pretense of doing the people's will, fooled no longer by the lies of capitalism's hypocritical spokesmen, the working class dethrones its present rulers and puts them to work.

If they won't work—

"You talk too much and tell too many lies," said Friar T to the monk, "therefore, go and swim"

Mexican Huertista Troops Quit Puerto Mexico, Important Center

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 7.—It was learned from a reliable source this afternoon that the Mexican Huertista Fascisti troops are rapidly evacuating Puerto Mexico.

This is one of the most important strategic points in the territory recently occupied by the revolutionists and its evacuation is interpreted here as further evidence of the complete collapse of the Huertista counter-revolution

M. POINCARE SEES DEFEAT ON TAX BILL

Holds Power Only by Use of Trickery

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS.—Premier Poincare remains in office today solely by virtue of a technicality and without the support of the majority of the deputies.

In a session of the chamber, the most stormy in recent years, Premier Poincare, after the debate on his new taxation bill, was saved by the fact that signers of the petition for a public vote on the question refrained from voting and thus left a quorum.

M. Poincare received 253 votes for his measure, the smallest number since he took the premiership two years ago. The whole left block in the chamber, 220 deputies, refrained from voting with the hope that a quorum would not be had. The leaders of the center parties, including Louis Loucheur, Andre Tardieu, Aristide Briand, the Marquis de Chambrun and M. Koltz voted against the government.

The fact that the rules of the chamber require that fifty signers of the petition must vote and automatically make a quorum is all that stands between Poincare and defeat.

Had all the deputies voted the premier would have had a majority of from three to five votes—a margin so small that his resignation would have been necessary.

The measure which passed by the technicality gives the government the right to institute certain economies and financial reforms by decree without appealing to the chamber of deputies.

There are 10 more clauses to be passed upon and after what was to all intents and purposes a defeat it is doubtful if Poincare will be able to secure approval for them.

The belief is growing here and has been immensely strengthened by the recent narrow escape of Poincare that his ship of state is due to founder soon upon the rock of the taxation question.

Kilts Will Whirl, War Pipes Shirl, at Scotch Ball

"Did you ever see a Scotchman without kilts?" asked our inquiring reporter.

"Thank the Lord, no," I replied, being of a very modest and retiring disposition, if you wish to put it that way. "I have seen them with kilts and camouflaged in more modern styles of haberdashery but my curiosity never prompted me to get beyond that."

"Oh, you somewhat exaggerated what I am trying to get to your comprehension," retorted our inquiring reporter, who is somewhat of a highbrow along with being inquisitive. "What I want to drive home is, that a Scotchman in his kilts and in something else are two entirely different propositions."

"Go ahead," I declared, being somewhat puzzled.

"Now, listen. A Scotch friend of mine, a carpenter by trade—never mind his name, invited me last year to a concert and dance given by his union. Such a night of fun I never enjoyed. Without the aid of even the tiniest morsel of liquid Scotch I laughed as never Harry Lauder giggled at his own jokes.

"The title of the affair was 'A Night in Scotland.' I left wishing that I could spend my lifetime there. Topping the list of entertainers was the Chicago Highlanders' Pipe Band. How they could play! Then came the pupils of the Minnie Dalgleish school of dancing and the Scottish entertainers. They danced Irish jigs, Scotch reels and sword dances and English clog dances. It was one exciting night."

Again this year the same friend accosted me somewhat abruptly and asked, "How would you like another night in Scotland?" "Lead me to it," I replied. Whereupon he sold me two tickets to a concert, which will be held in Wicker Park Hall, 2040 North Ave., tonight at 8 in behalf of the Progressive Building Trades Worker.

Juggling Muscle Shoals.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The entire Muscle Shoals project would be turned over to a special governmental corporation, termed the Federal Chemical Corporation, by a bill introduced in the senate by Senator Norris, Nebraska, today. Under the terms of the bill the government would complete the construction of dams one and two. The corporation would take over the nitrate plants and the dams and sell fertilizer and power.

U. S. Senator Couzens Shows Mellon, Treasury Head, Is Corporation Tool

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—Charging Secretary of the Treasury Mellon with "playing directly into the hands of the corporations," Senator Couzens, Michigan, in another tax letter today said Mellon's laxity in enforcing the law is costing the government much revenue.

"It is the administrative provisions of the law and the lax enforcement which is cutting down the revenues, if they are being cut, as you claim," Couzens stated.

"You are directing no effort to get the corporations, but rather are playing directly into their hands. For example, you are selling billions of dollars of government securities at unreasonably high interest rates.

"It is estimated that you have paid the banks over one hundred million dollars in excessive interest rates and you did this even tho the banks pay no income or corporation taxes on government securities.

How Mellon Bank Escapes

"Your own bank, the Mellon National of Pittsburgh, holds nearly forty millions on which it pays no taxes whatsoever."

Couzens submitted two tax reduction proposals to Mellon:

1.—Tax all dividends and interest of personal holding companies on the same basis as individuals, or

2.—Raise corporation taxes from 12½ to 25 per cent if Congress reduces the maximum surtax to 25 per cent.

Rich Avoid Taxes.

Couzens cited Teapot Dome testimony to prove that rich individuals are avoiding the tax laws in various ways, especially by the formation of personal holding corporations, for their own personal stocks and bonds.

"The greatest loophole for avoiding surtaxes is the formation of holding companies in addition to the large number already in existence," Couzens wrote. "Will you tell me if there is any reason why they should not be taxed, or in other words, why corporations receive all the preference?"

TWO WISCONSIN CITIES IN SNOW FACING FAMINE

Rotary Plows in Battle with Big Drifts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 7.—At least two Wisconsin cities isolated by the recent blizzard are reported facing food famine, according to meager reports trickling into Milwaukee with the partial resumption of crippled wire service.

These reports indicate that both Reedsville and Two Rivers are completely shut off from the outside world following the most severe blizzard in years, and have about exhausted certain necessary supplies and are in danger of a food shortage. Rotary snow plows today were attempting to crash thru the huge drifts in an effort to carry food and supplies to the inhabitants of the isolated cities.

Tugs with supplies were being sent from Manitowoc to Two Rivers in an effort to relieve the situation there. Trains running north out of Milwaukee have been at a standstill and due to the huge drifts have been unable to make any headway. Conditions unparalleled in almost half a century are reported in a blizzard-swept area.

Snow fell here again last night and with a good stiff northwest wind. railroad and interurban tracks which had been cleared of snow the night before, were again covered by new drifts today. The sky was leaden this morning and clouds were hanging low, giving indication of more snow during the day.

Bankers Alarmed as Pound Rises on Russ Recognition

NEW YORK.—According to information, communicated to The Federated Press from New York financial quarters, both the London City and Wall Street are contemplating an offensive against the pound sterling on the international money market. The recent sudden rise in sterling after the advent of a Labor government in Britain is looked upon with dismay by those New York bankers who are opposed to Russian recognition.

Coming immediately subsequent to the recognition of the Moscow regime by Britain, the rise in sterling is branded as "calculated to heighten not only British Labor, but also Soviet Russia's prestige."

ROBBERS OF VETS FACING QUIZZERS ANOTHER MONTH

Wild Parties Will Be Investigated

The federal grand jury, which is investigating graft in the veterans' bureau of the government, will spend a month or more hearing witnesses and taking testimony, it was indicated yesterday. The investigation will be conducted along the same lines as was the investigation of the the bureau and its affairs while Charles A. Forbes was director.

"Witnesses from all parts of the United States have been subpoenaed to appear. The hearings are being conducted with unusual secrecy.

One of the first witnesses who was called was Elias Mortimer, who testified before the senate committee that he had given Forbes a bribe of $5,000 in the Drake hotel in Chicago, in order to get certain contracts.

The managers and owners of the Drake hotel are also called before the grand jury to testify concerning certain wild drunken parties Forbes gave at the Drake hotel.

The veterans' bureau handled $17,000,000, which was appropriated for the building of hospitals and to provide additional medical care for disabled world war veterans. Forbes is accused of getting away with a good part of the money, and of receiving bribes from contractors to whom he awarded jobs.

Forbes bragged that he would be made secretary of the interior after Albert Fall resigned. The exposure of the senate committee came just a little too early to permit him to get that job from his friend Harding, who was then president.

Public Ownership Peril Horrifies Plute Statesmen

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—In reporting favorably to the house a proposed constitutional amendment forbidding the issuance of tax-exempt securities, the majority of the ways and means committee, led by Chairman Green, gives away their most significant motive in these words:

"It (exemption of public bonds from taxation) also operates as an inducement to every municipality to have all kinds of public utilities owned and operated by the municipality itself, . . . It is obvious that this condition of affairs makes it difficult for public utilities privately conducted to maintain their financial condition, for just in proportion as the money can be obtained cheaper on bonds that are tax exempt, the rate becomes higher on those which are subject to levy."

In other words, abolish tax exempt securities, and kill this dangerous movement for public ownership of public utilities!

Russia Won the War, Admits the Chicago Tribune

Asking the question, Who Won the War, the Chicago Tribune, the loudest jingo in the middle west during hostilities, declares editorially (Feb. 6, 1924):

Our own modest opinion, ripened by observation of events since Nov. 11, 1918, is that nobody won the war. The war, it seems to us, was not won, but lost, and the loss is pretty widely distributed among all concerned. We might make an exception in the case of the bolshevik party in Russia. As for the rest of us it seems to us extremely desirable to rid ourselves of the victory delusion.

SOLONS FREE FALL TO GET HIM LATER

Doheny Registers One More Memory Lapse

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, was released today from his subpoena by the senate committee investigating the naval oil reserve scandal.

The committee decided not to try to question Fall further, because it thought that, if he was compelled to testify, he might claim immunity from prosecution in court.

The action of the committee was taken on advice of Atlee Pomerene and Silas Strawn, the special counsel selected by President Coolidge, but not yet confirmed by the senate.

One ground on which Fall last week refused to answer the committee's questions was that he might incriminate himself.

Acting upon the advice of Pomerene and Strawn, Senator Walsh of Montana, chief investigator, proposed a motion to the committee in executive session, stating that, as there was a chance of Fall escaping legal prosecution, the subpoena which would have required his presence before the committee tomorrow morning, be vacated. This motion was adopted without objection.

Exchange of Compliments

Debate started in the senate today when Walsh had an editorial read into the record. The editorial accused the Republicans of "playing politics in Teapot Dome."

Senator Willis, Ohio, Republican, answered this by reading a speech at the last Democratic convention, nominating Doheny as a vice presidential candidate. The speech lauded Doheny.

"I am glad to say that the Democratic convention almost unanimously rejected that nomination," Senator Ashurst, Arizona, Democrat, declared.

"I state it as a fact that Mr. Doheny turned against the Democratic party in the last campaign and voted for Mr. Harding," Senator Harrison, Mississippi, said.

"I would like to inquire if there was any reference in that nominating speech to the skill of the proposed candidate in bribing Republican cabinet officers?" Senator Glass, Virginia, Democrat, asked.

The Walsh resolution, calling upon the interior department to bring court proceedings to determine legal title of sections 16 and 36 of Naval Reserve No. 1 in California, was then adopted without objection.

It has been claimed that these two sections were being drained, and that this caused Fall to lease the entire reserve to Doheny.

Reed Unloads

Senator Reed, Missouri, Democrat, made a fiery speech denouncing the leases.

"We are about to decide whether oil kings and cabinet officers are immune from the laws that govern the common people," Reed said. "This is one of the most gigantic steals of history."

Doheny's Poor Memory

Edward L. Doheny, lessee of two naval reserves, today corrected his testimony regarding the amount of committee, stated he had paid McAdoo, as a legal retainer.

Doheny, in a letter to Senator Lenroot, chairman of the senate money he has paid William G. McAdoo $150,000, instead of $250,000, as he previously testified.

McAdoo's yearly retainer is $25,000, instead of $50,000, Doheny wrote.

The senate today, without debate, adopted a resolution by Senator La Follette, continuing thru the present congress the power of the senate public lands committee to investigate the oil scandal.

Cold Eyes of Witnesses Watch Pussy Choke in Lethal Chamber Where Human Beings Perish Today

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CARSON CITY, Nev.—A "rehearsal of death" was held at the Nevada State Penitentiary here today to assure officials in charge of the Lethal gas execution of Gee Jon, Chinese, and Thomas Russell, Mexican, condemned murderers, that there will be no hitch in the grim business set for tomorrow morning.

All preparations so far as E. B. Walker, cyanic fumigation operator, could determine, were completed.

He tested the hydro-cyanic gas tanks which will force the gas into the death chamber in a fine spray to deal death to the two men, went over every inch of the cell surface to find leaks and made sure that the door would seal promptly.

A cat was placed in the death cell, the gas turned on and thru the glass windows, where witnesses will watch the passing of the two murderers, they observed the passing of the cat.

STANDARD OIL HAS MONOPOLY ON CRUDE OIL

So. Dak. Governor Asks Coolidge to Act

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PIERRE, S. D., Feb. 7—Gov. W. H. McMaster has demanded that President Coolidge act to smash the alleged corner of the crude oil market by Standard Oil.

In a telegram to the Chief Executive the South Dakota gasoline "trust buster," asserted it was the duty of the federal government to protect the interests of the public.

"August 7, 1923, as Governor of the State of South Dakota I started a fight against excess profiteering in the sale of gasoline with the result that the price was reduced in this state from 26.6 cents to 16 cents a gallon," he wired President Coolidge.

"If a state government has performed its duty in preventing excess profiteering in the distribution of gasoline within the state shall not the federal government likewise perform its duty and prevent excess profiteering in the refining of gasoline? This is a commodity which is a daily necessity in the lives of the American people.

"It affects 90 per cent of our homes.

"Will you not make a reality of your statement to the effect that the people are supreme?"

Mr. Coolidge will notify Governor McMasters that a searching inquiry will be made without delay.

Another "Thoro Investigation".

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7—President Coolidge today directed the federal trade commission and the Department of Justice to make a thoro investigation immediately of charges that the Standard Oil Company has raised the price of gasoline at the refineries 130 per cent. The charges were made in a telegram sent the President by Governor McMasters, South Dakota.

GERMANS' LACK OF GRIEF BRINGS RAGE OF LEGION

Fire Envoy; Starve Country, Is Cry

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—Smarting under the German ambassador's refusal to take any official part in the earlier mourning demonstrations for the 14-point betrayer of his country, Washington is considering the most severe retaliatory measures, it was learned today.

Pressure is being brought to bear on cabinet members to cancel all German relief plans as a punishment on the nation whose government failed to fall in with the public display of grief for the death of the man who symbolized America at war. The American Legion is urging that Ambassador Wiedfeldt be given his passports at once.

Wiedfeldt's attitude was in obedience to the express commands of the Berlin government, which forbids him to take any official part in the Wilson mourning. The German finally yielded to the threats of a mob, which had gathered in front of his embassy building, and to the frowns of his diplomatic colleagues sufficiently to half mast the flag the noon Wilson was buried, and he had a florist charge a wreath to his personal expenses.

The outcry against the ambassador is said to have been encouraged by Attorney General Daugherty's jackals, who are anxious to distract attention from the scandal which is engulfing their paymaster.

It is the old way of the politician-grafter: Howl patriotism so loud that the tones of the graft indictments will be drowned.

PAINTERS' UNION SAYS TRIBUNE'S STORY IS FALSE

Was Attempt to Force Demand Withdrawal

Statements appearing in yesterday's Chicago Tribune saying that the Painters Union of Chicago, will demand $1.50 an hour and that the Chicago locals of the International Brotherhood of Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators will break from the A. F. of L. unless the question of the rival building trades councils in Chicago is settled to their satisfaction were branded as "lying propaganda" by officials of the Painters Union yesterday.

The union wage scale committee is still meeting with the bosses and has not yet settled with them on any question and have not made recomendations to the various locals of the Painters District Council. The question of the dual building trades council has just been taken up with the International officers of the Painters union at Lafayette, Ind. The painters district council belongs to the anti-Landis award council and are demanding that the question of the two building trades councils be settled by the building trades department of the A. F. of L.

The lying statement that the painters would demand $1.50 an hour was used as an excuse in the Tribune to say that "such an increase would stop the larger part of construction (of building) overnight."

Emile Arnold, business agent of local No. 275 of the Painters, said that the statements appearing in the Tribune were intended to lead the painters to drop any demands they might intend to make for an increase in wages by saying all building construction would stop if the increase was granted.

The Tribune quotes Arthur Wallace who they say is of the "Carpenters" district council as authority for the statement the painters will demand $1.50 an hour. Wallace is an official of the Painters' district council, not the carpenters, and he said that he was not quoted correctly in the statements attributed to him.

At present not all the painters' local unions have voted on the question of the wages to be asked under the agreement now pending between the painters and the bosses. The wage scale committee will make certain recommendations to the local unions shortly and the district council of the union will conduct a referendum on the recommendations of the scale committee and then instruct them accordingly.

Preachers Speak Their Minds.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The Rev. Baxter Waters, a local parson, was haled before Circuit Judge Landon a few days ago and rebuked for alleged criticism of the courts from his pulpit. Now the whole Kansas City clergy is up in arms and declares discussion of civic affairs from the pulpits will continue. Backed by several attorneys who hold that Waters did not libel the judiciary, the preachers are speaking their minds.

DIRT FARMERS ABSENT AT N. D. N.P. LEAGUE MEET

Only Four Delegate from Trade Unions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D.—The state convention of the Non-Partisan Leagu of North Dakota is in session her with 97 delegates representing mos of the 53 counties in the state present.

Only four of the delegation ar trade union members sent by th labor organizations, which are ver weak in North Dakota. Many o the delegates give the impression o hopelessly milling around the ol Nonpartisan League program whic has become a dead letter. Thes delegates are still clinging to ol hopes and plans and are in despai

Dirt Farmers Not There.

On the whole the delegation doe not represent the dirt farmers o the state who perhaps, have been hi harder by the farm depression tha the farmers of any other state. Mos of the delegates gathered at Bismarck don't speak for the mass o dirt farmers.

Many delegates have inflated political ambitions of their own. The seem to be more concerned wit their own immediate political ambitions than with the critical condition of the poor farmers of thei state.

Many of them are looking for way out of their own economic hardships and are planning to use th convention in order to get themselve elected to political office and thu free themselves from their presen farm troubles. Hence these del gates are not showing much inte est in the urgent problems confron ing the farmers of the state.

But this very bankruptcy of th League program and some of it old standbys is creating a stron sentiment for the organization of State Farmer-Labor Party at thi convention. Those delegates wh represent the dirt farmers are hopeful that the obvious failures of th office seekers will make it impossible for them to hold back the convention from taking this step towards effective Farmer-Labor unity

Coolidge Endorsement Up.

A sharp fight is also looked fo by everybody on the situation created by the Coolidge endorsemen at the meeting of the Republica State Central Committee in this cit last December.

There is no doubt that this actio of the State Central Committee wil bring on a real fight. All the delegates feel that this fight cannot b avoided. Many are preparing t jump hard on Mr. Roy Frazier, th chairman of the State Committe and his lieutenants who were responsible for spreading the false notio that the farmers of North Dakot are for Coolidge.

TEAPOT OILMAN TELLS HOW TO PURCHASE PRESS

Buy Advertising and Get News, He Says

(By The Federated Press)

MINNEAPOLIS.—"The co-operation between the news and advertising departments of our newspapers is surprising."

The above statement sounds as if it might have emanated from some radical soapboxer whose oratory is to overthrow the republic before breakfast, doesn't it? And yet it isn't. On the contrary it is the carefully prepared statement of one of Minneapolis' most respected business men.

It is the statement of Paul E. Hadlick, secretary, Minnesota Petroleum Association, a branch of the organization controlled by the so-called independent oil men, who recently have been figuring in the Teapot Dome scandal in congress. Hadlick is one of their most influential officials, and he knows all there is to know about American daily newspapers. So he goes a bit farther and declares that when the advertising contract is safely in the business office of the newspaper, the editors very readily accept publicity articles submitted by the paying advertiser.

Hadlick has just sent out the monthly bulletin of the Minnesota Petroleum Association. It goes to all the members, who are expected to follow its suggestions and avail themselves of Hadlick's services. The bulletin is dated Jan. 28, and is No. 2.

"Unodubtedly you will do some advertising in the near future," suggests Hadlick. "The co-operation between the news and advertising departments of our newspapers is surprising. The secretary will be glad to help any member in the preparation of publicity articles about the industry generally. Newspapers readily accept such articles when advertising contracts are signed."

Oil Fights Workmen's Compensation

MINNEAPOLIS. — The Minnesota Petroleum Association, composed of powerful oil men of the state, is preparing to join in the attack upon the Minnesota workmen's compensation law. A circular which has been sent to members from the association headquarters, 638 Builders' Exchange here, includes a questionnaire designed to help Secretary Paul E. Hadlick conduct the fight.

"The workmen's compensation law in Minnesota," he says, "is about as hard on the employer as any in the union. A recent amendment at the last legislature increases the employers' liability so that with the revision in rates now being made, the present rate of $1.50 per hundred for oil jobbers is apt to be increased. The secretary desires actual facts and experiences with which to make a fight not only against a higher rate but, if possible, for a lower rate. Please co-operate by answering all questions and sending them to the secretary. Your individual replies will be treated confidentially."

Hadlick wants statements for the years 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922 and 1923, showing the payrolls of oil men, premiums they have paid on workmen's compensation insurance and losses paid by insurance companies.

Middle-West Gives Stirring Greeting to "Fifth Year" Film

"The Fifth Year," a motion picture of conditions in Russia since the famine which is being put out by the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany, is meeting with general approval all thru the middle west where it is being shown now.

Showings of the picture have been arranged by Fred Biedenkapp in places as far apart as Louisville, Ky., and Duluth, Minn. Biedenkapp has had the co-operation of all sorts of organizations of workers in the various cities he visited to arrange showings.

Feb. 14, the "Fifth Year" will be shown in Muncie, Ind., under the auspices of the local F. S. R.

In Dayton, Ohio, on Feb. 15, the picture will be shown under the joint auspices of the F. S. R. and various local Socialists.

In Louisville, Ky., arrangements were first made to show the picture in a Unitarian Church, but the church backed down and the Y. M. H. A. hall was secured and the "Fifth Year" will be shown there, Feb. 18.

Governor Len Small has expressed his intention of seeing the picture when it is shown in Springfield, Ill., on Feb. 22. The Chatterton Theater, the largest in the city has been rented for this showing. Gov. Small said that he wants to get a real idea of conditions in Russia, and is going to see if the "Fifth Year" will help him form one.

Other dates are: Feb. 24, Duluth, Minn.; Feb. 25, Madison, Wis., where many students at the University of Wisconsin are helping to make the showing a success; Feb. 26, Ironwood, Wis.; Feb. 27, Superior, Wis.; Feb. 29, Ely, Minn.

$1,100,000,000 Luxuries Imported in 1923 by U. S. Ruling Class; Have Half the Diamonds of the World

By LELAND OLDS.

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Diamonds, pearls, jewelry of all kinds, precious metals and silks in quantities undreamed of by Aladdin are pouring into the United States to deck the women of American men of wealth who have attained world power on the basis of exploited American labor.

These vast importations of luxuries reached a total of $1,100,000,000 in 1923. Such tribute does not differ a particle from the precious stones, silks, ostrich plumes and sweet smelling ointments that came in tribute to the kings of Babylon, Thebes or to the imperial oligarchy of Rome centuries ago.

Half the World's Diamonds

The enormous wealth of the upper classes in America today is indicated by the possession of one-half of all the diamonds in the world. Women of the leisure class can sparkle of an evening with approximately $2,000,000,000 worth of diamonds if they deck themselves at one time with all these jewels that repose in safes, strong boxes and safe deposit valts.

Today American wealth is importing from 80 to 90% of the world's annual diamond output, according to figures made public by the U. S. department of commerce. Diamonds imported in 1922, were valued at $52,000,000 while for 1923, the figure will reach $65,000,000.

Perhaps nothing more clearly reflects the rapid rise of American capital to a position of dominance in the economic imperialism which today shapes the destiries of all peoples than the rapid growth in the importation of precious stones. Figures compiled by the National City Bank of New York show that imports of precious stones have grown from $15,000,000 for the year 1900, to $105,000,000 in 1919. The depression of 1921, brought some falling off but with the revival of 1922-23 the tribute in precious stones is again mounting.

"Pearls, too," says the bank, "have greatly increased in popularity since 1914." In fact since that date which marks the beginning of the rise of our financial dynasty to world leadership this country has imported $70,000,000 worth of genuine pearls.

$2,000,000,000 In Two Years

Precious metals, other jewelries, costly feathers, furs, silks, works of art and perfumes are also shown in the statements issued by the department of commerce bringing the imports of luxuries during the last two years to a total value of $2,000,000,000.

These luxuries are either purchased in exchange for the products of American labor which have been invested overseas. The surplus incomes which enable the well-to-do to purchase these luxuries tend directly to the impoverishment of the wage earners who cannot afford to purchase jewels and silks and furs and ostrich plumes. For the demand for luxuries diverts labor and capital from the production of necessities to the production of luxuries. As a result the supply of necessities is reduced, the prices charged for necessities rise, and the average wage will not provide as good a living. This is the conclusion of Prof. N. H. Comish of the Oregon Agricultural college in his book on the Standard of Living. He adds that at present the poor have barely sufficient funds to purchase the necessities of life.

As in the past a leisure class with plenty of income to permit of luxury and display is balanced by a working class which can scarcely command the bare necessities of a frugal existence.

Ohio Coal Miners Join in Fight Back of Michigan Case

Ohio coal miners have entered the fight against the persecution of militant labor leaders under the so-called "criminal syndicalism" laws. Local Union No. 5497, of the United Mine Workers of America, Powhatan Pt., Ohio, has pledged its full support to William Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg and the 30 other Communists arrested by the Burns-Daugherty stool-pigeons in Michigan.

Moreover, the union has given concrete evidence of that support in the form of a check for $119 mailed to the office of the Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, to be used in the defense of the Michigan cases.

At the last meeting of the local, Richard Brown delivered a warm address to the members, after which they voted to check off one dollar from each man's pay and contribute it to the Labor Defense Council. Nate Vanaman, financial secretary of the Powhatan Pt. organization, forwarded the money, together with a letter of encouragement.

Hear Ruthenberg Appeal March 1st

Because of the congested condition of the court calendar, the appeal of C. E. Ruthenberg in the Michigan Supreme Court, will be held over until March 1. The hearing was scheduled for this month, but it has been postponed with the assent of both sides. That the prosecution intends to jail all the 32 defendants in the "Michigan cases" if it possibly can, is illustrated by the care which the prosecuting attorneys are taking in the preparation of their brief. I. E. Ferguson, one of the lawyers for the defense, reports that the prosecution's brief has not yet been presented. He adds that the State atorneys are determined to press the Ruthenberg case to its conclusion, irrespective of delays.

Amalgamated Local No. 39 Plans Big Support for 'Daily'

Local 39, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, is squarely behind the DAILY WORKER and mean to see that all the workers in their local buy and read it daily. This is the largest local in the Amalgamated in Chicago.

At the last regular meeting it was decided to set aside 15 minutes at each meeting for the discussion of plans for increasing the circulation of the DAILY WORKER among the clothing workers of Chicago. The time set aside for the DAILY WORKER at the first meeting was taken up by the distribution of subscription books to the active members of the local.

The executive committee of the local was instructed to call a meeting of all the shop chairmen of the local and have them plan ways of pushing the sale of the DAILY WORKER in the shops.

The local also voted solidly to have the next national convention of the Amalgamated held in Philadelphia.

Carrillo's Death to Bring Reprisal by Mexican Labor

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY.—Felipe Carrillo is dead. Heron Proal is living. Unquestioned testimony of eye-witnesses removes all doubt in both cases. The details are only too well verified of how Felipe was tried in the morning and shot in the afternoon. With him were shot three of his brothers and many other Yucatan labor leaders. The Confederation of Labor is planning a punitive expedition into Yucatan.

Heron Proal is alive. That is equally certain. He remains in Vera Cruz, having recently left jail on bail after being thrown into prison on a trumped-up charge. The bail is guaranteed by the printing press belonging to "El Frente Unico," Communist daily of Vera Cruz.

Informants that seem to me entirely credible, being enemies of the rebel government, assure me that no labor leaders were killed in the port of Vera Cruz, tho many were jailed.

The well-beloved Felipe Carrillo has already been paid the highest honors that the Mexican folk can pay to one of their heroes. He has been made the subject of a Corrido or Mexican popular broadsheet ballad. These ballads are the newspapers, magazines, histories, poetry and music of the Mexican popular classes. All of their "valientes" (brave men) have many such ballads dedicated to them. Pancho Villa comes first in the number of contemporary penny ballads dealing with his exploits. Zapata comes second. Now Felipe Carrillo, martyr governor of Yucatan, enters the hall of fame and secures a place in the memories of the simple folk whose whole literature is found in corridos with "La Muerte de Felipe Carrillo."

German Bosses Stabilize Mark; Enslave Workers

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN.—The invisible empire of finance in Germany has found a useful tool for the advancement of its interests in the new Rentenbank created by the government and secured by mortgages upon industry and agriculture. It is the Rentenbank which made possible the stabilization of the German mark.

The price of this stabilization, however, is the enslavement of Germany to industrial and agricultural barons. The directors of the Rentenbank, recruited from the ranks, chiefly, of these two powerful groups, are assuming more and more to dictate government policies. At present their slogan is "reduction of the number of government employes," and as a supplementary slogan they add, "removal of officials with party leanings."

In practice this means the removal of Socialist, Communist and liberal officials who have believed it their duty in the new republican state to be active politically as citizens. The reactionary bureaucrat of former times has refrained from political participation largely because he was waiting for the swing to the right that has now come.

Cleveland Labor Fights Dope.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 7.—Cleveland Federation of Labor will attempt to line up Ohio labor to urge congress to enact the proposed Porter anti-narcotic resolution, providing for an international conference to check the "dope" traffic and to restrict the manufacture of narcotics. Resolution favoring the bill was adopted here last night.

FREE PRESS IN MEXICO WHILE CIVIL WAR RAGES

Obregon Gives Rein to Hostile Papers

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY.—At the outbreak of the revolution here, the president asked the chamber of deputies for the suspension of civil guarantees. When opposition was manifested, he withdrew the request. Shortly after he issued a statement to press correspondents that the freedom of the press would be completely respected. In so far as has been in his power, he has made good his word.

The result is that a half dozen scandal sheets of ephemeral existence subsist in the capital on the doubtful trade of rumor mongering. Daily they appear, "El Manana," "El Omega," "La Epoca," "La Revolucion" and a half dozen more, with startling headlines of new rebellions, of assassinations, of tremendous defeats for the government forces, of 30,000 fascists being at the gates of the city, of the governments moving to Queretero—but nobody pays much attention to them. In addition, big dailies like "El Universal" pursue a scarcely veiled policy none too friendly toward the government, nevertheless with scrupulous attention to accuracy.

There have been a few attacks on the liberty of the press but never by the authorities of the central government. "El Manana" being only a block away from the headquarters of the Mexican Federation of Labor, was the victim of "direct action" as they call it here, its machinery being smashed by an incognito band at night. The band is not making great efforts to preserve its incognito. However, the paper is out again. In Tampico the commanding officer of the garrison closed up a big daily and carried off part of its machinery. This was reported to the Union of Newspapermen here and they adopted a unanimous protest which they ordered published in all dailies in the capital and which they also sent by telegraph to the president.

Federated Press Accuracy Stands Up Under Test

By CARL HAESSLER

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

CHICAGO. — Two recent attempts to impeach the accuracy of Federated Press news reporting have failed to register. One met defeat at the United Mine Workers' Convention at Indianapolis and the other was officially scotched by the secretary of the Vancouver Trades and Labor council.

The Indianapolis attempt was staged by Ben Williams, an international organizer, who tried to convict Tom Tippett, F. P. staff correspondent, of false reporting when he covered the Taylorville, Ill., subdistrict convention. Williams cited an anti-administration story about the Tennessee district in a non-labor paper and said the editor had told him that Tippett wrote it. Tippett immediately told Williams that he had not written such a story and also that there had been no anti-administration resolution on the subject by the subdistrict convention at Taylorville. Williams stuck to his version.

On wiring to the editor of the paper in question, the Taylorville Courier, Tippett received the following telegram from him:

"Taylorville, Ill., 1924, Jan. 25, P. M., 4:46.

Tom Tippett, Federated Press Representative, Indianapolis, Ind.

Article in question was clipped from the Springfield, Ill., Register and was not given nor authorized by you or anyone else. No such resolution was passed by the subdistrict convention. Did not tell Williams that article was written or inspired by you.

LON E. MARTIN,
Editor Courier."

In addition, William Daech, Taylorville subdistrict president, stated on the Indianapolis convention floor that Tippett's reporting had been perfectly fair and above criticism. Allen Haywood, District No. 12 executive board members from the Taylorville field, and Herman Vonderlack, Taylorville delegate, supported Daech's position. Daech attempted to read the telegram into the Indianapolis convention record, but was ruled out of order.

The Vancouver episode dealt with the withdrawal of the indorsement from the British Columbia Federationist, formerly the official organ of the Vancouver Trades and Labor council. The F. P. carried the story of the withdrawal which was subsequently denied in the columns of a daily labor paper on the Pacific coast. The question of fact was settled in favor of the Federated Press by the following letter from Secy. P. R. Bengough, Vancouver Trades and Labor council:

"The report appearing in the Federated Press stating that the Vancouver Trades and Labor council had withdrawn its indorsement from the British Columbia Federationist is correct in every detail."

The original story had been sent in from Vancouver by Sydney Warren, F. P. staff correspondent.

Machinists Join in Fight to Rid the City of Dangerous Firetrap Schools

Labor unions are becoming interested in the fire-trap schools of Chicago. They are not reassured by the whitewashing investigation being conducted by the board of education. The DAILY WORKER has been read by unionists and they know that the board of education is trying to dodge and continue its policy of economy at the risk of the lives of the children of the workers.

Lodge 478, of the International Association of Machinists, adopted the following resolution without a dissenting vote:

"Whereas, the chief engineer of the Board of Education and the bureau of fire prevention of the fire department have both repeatedly said that more than fifty public school buildings in Chicago are firetraps and unfit for use as schools, and

"Whereas, most of the unsafe unsanitary firetrap school buildings are in working class neighborhoods and are attended by the children of workers,

"Therefore be it Resolved that we, the members of Lodge 478, of the International Association of Machinists, protest against the continued use of such school buildings and the placing of the children of the workers in constant danger of their lives, and be it

"Further Resolved, that we demand that a bond issue be authorized and floated large enough to furnish a fund sufficient to replace all unsafe, and firetrap schools by new, modern and fireproof buildings."

Copies of the resolution were sent to the City council of Chicago and the President of the Board of Education.

Negro Organizations Forming United Front Against Lynchers and Klan at All-Race Assembly Next Week

The eyes of millions of Negroes will be on Chicago all thru the coming week while the first "All-Race Assembly," or Sanhedrin, will hold its sessions and seek to build a united front of all Negro organizations against the bitter persecution now being carried on against the still enslaved race.

More than a hundred delegates are expected from the organizations that are coming together for the first time in a common defense grouping. Colored delegates from the Workers Party will be there; delegates from the African Blood Brotherhood; from the Friends of Negro Freedom, the International Uplift League, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the National Equal Rights League, the National Race Congress and other organizations.

Day sessions will be held thru the week at the Wabash Avenue branch of the Y. M. C. A., at 3763 South Wabash avenue; evening sessions open to the public, at Wendell Phillips High School, 39th St., and Prairie Ave. Kelly Miller of Howard University, Washington, D. C., will preside.

The entire week will be known as "Negro Week" by the hosts of colored people, who are behind this effort to unite and organize their forces against murder, disfranchisement and peonage. Thruout the large Chicago area on the south side, referred to by capitalist newspapers as the "Black Belt" meetings will be held to further the unity program of the Sanhedrin.

Minor, Fort-Whiteman, Speak

Robert Minor and Lovett Fort-Whiteman will speak to a mass meeting of Negroes and Whites in Wendell Phillips High School, this Sunday evening. The mass meeting is being called in honor of Frederick Douglas, that great negro who worked so effectively for abolition long before Lincoln penned his document. Minor and Lovett Fort-Whiteman will tell of Douglas's daring escape across tne Mason and Dixon line and the brilliant services he rendered in organizing the forces of abolition and the retaliatory efforts of the slave owners to have him returned under the Fugitive Slave Law.

Lynching, Ku Kluxism, segregation, disfranchisement, unequal enforcement of the law and peonage are cited as evils against which the All Race Assembly must fight in the original call sent out for the Sanhedrin. The fight for industrial betterment will be equally emphasized. The call, which is signed by representatives of the organizations listed above, read in part:

For Emancipation, Says Call

"The world today has come to a critical period of its existence. Our race likewise has reached a crucial situation. The promises of amelioration and of full citizenship so easily made during the critical period of the Great World War have failed of fulfillment. In this time of readjustment there is growing a very menacing spirit of animosity against the Race and a determination to thrust the Negro down into the most servile and degrading status and to maintain him there forever.

"Now while world readjustment is in progress and when every other oppressed group is exerting itself to the utmost to gain its rights and liberties, the Negro Race must bestir itself, must concentrate its best thought and energy to withstand the terrible onslaughts made against it and secure its due and right-status: equal manhood rights and opportunities in every department of life. The Race must be stimulated to utilize all available opportunities for constructive endeavor and must be brought into harmonious working relationships with the white race.

"The need is urgent, nay imperative, then, for the assembling of a national All-Race Assembly to consider the present position of the Race, to ferret out and unmask the hostile forces arrayed against it, to formulate a plan of defence and protection, to discover the forces, agencies and organizations which may be utilized in that defence, to effect a United Front of the Race, and to devise ways and means for full and compete emancipation.

ROCKEFELLER TO BUILD TENEMENTS FOR OIL SLAVES

Wants Bayonne Workers under Company Eye

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BAYONNE, N. J. — This squalid oil refining city, where Rockefeller's gunmen butchered eight workers at one volley in the 1915 strike, is to enjoy a little charity from the petroleum king. The Standard Oil company, faced with resentment at wretched living conditions, has announced, thru John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a program for the erection of model tenements for the employes of that concern.

Besides being slightly more sanitary than the quarters now furnished by independent landlords, it is believed by the personell department of the corporation that the new tenements will make for better company morale, and will enable the employers to maintain better supervision over their hands during the off-duty period when union agitators are likely to be most busy.

The present plans call for the erection of about 150 apartments of five and six rooms each. The tenements will be erected by the Bayonne Housing Corporation. The buildings will not be erected until certain changes are made in the building laws.

All Companies Behind Program

Behind the Bayonne Housing Corporation are the Bayonne Chamber of Commerce and a group of industries including the Standard Oil Company, the Tide Water Oil Company, the Vacuum Oil Company, the Pacific Coast Borax Company, the International Nickel Company, the Babcock & Wilcox Company, and the Americal Radiator Company.

The 1915 strike will go down in history as illustrating the brutality of the Standard Oil labor policy more effectually than any incident outside the Ludlow burnings. Strikers from the oil refineries of the Standard and Tidewater and other concerns were demonstrating on the street when the gunmen fired into them, from behind the twelve-foot stockade that encircled the refining properties.

Murders Were Unprovoked

Files of the New York Evening Sun and other capitalist papers admit that the shooting was unprovoked by any shooting on the part of the strikers, but following the murderous volley, which slew eight workingmen, strikers hunted up guns and fought back the gunmen. The 200 hired thugs had to keep close behind their bulwarks thereafter.

Wages, at the time of the 1915 strike, ranged from $6 to $9 a week.

MINES CLOSE AS SCAB SHOPMEN CRIPPLE PENNSY

Transportation Break-down Lays Off 4,000

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The Pennsylvania railroad has again fallen down on its job as a result of the bitter open shop policy which it has followed in defiance of the U. S. railroad labor board and the will of congress. The breakdown of its service to the Bicknel Ind., coal district forced the closing of all mines in the district and threw 4,000 miners out of work.

This debacle occurred when interstate commerce commission inspectors found ten locomotives operating in the district unsafe and ordered them out of service. It follows closely on the heels of train delays thruout the Indianapolis region where fifty engines were ordered out of service and of a serious wreck on the road in which both engineer and fireman were killed. Engine crews operating locomotives conditioned under the open shop regime on this railroad are forced to face an unnecessary risk.

Pennsy 100 Per Cent Unsafe

Coal producers in the Bicknel district are reported to be begging the railroad to bring its service to a par with that in other coal fields. Secy. W. M. Zelle, Knox Consolidated Coal Co., of this district, thinks "there is something very decidedly wrong" when Pennsylvania equipment is found to be 100 per cent unsafe, while other roads in the country are declared safe.

Yes, Mr. Zelle, and if you will call on the officers of the shop craft unions, they will tell you what is decidedly wrong. Not the government inspectors, but the determination of the management to crush independent labor organization among its shop employes and to substitute a servile shop force organized as a company union. The Pennsylvania has locked out its experienced shop employes and destroyed the morale which is nine-tenths of efficiency.

Zelle complains "our mines depend upon the Pennsylvania for car supply and have only been able to operate three days a week for the last two weeks." Twice the miners have had to walk home because there were not fit locomotives to pull the miners' train. On one day work was stopped at 11 a. m. for lack of cars. This is a sample of Pennsylvania "service."

Thousands Laid Off

Following a policy which considers profits of absentee owners more important than steady wages to the men who keep the road in condition the Pennsylvania recently laid off tens of thousands of employes shutting down at least 25 per cent of its equipment repair work. It took the lead in a similar fashion in 1920-21 when railroad executives were ordered to administer the "unemployment cure" to their employes as a means to wage deflation. This open shop attitude means that a faithful worker can count on no security of job other than such as the interests of the profit makers dictate.

The results appear clearly in the present predicament of important shippers. The business of coal operators has been severely hampered to permit an unwarranted saving in wages coupled with a willingness to add to the present margin of unemployment.

Big Australian Steal Exposed by Labor Members

(By The Federated Press)

MELBOURNE. — Labor members in the federal parliament are demanding an inquiry into the sale of saw mills purchased by the federal government some time ago for providing timber for the construction of homes for returned soldiers.

The mills were purchased in January, 1921, for $1,230,000 and have now been sold back to the original owners for $580,000—less than half the purchase price. Labor members contended that either too high a price was paid to the private owners in the first place, or the mills nave been sold back again to the former owners at less than half price.

Australian Unions Oppose Flooding of Labor Market

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, New South Wales.—Trade unions are protesting against the move being made by employers to bring skilled immigrants into Australia from other countries, and the announcement by the employers that they have plenty of work waiting for such workers immediately when they land.

The union heads point out that if the employers can find work for skilled immigrants from overseas they can also find work for the thousands of jobless skilled workers already in the country. It is estimated that there are at least 30,000 skilled workers unemployed in Australia at the present time, while the number of unskilled workers who are unemployed is much greater than that figure.

THE CHEWING GUM CANDIDATE MAY STICK TO SENATE

Wrigley, Jr., Said to Be Gumming the Works

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—If Hiram Johnson ever lands in the White House he will not have to thank spearmint gum for his victory. The DAILY WORKER correspondent was informed that the financial backers of the Californian political white hope, chief among them being the Chicago millionaire who made his fortune by giving the people something to chew on, are considering tightening up their wads and letting Hiram paddle his own canoe.

There are other ways of enjoying life besides betting one's money on a political dark horse. A candidate for the presidency nowadays is in constant danger of having oil squirted on him, and the millionaires do not like to handle an inflammable proposition. They do not want to risk burning their fingers.

So far Johnson has escaped the storm in a teapot, which is now whirling thru the closets of the Washington statesmen and throwing open the skeletons therein to public view. But nobody can tell when he may get hit by a stray oil can. Today every candidate for the presidency is guilty until he is proven innocent.

If the California senator quits the race and leaves the country to its fate and in danger of entering blindfolded into foreign entanglements, who will be the jockey to drive the unwieldly hulk of the Republican elephant to victory? Always a hard animal to manage, it is now expected that the sight of a gasoline station will throw him into a frenzy during the coming campaign. Before the automobile came into such general use, his trainers might be able to sneak him across the country in the presidential race without falling into an oil well, but one can hardly cover a block nowadays without running into some animated hunk of tin that gets its motive power from the Teapot Dome.

Not that the Democrat jackass is any better off. He was laughing and wagging his ears at the predicament in which his more clumsy brother was in, but when a gusher gushed in the vicinity of William Gibbs McAdoo, the Democrats began to look around for a candidate among the celebrities in the comic strips of the Sunday supplements. Barney Google, or Jiggs, may be selected. They cannot be any funnier than the gentlemen that have already made laughing stocks of themselves.

Calvin Coolidge's presidential bug is not biting any more. While he has escaped a frontal squirt from the petroleum fusilade, most of his cabinet are now busy trying to explain why they were working twenty four hours a day auctioning off the United States of America to the highest bidders. His intention to hide his intellectual bankruptcy behind a mantle of silence until the voters returned him to his present residence is now broken and he is giving long statements daily of his intention to punish the guilty.

While the capitalist parties are grovelling in filth and political corruption, the movement for a real farmer-labor party is growing by leaps and bounds. The opinion in Washington is that the Teapot Dome scandal and the assumption of the powers of government on the part of the British Labor Party will give a great impetus to this movement. The Coolidge machine which spent a good deal of time staging milking contests and staging other contests to seduce the progressive senators are too busy painting signs reading "Handle with care; this is inflammable" on the superstructure of their presidential platform. It is soaked with oil and it requires only a spark to burst it into flame.

"A Week" Every Day

THE decision has been made. The world-famous story of Russian life since the great revolution of November, 1917, will appear DAILY in the DAILY WORKER. The first installment of "A Week" will appear Saturday, Feb. 16.

The daily installments were decided upon so that the DAILY WORKER will live up to its best traditions as "A DAILY." Our paper is a DAILY. It is in the fight from day to day. It wants its readers to realize this fact. It wants everyone to feel it. Publishing only weekly installments of this great novel would still perpetuate the idea that we are working on a weekly basis. This must be swept away forever.

But this means that all our readers, and thousands more, must get on the mailing list and stay there from now on. Get others to subscribe. See that your own subscription is renewed. There will be no chance to get back numbers once this serial has got under way. Send your subscriptions and renewals to The DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

The Power Column

The Bulwark of THE DAILY WORKER.

There has been some lack of understanding regarding the 20 per cent commission which THE DAILY WORKER allows to branch agents, for all subscriptions secured by them.

In some instances objection has been made to the granting of commissions on the grounds that class conscious workers will serve their paper, without having to be "bribed" by the offer of commissions. Others hold that the commission system is too capitalistic a way for a working class organization to do business.

It is unfortunate that so many good workers for the militant labor press are accepting these false ideas. We do not bribe anyone by the offer of commissions; rather we realize that many militants, as much as they would like to spend time and money in building the labor press, find it impossible to do so, but with the small commission which THE DAILY WORKER offers it does become possible to devote the necessary time and energy to the circulation work. While working to destroy capitalism, we still are willing to learn from the capitalists, and if the commission system for building up a DAILY WORKER circulation works, we are for that system. By giving commissions to branch agents THE DAILY WORKER can assume that the agents are responsible for the carrying out of the work assigned to them and that the necessary work will be done more surely and more quickly because of the small remuneration given.

Some of the branch agents find that they can devote themselves to the task of making THE DAILY WORKER grow, on a voluntary basis, and many of these are remitting the full amounts for the subs they sell without deducting the commissions. That is all the better and in some instances some of the very best DAILY WORKER boosters are those who do not deduct for their commisions. At the same time it should be pointed out that those who do accept the commissions are following their instructions and their services are valued just as highly as those of the volunteer agents.

It has been brought to our notice that some Workers Party branches have decided that the commissions should be turned in to the branch or to some other labor organization. Of course THE DAILY WORKER does not presume to tell the branch agents what to do with the commissions they earn, and we certainly would not discourage financial support to the various militant organizations of labor. At the same time it should be understood that Workers Party branches have no right to legislate for THE DAILY WORKER and therefore no right to decide what their agent shall do with the payment he receives from the DAILY WORKER. That is a matter for each agent to decide for himself. To place that decision in the hands of anyone else is to destroy the value of the granting of the commissions altogether.

* * * *

New and good suggestions for securing new DAILY WORKER readers continue to come in to us. Comrade P. Smernoff, city agent for the DAILY WORKER in New Haven, Conn., has the latest one and we pass it along to all DAILY WORKER boosters to try it out if they believe it will work. It seems to us that particularly in the smaller cities the idea is practicable. Here is Comrade Smernoff's suggestion:

"We will send you names and addresses of those who wish to receive the DAILY WORKER but who can't afford the whole subscription price at one time. The DAILY WORKER will then be mailed to each of them every day, just as if they had subscribed and we will collect from them every two weeks and send you the money.

"For instance, if we get 100 subscribers here on this basis, you (The DAILY WORKER) would send these subscriptions by mail and we would collect from the 100 subscribers every two weeks at the rate of 18 cents per week or 36 cents for two weeks. Out of this amount we might have to pay a boy for making the collections but you would still get more than $6.00 a year from each of this kind of subscriber."

* * * *

We would be glad to co-operate with any city or branch agent who wishes to try this experiment. We would also like to hear from others who have other suggestions to make which will help to make The DAILY WORKER grow.

Spanish Dictator Likely to Tumble from High Horse

(By The Federated Press)

MADRID. — Primo de Rivera, military dictator of Spain; after completing the ninety days of dictatorship, authorized for cleaning up Spain, now talks of the necessity of six or seven years of dictatorship. He no longer talks of resigning, but the growing chorus of his opponents is beginning to talk quite energetically of it. The republican movement is growing and there is a schism in the army itself, the basis of the dictator's power.

When Rivera exiled the powerful Marquis of Cortina for mere criticism of him in the press, the conservatives charged that he did not have the courage to try the marquis for more serious ministerial crimes. Significantly enough important members of the high military command went to see the marquis off, a direct political manifestation against the dictator.

Liberal and even conservative political leaders have issued statements to the effect that the king so insulted them by giving over the power to the military directorate on the ground that "the political parties are all too corrupt for the parliamentary system to continue," that if the directorate should fall they will refuse to honor the request of the king to form a new civil government. The king in that event would be forced to abdicate and either a new sovereign or a republic would result.

Rivera, to save the situation, has granted various reforms, including a dummy civil government that represents nobody. He is on the defensive against powerful papers not easily censored. The conservative foreign press associations predict his downfall and that of the king as well. Rumor says that the French government has a hand in the affair in an effort to protect itself from the isolation resulting from the alliance of Italy and Spain. Powerful Franco-American financial interests are opposing this new line-up, it is said.

Hillman Still Sick

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, is still sick at the Hotel Morrison here. He was confined to his bed early last week with the grippe and has not been out of his room since then. Altho not seriously ill, he is unable either to work or to return to New York, and said yesterday, that he is getting the first rest that he has had for several years.

Hillman's doctor hopes to have him able to get back to work by the end of this week.

Watch the "Daily Worker" for the first installment of "A Week," the great epic of the Russian revolution, by the brilliant young Russian writer, Iury Libedinsky. It will start soon.

WORKERS' CITY EXPELS IDLERS AND PARASITES

Moscow Gives Bums Rush to Social Lice

By GERTRUDE HAESSLER.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

MOSCOW.—For some time the municipal authorities in Moscow have been struggling with the housing problem. A vigorous campaign has recently been initiated to expel from Moscow all "undesirable" and "socially dangerous" elements, and those not engaged in socially necessary labor. In connection with this campaign, the following notice appeared in all the daily papers in Moscow:

To All Citizens of Moscow

The acute housing crisis and the fact that Moscow is being filled with socially dangerous elements, has led the State Political Department (G. P. U.) to undertake the clearing of Moscow and the other large centers of the R. S. F. S. R. from the dregs of nepism, which, instead of taking part in normal trade and production, are exploiting the New Economic Policy for the purpose of leading a parastic existence.

In fulfillment of the instructions of the Government and of the newly elected Moscow Soviet regarding the clearing of Moscow of persons not engaged in socially necessary labor, the G. P. U. has for the last few days carried out the arrest and expulsion of socially dangerous persons.

Parasites Classified.

So far 960 people have been arrested, of which 532 have been expelled from Moscow. The others will also be expelled shortly. The arrested and expelled persons are as follows:

(1) Traders in illicit spirits, 110.
(2) Swindlers and sharpers, 156.
(3) Smugglers of precious stones and valuta, 120.
(4) Persons with no definite occupation and living in luxury, 453.
(5) Cocaine dealers, 24.
(6) Keepers of houses of ill fame, 53.

Total, 916.

The G. P. U. announces that similar arrests and expulsions to outlying districts of the R. S. F. S. R. of persons without definite occupation and living a parasitic existence in Russia will be continued in future and the only way to avoid arrest is for such persons to leave Moscow and the Moscow Province voluntarily.

The G. P. U., however, desires to announce that persons engaged in normal trade and industry, paying the required duties, and conforming to the laws of the U. S. S. R. may continue their occupations in security, since they are not liable to arrest and expulsion.

Chairman of the O. G. P. U.
F. DZHERZHINSKI,
Moscow, Dec. 24, 1923.

Contrast with America.

The conception which the G. P. U. has of "socially dangerous" persons brings to mind the case of old Tom McDermott, who was a staunch wobbly. In 1920, in San Francisco, he was arrested under the criminal syndicalism law and after his jury disagreed, he was dismissed by the court. Immediately after he shipped out for Australia on a windjammer. In Australia he visited wobbly headquarters and he agitated among the sailors on his boat. When he came back to San Francisco seven months later, with all his pay in his pocket, he was arrested as he stepped off the boat on the charge of vagrancy—"no visible means of support." He was convicted to six months in the County Jail.

Tom was out of work at the moment, it is true, and the authorities wanted to "get him." But the G. P. U. does not consider as "socially dangerous elements" the workers who are unemployed—unless they have a mysterious source of income which permits them to live in luxury.

Political Con Men In Workmen's Circle Terrorize Members

The reactionary machine of the Workmen's Circle, which is an organization of 80,000 members, is using every means to terrorize the membership into re-electing it to office, thus perpetuating the rule of a clique of unscrupulous, dishonest politicians of the blackest stripe.

A regular drive has been started against the left wing of the Workmen's Circle, against all those who dare to criticize the shady dealings of the backstairs politicians.

In line with this policy of terrorization two of the most active members of the Workmen's Circle, Abe Epstein and David Siegal have been made members at large, which deprives them of the right of being active in the branches.

Besides, the machine has committed all kinds of frauds in elections in various branches. The membership of the Workmen's Circle is being propagandized by the reactionary machine against the radicals in the organization, and the money to defray the expenses of this campaign of propaganda and abuse is being taken from the treasury of the Workmen's Circle.

It is obvious that the yellows at the head of the Workmen's Circle will stop at nothing in order to perpetuate themselves and their vicious rule. All methods are good enough for fighting the honest militant elements in the organization who are seeking the welfare of the membership of the Workmen's Circle and of the radical labor movement in general.

COMMUNIST-CHILDREN'S-COLUMN

THE ROSE BUSH

By HERMINIA ZUR MUHLEN

The Rose-Bush did not know where she was born, and where she spent her early days—it is a well known fact that flowers have a bad memory, but, to make up for that, they can seen into the future. When she first became conscious of herself, she stood in the middle of a magnificent green lawn. To one side of her she saw a great white stone house, that gleamed thru the branches of a linden tree, to the other side stood a high trellised gate, thru which she could see the street.

A thin, tall man carefully tended the Rose-bush; he brought manure, bound the drooping twigs of the Rose-bush together with bark, brought water for the thirsty roots of the Rose-bush to drink. The Rose-bush was grateful to the man and, as the buds she was covered with, opened into the dainty roses, she said to her friend, "You have taken care of me, it is on account of you that I have become so beautiful. Take some of my loveliest blossoms in return."

The man shook his head. "You mean well, dear Rose-bush, and I would gladly take some of your beautiful blossoms for my sick wife. But I dare not do it. You don't belong to me."

"I don't belong to you!" exclaimed the Rose-bush. "Don't I belong to the person who has taken care of me and troubled himself about me? Then to whom do I belong?"

The man pointed with his hand to the gleaming white house among the trees, and replied, "To the gracious lady who lives there."

"That can't be," replied the Rose-bush. "I have never seen this lady. It is not she who has sprinkled water on me, loosened the earth at my roots, bound together my twigs. Then how can I belong to her?"

"She has bought you."

"That is something different. Then the poor woman must have worked hard to save so much money. Good! Half of my blossoms shall belong to her."

The man laughed a little sadly, saying, "Oh, beloved Rose-bush, you don't yet know the world, I can see that. The lady did not lift a finger to earn the money."

"Then how did she get it?"

"She owns a great factory in which countless workers drudge; from these comes her wealth."

The Rose-bush became angry, lifted a bough up high, threatened the man with her thorn-claws, shouting, "I see you enjoy yourself at my expense, because I am still young and inexperienced, telling me untruths about the world of men. Still I am not so stupid, have observed ants and bees, and know that to each belongs the things for which he has worked."

"That may be so among bees and ants," the man sighed, deeply, "yet among men it is different. There the people receive just enough to keep them from starving—all else belongs to the master. The master builds splendid mansions, plants lovely gardens, buys flowers."

"Is that really true?"

"Yes."

The man went back to his work and the Rose-bush began to meditate. Yet, the longer she thought, the worse her temper grew. Yes, even tho she usually had very fine manners, she spoke roughly to a bee who wished to visit her. The bee was still young and timid, and flew off in fright as fast as his wings could carry him. Then the Rose-bush was sorry for her rough behavior, because she was naturally friendly, and also because she might have asked the bee whether the man had spoken the truth.

While she was so engrossed in thought, suddenly someone shook her and a mischievious voice asked, "Well, my friend, what are you dreaming about?"

The Rose-bush looked up with her countless eyes and recognized the Wind, that stood laughing before her, shaking his head so that his long hair flew about.

"Wind, beloved Wind!" joyfully exclaimed the Rose-bush, "You come as tho you had been called. Tell me whether the man has spoken the truth." And she repeated everything the man had said to her.

The Wind suddenly became serious, and whistled thru his teeth so violently that the branches of the Rose-bush began to tremble.

"Yes," declared he, "All this is true, and even worse. I came here from all over the whole world, and see everything. Often I am so seized with anger that I begin to rage; then the stupid people say, 'My! what a storm.'"

"And the rich people can really buy everything?"

"Yes," growled the wind. Then suddenly he laughed. "Not me. They can't capture and imprison me. I am the friend of the poor. I fly to all lands. In big cities, I station myself before ill-smelling cellars and roar into them, 'Freedom! Justice!' To tired, overworked people, I sing a lullaby, 'Be courageous, keep together, fight, you will conquer!' Then they feel new strength, they know a comrade has spoken to them." He tittered, and all the leaves in the garden stirred. "The rich would like to imprison me, because I carry the message, but I whistle at them. At night I rattle their windows, so that they become frightened in their soft beds, and then I cry, 'Hoho, you idlers, your time is coming. Make room for the workers of the world!' At that they are frightened, draw the silken covers over their ears, try to comfort themselves: 'It was only the wind!'"

RUSSIAN TEXTILE INDUSTRY TRIPLES ITS PRODUCTION

Nogin Describes Methods of State "Trusts"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK. — Production has tripled in the textile industry of Russia since 1918, says Victor P. Nogin, President of the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, who is making a survey of the textile industry in America.

The Soviet republic does not have to import any cotton goods, declared Nogin. She produces all that she uses under the direction of the state "trusts" in which the labor unions participate.

The earlier nationalization method, with the old owners as lessees, did not give good results, said Nogin. Nor was the plan for centralizing the industry in a special textile "department," which ruled from December, 1918 until 1921 and 1922 satisfactory.

Tell of "State Trusts."

"Since then," he continued, "the various textile enterprises were grouped into industrial units, which were formed on the following basis: Geographical and industrial. By industrial we mean plants which had in common, raw materials, spinning, weaving and finishing. These groups were united into units which are popularly called in Russia 'trusts.' These trusts have the rights of a legal person.

"The capital of a trust is based on the property of the enterprise. By property is meant buildings, raw materials, goods, but not the land, because in Russia there is no private ownership of land, the land all belonging to the national government.

"Many of these trusts have received from the government the privilege of using the forests and the peat deposits. Peat is known in Russia as the special textile fuel. There is a special decree issued by the national government regarding these trusts. The management of the trusts is appointed by the Supreme Council of National Economy.

Labor Unions Participate.

"Each industrial unit or trust is governed by a committee of from five to ten individuals appointed from Moscow by the government after consultation with the labor unions.

If there is a dispute in any trust the workers apply to their local delegate, who, in turn, takes it up with a committee. If they cannot come to an agreement they go to the local council. In case they are unable to come to a decision the matter is taken to Moscow, where the headquarters of all the unions are located, and the representatives of the textile union take the discussions of the matter to the Executive Committee of the Supreme Council of National Economy. This council is appointed in the same manner as the National Cabinet of the Soviet Government."

Nogin has worked in the textile industry for 30 years. He was a leading official in the first central textile administration of the textile industry after the revolution.

Do American Workers Know a Good Thing When They See It?

WE SAY THEY DO AND CITE A RECORD OF A 50 PER CENT INCREASE IN THE DAILY WORKER CIRCULATION DURING THE LAST TWO WEEKS TO PROVE IT.

Cynics and pessimists and renegades excuse their impotency by bewailing the lack of intelligence and class-consciousness of American workers. The reception which THE DAILY WORKER has received everywhere it has appeared, disproves this conception once and for all.

There are hundreds of thousands of American workers, rebels at heart, who have been looking for a daily newspaper just like THE DAILY WORKER.

How to notify these thousands that THE DAILY WORKER is here, how to make them aware that at last there IS a daily labor paper that supplies all the newspaper needs of the working class is the big problem which THE DAILY WORKER must solve.

Those who now read THE DAILY WORKER are the ones who can reach these thousands for us.

If every reader of THE DAILY WORKER will make it his business to distribute copies of the paper among the workers he meets, will advertise THE DAILY WORKER everywhere as the Militant Organ of the Advancing Working Class

the problem will be solved and for every thousand workers now participating in the struggles for working class emancipation there will be TENS OF THOUSANDS, each of them a militant fighter in labor's cause.

For a limited time THE DAILY WORKER will send FREE to anyone making the request, a bundle of sample copies of THE DAILY WORKER for free distribution.

PHILADELPHIANS HOLD OVERFLOW LENIN MEETING

Many Become Members of Workers Party

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The Lenin Memorial Meeting held here will long be remembered by the 2,000 people who jammed the Musical Fund Hall. An overflow meeting had to be started, but even that could not accomodate the hundreds who came too late and were turned away by the police.

The Memorial Meeting was one of the most impressive that Philadelphia ever saw. When the chairman uncovered a huge portrait of Lenin at the opening of the meeting and the Orchestra began to play Chopin's Funeral March, the whole audience rose as one man to give last honors to their dead leader. Even the police were impressed by this demonstration. There was many a workman's hand that wiped away tears that could not be suppressed.

The chairman read the proclamation of the All-Russian Congress of Soviets and then introduced the speakers. The meeting was addressed by Feinstone in Russian, Ludwig Lore and W. F. Kruse in English and Shachno Epstein in Jewish. Not a single person left the hall until the orchestra ended the International and the chairman declared the meeting adjourned.

An appeal for funds, to aid in the Defense of the Communists who were in jails because they propagate the ideas for which Lenin worked, netted $177.

Many people approached members of the arrangement committee and filled out application cards to join the Workers Party, the party that propagates the ideas for which Lenin stood.

The meeting was a grand tribute to the man who has become an inspiration to all true revolutionists.

Letters to 'The Daily'

What He Thinks of Us.

To the DAILY WORKER: It's damn little radical literature I read—I'll buy it but I'll be damned if I'll read it—but while laying around wondering whether or not I'll have to have my appendix chopped out, I happened to start to read your article "Our Party—Three Tendencies"—and hadn't got very far before said, "What the hell!" for it was the first time I had ever run against anything as easily understod and comprehensive. But alas, and also alack, I commenced to flounder at the top of the third column and from there on muffed about half of it, and my idea that it would make one fine and dandy circular went glimmering. You had ought to do something about it for the first half of the article is the very thing that is needed to enlighten the workers as to what the Party is—I never knew before—it's been a mystery to me. And, as I am above the average of intellifence, it's hardly to be expected that the ordinary run of humanity would know either. And you sure need some such circular—not for the mut element—you can hardly get it down to their intellectual level and at the same time say anything, but for us—well, what I call "minor intellectuals." Also I don't think it should be an obvious propaganda circular if that point can be avoided.

But here I am again trying to tell the untellable radicals something! I am an optimist all right. Still you fellows seem to be a damn unusual sort of an outfit—I was remarking today a friend to whom I handed my copy of the DAILY WORKER that it was the first radical paper I had ever seen that printed interesting news items in Americaneese. You are unusual all right!—J. A. N., Los Angeles, Cal.

Still In the Ring.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Hiram Johnson today announced definitely that he will not withdraw from the presidential race.

"I consider it a contemptible trick that statements are issued every few days from Coolidge headquarters intimating that I will withdraw from the race," said Johnson. "I want to say once and for all that I am going to put up a brave fight and am going to stay in until the end."

Children of Worker's Family Bring Home Undesirable Picture

To THE DAILY WORKER: I am writing this letter to you with the request that you answer it in the columns of the Daily Worker.

I have been a workingman all my life and am convinced that the only remedy for present evils is communism, the cause to which I am devoting my life. Regardless of the fact that I did not have the advantage of an education, I have done everything else within my power to help the great movement.

Now, my only wish was to have my children share my ideas. For this reason I sent them to the Socialist Sunday School, but to my great sorrow their friends had more influence over them than I did.

Recently something occured that strongly convinced me that I could no longer endure the animosity of my children. On coming home from work one night, I found a picture of Harding on the wall. "What's that?" I asked. "How does his picture happen to be in my house?" In reply my son told me that he and his friends had organized a Harding Club, and that he wanted the honor of having Harding's picture on the wall. I cannot describe in words the anger this answer provoked in me. "Are there no greater characters that have done more for humanity than Harding? Have my feelings no value to you?" My children, as usual, started to ridicule me. I could no longer control my anger, I pulled down the picture and tore it. My children reproached me for the action, which they said was one of a tyrant and despot. My wife sides with them.

Now, I want you to answer the question I will put to you, the answer to which my children will read:

Are the feelings and thoughts of my children so superior to mine that they could heartlessly do everything in the attempt to shatter my ideals, while I am not allowed to do anything?—A Disappointed Father.

• • • •

Problem Deserves Attention.

Our Answer—The above letter touches a problem which deserves attention. It has been the experience of many radicals to see their children spurn the ideals for which their parents sacrificed so much and become active or passive supporters of the capitalist system and all its works and pomps.

The reasons for this are many. Most radicals endure hardships which are shared by their families owing to their opposition to the capitalist system and their children who come under the influence of capitalist schools, read capitalist papers and associate with children of capitalistically minded parents. Capitalist papers judge the radical philosophy on the basis of its effect on their conditions and not being sustained by idealism prefer to follow the line of least resistance and place personal gain ahead of the collective good.

Radicals as a rule do not take the necessary steps to see that their children are acquainted with the philosophy of socialism or communism. The children are generally left in the care of the mother whose duties are of such a nature that she has little time to devote to public questions. Her environment is narrow and her outlook is limited. Her experience and her struggles with life do not tend to give her a more generous point of view. Her influence on the children is reactionary. They are urged to look out for their own personal interests and let the rest of the world do likewise.

The leaders of bourgeois society take every precaution to psychologize the minds of the children in favor of the present system. They have preachers, teachers and a multitude of organizations with bands, gymnasiums which offer attractions to the children of the working class not to be found in the homes. They have publications which teach that boys and girls with ambition can rise to high positions provided they are ambitious, go to church, shun radicalism, work hard and practice thrift. Under such conditions it is not surprising that our comrade's children should bring in the picture of one who showed less brain capacity than perhaps any other man who ever sat in the White House chair. The children are not taught that the development of the mind is important except in so far as it aids in the main consideration of bourgeois society, that is, the accumulation of wealth.

Our correspondent may tear Harding's picture and tear his own hair if he has any, but that is only a despairing indication of impotence.

Children spend more of their time outside of the home than in it. Communists should take care that the environment of their children should not be anti-radical. The Workers Party of America thru the Young Workers League and the Junior Section of that organization offers a solution of this problem. Radicals should have their children join these organizations, attend the classes, athletic groups, socials and other functions under their direction.

The children will grow up in an environment that will help to develop their intellectual faculties. They will be able to meet the jibes and sneers of the putty-headed productions of the bourgeois schools and if they bring home any picture to hang on the wall it will be that of some intellectual giant like Lenin and not a mental nonentity like Harding.

GERMAN CENSUS GIVES 26,000,000 ADULT WORKERS

Proletarian Elements in Vast Majority

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

BERLIN, Germany. — Interesting statistics have been produced by the "Annual for Economics, Politics, and the Labor Movement," published by Carl Hoyn, Hamburg. In the year 1920 Germany had a total of 59.4 million inhabitants. The adult population included in this total fell under the following categories:

Agriculture and Forestry	9,825,000
Mining and Industry	14,510,000
Trade, Traffic and Hotel Keeping	5,000,000
Personal Service	330,000
Public Service and Free Professions	2,440,000
Without Profession	1,700,000
Total	33,865,000

• The term "without profession" includes people living on their incomes.

In the above classification, bosses and workers are thrown together, so that it is not clear how many people belong to the possessing and how many to the working class. This relation becomes evident from the following classification.

In the same annual, Prof. E. Varga, a noted Russian economist now living in Berlin, groups the population of Germany as follows:

Ruling class	4,400,000
Semi-proletarian elements	3,500,000
Workers and proletarian employes	26,000,000

UNIVERSITY RUN BY JUDGE GARY BARS NEARING

Northwestern Cancels Invitation to Economist

By CARL HAESSLER
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

EVANSTON, Ill. — Pres. Walter Dill Scott, the advertising expert who heads Northwestern university, has banned Scott Nearing, radical economist and lecturer, from the campus platforms. Neither in classroom nor in university meeting hall may Nearing lift his voice to uphold the newer economics and the newer sociology against the doctrines sanctioned by University Trustee Elbert H. Gary or University Trustee R. W. Campbell, Gary's son-in-law, the president of the Northwestern board.

The steel dictator's son-in-law signalized his accession to the head of the board table by announcing that the Northwestern campaign committee engaged in getting donations from the big fellows in industry and business had obtained so far the sum of $7,217,470.71.

After the Dough

With Gary and Gary's son-in-law on the university board, a begging campaign for big money in progress and Scott Nearing wanting to talk at the invitation of the College Liberal club, Advertising Expert Walter Dill Scott saw his way without any difficulty or hesitation. Let a radical spouter spoil the golden harvest by giving the Northwestern undesirable advertising among the conservative and affluent alumni? Not while Expert Scott knows his duty to Gary and the board.

So the Northwestern Liberal club did not hear Nearing on the campus.

Nearing Spoke Anyhow

But he talked in Evanston just the same. The Garrett Biblican Institute Discussion group had arranged a meeting for the unorthodox economist, and there he spoke, listened to by many Northwestern students with the added zest of enjoying forbidden fruit.

Scott of Northwestern knew that this might happen. He took steps to prevent it. He wanted the Garrett Biblical meeting stopped. Evidently they have no Garys on the Garrett board and no son-in-law of Gary and no advertising expert as president of the institution.

Nearing talked and the next meeting of the Garrett group will listen to a radical with a prison record, no matter what the effect on the Northwestern campaign for millions.

BIRTH OF NATION, K. K. K. PICTURE, STILL ON SCREEN

Judge Gives Verdict on Case Today

The anti-negro, pro-Ku Klux Klan motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," will continue to be shown here until after today, when further argument on a motion to hold Chief of Police Collins in contempt of court will be heard before Judge Sullivan. Yesterday the judge spent the entire day hearing arguments on the law involved in the case and continued the hearings till today.

Negroes in Chicago are indignant at the delays in stopping the picture. They say that the picture plainly violates a law passed in 1917 and aimed at the "Birth of a Nation," which says that any picture inciting to race hatred cannot be shown.

"The Klan is behind this picture," said Lovett Fort-Whiteman of the staff of the Chicago Defend[illegible] negro newspaper, "and they are trying to find loop holes in the law that will permit them to show the picture as long as they can. They know that they will finally lose out in this fight, but they are trying to delay. The picture ridicules and defames the negro. It should be stopped at once."

Chief Collins ordered the picture stopped because he held that it violated the law of 1917. The exhibitors went to court and asked that he be cited in contempt because he had violated an injunction obtained in 1915, forbidding interference with showings of the picture. The legal argument was all concerned with the issue whether the law passed in 1917 set aside the injunction. Judge Sullivan yesterday held that it did and said the only question was whether or not the picture violated the law by inciting to race hatred.

Monday night police stopped the picture for the second time. After the stopping of the picture the first time Sunday night the management of the Auditorium theater announced that they would continue to show it till their case was decided in court. Monday afternoon the picture was shown, but the police stopped the evening showing. Yesterday for the third time they defied the police by running the picture. The police have indicated that they will permit the picture to continue till they get a ruling from the corporation counsel on the law as it stands since Judge Sullivan's decision.

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

Crime and the Working Youth.

Fat widows of dead business men, retired churchmen and professional capitalist social workers and reformers find common employment in protecting the youth and children from lives of crime. This is the safest kind of diversion.

At the twenty-second annual meeting of the Illinois Juvenile Protective Association, a prize collection of old maids, pepless preachers and paid social workers, the growth of crime among the youth and children was discussed from the point of view of sex and religion. The proposed remedy for the advance in the number of youth criminals was—recreation!

On thing is positive in crime: the lower the wages of the parents, the more apt are the children to become criminals. Is the remedy for this recreation? When a bunch of kids are forced to live together like a herd of cattle because their father does not get enough even to buy them enough to eat, or because the father has been killed by the industrial machine, what mockery it is to invite the children to recreation as a panacea for their affliction.

Every child in the juvenile detention homes in the city of Chicago is the child of a wage worker. To find a pretty bourgeois kid in a penal institution is as rare as discovering a Lenin among the social democrats. Juvenile institutions were built for the workers' children. That is why they are so rotten; that is why they are schools of crime and perversion.

With overcrowded schools, increased employment of children and young workers, lowering of wages, a jump in the number of young criminals is inevitable. The Juvenile Protective Association reported 3,060 complaints last year, with all their "recreational" remedies we predict about a 25 per cent increase in business in the next year for them.

The standard of living of the parents is an accurate index to the amount of crime among the youth. To decrease crime, increase wages, strengthen the organization of the workers; to eradicate crime, destroy the capitalist system which looks at everything thru the spectacles of profit. Recreation and social activities are important problems for the youth, but to try to solve them within the capitalist system is like operating around the region of the heart with a rusty saw.

The tragedy of criminality among the youth is that after the young have fallen into the hands of the authorities once, for some real or fancied misdemeanor, their career of crime is assured. They are thrown into some juvenile home with expert teachers of crime, not only among the inmates, but among the "guards."

Lodge Launches Frail Craft to Salvage Denby

(By The Federated Press)

By LAURENCE TODD

WASHINGTON.—"It's lynch law, that's what it is," cried Senator Lodge, furiously, protesting in the senate against the resolution demanding the resignation of Secretary Denby. "It is an outrage on every principle of justice and fair play. It is a proposal to deprive this official of the right to be heard; it would strip him of all the ordinary means of defense; it gives him no opportunity to avail himself of the rights that are granted the meanest skulking thief."

Nobody had called Denby a mean, skulking thief. He had merely been charged, and proven by much testimony, reviewed for the senate by many of its prominent members, to have known the unanimous protest of the naval officers against his giving away control of the naval fuel supply to Fall. He had been shown to have taken part in this lawless and indefensible betrayal of public interest, and to have testified afterward to abyssmal ignorance, and finally to have written a letter saying that if he had the chance he would do it all over again. Then the Robinson resolution had called for his resignation. Trammell had offered the same resolution, as an amendment, to the Walsh resolution ordering suit to recover the oil lands, and declaring their transfer from the navy illegal.

Admits Denby Wrong

Lodge admitted, with much reluctance, that Denby had been in the wrong all the way thru, but argued that there was no "proof that he is not an honest man." Maybe he had shown incompetence. But that was the worst that could be said of him.

On the other hand, Lodge begged the senators to remember, this demand for resignation of a cabinet member was a direct invasion of the prerogative of the executive head of the government. It violated the plan laid down in the constitution. It is a dangerous move.

Borah indicated that he, too, thought congress had no right to dictate resignations from federal office—it could only impeach.

Pittman asked why the senate, which had exercised its constitutional power in confirming Denby's nomination to the office he holds, was not equally entitled to notify the president that it had changed its judgment as to Denby's fitness to hold public office. He agreed with Borah, however, in asking Trammell to withdraw the Denby resignation measure as an amendment to the oil lease cancellation resolution, and to let the senate deal separately with it. Trammell consented.

More Raw Justice Wanted

"Let's have less of refined justice and a little raw justice right here," was Senator Howell's proposal. He offered a substitute resolution on the lease cancellation issue, whereby the government would proceed to seize the naval oil lands, expel the Sinclair and Doheny companies, on the ground that they are trespassers, and then bring suit to recover the price of all oil thus far taken from these reserves. The senate defeated this plan without a roll call, just before it adopted, unanimously, the Walsh resolution.

During the morning of this final day of debate on the cancellation measure, President Coolidge had, for the first time, called to his office, any of the Democratic senators. Walsh, with Robinson, the minority leaders, saw Coolidge for a few minutes, and talked over the prosecutions which congress is now compelling him to begin. Republican leaders were also consulted by the president, separately from the Democrats. The game seemed to be one of sidetracking the resolutions demanding that Denby resign. The town was full of reports that Coolidge had arranged for "voluntary patriotic" resignation by Denby and Daugherty, but had found them disinclined to get out unless he should publicly guarantee their characters.

A. F. of L. Hits Daugherty

The A. F. of L. News Letter has come to the support of the movement aimed at forcing Daugherty out of the cabinet. It contrasts his haste in attacking the railroad shopmen, thru injunctions, with his utter disregard of his duty of law-enforcement in the Teapot Dome case. There is now no press statement from Daugherty, such as he frequently gave out during the shopmen's strike, as to how he would protect "government by law." The suggestion is made that a few individuals in this case may be made scapegoats, but that the higher-ups will go free and keep the swag they have hidden.

FIGHT FOR ALIEN WORKERS WAGED BY JEWISH REBELS

Yellow Labor Lead[illegible] Spurn United Front

The movement initiated by [illegible] Jewish Federation of the Wor[illegible] Party in New York City for the protection of the foreign born against discriminatory laws is spreading with great success. At the conference held on Saturday, Jan. 26, to plan a campaign, committees were present representing the Jewish Federation, and workers of the following nationalities: German, Russian, Lithuanian, Ukrainian, Finnish and Polish. The invitation to this conference was also accepted by the left Poale Zion, but was rejected by the right Poale Zion and the Jewish Socialist Federation.

The United Hebrew Trades held their own conference on Sunday, Jan. 27, with the purpose of starting a similar campaign, altho it was known that thousands of workers were entering into the united front movement initiated by the Jewish Federation. But Max Pine of the United Hebrew Trades and his cronies in that organization don't believe in a real organized fight for the protection of workingmen. A committee representing the united front movement proposed to the conference of the United Hebrew Trades to enter into the united front of thousands of workers who are intent upon starting a tremendous campaign against the exception laws being planned by the government.

But Max Pine delivered a lengthy speech the long and short of which was that the United Hebrew Trades is the whole universe and can go it alone, that it doesn't want to go into partnership with anyone. And the conference of the United Hebrew Trades sustained its hero, Max Pine, by voting down the proposal to really do something.

Frozen Anti-Toxin Makes 25 Students Ill in Massachusetts

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 7.—Twenty-five students at the McElwain school, Bridgewater, inoculated with frozen "toxin anti-toxin," have become infected and are ill at their home, it was learned today.

With 19 students already ill at Concord Academy, Concord, the treatments appeared rapidly assuming the proportions of a scandal.

Doctors were making a feverish investigation as reports of additional cases came in.

Fruits of Imperialism

Attentive observers of current politics know that trade follows the flag. It is also gradually becoming a commonplace that the flag follows the dollar.

The why and wherefore of the United States spending more than three million dollars annually on maintaining a fleet of battleships and torpedo boats, called the "banana boats," in the Caribbean in order to help certain American capitalists exploit the weaker Latin republics are put in the bold relief of the dollar sign in the latest reports of the Cuba Company and the United Fruit Company

These corporations are amongst the greatest beneficiaries of the imperialist policy the United States is now pursuing in Central and South America. Their last financial reports disclose some facts that are never told the working masses when they are called upon to finance punitive naval and military expeditions to these countries in order "to save civilization." It is also rather instructive coincidence that the two corporations were born in the very years in which America launched its offensive imperialist campaign.

Since 1900 the United Fruit Company, operating in these Latin republics, has already paid out nearly $150,000,000 in dividends alone. In the last seven years alone it has almost doubled its assets. Last year it made a net profit of more than 23 per cent, or $23,097,330.

The story of the Cuba Company, which owns many miles of Cuban railroads and sugar-fields, is no different. This corporation has recently come under the thumb of the New York Central Railroad. Last year the Cuba Company's railroad profits alone exceeded the 1922 figures by more than five million dollars.

These are some of the sweet fruits of imperialism garnered by our capitalist class. Our school teachers never tell our children about these cold dollar and cents advantages of imperialism to the empoying class. Our dollar democrats and dollar diplomats are usually silent about this side of our "civilizing" activities in the Latin countries. But every one of these dollars has come into the world "sweating blood and dirt from its pores," as Marx would say. Every one of these dollars of titanic profits pocketed by our leading citizens is only the congealed sweat and blood of the exploited and suppressed masses in these so-called backward countries.

More than that. The sweet fruits of imperialism are the fruits of death to the American working and farming masses. The continuation of this system of capitalist imperialist plunder is dependent on the maintenance of huge armies and giant battle-fleets. These sweet fruits of imperialism have within them the germs of war and all the fiendish destruction of working class life that war entails.

Honoring an Enemy of Labor

The Chicago Federation of Labor at its last meeting passed a motion expressing the sorrow of the organization over the death of Thomas Woodrow Wilson, the champion political mountebank of the world and the grave digger of what little freedom escaped the attention of the capitalist class before this country entered the world war in 1917, to serve the interests of the American plunderbund.

The motion might not have passed had not John Fitzpatrick, former "progressive," shut off discussion before the class conscious delegates could take the floor and expose this charlatan Wilson as an enemy of labor.

Fitzpatrick has not alone brazenly taken his place with the lackeys of Gompersism but he has not even the courage to allow those who oppose his backward crawl, the right to express their views on questions involving the honor of the labor movement.

The Chicago Federation of Labor expressed no regret over the death of Nicolai Lenin, the leader of world labor; a man whose name will stand out on the pages of history when Wilson's will be lost in the abyss of oblivion. Lenin, the foe of oppression and the brilliant strategist whose every thought was for the emancipation of his class, passed away with the Chicago Federation of Labor as silent as the Chicago Chamber of Commerce.

Woodrow Wilson, the double crosser, the intellectual tin can, the man who violated every principle he ever stood for, the man who issued injunctions against the workers, loosed a horde of stool pigeons among the American workers, invaded Russia without authorization of Congress and committeed other crimes too numerous to mention, is honored in death by the representatives of the workers he crucified when living. The twenty-three delegates who voted against the motion deserve the thanks of all honest workers.

Klan Democracy

Amongst the most vehement and raving defenders of pure American democracy, as enjoyed by the employers, is the hooded horde of Kleagles and Cyclops of the Ku Klux Klan.

The principles of this pure democracy and hundred per cent Americanism are supposed to be founded on the bed-rock of the inviolability of the ballot box. It is customary for the Klan hooligans and gangsters to parade about the country as the defenders of this sacred American institution of peace and civilization against the force and violence of the wild-eyed labor agitators, "reds," and foreigners.

Fortunately the great mass of workingmen and farmers has not fallen for this hypocritical talk of the masked maniacs of capitalist reaction. But perhaps the most damning evidence yet offered to unmask the dangerous pretensions of the Klan is the survey sent to the United States Senate by Hume Graves, the Texas Senate Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms, on the election of the Klan Senator Earl R. Mayfield. The findings show that the Klan was able to send its agent to the Senate oniy thru committing the worst frauds and outrages against the very ballot box institution they have been defending so vociferously in the open. Ballot boxes were found unopened. Only ten of the 165 precincts checked up so far have been found to be within the law. Many election officials have admitted that they wrote in Mayfield's name before handing out ballots. In one county the ardent democrats even went so far as to burn the ballots.

This conduct of the Klan is typical of all the loud-mouthed capitalist enemies of the working class. The fraud and violence committed by the Klan in the Texas election of Mayfield to the Senate show that all the blatant talk by the employing class agents about the blessings of democracy and the dangers of proletarian rule is merely a smoke-screen of poison gas behind which is hidden the iron rule of the capitalist dictatorship over the working and farming masses.

Salvaging the Farm Bankers

In an eleventh hour, desperate attempts to stem the tide of dissatisfaction amongst the farmers of the Northwest, Coolidge called a "relief" conference. At this conference there were gathered God's and the President's chosen noblemen of finance and industry.

An examination of the specific measures proposed by the Coolidge agents convinces one that this is merely an effort to save the farm bankers who have been hit hard by the depression in which the farming masses now find themselves.

The spirit of this conference was manifested in the President's declaration that to help the farmer, who was helpless before the mortgage sharks and credit Shylocks, would be bad business and therefore useless. This is the fundamental feature of all capitalist relief plans. They are all calculated to help those who need help least and to neglect those who need help most.

Diversified farming, that hackneyed hoax the repetition of which tends to make one's nerves raw, was blazoned on high as the prime panacea. But not a word was said to show that this exalted remedy cannot offer immediate relief because it would take several years to develop new farm enterprises. One might add that this proposal is also an immediate relief measure only for the bankers, to whom Coolidge proposes to lend fifty million dollars in order to help start the new farm enterprises. Not a word was said by Coolidge and his aids about the fact that this diversified farming would in effect mean, for the farmers, only a transfer from their present bondage to grain and stock gamblers, to the milk trust and commission merchants.

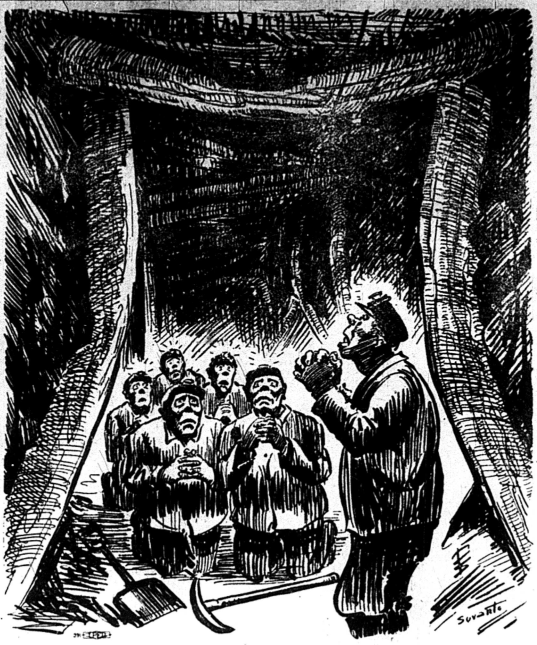
Then the President's much-vaunted War Finance Corporation was put forward. This institution's record to date shows that at least 75 per cent of the funds it has expended have gone to powerful capitalist organizations and not towards the relief of farmers and workers in distress.

Finally the utter lack of sincerity characterizing the whole Coolidge fit of charity is most clearly evidenced by his offer to extend the period of existing indebtedness of the farmers. The President well knows that a creditor can get as much money from a bankrupt farmer as he can get blood from a stone. More than 15 per cent of the farm owners, and more than 120 per cent of the farm tenants in 15 northwestern states have already been granted such an extension of credit by their creditors and saved from formal bankruptcy simply because the money lenders could do nothing else. Economic necessity settled this policy of leniency for these creditors.

The farmers will not be fooled by the Coolidge maneuvers. The farmers' strong protest of disapproval of this program at the conference is the best sign of the fact that Coolidge can't pull the wool over their eyes. The farm relief program proposed by Coolidge is only an attempt to salvage some of the bankers who have been drawn into the slough of economic depression that has overwhelmed the farmers.

If Florida wants to become really popular as a health resort for cabinet officials it will have to secede so that warrants can't be served there.

'TIS SAID, "PRAYERS WILL BE ANSWERED"



The Prayer, "Permit the Timbers to Stand So We May Make More Money for the Boss."

THE UNITY OF THE LAMB AND THE LION

By MARTIN ABERN

In the January issue of the Labor Herald, Earl R. Browder, writes of the recent moves of the yellow leadership of the trade unions to get together with the bankers, industrialists, and other capitalists in a policy of pulling the wool over the eyes of the working sheep. He points out some of the features of class unity, such as Johnston's "co-operation" scheme for making the unions into efficiency bureaus for capitalist production, and the "Industrial democracy" program of Gompers and Berry at the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The sell-out of the worker by the bureaucratic machine of the American Federation of Labor seems almost complete. The capitalists themselves feel quite confident that thru these lap-dogs employed by Labor but serving capitalism, that everything will be lovely, and that they need expect no real fuss or disturbance from Brother Johnston, or Gompers, or Berry, or any other of their ilk.

The January bulletin of the National City Bank of New York, one of the most influential banking institutions, not only in the United States, but in the world, speaks quite warmly and reassuringly of their alliance with the reactionary trade union leadership. Here is what this influential organ of capitalist America has to say: "The labor situation is more encouraging than it has been. The prospects are regarded favorable for the maintenance of good relationship between the railroad companies and their employes. WITHOUT MATERIAL ADVANCE UPON PRESENT WAGES. (The emphasis is ours). The most serious wage disputes in prospect is that in the bituminous coal industry, which is the natural result of the settlement of the anthracite strike. Labor in this country, however, shows a growing sense of social responsibility and in the past year has been vigorously rooting out the radical elements from its councils. It has a growing appreciation for the fact that the real gains for the wage earning class do not come from mere wage advances—which come back severely upon the wage earning class in the cost of living, but is in improvements in production which increase the supply of comforts for distribution. Once this truth is fully comprehended industry will go forward with great strides."

The meaning of this passage is quite plain. Evidently the capitalists feel quite safe that the trade union leaders will deliver their trade unions bound hand and foot and gagged, to them. "Prospects are regarded favorable for the maintenance of good relationship between the railroad companies and their employes, without material advance upon present wages." This, no doubt, is the kind of service Mr. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, had in mind when he spoke of his scheme of "co-operation" between the railroads and the unions.

Mr. Johnston's scheme plainly intends to deliver the union men to the railroads at the lowest possible price, even as others deliver "arch brick, super heaters, stokers, or lubricating oils" at the lowest possible price. Of such is the service of the Johnstons and the Gompers to the labor movement.

"Labor in this country, however, shows a growing sense of social responsibility, and in the past year has been vigorously rooting out the radical elements from its councils." A growing sense of social responsibilities of labor, eh? What is meant, rather, is the service, of the labor lieutenants of capitalism, Johnston, Gompers, Berry and Co., to the capitalist class.

The National City Bank statement is clear. Capital and labor leaders have united firmly, closely, aye, organically, it might be said, against the workers and those striving to better the conditions of the workers. This is the new "industrial democracy" that the comrades-in-arms of the Civic federation, the National City Bank and the like, Mr. Berry of the Pressmen's Union, John L. Lewis and Samuel Gompers, etc., so loudly proclaim.

"That all workers, including managers, get proper compensation for what they put into industry," is one of the principals governing industries," says Major Berry.

This means "without material advances upon the present wages," as the National City Bank of New York puts it, else how could there be, as Mr. Berry has it, "adequate compensation on investments, for the employes?" There is no need for Mr. Woll, speaking before the City Club of Chicago, to say "It is labors' hope that there will come into existence an economic and industrial chamber in which all factors of industry shall be fairly represented to determine rules and regulations, shall impose upon themselves and confine political government for the functions which it is best qualified and best suited." Mr. Woll and his comapny have joined the economic and industrial chamber of capitalism, in which it can be surely stated, they are fairly represented, but certainly not the workers, whom they supposedly represent. If this is the "economic and industrial Chamber" and the new "industrial democracy" which these labor leaders would give us, then, indeed, must the workers call "God help us and save us from our friends."

Yet, this is not so humorous, as it all might appear. The fact remains that these lackeys of Wall Street, in the ranks, and, most unfortunately, at the head of the trade unions in America, are going ahead holdly and swiftly with their plans for "class collaboration" or tying the labor unions to the boot of capitalism. This can only mean to the working class lower wages, longer hours, harder working conditions, lower standard of living. Surely the workers can appreciate that or do they think too, as Johnston of the Machinists, Woll, Gompers, Lewis, and the National City Bank? The National City Bank has this to say about wages: "It (labor) has a growing appreciation of the fact that the real gains for the wage earning class do not come from mere wage advances, which come back heavily upon the wage earning class, in the cost of living, but from improvements in production which improves the supply of comforts for distribution. "Surely not the National City Bank, nor even Samuel Gompers, can kid the working class with such stupid economics. The worker knows quite well that if wages fall, profits will rise, and if wages rise, profits will fall, and, further, that for the most part, improvements in production, instead of bringing more comforts and a higher standard of living, have only brought lower wages relatively and absolutely, and a lower standard of living for the wage earning class. Only under Communism can an improvement in the means of production mean a real advance for the good of the working class. Whenever the workers insist upon a raise in wages, whether they know it or not, they are only making an attempt to get value for the increased value of their efforts, or labor power. If they did not get this raise, their standard of living would sink at once.

All the "co-operation" schemes of Johnston for capital and labor, and the "Industrial democracy" of Gompers and Berry, the banking schemes of Sigman, cannot blind the workers to the fact that the only way they ever get anything from their employers is thru fighting. They never got anything handed to them on a platter, and they never will. Recognizing it or not, they engage in a class struggle with the employing class whether it be for an increase in wages, shorter working hours, or for the abolition of the capitalist system of society itself. They know that every time they "co-operate and collaborate" with the employers, they find themselves getting the dirty end of the stick. It is the co-operation of the shearer and the shorn that Brother Johnston proposes, which is all right for Mr. Johnston who has joined the side of the shearers, but this is not for the fighting trade unionists or for any class conscious worker. Their's is to battle. The moves of the American Federation of Labor bureaucrats, for unity with Wall Street and Big Business, or in other words, the sale of the merchandise, the laboring class, to the capitalists, must be combatted to the limit or very vestige of working class independence and strength in the United States will be destroyed. Not class collaboration, but class struggle, not unity with capitalists, but struggle for the overthrow of the capitalist system must be the answer of the militant rank and file in the American Federation of Labor and all the workers to the pernicious schemes of their yellow leadership.

No worker, young or old, can fall for this cheap gaff. So far as the Young workers are concerned, they will raise the cry of greater organization of the workers; not unity with the bosses, but unity collaboration of all workers, young and old, in the unions, and on the political field against the capitalists is the answer of the young workers and the Young Workers League to Gompers and the National City Bank.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Samuel Gompers believes that some day machinery will do all the heavy, laborious work now performed by human beings, according to a feature story in a recent issue of the Boston Globe. The labor leader declared that the world has not yet produced one tenth of what it is able to produce. When machinery comes into its own, people will not starve even tho they may have to do very little work, Mr. Gompers says.

Gompers decided to devote his life to the service of labor we are told after he witnessed a parade of starving silkweavers in his native land, England. The introduction of machinery threw them out of work. Gompers does not say how those who are thrown out of industry thru the speeding up of the productive power of machinery are going to be provided for. Will the capitalists provide for them?

Gompers believes, according to the Globe writer, that there is enough for every one and then some, and that each receives what he deserves. J. P. Morgan once declared that the longshoreman who worked for $10.00 a week, was not entitled to any more if he was satisfied with that meagor wage. Will Mr. Gompers say that the workers who produce all the wealth of society and receive back in wages only a small portion of it get what they are entitled to or deserve? If Mr. Gompers is as he claimed, devoting his life to the workers, it would be a happy day for the latter if he got disgusted with their ingratitude and joined the nearest Chamber of Commerce. Sam has no solution for the problems that face the workers today. The development of the machine surely will relieve mankind of the drudgery involved in producing the necessities of life but only when that machine is owned and controlled by the workers themselves and not used to swell up the profits of individual owners will the machine be a real blessing to humanity. This is communism; the ownership of the wealth producing machinery by the producers and the control of society by the workers. Gompers does not like this because it makes no provision for labor fakers or labor lieutenants of capitalism as the late and unlamented Mark Hanna called them.

The $15,000,000 suit brought by the shopmen's organization against the Pennsylvania railroad system was dismissed today by the federal district court on the ground that the United States courts had no power to enforce the decisions of the United States Railroad Labor Board. It appears the only function this fake board served was to fool the workers into the belief that it could serve them. Whenever the board rules against the workers the latter must obey its decisions else injunctions followed by armed troops will be hurled against them, but when the railroads defy the Board's decisions the courts are powerless. Yet we are told all are equal under our laws.

An English worker may now go to sleep just a common piece of clay and wake up an aristocrat with a string of titles and the privilege of wearing a garter and taking a bath. Since Ramsay MacDonald became prime minister he and the king have been busy manufacturing peers of the realm. Under the British constitution certain offices cannot be filled except by peers, so instead of looking around for a peer who might be 100 per cent regular, they simply turn out a brand new one. Thus it happens that Thomas Griffiths, a former tin plate slave who worked for eight cents a day, is now treasurer of the king's household; John Parkinson, a coal digger, is now controller of the royal household, while John Davidson, whose career started in a bootshop, is His Majesty's Vice Chamberlain. The duties of Vice Chamberlain are said to lack dignity tho it is possible the newly created aristocrat, who must see to George's personal requirements, may have an assistant to do the dirty work.

It would be interesting to know how the king feels when his three labor attendants sing the Red Flag. He will probably thank his stars that the leaders of the British Labor party don't take revolution as seriously as they do in Russia, for instance. The English may try to free the workers by elevating them to the peerage. The Russians abolished all titles and hereditary distinctions and made the title of "worker" the most honored in the land. And we believe that the British workers have their toughest fight ahead of them while the Russians are over theirs.

ITALY YIELDS RECOGNITION TO SOVIETS

Holland And Norway Are Next In Line

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW.—The Italian government yields full diplomatic recognition to Soviet Russia today, following the example set last week by Great Britain.

The Italian diplomatic representative has informed Foreign Secretary Chicherin that his nation recognizes the present government of Russia without qualifications.

Rome is prepared to appoint an ambassador to Moscow immediately and request the Russian government to dispatch a duly appointed ambassador to the Italian capital.

At the same time the Russian foreign offices announced that the Russian diplomatic representative in Rome has received similar notification of the formal recognition of his government.

Further Russian diplomatic victories are looked for along the line. Holland and Norway are expected to follow the example of England and Italy quickly. The need of Russian trade and the established power of the workers' government has shown the futility of the policy of isolation which European nations have followed until now.

Mussolini Forced by Crisis.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME.—Mussolini's act in recognizing Russia is a turn-about-face from the policy he has pursued since he first made war upon labor and seized power as an exponent of reaction. Political observers explain his act as one dictated by the economic exigencies of Italy and say that in recognizing Russia for the sake of the Russian trade Italy needs he is taking the only course open to Italy, if she would avoid going down in the economic debacle that has engulfed other parts of Europe.

The act of recognition raises a new issue in the April elections when Fascismo goes before the voters for the first time. Mussolini will now attempt to gain the suffrage of liberals on the basis of the recognition pact and at the same time will continue to bid for the support of reaction on the basis of his domestic policies.

Holland to Follow.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

THE HAGUE.—Recognition of the de jure Russian government by Holland is a matter of a very short time, it is believed. Since Britain and Italy have yielded recognition this busy little republic of manufacturers and traders can do naught but follow suit unless is is prepared to lose the commerce with the great nation of eastern Europe that is finding its outlet thru the west.

The offer of Soviet representatives is to make Rotterdam one of the chief importing and exporting centers for Russia and thus put on its feet this Dutch port which is so paralyzed by the strangling of the Ruhr district.

Japan Fears Recognition.

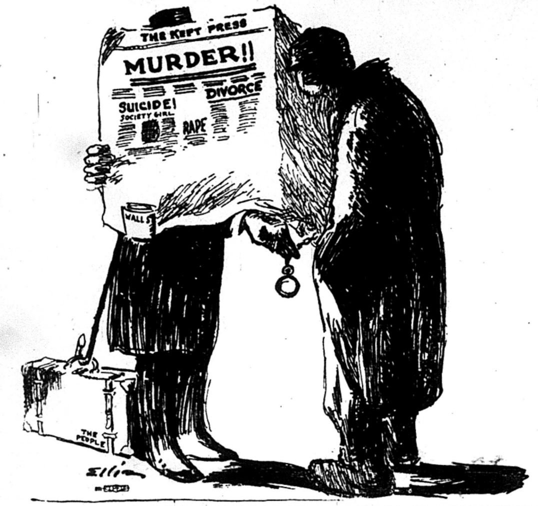
France Still Flinty.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS.—The Poincare government, alone in Europe, is turning a flinty face towards Moscow and the statement is given out from official circles that France will not follow the example of England and Italy and recognize the Soviet Republic.

Trade reasons would dictate recognition if they were the only reasons to be considered but the enormous Russian bonded debt which French investors hold make the attitude of French rulers different from that of the merchant nations. These huge Russian bonds were sold by the Czar's government largely to finance his war with Japan and the costly repressions of the Russian revolutionary movement in which he indulged and the Soviet government has not considered the obligations incurred by the overthrown tyrant as something demanding early consideration.

THE OLD STORY



Chicago Workers Get Big Start In Daily Workers Sub Campaign

The active DAILY WORKER boosters' meeting, Thursday night, agreed unanimously that the goal set for the present subscription drive, of 1,000 new readers, is an object easily within our reach for the period set of one month.

The campaign will begin definitely Sunday, Feb. 10th, and terminate March 10th.

All branch DAILY WORKER Agents received an adequate supply of subscription books and took upon themselves to make sure that in each case their whole membership would do active work.

Those present at the meeting organized themselves as a vanguard of the drive ready to take the lead.

Each party branch will cover particularly the immediate territory in which it is located, and every workman's home will be visited. Our comrades will approach their shop mates and union members. When this campaign gets well under way, Chicago will know that the DAILY WORKER is in existence, and our comrades promised that they would see to it that the natives sit up and take notice of this fact.

Each branch DAILY WORKER Agent has a big task in organizing their membership for the campaign, and the meeting advised that wherever possible they secure a committee to assist in the work. A thousand new subscribers by March 10th is the slogan and an extra prize will eventually be provided for anybody who can give a good and sufficient reason why this number cannot be reached.

Anyone who wishes to participate in the campaign but who was unable to attend the meeting, may secure supplies and register for the drive at the office of the Workers Party, Room 307, 166 W. Washington St., or at the DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted St. Members of the Workers Party are urged to get into touch with their DAILY WORKER branch agent immediately so as to become informed of the duties and privileges of all participants in the campaign.

Watch the "Daily Worker" for the first installment of "A Week," the great epic of the Russian revolution, by the brilliant young Russian writer, Iury Libedinsky. It will start soon.

Fort-Whiteman and Minor to Tell About Negro Hero

The first mass meeting of "Negro Week" will be held tomorrow night when Robert Minor, editor of the Liberator, and Lovett Fort-Whiteman of the Chicago Labor Defender, speak on Frederick Douglass, the great negro abolitionist, at Wendell Phillips High School, 39th street and Prairie avenue.

Minor and his colleague believe that Douglass' work was far more effective in shaping the abolition movement than the work of the men who are more generally lauded in the pages of history. And his career was colored with more of the light of adventure; made up as it was of hair-breath escapes and marvelous heroism.

Fort-Whitemen is a delegate to the All-Race Assembly sitting thru next week.

Relief Drive In Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—The Los Angeles conference for German relief, which has been organized under the auspices of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany, will hold a mass meeting Sunday, Feb. 17th, at 2 p. m., in Blanchard hall, 233 S. Broadway. There will be prominent speakers and good music.

House Committee Disavows Scheme to Force Aliens to Become U. S. Citizens

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Members of the House committee on immigration hasten to disavow the Davis alien registration measure, H. R. 691, and to declare that no scheme for forcing aliens to become citizens will be favored by that committee.

Citizenship or deportation are the alternatives placed before the immigrant by the Davis bill, and under pretext of enforcing this rule the immigrant is to be kept continually under espionage. If he violates a strike injunction—out he may be thrown.

LAUNCH FARMER-LABOR PARTY IN BISMARCK, N. D.

Endorse May 30 Meet; Adopt Program

BULLETIN.

BISMARK, N. D.—Nothing shows better the temper of the conference that launched the North Dakota Farmer-Labor Party here than the following telegram sent to Senators LaFollette, Frazier, Shipstead, Johnson and Sinclair:

At a conference composed of some of the most representative old time leaguers, in the state, the Farmer-Labor Party of No. Dakota was formed. We are in favor of the May 30th convention at the twin cities and opposed to its postponement.

Signed: WALKER, Chairman, and MARTINSON, Secretary.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D.—D. H. Hamilton, an old nonpartisan league member of the state senate, said last night after the convention: "The non-partisan league has been stolen from the people of North Dakota by a bunch of tin-horn politicians; they have made it a smoothly running machine."

As a result of this situation, R. H. Walker announced to the non-partisan league convention that immediately following adjournment a conference would be called for the purpose of organizing a state Farmer-Labor party.

At the all night conference which took place as the result of this announcement, attended by forty delegates and many sympathizers, the Farmer-Labor party was launched and [illegible]national and state program adopted.

Resolutions were passed calling upon LaFollette to leave the Republican party and help lead the movement. A resolution was also adopted endorsing the May 30 conference and against its postponement.

The Federated United front campaign was endorsed and the Farmer-Labor Voice made the official organ of the North Dakota Farmer-Labor party.

R. H. Walker was elected State Chairman; H. R. Martinson, secretary of the Fargo Trades and Labor Assembly, was chosen state secretary; an executive committee of five which includes the chairman and secretary and one member from

DRIVE DENBY OUT, SOLONS' NEW SLOGAN

Navy Head's Conduct Too "Flagrant Faithlessness"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—Secretary of the Navy Denby should be driven out of office "with all the odium that can possibly attach to his going," Senator Walsh, the Montana investigator who unearthed the Teapot Dome scandal, told the Senate today.

Walsh's attack on Denby followed testimony before the Senate Teapot Dome Committee by F. G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, which revealed:

That Bonfils, with Leo Stack, a Denver politician, had a contract with Harry Sinclair, Teapot Dome lessee, under which Sinclair has already paid $25,000 and must pay $1,000,000 more if he wants to drill certain acreage in Teapot Dome.

That Stack at one time tried to get Teapot Dome for E. L. Doheny, lessee of the California reserves.

That there apparently was a compromise between Sinclair and Doheny by which one was to take Teapot Dome, the other the California reserves.

Bonfils "Kept Quiet."

Bonfils' testimony today was a voluntary statement by him, given principally to explain the suppression of facts gathered by his brother, Stackelback, in New Mexico, with relation to Fall. These facts, not published by Bonfils' paper, were furnished to Senator Walsh of the Senate Committee.

Bonfils told the committee he suppressed the story because it was libelous. His testimony regarding his contract with Sinclair was regarded by the committee as interesting but not particularly significant or as having any bearing upon the question of illegality or corruption in the making of the Teapot Dome lease.

It was an interesting sidelight, Senators on the committee said, on Sinclair's willingness to spend large sums to get Teapot Dome, indicating that he expected to make huge profits out of it.

Bitter Attack on Denby.

Walsh's attack on Denby, delivered soon after the Senate met, was the bitterest yet heard since the Senate began considering the Robinson resolution demanding Denby be called on to resign.

Walsh expresses doubt that Denby could be impeached.

"Stupidity," he said, "is not a ground for impeachment. I do believe Mr. Denby guilty of treason. I know of no evidence upon which he could be convicted of bribery or any other high crime or misdemeanor.

"But this is no time to stand up on fine spun theories concerning the exact line dividing the domain of the executive from that of the legislative branch of the government.

Charges Crime.

"A great crime has been committed. The very structure of our government rocks upon its foundation in consequence of the revelations made in connection with it. There is but one way to restore to it that confidence which is indispensible to its stability and perpetuity, namely, to visit upon the perpetrators the extremest rigor of the law and to drive from the public service every one thru whose connivance or supineness it became possible.

"Are you willing, my colleagues, to turn back these great properties into the keeping of Edwin Denby? I am not.

Drive Denby From Office.

"Are you willing to condone the flagrant faithlessness which has characterized his administration of his great office as revealed by his own testimony before you? I am not.

"Are you content to let him down easy lest sensibilities be offended or political prospects be affected? I am not.

"I want to see him driven from office with all the odium that can possibly attach to his going, that his fate may serve for all time as a warning to those who might other-

Workers Protested Against Death That Lurked in Lake Over Mine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CROSBY, Minn.—Refusal to drain Rabbit lake because it furnished ice to the town in the vicinity of the Milford mine is responsible for the death of the 42 miners caught and drowned when it broke into the drift which followed the vein of manganese iron ore.

The DAILY WORKER correspondent learned today that as long ago as last August the miners had discussed the danger from the lake and had asked that it be drained. They were unorganized and no attention was paid to their protest altho it is impossible that the Milford mine engineers could not have known of the increasing danger as the working-face was driven on a slant up toward the bottom of Rabbit lake.

Absolutely no precautions had been taken against such a catastrophe as occurred altho it was an imminent danger for the last three or four months, as is shown by the fact that the drowned miners were standing about the bottom of the shaft at the close of the shift when overwhelmed by the flood of mud and water.

Death by Few Minutes.

The few minutes spent awaiting the cage to take them up cost them their lives.

The Milford mining company is protected by liability insurance.

The pumps that have been installed are lowering the water level in the mine but the swamp mud is believed to have filled most of the drifts and stopes and it will take weeks and maybe months to remove the bodies.

A 15-year-old boy, Frank Hvratin, is credited with saving the lives of the seven miners that escaped. He was some distance from the main shaft, heard the rush of the water and ran to the mouth of the level telling the men to "get on top."

So close was the water to the men who escaped that Harvey Hosford, the last of the seven to reach the collar of the shaft, was wet to the waist.

Superintendent H. T. Middlebrook did not go below Tuesday, altho it is said that it was his custom to make one trip down every day.

Science With Cold Cruelty Watches Law's New Death Mode

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CARSON CITY, Nev., Feb. 8.—A civilization which was horrified as Germany introduced poison gas as a weapon of war, today seized upon that same weapon as its legal means of taking the law's toll of "A life for a life."

Once regarded too horrible for war, hydro-cyanic acid gas this morning was used to bring "a kindly sleeping death" to a man condemned to die for murder.

Gee Jon, Chinese, representative of the world's oldest civilization, is the man who was recorded as the first to die by this new means of inflicting capital punishment. He died in a little cell house of stone; ten by ten feet square, sitting apart from all else in the prison yard of the Nevada State Penitentiary here.

For two years he has waited, while courts, prison boards, politicians and finally "experts" on poisons and deadly gasses, debated first one phase and then another of his fate.

Finally, the highest tribunals available to him put the stamp of the law's approval—the stamp which meant at least legal acceptance by society—on lethal gas as a more humane method of taking human life than the firing squad or the hangman's noose.

Today was appointed as the day for the great experiment—the official test on a human subject of science's newest development.

The condemned man faced death as he awakened this morning with only a little more certainty than might a man desperately ill. He knew the day on which he was to die but not the hour. That detail, under the law, was withheld from him.

At 9:37 a. m. three guards marched with the Chinaman from the condemned row of the state penitentiary here, forty yards across the prison yard to the lethal chamber. He walked quietly, with practically no sign of nervousness.

The door was closed behind him and he was bound hand and foot to a heavy metal cot.

The process, all of which had been thoroly rehearsed, required but a moment.

Immediately when the death chamber door was closed, three guards spun wheels which turned the valves.

There was a hiss of the poison gas rushing under pressure thru the conduits and into the cell.

Watchers at the death house window saw only a slight tremor of the body and then the man's head fell suddenly to the right side and the doctors declared that he was dead.

Three minutes elapsed between the time the gas was introduced into the death chamber and the time the physicians made their preliminary announcement of death. It is believed that death came even more quickly than that.

Thirty persons, mostly newspapermen, watched the execution thru the little window in the death chamber.

Immediately after physicians said they believed Gee Jon dead, a current of fresh air was forced into the death chamber and later guards entered and brought out the body.

Doctors, while waiting for the cell to be cleared of gas, estimated that but 10 seconds elapsed between the time the valve was turned and the time Gee Jon was entirely unconscious.

They said they believed he was dead six minutes later.

It usually requires from 10 to 17 minutes to bring death by hanging.

Witnesses agreed that the chief sign of approaching death which they saw was a slight twitching of the body.

Thomas Russell, an American born Mexican, who killed his Indian bride, was to have died with Gee Jon, by the same experiment. But his sentence was commuted late Thursday afternoon to life imprisonment.

FRENCH COMMUNISTS GET THE GOAT OF PREMIER POINCARE

PARIS.—"I've stood enough, I'm going," shouted Premier Poincare in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon after some particularly bitter and personal heckling by Communist members.

Poincare stalked out of the chamber, followed by his cabinet and the session was suspended by the president.

There was an uproar in the chamber.

Finally, the premier returned and the session was resumed.

Deputy Peret pleaded with the Communists to cease personal invectives.

Still Chasing "Nicky."

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 8.—A nation-wide hunt was on today for Jules P. (Nicky) Arnstein, central figure in the $5,000,000 bond theft investigation in New York four years ago, and now sought on a warrant charging him with obtaining $48,000 in a wire tapping swindle in Youngstown, Ohio, in July, 1922.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Former President Taft is now considered virtually to have recovered from the attack of indigestion which sent him to bed on Wednesday, his doctor said today.

QUEBEC, Feb. 8.—Breaking of a natural ice bridge and the sweeping away down the raging St. Lawrence of nine persons proved upon investigation today to have resulted in no casualties.

BREWER EXPOSES BOND THIEVES; OFFICE RAIDED

William J. Burns Breaks into Attorney's Rooms

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—Department of Justice agents broke into the office of Charles B. Brewer, special assistant attorney general, and attempted to steal evidence involving high government officials in one of the greatest scandals in the history of the American government.

The raid occurred after Mr. Brewer refused to turn over the evidence to Under Secretary of the Treasury Winton on the request of Assistant Attorney General Hollander.

Interest in the discharge of 28 employes of the Bureau of Engraving by the Harding administration is revived by the latest scandal.

Brewer fearing that desperate measures would be used by William J. Burns to steal the evidence asked for an injunction of the Columbia Supreme Court to prevent this evidence from being taken away from him by government officials.

He also took the precaution of turning over the key of his safety deposit vault to Senator King of Illinois for safe keeping.

Attorney General Daugherty twice discharged Brewer and the latter was reinstated by the late President Harding and again by President Coolidge. The Treasury Department and the Department of Justice refused to co-operate with him in making public the duplication of liberty bonds which has caused the government a loss of millions.

It was presentation of this evidence to President Harding that caused the latter to discharge the Bureau of Engraving employees.

Brewer had a conference with President Harding in December, 1922, during which the president in the presence of Daugherty, Under Secretary Gilbert, Commissioner of Public Debt Houghton and Chief Moran of the Treasury Secret Service, discussed the duplication of government bonds. Harding afterwards declared in the presence of Mellon that: "They call this man a 'nut.' It takes a 'nut' to bring me such things as you see here. They are after this man good and hard and I don't intend to let anything happen to him."

Since then the destruction of duplicate bonds has been going on in spite of the warning of President Harding that the administration would need the evidence to clear itself. But the Coolidge administration is now desperate and its slogan "Spurlos Versenkt." But there is so much graft wreckage lying around that a tidal wave could not dispose of it.

The workers of America are now having an excellent object lesson in the putridity of capitalist politics. The so-called upholders of "law and order" who spend most of the time—when they are not busy looting the public resources—jailing radicals, are now exposed in their true colors.

Among the conclusions arrived at by Brewer after his investigation, the most outstanding are the following:

There are about 3,000 known pairs of duplicate bonds and 4,000 pairs of duplicate coupons. Duplicates are still pouring in. Treasury officials have made no real effort to trace cause of duplication and duplicates are being held by guilty parties waiting for destruction of the bonds which would prove their guilt.

Denials of guilt continue to come from the Treasury Department but the probers continue to probe. A non-partisan committee is drafting a resolution ordering an investigation of Brewer's charges of a $1,000,000 bond fraud. The members of this committee are La Guardia, New York; Woodruff, Michigan, and Jeffers, Alabama.

The Tempest Bursts Out of the Teapot

By JOHN PEPPER.

THE political significance of the Teapot Dome scandal is growing ever bigger.

The indignation of the masses against the corruption of the highest government officials is growing more and more bitter. The investigation is in fact only beginning, but already voices arise everywhere in the capitalist camp for closing the investigation.

Washington is panic-stricken. Everybody is suspected and justly so. Nobody knows today who will be involved in the scandal tomorrow. Democratic politicians began the investigation with the intent of having a good election issue against the corrupt Republican leaders. But the second step of the investigation followed quickly after. The Republican politicians in their turn exposed the Democratic leaders. Today we have the unprecedented situation where both Republican and Democratic "leaders of the nation" at once, stand before the nation with their clothing of patriotism and respectability torn off and the masses see with horror their naked ugliness and shame.

It is an unexampled political schooling for the masses.

The scandal is too big. The masses are beginning to realize that it is not an accidental corruption of kept men in the government, but that the sickness is in the system itself, and that the United States has a kept government. The New York Times spoke in the name of the whole capitalist class when it declared that the Madison Square Garden mass demonstration of tens of thousands of Communist workers is not dangerous in itself, but becomes dangerous thru the occurrences in Washington, that the real danger lies in the fact that the great masses are losing their faith in the present system of government.

And the New York Times is right. The happenings in Washington, the disintegration of the old capitalist parties, the disillusionment of the workers and farmers over sacred American democracy gives significance to the Communist demonstration, joins the Communist vanguard of the working class with the hitherto backward masses of the working class.

The Teapot Dome scandal will advance and hasten the disintegration process of the old capitalist parties. The Third Party movement has received a new impetus. The spokesmen of the lower middle class utilize the discrediting of the political leaders of the big capitalists to snatch the farmers, small business men and workers away from the old party politicians and to unite them in a Third Party. Hearst's New York American writes in connection with the oil scandal: "In fact the public mind is in such a temper that if the predatory financial interests played their old game and captured both party conventions for 'safe' candidates, NOTHING WOULD STOP THE POPULAR REVOLT AND THE ELECTION OF AN INSURGENT THIRD PARTY CANDIDATE." Victor Berger, the petty bourgeois Socialist, has made a public appeal to LaFollette calling upon him to form a Third Party, promising that Victor Berger and all other petty bourgeois elements would follow him.

It is an undisputed fact that millions of farmers and lower middle class elements today no longer belong to the old capitalist parties. If the consolidation of these elements into a Third Party advances so slowly, the chief cause for it, apart from inertia, is the betrayal of the "progressive" politicians in Congress who are still sticking to the old capitalist parties. We must not forget that as long as these so-called "progressives" remain in the old capitalist parties, they help to maintain the unity of the capitalist class against the workers, they assure for the capitalists the necessary mass support by keeping in the camp of the old capitalist parties, not only millions of farmers but also millions of workers. We must, therefore, utilize the Teapot Dome scandal to denounce all these "progressive" senators and representatives before the masses as traitors and as indirect accomplices of the corrupt capitalist politicians, as long as they remain in the Republican and Democratic parties. We must help to stir up a mass indignation which will force the La Follettes and Wheelers to step out of the Republican and Democratic parties.

But our main task—as I stated in my previous article on the Teapot Dome scandal—is to deepen the wrath of the workers and exploited farmers and to turn it into an opposition to the capitalist governmental system.

We must show the workers and farmers that our democracy is nothing but the rule of finance capital.

We must prove that this scandal is not an accident, but is of the essence of the present governmental system owned by capitalism. We must show that it is no remedy to drive out the corrupt "statesmen" and to elect "honest" statesmen, because it is impossible to separate corruption and exploitation of the masses from the capitalist governmental system.

A great opportunity presents itself for showing the masses the only remedy—their own rule, the workers' and farmers' government. Never yet was there such a fine chance before us for fashioning the instrument to this goal—the independent class party of farmers and workers. WE MUST TIE UP THE LESSONS OF THE TEAPOT DOME SCANDAL WITH OUR CAMPAIGN FOR THE CONVENTION OF THE FARMER-LABOR MOVEMENT ON MAY 30, IN ST. PAUL.

An active political mass party of the workers and farmers is possible only if we succeed in focusing the eyes and interests of the workers and farmers upon government and Congress. It is the most important Communist duty to do that; and to that end, we must utilize every event of political life, every industrial struggle of workers, every strike movement of unions, every misfortune of bankrupt farmers. Seldom before did political history offer a better opportunity for doing this.

Senator Reed characterized the Sinclair and Doheny leases as "The most gigantic steal of history." And he cried out with fear: "The federal government has often faced great dangers. It has not hitherto experienced so great a national shame." We must utilize the most gigantic steal of history to set in motion the most gigantic workers' and farmers' movement of our history. The great indignation of the masses against the great national shame must be converted into solid organization. We must do our utmost to have the capitalist federal government really face the greatest danger. We must stake everything upon making the demand of workers' and farmers' government the irresistible demand of the masses.

Fur Workers' Union Wins Two-Year Agreement Approved by Rank and File

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—A new agreement between the Associated Fur Manufacturers, Inc., and the International Fur Workers' Union, replacing one which expired Jan. 31, has been ratified by the rank and file of both sides.

The agreement covers a period of two years and grants the union a few concessions. Ratification was delayed on account of hostility towards it by certain manufacturers. Union officials claim that in a referendum vote 92 per cent of the membership voted for ratification.

wise fail the republic as he has failed it."

Walsh attacked Senator Lenroot, chairman of the committee, for attempting to draw McAdoo into the controversy, saying:

"It was reserved to the chairman of the committee who has repeatedly from the floor lectured other members for giving to the investigation a political color, to travel outside the realm of examination into the leases of the naval oil reserves, by the resolution to inquire into the employment by Mr. Doheny of counsel in matters unrelated thereto for the perfectly obvious possibility of ruining the prospects of the leading candidate for the Democratic nomination for president.

Harsh Words, Senator.

"Mr. Denby says the wool was pulled over his eyes. His testimony discloses that it wasn't much of a trick; that he is one of those who, having eyes, see not and, having ears, hear not the things that concern their temporal, however it may be with their eternal salvation."

Resolutions calling upon the State Department for all available information concerning oil leases made by nine nations was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Dill, Washington, Democrat.

One resolution calling for correspondence concerning leases made by England, Holland, Portugal, Persia, Venezuela, Cheko-Slovakia and Mexico, and data concerning Russian oil activities.

A second resolution calling for information concerning Colombian leases.

WASHINGTON.—Fred G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, told the Senate Committee investigating the oil scandal today that he has a secret Teapot Dome contract with Harry F. Sinclair, lessee of that naval reserve. Sinclair already has paid him $250,000, Bonfils said.

Under the contract Sinclair must soon pay $1,000,000 if he wishes to drill certain acreage in Teapot Dome.

"Some time after the Teapot Dome lease was signed an acquaintance of mine, Leo Stack, showed me a contract he had," Bonfils said. "He claimed it was a prior contract and that the Sinclair lease had been granted over his head.

"I had my attorney look over Stack's contract and thought it legal.

"So I entered into a contract with Stack under which we were to give him the first $50,000 and we would divide the remainder between my partner and my attorney.

Story Never Published.

"I heard a good many rumors so I concluded to send a man to New Mexico to investigate.

"I sent Mr. Stackelback (a reporter) and he came back with an astounding story. He was cautioned especially not to disclose his identity or to quote those from whom he obtained the story.

"The managing editor, Mr. Sheppard, and I talked it over with Mr. Bottoms, my counsel. We decided the articles should not be printed because they were libelous.

"We then ran a long article attacking the Sinclair lease under the most conspicuous caption we had.

"Mr. Zevely (Sinclair's attorney) came out to see us and invited us to New York to see Mr. Sinclair. It was about July 4, 1922, when we went to see Mr. Sinclair.

"Mr. Sinclair told us brusquely, 'I don't know why you came here,' so we went back to Colorado.

"In the meantime we had brought suit against the Midwest Oil Company and other companies to carry out our contract with Stack.

"Later we met Sinclair in Oklahoma City and made a contract by which he was to pay us $250,000 and give us 320 acres of land in the Teapot Dome. This was because of our claim thru the Stack contract.

$1,000,000 Deal.

"Sinclair said later he would operate our acreage because he didn't want anyone else beside himself drilling there. We refused to do that.

"So finally we decided to let him have 18 months to decide whether he wanted to pay $1,000,000 to us for our share.

"He paid us the original $250,000 of which $50,000 went to Stack. I got $43,000 and my partner got $43,000. Mr. Schwartz, our attorney, got about $15,000. Then Stack got $43,000 more for his pro rata share."

Bonfil's statement accounted for $194,000. He did not say where the remainder of the $250,000 went.

"The 18 months will expire March 15th, this year," he continued.

The Stack contract with Edward L. Doheny, by which Stack claimed priority, was read.

Then the Stack contract with the Pioneer Oil company, releasing Doheny from the first contract, was read. Under its provisions the Pioneer Oil company was to be given some privilege to drill offset wells.

STRONG DRIFT TO F.-L. PARTY IN N. P. CONVENTION

Big Minority for Moratorium in League Meet

each congressional district was also elected.

There is tremendous enthusiasm for the new party and all the sincere members of the non-partisan league are getting in. The Federated land program adopted pleases the delegates and they feel that it will be a real foundation on which to build an organization that cannot be stolen by self-seeking politicians who prate of political expediency.

Present at the conference that formed the Farmer-Labor party were members of the state senate and former members of the non-partisan league state executive committee.

The best fighting material in the old league is either in the new party or has signified their intention of joining.

See Hand of Coolidge.

The hand of the Coolidge Administration and the influence of the powerful Republican machine were plainly visible in the first sessions of the State Convention of the Nonpartisan League of North Dakota.

An attempt was made to have the convention indorse the nomination of Senator LaFollette for the presidency. After a spirited debate the delegates adopted the majority report of the committee on this question. The majority report did not propose the endorsement of Coolidge. No delegate here would dare to ask that openly at this convention. But the report recommended that no action be taken at this time by the Nonpartisan League on the question of presidential nominees.

Seek LaFollette Indorsement.

The minority report was presented to the Convention with the reading of two letters to the delegates from Congressman Sinclair and United States Senator Lynn W. Frazier. Sinclair, who has for a long time been closely associated with LaFollette in Washington and who is considered as the Wisconsin Senator's right hand man in the state, specifically asked endorsement for LaFollette's candidacy.

In view of the conference held last Saturday in Washington by many active Democratic and Republican progressives, and its decision to urge LaFollette to accept the nomination of the Presidency on a third party ticket, this open appeal for the presidential nomination of the Wisconsin Senator is significant. It is the most open bid LaFollette has yet made for the nomination.

Dirt Farmers Welcome Ayres.

Tom Ayres, of the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota, was given round after round of applause when he appealed to the Convention to line up with the great national farmer-labor movement to build a big political party of the workers and farmers, independent of the present republican and democratic parties, of the bankers and railroad magnates.

Ayres made an eloquent speech to the delegates to take the first step in this direction by organizing a strong State Farmer-Labor Party with a real program, the five-year moratorium on farm mortgages, and the land to the users of the land. The dirt farmers gave Ayres' speech a great reception, while the bankers and office seekers who were delegates sat in marked silence.

The Executive Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party of Montana wired to the Convention to take action similar to the program outlined by Ayres.

Strong Sentiment for Class Party.

After a vigorous debate on the question, the convention defeated the minority report of the committee advocating a five-year moratorium by a vote of 43 to 25.

The strong showing made by the advocates of the moratorium and independent farmer-labor political action was unexpected and lent great encouragement to the radical delegates. Many militant farmers and old league members watching the proceedings were much heartened by the great strength rolled up by the insurgent farmer-labor elements and saw in the result of the vote a positive evidence that the petty factionalism and fights among the would-be old party office holders now strangling the League are approaching their end very rapidly.

Delegates May Act.

Present developments tend to indicate that there is little likelihood of the convention being swung over to the immediate organization of a State Farmer-Labor Party.

"No Firetraps," Says Brazen Report of Board of Education

Statements made in the DAILY WORKER that the inspection made by the board of education of fire-trap school buildings was a fake-whitewashing affair were true when the inspectors made their report to the building and grounds committee of the board yesterday. They reported that in their opinion there were no such things as fire trap schools.

They did not make a single recommendation that would cost the board of education any money which is what the board wants, it was indicated. The complete details of the inspection were not made public. More than thirty schools were visited by the inspectors.

Myerscough Is Speaker.

First-hand information of the stormy sessions of the big miners, convention held recently in Indianapolis, will be given in Chicago Sunday evening by Thomas Myerscough, national secretary of the Progressive Miners' committee, who will speak at the Workers Party Open Forum, Capitol Bldg., 159 N. State St., (17th floor).

Myerscough was present at every session of the Indianapolis convention—one of the most important conventions in the history of the United Mine Workers of America. Myerscough was there, not as an idly curious spectator, but as one vitally interested in the outcome of the debates.

Dunne Speaks for Sunday Class.

William F. Dunne will give an estimate of "The Revolutionary Outlook in America," Sunday morning, at the weekly class conducted by the Workers Party, Local Chicago. The class meets every Sunday at 10:15 a. m., at 1902 W. Division St. Previous instructors included James P. Cannon and Max Bedacht. The subject for the Feb. 17 session will be "The War and the Second International."

Racine Dance For Daily Worker.

RACINE, Wis.—Robert Minor will speak at a grand concert and dance at National Hall, Racine and 18th St., Sunday afternoon.

The program starts at 2:30 p. m., and dancing will continue until midnight. Four orchestras will unite in furnishing the music. Half the proceeds will go to the DAILY WORKER.

Shoe Bosses Choose Saviour

HAVERHILL, Mass.—The Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' Association and the Shoe Workers' Protective Union have signed an agreement creating a position similar to that held by Landis in the baseball world. Edwin Newdick, industrial engineer, has been appointed to the position at a salary of $10,000 a year.

BRIT LABORITES SAY HOUSING IS MAJOR PROBLEM

Plan to Erect 200,000 Dwellings Yearly

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON.—Following a conference on housing held yesterday at the ministry of labor at which representatives of the building unions and building trades employers were present, the Labor Party government is prepared to go before Parliament next week with its program on this important domestic question. The government was represented by Tom Shaw, minister of labor; Margaret Bonfield, parliamentary secretary; John Wheatley, minister of health, and D. Adamson, secretary for Scotland.

One of the difficulties that the Labor Party government must meet in its proposal for relieving the housing situation and at the same time cutting down unemployment, is contained in its endeavor to get the building trades union to relax their rules and take in workers with little building trades experience.

Unions Want Guarantee.

The unions are said to be agreeable to this proposal if the government will in turn guarantee a building program that will employ their members for a period of fifteen or twenty years. The Labor Party government is apparently willing to enter into this understanding with the unions if financial arrangements can be made. The need for workers' dwellings is so great that this length of time will be needed to carry out the program as outlined.

200,000 Homes Yearly.

It is estimated that 200,000 new homes per year are needed and some idea of the immensity of the proposal is gathered when it is known that estimates already prepared show that the existing brick plants are unable to supply the required amount of materia..

The ministry of health has let it be known that any attempt on the part of building material concerns to take advantage of the new demand for their wares will be met by drastic measures.

What Workers Expect.

Among the masses of workers, organized and unorganized, who supported the Labor Party, it is expected that the government in addition to the immediately moving to relieve the housing and unemployment situation, will make substantial reductions in the taxes on sugar, tea and the cheaper forms of entertainment, encourage agriculture, which is in a bad way, and increase the payments to the blind, war victims, war widows and widowed mothers.

A cut is also expected in the naval, military and air budgets but not in the pay of the army and navy personnel.

While the Labor Party government is known to intend to devote most of its attention to domestic probler / now that Soviet Russia has been r gnized there is much speculation as to the attitude the government will adopt towards France.

It is known that Premier MacDonald intends to visit France in May, when the French elections will be over and the view is expressed here that with firmness in the government's attitude on French policy the new Chamber of Deputies may be disposed to incline a more sympathetic ear to the British reparation proposals.

Firm With France.

In an interview published today by the Manchester Daily Dispatch, the Labor Party premier says that the hesitant attitude of the late government was largely responsible for the misunderstandings with France. He says: "All that is gone. Great Britain will no longer be content to sit and watch events, and the result of this new attitude seems to be succeeding beyond expectations."

The dockers are threatening to strike but are still conducting negotiations with their employers. The strike has been set for a week from today and may create a serious problem for the government exceeding that of the railway stoppage.

Proof Accumulates That Oil Shaped Hughes Russ Policy

By LAURENCE TODD.

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—How far has the foreign policy of the United States been dictated in recent years by the oil crowd?

Does the struggle for oil and the use of oil lobbyists here explain American refusal to recognize Russia?

Was it at the instance of Doheny and Sinclair and Standard Oil that recognition of the Obregon government of Mexico was withheld for years?

Questions Await Answer.

These are questions awaiting answer from the witness chair at the Senate's investigation of the naval oil leasing scandal, since Doheny has confessed that he employed former Attorney-General Gregory and former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to assist him in molding the Mexican policy of the Wilson and Harding administrations.

Doheny testified that he paid Gregory $2,000 to "secure for us an entree before the State Department" under the Wilson administration, in getting the Department to protect Doheny's interests in Mexico. He testified that he paid McAdoo $250,000 to "represent us in Mexican and other matters," and that McAdoo did represent him before the State Department when Bainbridge Colby was secretary and McAdoo's own father-in-law was president of the United States.

Fall's Services Priceless.

Nor is this all. Doheny told the Senate committee, in his latest explanation of the $100,000 "loan" to Fall, that Fall, when chairman of the senate sub-committee investigating losses suffered by American property owners in Mexico during the revolutions had rendered services to Doheny which were beyond price. Fall, it will be remembered, was the most stubborn and bitter opponent of recognition of the Obregon government, just as he had been violently hostile to the Madero and Carranza revolutions. He stood out for better terms from the Mexican government to American oil and mining interests.

Oil In Russ Policy.

Again, Fall was chosen by Sinclair to accompany the latter and young Roosevelt, brother of the assistant secretary of the navy, to Russia to seek a big oil concession in the Baku field. This concession was drawn, according to the testimony of Fall himself, subject to American recognition of Russia. Fall then came home and gave a press interview, in which he opposed immediate recognition, but suggested that Russia might soon make further concessions to capitalism such as would warrant the United States in finally dealing with the Russian government.

Whose Lawyer Is Hughes?

Since Gregory and McAdoo were employed by Doheny in dealing with a Democratic regime in the State Department, curiosity is aroused as to who were Doheny's and Sinclair's "lawyers" who dealt with the department after Colby gave way to Hughes. Or was Hughes so fully in touch and sympathy with the foreign policies of the oil crowd that they did not have to spend a fortune on political "lawyers" who had the entree to his office? Were any Republican "lawyers" paid $250,000 to raise the moral issue of our need to pay $25,000,000 to Colombia for the theft of Panama? Did any Republican "lawyers" discuss with the department the sending of notes to Britain and Holland about the restriction of the Burma oil field to British development, and the fields in the Dutch East Indies to European exploitation?

The answers may be demanded, when senators realize the meaning of the Doheny testimony as to McAdoo's fee.

Panic in Old Party Ranks As Oil Quiz Bares Leader's Graft

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—All efforts on the part of ring politicians, backed by the military-naval-diplomatic-social lobby, to stop the investigation of the oil scandal will be in vain.

This unmasking of the sinister truth of private ownership of the government at Washington has set going a political revolution thruout the United States. Tens of thousands of letters are arriving at the offices of public men who are thought to be liberal or progressive, demanding that the inquiry be developed thru every possible vein of evidence, no matter what the effect may be upon either or both of the old party organizations.

If the shame of bribery, fraud, theft of public property and wholesale pollution of the springs of public action by the oil millionaires shall wreck the Republican and Democratic parties—well and good. The voters who are now taking up the issue in letters and resolutions ask only that the country be given the facts as to what kind of government actually exists. If there is no self-government by the people, if the representative form is but a mockery, then the sooner that fact is established, the sooner the mistake can be repaired.

$70,000,000 of Loot

Stockbrokers have been summoned to produce their books, which already are being experted by government accountants, to show whether certain senators or congressmen or administration people have made fortunes secretly from private tips as to oil leases. Rumors that the "gang" has made millions—some say $70,000,000—from trading on the stock market in Sinclair oil, will be run down.

John T. King, former Republican national committeeman from Connecticut, organizer of the Wood presidential boom, and head of the Association for Protection of American Rights in Mexico, has been summoned. This Association was created four years ago by the Doheny, Sinclair, Standard Oil and other oil interests, to resist Section 27 of the new constitution of Mexico which seemed to threaten their profits from Mexican oil operations. When Carranza yielded to their pressure, exerted thru the State Department, and was overthrown, they resisted recognition of the Obregon government. Fall, as senator and later in the Harding cabinet, was their spokesman against recognition of Obregon. Finally, last summer, they got a compromise with Obregon, and recognition was given.

Hughes on Grill

King is supposed to know how the oil crowd influenced the State Department under Hughes, with reference to Mexico. A resolution soon to be offered in the Senate will ask Hughes to furnish to the Senate all correspondence and records showing his oil diplomacy toward Mexico, Colombia, Britain, Holland, Persia and any other government in which American oil kings have sought concessions. From this data the Senate committee will proceed to inquire into the means by which Hughes was induced to beg for American oil privileges in Mesopotamia, Burmah, Colombia, the Dutch East Indies and Persia.

Under a separate line of inquiry will be taken up the question as to whether recognition of Russia has been delayed until the utmost possible concessions are made to Sinclair or Standard Oil by Moscow.

King Helped Pick Harding

King was one of the group that decided the nomination of Harding, and he was one of the Penrose conference at Atlantic City which determined that Mellon should be secretary of the treasury. Mellon and Hughes then promptly "put across" the Colombia treaty, paying $25,000,000 in "satisfaction of Colombian honor" in the matter of the stealing of Panama by Roosevelt, and getting in return, for Mellon and other oil operators, a lot of oil concessions in Colombia.

Senator Reed, a Democratic presidential candidate, is blamed by politicians for the discovery that McAdoo, his rival, was paid $250,000 by Doheny for influencing the State Department and the Mexican government in Doheny's interest. Reed is now in turn revealed as chief counsel for a big oil concern headed by J. Ogden Armour, which is suing Standard and other oil companies for $500,000,000 or more in royalties for the illegal use of a patented method of breaking up petroleum into gasoline and other products. If he wins his suit, Reed stands to make something near a million. So he, too, is "in oil".

A prominent Californian presidential candidate's painful silence as to the whole scandal, except for one general statement, has aroused much speculation as to whether he, too, has engaged in this line of law practice.

Both old parties are in agony, but they see no way of escape.

New York Is Busy in Drive for Relief to Fight German Hunger

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—All working class New York is busy collecting money and food for the hungry workers of Germany. The New Yorker Volkszeitung is appealing to its readers to come to the aid of their countrymen and the first week they appealed more than $500 was collected. The weekly, Obrana, is asking its readers to help the German workers and are meeting with success.

Local unions all over the city are sending contributions to the $100,000 fund for German relief being raised by the New York branch of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany.

GHANDI TOO ILL YET TO ENGINEER BRITISH BOYCOTT

Many Non-Cooperationists Still Imprisoned

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOMBAY, India.—Like some of the class war prisoners freed by Presidents Coolidge and Harding after prison life had ruined their health "Mahatma" Mohandas Ghandi, leader of the great movement which shook British rule in India has come out of prison an invalid.

Ghandi is now lying in a hospital and his enemies are gloating in the hope that his prison life has incapacitated him from non-cooperationist activities for months to come.

Release a "Sop."

The British Labor Party government's amnesty to Ghandi still leaves many other advocates of freedom for India in prison and an aggressive agitation will be kept up for their release. Ghandi's release is considered as a "sop" to the non-cooperationist movement much as the meager first amnesty by Harding which released Eugene V. Debs and a few others but left the vast majority of the politicals still incarcerated.

Ghandi's release was not announced by the British authorities as the correction of an act of injustice, but for "medical" reasons. Thus the government has avoided setting a precedent which would have compelled the liberation of the other objectors to imperialism.

London Guesses About Ghandi.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON.—What will Ghandi do with his freedom? That is the question that is going the rounds of Downing street. Nothing in his record indicates that he will abandon his movement of India for the Indians when he regains his health.

In fact it seems probable that the Hindoo nationalist movement will swing back to the left, with Ghandi's reappearance on the scene. A second tremendous movement for the economic boycott of all British functionaries is feared.

On the other hand the release of Ghandi is regarded as on the whole a statesmanlike act, aside from the humanity involved. It is believed that the danger to British rule from Ghandi's presence on the outside may be more than offset by the conciliatory effect of his prompt release by the Labor Party so soon after taking power.

Bakers Cut Off Bread Supply as Military Rages

(By The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY.—The bakers of Mazatlan, always militant, are on strike once more against the equally militant bosses. As on former occasions, the local military commander is hostile and threatens them with arrest, in spite of the fact that his predecessor was removed for trying the same tactics. They have protested to the Confederation General de Trabajadores and to the government.

The confederation threatens a general strike if necessary to protect them from the local military. Mazatlan is completely without bread.

Maybe Magnus, the Trick Milker, Can Explain This

To the DAILY WORKER: The nine unapproachable Senators (led by LaFollette, have sent out a joint letter of inquiry to the baffled farmers and grain raisers of the Northwest, urging them to write and tell them what they want done to relieve their known desperate situation.

Were it not for the tragedy of the situation of the farmer, this appeal would be looked upon as real pathos, and the tempting flattery of it may elicit many replies with which to fill the waste baskets of the aforesaid Senators, and thereby fill the janitors of their office building with awe, at their ability to receive mail.

Who that has read the speeches of Senator Ladd on finance, and the machinations of the Federal Reserve Board in deflating the farmer, would have the temerity to make a suggestion to him that reform was needed in finance?

Who that has heard Lynn Frazier speak, or has followed his checkered and harassed career as Governor of North Dakota, from which position he was deposed by the combined efforts of the banks, the milling trust and the transportation monopoly, would not know—would have to inquire?

Who that has even casually followed the career of Robert M. LaFollette, read even odd copies of his magazine, or his long and exhaustive speeches in Congress, but knows that he, of all men in public life, is fully aware of the evils resulting from watered stock and over capitalization of transportation companies?

Then why this hurried inquiry, this truculent request for information?

Can it be to furnish them an excuse for dealing with price-fixing of farm products, or even of delay, instead of making a combined attack on the fundamental issues? Or is it to obtain a postponement of the date —May 30th—by thus pretending they are still solicitous of the condition of the oppressed (by the robber) farmer?

Magnus, the Trick Milker, could answer this question.

George Foster, Spokane, Wash.

De La Huerta Gold Is Making Trouble in Railway Unions

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY.—A split is reported in the Federation of Railway Workers here as a by-product of the revolutionary situation in the country. The railway federation is the most powerful organization in the country in point of ability to support itself, most of the unions subsisting directly or indirectly on government subsidies (the exceptions being the railwaymen, the anarcho-syndicalist Confederation General and various autonomous unions).

The revelations following the rebellion in Vera Cruz revealed that certain leaders of the railwaymen, and of the anarcho-syndicalist unions, were also accepting money from the public treasury, de la Huerta having paid large sums for the founding of the National Railway party and the Partido Socialista Mayoritaria, dummy organizations which were to give his candidacy a labor coloring. All such leaders either left to join the fascists or were expelled. Nevertheless, Branch E of the railway men, consisting of express workers, has just seceded because of "politics within the organization."

The officials of the railway federation declare that the so-called yellows or Confederation Regional Obrera Mexicana who have long been hostile to the railwaymen, are back of the new move. The section split-off is insignificant in comparison with the total membership of the railway federation consisting only of some of the express workers of Mexico City.

'Bolshevism,' 'Red Flag,' Is Shriek of Wheat Gambler

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON. — A bill introduced here by representatives McNary and Haugen to create a $50,000,000 fund for handling the wheat crop thru an export corporation was dubbed communistic by L. F. Gates, former president of the Chicago Board of Trade.

"This is a monopoly in the interests of the producers," declared Mr. Gates, "and leads directly toward the nationalization of industry. It is paternalism run wild and presents as menacing a development to the American public as the Bolshevism, which openly parades under the Red Flag of Communism. It would result in bureaucracy, extravagance and the crushing of individual initiative and take out of our public life that freedom to trade which to our industrial pioneers is the breath of their nostrils."

The bill which has aroused the wrath of the die hard Gates proposes to fix ratio prices on surplus farm products and set up the export corporation to buy wheat at some fixed price and sell it abroad at world market figures.

What would Mr. Gates say if somebody introduces a bill to give the land to the users of the land?

3,400 Married Men Jobless.

TORONTO.—Married men to the number of 3,400 were reported to be unemployed here, according to city officials at a conference to provide work for the jobless. Provision has already been made for unemployment for 500 of these by the city. It is proposed to carry out all possible civic work by day labor between now and May 1, next.

SABOTAGE WITHIN LAW SOMETIMES, SAYS IDAHO COURT

Going Slow to Punish Boss No Crime

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOISE, Idaho. — Sabotage, the dread word that war profiteers and attorney generals used to invoke against radical labor, is given a respectable hue in the decision just handed down by the Supreme Court of Idaho, freeing three members of the Industrial Workers of the World held under criminal syndicalism charges for alleged advocacy of sabotage. The decision is a victory for the General Defense Committee which took the appeal.

The men had been held at Bonners' Ferry, Idaho, for months, for distributing copies of a lumber workers' leaflet that urged the "strike on the job," known in England as "ca canny," which lower courts in Idaho have ruled is in violation of the syndicalism act.

Legal Sabotage.

The decision freeing them cites the various acts defined in dictionaries and encyclopedias as sabotage, among which are listed "slack work" and the "publication of trade secrets."

"Slack work" or the strike on the job the court throws out as not of itself criminal, ruling that the syndicalism act does not declare against it specifically. The court then goes on to show that all forms of sabotage are not illegal per se, and makes the following comment regarding the publication of trade secrets (a form of sabotage that European workers have frequently used against oppressive and dishonest employers):

Where Sabotage Is Virtue.

"Publication of trade secrets may be to the disadvantage or injury of the employer, but to the advantage or benefit of his customers, and it is hardly conceivable that the legislature had any intention whatever to make such an act criminal. Suppose an employe of a manufacturer discloses the methods by which such employer evades the provisions of the pure food law and sells to the public food products, so called, that are utterly unfit for human consumption, or makes known other pernicious practices that we have reason to believe are sometimes resorted to by the employers, can we say that the legislature intended to include such disclosures, however much they might injure the employer, in the meaning of the word sabotage? We think not. And yet, if we adopt the most comprehensive definitions of this word that have been given by the writers of greater or less note, we shall be led to the necessity of declaring such acts criminal." Two judges dissented.

The three lumber workers released by the decisions are Richard Moore, Bates and Perring. The reversal of their case is believed to mark the ending of persecution under the criminal syndicalism law in Idaho where courts were rendering their verdicts on the basis of forms of peaceful sabotage now found to be legal. Four other workers are still in Boise penitentiary from earlier syndicalism convictions.

Scott Nearing Thinks Daily Is Very Promising

"The DAILY WORKER is the most promising thing I have seen in the radical movement in the United States," said Scott Nearing, who has just finished a speaking tour of the middle west. Nearing was leaving Chicago to go to Pittsburgh.

"Next to the DAILY WORKER in importance is the May 30th conference of Farmer-Labor parties in St. Paul. I intend to be in St. Paul in May and see what happens. It is of the utmost importance.

"I was particularly glad to see the good work the DAILY WORKER did at the miners' convention. It was great."

Scan the list of the dead in the Milford mine disaster—or in any other great disaster that takes bloody toll of the lives of the workers in a basic industry.

Foreign names predominate—in the Milford death list they are Finnish and South-Slav names.

Citizens? Probably not, but good enough for the Milford mining company to employ in work of the most dangerous character and to sacrifice to its desire for large profits from which no expenditure for safety measures had to be subtracted.

One does not have to be a mining expert to know that these foreign-born workers were murdered in a far more deliberate and cold-blooded manner than if the stockholders of the Milford mining company had taken them one by one and hurled them down the shaft that marks their tomb.

The miners themselves knew of the danger and had protested and in all probability the mine foreman had reported that "those damned foreigners are making trouble again."

Someone will ask why they did not quit. Well, they were almost all married, they had families, they had to work somewhere and one mine is much like another; miners are that way; they have to be if they are going to get work. They had no union, thanks to the steel trust and the steel trust owned officials of Minnesota, who have hunted the foreign-born miners on the iron range like wild animals whenever they have tried to organize. They were at the mercy of the mining company except for three alternatives—work, move or starve.

Secretary of Labor Davis is much incensed at the foreign-born workers. He says they are not good material with which to build America and he wants to finger-print them and have them report to the police.

In the drifts and stopes of the Milford mine there are a large number of foreign-born miners who will never be finger-printed and who never will have to report to the police.

Their dead hands, with the calloused palms washed a sickly white, still clasp the tools with which they were building America. Their reward is a grave in the slimy swamp-mud; the reward of their families will be long years of poverty in dreary mining camps.

Let us hope that such occurrences as the Milford mine disaster, with the mute testimony of the names of the dead, will arouse the workers of America to the real meaning of the horrible proposals put forward by Secretary of Labor Davis in their name and that they will let the mining, steel, textile and packing companies, in whose name he really speaks, know that while liability insurance is cheaper than safety measures they shall not be allowed to hound and humiliate by legislative enactment the foreign-born workers whom they send to their deaths as a first lesson in Americanism.

We shudder to think of the wave of righteous indignation that would have arisen in Washington over the Teapot scandal if about 97 per cent of congress, senate and the cabinet hadn't quietly cleaned up in Sinclair oil.

All that was lacking to make the Teapot Dome scandal comply with the best capitalist ethics was a touch of blackmail, and the Denver Post, a rabid anti-labor sheet, has supplied it.

The democrats rally for the struggle with the battle-cry of "Down with Denby and Daugherty!" The republicans answer with "Massacre McAdoo." Meanwhile the Farmer-Labor movement makes both capitalist parties not only alliterative but anxious.

The Telepathic Tribune

The Russian correspondent of the Chicago Tribune has refused to abide by the rules accepted by the representatives of the rest of the foreign press and has been refused admission to Russia by the Soviet government.

The effects of this are seen in the tremendous upheavals taking place all over Russia—in the columns of the Tribune.

From Riga and London the Tribune correspondent is conducting revolts of the Red Army, flights of Trotzky, peasant uprisings; the Mongolian hordes have been resurrected to hold the Red Army in check and the complete overthrow of the Soviet government has been set for some time in April—when, says the Tribune correspondent in London, with a passion for detail, the advent of spring will permit an advance on Moscow.

As is quite fitting, seeing that it admits that it is the world's greatest newspaper, the Tribune has this advance information all to itself. A careful scrutiny of the other capitalist papers discloses the fact that they have not the slightest knowledge of these horrendous occurrences, altho their correspondents are right on the ground.

They are either very poor newsgatherers or else have succumbed to the insidious effects of Soviet propaganda and are telling the truth.

The Tribune long ago developed a newsgathering method that excels the marvels of the telegraph and radio; it used it to the limit in the good old days when anti-Soviet propaganda was the chief business of the capitalist press and since its Russian correspondent so nobly defended the right to lie against the painfully truthful Soviet spokesmen, it has revived it.

It is a combination of telepathy and crystal-gazing and excellent results can be obtained without even leaving Chicago. All that is needed is a map of Russia, a writer who hates the workers' and farmers' government of that country and who will write down under a Riga, Warsaw, Berlin or London date-line the things he would like to have occur to the hated Communists.

The only drawback so far as the Tribune is concerned is that the resulting stories have no perceptible effect on the Soviet government except to convince it that "Tribune correspondent" and "liar" are synonomous terms.

In the United States its Russian correspondence rivals its comic features as a source of amusement with the additional advantage that they are on the first page and easily accessible.

A Dangerous Epidemic

The whole American working class is menaced by a devastating epidemic of Congressional proposals to cripple its effectiveness as a fighting force against unutterable conditions of work and life.

There are today before Congress 43 bills dealing with immigration. The house has been burdened with 36 of these bills and the senate with seven. Practically all of these bills, if enacted into law, would tend to uproot even the most elementary vestige of labor organization.

In December there were introduced eight bills in the house and one in the senate, by Lodge, providing for each immigrant securing a certificate of admission from an American consul before being permitted to land on American soil. This will empower the American consuls, who are usually business men utilizing the cloak of government protection for economic interests, to decide the fate of millions of workers and their relatives here. If any of these bills is enacted it will mean the death blow to the last semblance of America's traditional role of serving as a haven for those oppressed for political opinions.

One of these bills, the Raker Resolution (H. R. 5), aims to exclude all immigrants from a country whose government is not recognized by the United States. Another Congressman, whose name curiously happens to be Vestal, is so anxious to maintain the purity of American capitalism, and is so zealous a watchman of the sacred fires of dollar patriotism that he would register all foreign-born workers biennially upon penalty of deportation. This is the boldest strikebreaking measure ever proposed in Washington, and thousands of anti-labor bills have been introduced in congress in the last decade.

Twelve bills provide for deportation of workingmen for some pretense or other. Two measures are calculated to secure the examination of workers in their home countries by immigration inspectors before departure. Five bills call for the immediate and complete suspension of immigration. Then there are other resolutions which are distinctly adverse to the best interests of the workers.

All of these measures should be fought by the workers to the last ounce of their energy. All of these bills are drawn up with the intention of dividing the workers along the artificial lines of nationality and of enabling the biggest employers of labor to get a firmer grip on their workers. Every one of these measures strengthens the strikebreaking powers of the government, which is already the most dangerous strikebreaking agency in the world.

Every union man, every worker, every poor farmer, regardless of political creed, regardless of nationality, must get into the fight to wipe out this epidemic of anti-labor legislation that is threatening to swoop down upon the working masses and paralyze the labor movement for years.

Two of the world's most skillful liars—Lloyd George and Clemenceau—are contending for the championship since death has removed their most formidable rival.

KOO KOO BOOSTER FILM HAS NEW LEASE OF LIFE

Birth of Nation May Get Axe Monday

The case of the exhibitors of the "Birth of a Nation," against Chief of Police Collins, was continued till next Monday when it came up before Judge Denis Sullivan yesterday. The exhibitors of the "Birth of a Nation" are trying to have Chief Collins cited in contempt of court for stopping showings of their picture on the ground that he violated an injunction obtained by them in 1915 prohibiting interference with its showing. The chief of police holds that a law passed in 1917 prohibiting the showing of any picture that would incite to race hatred wiped out the injunction.

The court has decided that the chief of police is correct in his stand by his holding hearings to determine if the picture comes within the perview of the law.

Negroes of Chicago are indignant at the delay the city is having in closing the picture, which they say is likely to lead to serious trouble between the two races. The picture is being shown pending decision by the court.

"The Chicago Tribune and many people say that the showing of 'The Birth of a Nation' is not being made in order to cause trouble, therefore it should be permitted to continue," said Gordon Owens, a prominent Chicago negro. "The fact is that the showing of this film does cause trouble to both whites and blacks. This infamous 'Birth of a Nation' picture is negro baiting propaganda of those masked skunks, the unspeakable Ku Klux Klan."

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

SECRETARY of the Navy Denby invited a group of newspaper editors to Cuba to watch the fleet maneuver. In the meantime the senate became so interested in the disappearance of the oil that helps to make the fleet travel, that the secretary was detained in Washington. Now, the editors do not know whether they are going to see the fleet or look for it. In view of the generosity of the members of the present cabinet skeptical editors would not be surprised to find on their arrival at Havana that Mr. Denby gave the fleet away as a gift to one of his school day friends.

President Coolidge's name goes on the ballot in the state of Illinois. He remains neutral in the fight of the Chicago Tribune against Governor Small. The Red Army forgot to march on Moscow today. One Bolshevik chief forgot to slap another commissar on the cheek. The Cheka forgot to arrest Trotzky. Trotzky forgot to get a divorce from the Russian princess he married at 1 p. m. yesterday. A Russian czarist general forgot to predict that the Grand Duke Nicholas would begin his march on Moscow next week. What is the matter with the liars who used to add so much to the gaiety of nations? Are they knocked speechless with envy by the achievements of the Coolidge cabinet in explaining away the Teapot Dome?

Whenever anything unusual happens in France the French police look for the woman in the case. William Gibbs McAdoo might be riding the Democratic Jackass to the nomination for the presidency on his party's ticket but for the wiles of one John (Doe) Cupid. It happened this way. A young man who helped the Democrat party prepare the federal reserve act for passage was in love with a beautiful society girl who refused to return his love until he secured an appointment to office which in her opinion would make him a suitable object for her affections. The lovelorn swain sought the aid of William G. McAdoo. The latter did not assist and the society beauty married another office. When the oil wells began to gush in Washington the disappointed suitor learned that McAdoo was connected with Doheny. He carried the information to Senator Reed. The Kansas fire eater did the rest.

Arrant Jingo Won Bok Peace Prize; Fake Is Exposed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—Comment in labor circles here upon the selection of Dr. Charles Herbert Levermore as recipient of the $50,000 prize and as candidate for the remaining $50,000, should the plan gain "popular support," ranged from indifference to the Bok propaganda scheme to condemnation of the "deception latent in this league advertising campaign."

Active labor and pacifist opposition to the Bok fever showed itself in charges that Levermore is a "pacifist for revenue only." Pacifists suggested that there is irony in the choice of a man who identified himself with anti-militarism before the war and stepped forward as a militant advocate of war as soon as hostilities opened. They point out that Levermore was instrumental in changing the name of the New York Peace society, of which he was secretary, to to the non-committal Union for International Justice.

Labor men, communists and socialists here are virtually unanimous in dismissing the Bok campaign as a hollow farce, which does not even pretend to attack imperialism, economic exploitation and other root causes of war. Sardonic labor observers propose that, as a tribute to consistency, Levermore invest his first $50,000 in a prosperous American munitions industry.

THE FARM CRISIS - - By ANALYST

THERE is perhaps more muddled thinking on the farmer question in the United States than on any other economic problem. And such thinking is particularly muddled among the groups that are trying to bring about a working farmer-labor combination for political purposes.

This goes for the proletarian element in the farmer-labor movement, as well as for the Non-Partisan League and the Farmers' union and other organizations that think they see an identity of interest between the farmer and the wage-earner. Such an identity of interest in part exists—but not where these groups think it does. It does not consist, for example, in any supposed common motive for reducing the toll of the middleman.

Where most thinking on the farmer question goes wrong is in the assumption generally made that, somehow or other, the farmer does not get a fair price for what he sells. Wheat is worth so much on the farm, and considerably more when it is sold to the consumer in the form of bread. The spread is widely supposed to represent sheer graft—an unjust exaction from the farmer on the one hand and the consumer on the other.

It is easy to show, without going into abstruse mathematical calculations, that there is little basis for this easy assumption. For twenty years before the war, the prices of farm products rose faster than the prices of other goods, and there was a tremendous development of agriculture. These facts cannot possibly be made to square with the theory that farming was unprofitable because of low prices for farm products at the farm. Even if that assumption were not sufficiently disproved by the greater pre-war rise of farm products than of other goods, it would be knocked out by the record of agricultural expansion. No industry grows unless there is money in it.

But the present agricultural emergency is supposed to have grown out of the war and its aftermath. It may be said that if the position of the farmer was all right in regard to the prices obtainable for his products in the twenty years before the war, it isn't all right now. That, in fact, is the diagnosis most commonly made of the agricultural trouble. Farmers are going bankrupt by the thousand, it is said, because there is a disparity between the prices of what they have to sell and the prices of what they have to buy which puts them at a disadvantage to other economic groups all along the line.

If you take the situation as it stands at this moment, there seems to be some truth in this statement. But it is impossible to know the position of an industry by looking only at the prices of its products for a single day, or for a single year. Prices are always fluctuating in response to changes in supply and demand. The only way to find out how one enterprise stands in relation to another, or to industry and trade generally, is to consider the average prices paid for its products over a term of years.

When we apply this test to agriculture, what do we find? We find that farm products bring their natural price in the market the same as other goods. Farm products are low now; but they were high during the war. Index numbers published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture show that in 1914 the purchasing power of agricultural commodities was 12 per cent above the level of the preceding year, which is usually taken as normal in index number calculations. In 1915 the farm purchasing power index was 6 per cent above the 1913 level; in 1918, 12 per cent; in 1919, 11 per cent.

There has been a slump since. But the average from 1913 to 1924 is only slightly below the par of 1913. All last year the farm purchasing power index was rising. Indications are that it will continue to rise for some time. Over a period of years, the ups and down in farm commodity prices cancel out, and an average is struck that represents a fair exchange, value for value, between agriculture and other groups.

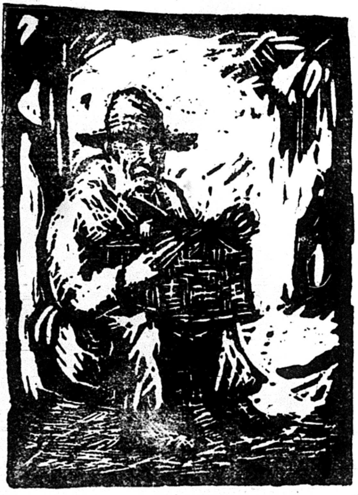
Economic science, as well as statistics, enforces this conclusion. One of the most solidly established laws of economics is the law of equal profits. This is the truth that, in the long run, capital and labor invested in one line of production will earn profits at the same rate as equal amounts invested in other lines, a result brought about by the ebb and flow of capital and labor in pursuit of gain. Since profits can only be realized by the exchange of goods, it follows that no class of goods can permanently sell on the bargain counter.

Does that seem a pretty big dose to swallow? Try to imagine the opposite. Suppose some industry to be earning fabulous profits. Will not capital and labor be drawn into it until competition brings the rate down? Or, on the other hand, can you conceive of capital and labor being continuously poured into an enterprise yielding a lower return than is obtainable elsewhere? You cannot. You cannot explain the tremendous flow of capital and labor into agriculture in this country in the last few decades, except on the assumption that the operation has been profitable to someone.

Profitable, yes. But for whom? That is the whole question. When it is answered, we shall have arrived at the true basis for farmer-cooperation, and shall have done with the false basis that is generally adopted now. The farmers of the United States are not prosperous as a class, and have not been prosperous as a class for a long time. How this fact can be reconciled with the assertion already made that Agriculture has been prosperous. The explanation is the same as the one that applies to the position of the wage-earner. The wage-earner is not prosperous because he does not own industry, and the farmer is not prosperous because he does not own agriculture.

There is plenty of evidence that the farmers are not prosperous. According to the census, farm mortgage debt increased from $6,330,236,951 in 1910 to $13,775,550,013, or 117.6 per cent; in the period from 1890 to 1910 it increased from $3,064,923,165 to $6,330,236,951. Doubtless much of this money was borrowed for investment purposes; but that it did not produce much profit for the farmer is shown by the fact, as reported by the secretary of agriculture, that in the fifteen wheat states alone more than 108,000 farmers have since 1920 lost their farms or other property thru foreclosure or bankruptcy, while more than 122,000 have lost their property without legal proceedings and nearly 373,000 are retained in nominal possession only by the sufferance of their creditors.

The Farmer and His Troubles



A Hornet's Nest.

Forty per cent of the farmers of South Dakota are bankrupt, according to the secretary of agriculture; and 42 per cent in Colorado, 50 per cent in North Dakota, 51 per cent in Wyoming, and 62 per cent in Montana. Farm values dropped $13,000,000,000 from Jan. 1, 1922, to March 1, 1922, and in 1922 more than 2,000,000 persons moved from the farms to the cities.

But we must distinguish between the farmer as an individual, and the economic enterprise which he works. It does not follow, because the farmers have not prospered, that agriculture has been unprofitable, any more than the existence of slums in a big city proves that the industries of that city are losing money. The truth is that the capital invested in agriculture has been well paid. On the $13,775,500,013 of mortgage debt reported by the census in 1920, the average interest return was 6.1 per cent; and the return was considerably higher on the vast unreported volume of chattel and crop mortgages and collateral and personal security. Probably the borrowed capital invested in farming has regularly paid upward of 10 per cent. Considering the security, that is a handsome return.

Farmers are unprosperous as a class because they do not own the capital used in agricultural production. As agriculture grows more and more complex, it takes more and more capital to run it. This necessity steadily weakens the farmer's position as an independent producer, as a member of the petty bourgeoisie, and forces him down to a peasant status. He is a victim of the same process by which small capital generally has to make way in production for large capital. Always going on, this process is speeded up in times of crisis.

It is common knowledge that the principal cause of failure in business is insufficient capital. Thus in the week ended Jan. 17, 1924, according to Bradstreet's, out of 525 business failures in the United States, 379 involved concerns having less than $5,000 capital, 81 were failures of concerns with less than $20,000 capital, 28 of the defunct enterprises had less than $50,000 capital, 33 had less than $100,000, and only 4 had less than $500,000. That has been the story of business failures for years.

It is also the story of agriculture failure,—for the individual farmer. Agriculture, capitalized by the mortgage corporation, the banker, and the lender of personal credit, rolls up big profits for the owners of the money invested; it tends to show diminishing returns year by year for the actual producer. It may be well to emphasize again what has already been shown, that the cause of this unequal division of rewards is not fundamentally a question of prices for commodities. The fundamental trouble is that our whole economic system is organized, not for the benefit of the producer, but for the benefit of the man that supplies the capital.

Keeping this fact in mind should save the farmer-labor movement from serious mistakes. One error it should guard against is the effort, growing naturally out of the price-theory of farm depression, to unite all farmers with the wage-earners in a political movement. Farmers do not fall into a single economic class. They are divided among themselves into groups according to their command of capital.

In many states a large proportion of the farmers are true entrepreneurs. They own their farms and their machinery of production, largely because they or their forbears were on the ground before the present era of large scale capitalist production developed.

In other states, where the lure of cheap land induced thousands of men to start farming on a shoe-string, not ten per cent of the so-called rarmers are free from the domination of outside capital. They are victims of the fact that the growth and concentration of capital is making independent production as difficult in agriculture as in industry. Their place, if they only knew it, is with the true proletarians.

These men can be logically united with labor in an attack on the capitalist system. But a blanket appeal to all farmers, which ignores the fundamental economic distinctions among them, and attempts to base a farmer-labor struggle on the myth that exploitation takes place thru manipulation of commodity prices, is useless because unsound in principle, and dangerous because it tends to hide the true cause of both agricultural and industrial poverty.

MICKEY M'GREW

By EDGAR LEE MASTERS

It was like everything in life:
Something outside myself drew me down,
My own strength never failed me.
Why, there was the time I earned money
With which to go away to school,
And my father suddenly needed help
And I had to give him all of it.
Just so it went till I ended up
A man-of-all-work in Spoon River.
Thus when I got the water-tower cleaned,
And they hauled me up the seventy feet,
I unhooked the rope from my waist,
And laughingly flung my giant arms
Over the smooth steel lips of the top of the tower—
But they slipped from the treacherous slime,
And down, down, down, I plunged
Thru bellowing darkness.

"Revolution in itself is no abstract principle, but a material historical fact, growing out of class antagonism, out of the violent subjection of one class by another."

The Farmer

Tells His Tale of Woe.

JOHN PEPPER: "FOR A LABOR PARTY" - By AUGUST THALHEIMER, BERLIN

(The review of the pamphlet by John Pepper is written by one of the best Marxists in the International. August Thalheimer is also the intellectual leader of the German Communist Party.)

COMRADE John Pepper has recently published, thru the Workers Party of America, a booklet which is intended to prepare the ground for the formation of a labor party in America, which will embrace all the elements of the labor movement which stand for an independent proletarian class party, and which shall also rope in the proletarian and semi-proletarian farmer elements. The booklet has already run into a second edition, the first edition having been published in October of last year in anticipation of the Cleveland Conference on the 11th of December, 1922, on the agenda of which there also stood the question of the formation of a labor party. The present edition was issued in view of the new conference of the 3rd of July, last.

This booklet by Comrade Pepper, while serving the immediate purpose of facilitating the formation of a labor party as mentioned above, at the same time provides a very clear and thoro analysis of the relationships of the classes in America, which is of very great interest to the European working class. America is a country where the capitalist system stands on the most solid basis and still, apparently, possesses unlimited possibilities. In the course of the World Revolution, America will certainly form the strongest bulwark of counter-revolution. Finally, America is the country which is on the way to becoming the strongest imperialist power, and which already, in spite of her official policy of non-intervention in European affairs, has cast her net over all lands and seas. For the foregoing reasons it is of the utmost importance that the working class acquires an exact knowledge of the class relationships and of the tendencies in the development of the classes in this capitalist Colossus. Such a knowledge reveals to us that this Colossus by no means consists of one compact mass, as is generally assumed in the west, but that already, elements of social disintegration are to be seen. Americans like to prate of gigantic figures and huge standards generally. As a matter of fact, things in America are on a far vaster scale and proceed at a much faster rate than we are accustomed to in our narrow and Balkanized Europe, and we should be committing a great error were we to estimate the pace and the extent of social movements in America by the diminutive European standards. This is not only on account of the extent of the country, but as due before all to her relative freedom from those traditions which check and hamper the broad masses in Europe. America is a young nation with a working class which is still in the early stage of development.

The writer examines in the first place the question as to how it is that, hitherto, all "Third Parties" which have arisen in addition to the two old parties the democratic and the republican party after a short time, during which they grew into more or less great mass parties, have, in one way or another, only disappeared. Comrade Pepper gives a short, but nevertheless, a most striking analysis of these parties, which serves to fully explain why this is bound to be the case. Viewed outwardly, we see that all these Third Parties have arisen in a period of economic depression, have reached their culminating point during the recurrence of the economic crisis, only to disintegrate with the return of a period of prosperity. This is the historical law which has hitherto governed these third parties.

The first of this series of third parties was the Greenback party (Greenback is a popular name for the dollar note), so called because it fought for a reform of the currency which should bring about a reduction of the farmers' debts. The party united the petty bourgeoisie and farmers, while later on workers joined it. The party was formed during the economic crisis of 1873, which, as is known, extended to 1880. The party gained about 82,000 votes in 1876, and in 1878 one million votes; but the prosperity which set in in 1880 destroyod it. In 1884 it could only command 175,000 votes.

There followed the "Knights of Labor." This party appeared in 1880 as a sect of no importance, but in 1884, a year of economic panic, it rose to more than 60,000 members, reaching its culmination in 1886 with more than 700,000 members, and about 6,000 local groups. The period of prosperity, beginning in 1887, led to the decline of the party, which in 1889 had only 220,000 members.

Thirdly, there appeared the People's Party. It traces its birth to the economic depression arising in 1890, reaching its highest strength in the year 1894, when it received more than one million and a half votes. The period of prosperity following destroyed its independence, and it joined the democratic party as its left wing. In the year 1900, when "prosperity was in full swing," this party had disappeared entirely, even as the left wing of the Democratic Party.

Pittsburgh

By Louis Lozowick.

The Progressive Party dates back to the crisis of 1907-1908. In 1909, the "National Progressive Republican League" was formed. A similar movement manifested itself in the democratic party as the "Democratic Federation." In 1912 an independent "Progressive Party" was founded, which immediately grew to a great mass party. It received four million votes from farmers, lower middle class, and workers, while at the same time the Socialist Party gained nearly a million votes. In 1916, during the great prosperity engendered by the war, the progressive party again disappeared.

The writer reveals quite correctly the causes of this phenomenon. All these parties were essentially petty bourgeois parties. Hence their vacillating and ambiguous character, their rapid rise in the periods of crisis, and equally rapid absorption by the great capitalist parties in the period of prosperity. The enormously rapid rate in the development and downfall of these parties seems to depend not only on their petty bourgeois character in general, but on the specifically American character of the petty bourgeoisie, i. e., the tremendous class fluctuations within the American petty bourgeoisie. The American petty bourgeoisie, the principal masses of which are small and middling farmers, are changing at an immensely rapid rate in their personal composition, owing to emigration, changing from farming to industry, from industry to farming, thru rising into the large bourgeois class or sinking down to the proletariat or down to the slum proletariat, etc. Special causes for the rapid decay of these petty bourgeois parties are, beside the looseness of organization, the want of a fixed economic orginizatory basis, and the utopian, confused and contradictory character of their programs. Hence with all these parties, the time arrived when they were taken in tow by the capitalist leaders ruling both the old parties. Either their leaders were bought, or their programs were annexed.

The author has shown by this analysis that the mistrust of the American workers in the existence of Third Parties is quite justified in regard to the former petty bourgeois parties. He shows, however, that all the causes which were responsible for the rapid disorganization of the petty bourgeois parties, would not apply to a worker's party, to a party relying upon the working class and including the small tenant farmers and the mortgage farmers and in which the working class has the lead. The writer considers that the trade-unions should be the organizatory foundation of this party. He declares the present moment of transition from the period of crisis to that of prosperity, to be especially favorable for the formation of a workers' party.

The writer then proceeds to the pre-requisites for the formation of a workers' party in the foregoing sense. Two underlying facts are to be noticed which are highly important for the further development of the class struggle in America.

The first is the development of a centralized governmental power, an extensive state bureaucracy. America has been, up to now, and remains even so today, for Karl Kautsky, the example of a democracy without autonomy. Kautsky has been dozing during the development of America in the last few years. The non-bureaucratic, decentralized American democracy is already a thing of the past. It was, before all, the world war which swept away this old idyllic democracy and created the modern, centralized state, administered in a bureaucratic manner and protected by militarism. The great war brought about an enormous extension of the presidential power, a centralized government control of the whole industrial life (shipbuilding, manufacture of munitions, coal, raw products of all kinds), the centralized governmental administration of railways and telegraphs, enforced labor in the war industries, the espionage act, the censor, a gigantic army and an equally gigantic bureaucracy.

The figures relating to the number of government employees are especially interesting. In 1884, the state bureaucracy had only 13,780 officials, but 278,000 in 1912, 440,000 in 1916 and 918,000 in 1918. At the end of the war, bureaucracy was again reduced to about 600,000 members, but its nature remained; the bureaucratic centralization has remained; the railroads have been given back to their private owners, but state control has been retained. At present we have the interference of the capitalized Government as arbitrator in workers' quarrels and as fighter for the interests of the employers in strikes.

The formation of a centralized state power in opposition to the working class is one of the conditions for the formation of a centralized proletarian class party. A second fact is the levelling down of the American working class. The differences between skilled and unskilled, between American and immigrant workers are being obliterated. Of special importance in America up till now was the difference between the native American workers and the immigrant European workers, which often coincided with the difference between skilled and unskilled workers. The war has enabled the great masses, especially the unskilled immigrant workers employed in the metal industry, to approximate their standard of life to that of the old workers' aristocracy. There is no longer any question of these masses going into agriculture. The land is already occupied. These masses, coming for the greater part from the East and South of Europe, descendants of peasants, half-peasants or petty bourgeoisie, are crowded together in enormous factories, transplanted into completely new conditions, and form the soil of the revolutionary development in America.

Further, the writer points out that, under the pressure of capitalist concentration on the one hand, and of the social pressure of the working class and petty bourgeoisie on the other, the old capitalist parties are decaying and the soil is being prepared for the formation of parties according to the altered social structure, i. e., a conservative reactionary capitalist party, including the reactionary elements of the democratic and republican party, a petty bourgeois radical party and finally a labor party. The writer considers that the conference of the 3rd of July will provide half a million of members at the very start. If this should be the case, it would betoken an immense progress, the beginning of independent action within the American working class. The American development is of special interest to the European workers. With the rapidly increasing capitalist concentration, with the growth of American forms of capitalism in Western Europe, there develops at the same time the American form of the class struggle: before all in the economic field, as recent strike movements have already shown.

We recommend this excellent booklet to the thoro study of all comrades.

"The opposition between theory and practice vanishes, for theory is nothing else than correctly considered and generalized practice."

"Leninism is the highest embodiment and condensation of Marxism for direct revolutionary action in the epoch of the imperialist death agony of capitalist society."

"A Week" Every Day

THE decision has been made. The world-famous story of Russian life since the great revolution of November, 1917, will appear DAILY in the DAILY WORKER. The first installment of "A Week" will appear Saturday, Feb. 16.

The daily installments were decided upon so that the DAILY WORKER will live up to its best traditions as "A DAILY." Our paper is a DAILY. It is in the fight from day to day. It wants its readers to realize this fact. It wants everyone to feel it. Publishing only weekly installments of this great novel would still perpetuate the idea that we are working on a weekly basis. This must be swept away forever.

THE MINERS' CONVENTION

and, instead of throwing a single miner out of employment, let us shorten the work day and divide what work there is equally among us."

The miners have no love for the coal operators, but have been taught that without them there would be no coal mined, therefore, no work, and no food, clothing and shelter. The radicals are teaching the miners that coal operators do not dig coal, that they do not even manage the coal mines, this being done in the great majority of cases by hired men, and that the elimination of the coal operator from the mining industry would mean that those who dig the coal and manage the mines would receive, in addition to what they get now, that part of the production which goes to the absent coal operator in profits.

When these facts sink into the heads of the active minority in the miners' union they will rally to the leaders who are now being crucified by John L. Lewis, because they are fighting for their class. The radical leadership that is now developing in the United Mine Workers of America will not, as in other years when the socialists occupied that position, waste their time in desultory tirading against the machine on the platform of "Democracy versus Autocracy," but will fight for immediate demands that offer a better solution of the problems of the miners than what Lewis can offer, show them that they can, by a fighting policy, secure more from the bosses than by sitting around a table in the agreeable climate of Palm Beach and point to a way out of the cul-de-sac into which the rapid introduction of new machinery is leading the coal industry.

Machine Not Impregnable

The old machine is vulnerable because it has no policy for the future. Its strength lies in its power to purchase the salable ability in the union and the fact that it has yet the ideological leadership of the majority of the miners. This must be admitted until contrary evidence that can stand on its feet is brought forward. On the appointive power, representation from large locals, the Howat case—questions not involving abstract theories, but matters of administration and internal policies—Lewis' machine was tipped over, but because there was no leadership that could rally the delegates ideologically, the machine simply waited until the fury aroused over these issues subsided and in the Howat case at the end of the convention, put on its hat and coat and went home.

The miners' union is the most powerful workingclass organization in America, and the most militant. It is a fighting organization, and is permeated with radicalism. The communists have a splendid opportunity to secure the leadership of that great fighting aggregation. The groundwork was laid for future activity at the Indianapolis convention. And that really was the only worth while accomplishment during the two weeks that the delegates were in session. The radicals left with a practical program for immediate action and the machinery necessary to put that program into effect.

The activity of the Workers Party at the convention, its generalship, the amount of literature it distributed, the meetings it arranged, and, most important of all, the part played by the DAILY WORKER, is a testimony to the virility of the only communist party in America, and its complete hegemony of the left wing working class political movement in the United States.

HOLIDAY - -

By WALDO FRANK

Published by Bori and Liveright, New York City; $2.00 Net.

A book aflame with the South. Dark passion throbs in it. The color of the South is in the book, the South where the songs of our land are born and flourish, where suffering bears songs, where the color of life is black and a deep red. Waldo Frank is a poet, he reaches the heights of poetry in his prose, he has caught the warmth of the place he describes, he has woven about it a beautiful story that hardly seems like a story, that is a poem and that is living. This book of Waldo Frank's is a living thing.

It isn't as if you took the book up and read it thru and said to yourself, "Oh, just another story, just another novel." It is not like other books, for there is nothing artificial about it, it is a live thing, it lives with you. There is the feel of the South in it, and not simply a study of dialect and curious customs, for the passion throbbing in it transcends these things.

A white woman is drawn to a Negro, and the Negro feels the white beauty of the woman upon him. The white woman is to blame if there is any blame. But she refuses to take the blame, she refuses to intercede for the Negro. In a moment of unguardedness when she was her real self on that Holiday, she was drawn to the Negro irresistibly, but later she has collected herself, her face is drawn again, her lips are tight, and the Negro, John Cloud, dangles from a rope.

John Cloud crushes a boll-weevil between his fingers, and even so the white man crushes the Negro. A black man falls into the water, and no white man jumps in to fetch him out, to save him from drowning. They let him drown because his skin is black. This is the hatred that exists down in the South, a hatred that breeds hatred, that ends with lynching. "John moves. In the silent gap between the passing black man and the whites, lives a red sore that thought and time must swell." Why this hatred? It is not natural, at bottom there is love between black and white. At bottom there is love between Virginia Hade and John Cloud, but the hatred is the only thing one can see on the surface. This hatred that is only on the surface must disappear some day and give way to the real thing underneath, but while it exists there are lynchings.

Judge Hade says this to his daughter, Virginia: "Daughter, you're smart. Smart enough to run this business by yourself. That I allow. But you-all ain't smart enough to run the South." That's at the bottom of it, the white men, or a clique of them, the rich white men, want to run the South. And the millions of Negroes don't count. They must work, they must pick the cotton and the fruit, they must amass the wealth for the rich white man, and the rich white man gets the poor white to help him keep the Negro down by breeding hatred in him. But the hatred will disappear, and then no innocent black men will be lynched, no, nor will guilty black men be lynched, there will be no lynching.

May a Negro love a white woman? Instincts say yes, traditions say no. "I've watched you, nigger, I've watched you lookin' at my daughter. How dare you look at my daughter? Nigger, that look in yo' eyes means murder in our land. How dare you, nigger, look so hard at my daughter that you forget to salute the white man at yo' side?" There you have it. It is forbidden for a Negro to look at a white woman, but Bob Hade, Virginia's brother, does permit himself to hunt for black women and to satisfy his lust upon them. The white man is privileged in this land.

Waldo Frank has felt the beauty of those millions of beings living down in the South, the black folk living in their communities, slaving away, and singing their beautiful songs, the life that springs out of the soil, that flickers bright against the darkness of misery. "—O you have so much! Low down. . . . You dumb and dull, we talk like you. And we sing your songs. And wherever we look, be it at Christ himself, your color's in our eye. Low down. In the quiet of our evenings at home, you are there. My feet wander in pain, toward you they wander. Pity for me. Low down. . . . Pity for me! I'll not feel sorry for you blazing niggers. You grow out of the soil. Your flesh stays sweet in the dark flames of the South. We wage a pallid fight, an ugly—there you are, blazing in ease, in truth, against our lies. Pity for me!" Those are the thoughts that course thru the white woman's mind.

Waldo Frank's style is the finest thing about the book. He does not use old, decayed methods, that were good at one time but are no longer. He seeks new paths, to fit his new materials. He has imagery, he creates, he invents, he breaks away from the traditional, he uses his fantasy, to weave new forms, to strike new phrases, he finds new paths. And all this is felt, not simply thought out, both thought out and felt, there you have a wonderful amalgamation which produces a great writer, one of our greatest, perhaps the greatest, Waldo Frank.

Fear Display of Wealth

Chancellor Marx, of Germany, has sent out word that no attempt is to be made at propaganda to influence the decision of the Reparations' Commission. At the "Esplanade," the Stinnes hotel, where Charley Dawes and the rest are stopping, a "Charity Ball," with tickets at $7.50 per, has been cancelled, because the display of wealth might unfavorably impress the visitors.

The "Esplanade" is the site of a soup kitchen, Stinnes' sole contribution to the "relief" of German hunger. The kitchen is supplied with the garbage from the hotel dining room. Thus, every time Banker Dawes eats a meal, he contributes to German relief.

THE MINERS' CONVENTION

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

AFTER the smoke of battle and the fumes of bunk-laden oratory cleared away from Tomlinson hall, Indianapolis, where the 29th consecutive and 60th biennial convention of the United Mine Workers of America was held, John L. Lewis, representing the reactionary leadership in the organization, still held his place in the saddle, tho his position was considerably more precarious than when the convention opened.

The fight at this convention was not, as in former years, between the controlling machine and the old progressives, but between the reactionary machine, which has assimilated or amalgamated the old progressives, and the rising radical wing, led by the communists.

The outstanding feature of this convention was that the radicals for the first time in the history of the organization, showed that they knew that it is not only necessary to fight, but to prepare this fight. As the convention progressed, this element was gaining in militancy and self confidence, and tho John L. Lewis may claim a victory, it was truly a Pyhrric one, because his Nemesis was born when he deliberately stole the vote on Alexander Howat and literally told the delegates to "go to hell."

With the radicals entering the next convention as well organized, disciplined and enthusiastic as when they left this one, John L. Lewis may have a different story to tell.

There is a greater number of capable machine lieutenants in the United Mine Workers of America than in any other industrial working class organization in the United States. It was said of the French army under Napoleon "that every soldier of France carried a Marshall's baton in his knapsack," and it can (also) be said that every member of the United Mine Workers who can use his tongue carries an organizer's commission in his portfolio. The Lewis machine is built on patronage. Whenever a promising member of the union shows his head above the common level, he is gobbled up by the administration forces, placed on the payroll if he is for sale, and if not, war is declared against him.

The political generalship of the miners' union is in the hands of John L. Lewis and William Green, assisted by Thomas Kennedy and Philip Murray. The first three named are clever, know the miners and can appeal effectively to their emotions. They are definitely committed to the policy of class collaboration, have no vision beyond an occasional increase of wages and improvement of working conditions. In this respect, they mirror the views of the majority of the miners—payroll brigade included—at the present time. They have the ideological leadership of the membership as was demonstrated whenever questions other than those relating particularly to the miners' organization, came up for consideration. That, together with a liberal show of force, determination—and the payroll—enables them to hold their seats.

On organization questions, however, their hold on the membership is precarious, only a refusal to recognize an adverse majority vote enabled them to retain power.

The Old Progressives

In other days the miners' union was the happy hunting ground for progressives. It was the nest where the industrial chickens of the socialist party were hatched. What a brood there was! Thomas Kennedy, Charles Keeney, John Brophy, Chris Golden, John Hessler, Otto Gunner, and hundreds of lesser lights. Where are they today? So indissolubly bound with the most reactionary machine that ever controlled the United Mine Workers of America that at the last convention there was only one old progressive deflection from the administration, and that was in the case of John Hessler of Indiana, whose Ku Klux Klan constituency obviously instructed him to vote against Lewis, on the issue of appointive power versus election by referendum.

The Klan, which is doing considerable "boring from within" in the miners' union, practically controls the organization in Indiana, and the power of election would mean to them the placing in the field of Klan organizers, getting paid by the miners' union, and organizing workers into the Invisible Empire under the direction of the Dragon of Indiana.

On every other issue that rocked the convention the old progressives never kicked over the traces or expressed the slightest disagreement with the reactionary machine. They can be put down as hopeless and the radicals must not count on them in any way. In fact, their acquaintance with the radical movement makes them dangerous enemies, much more so than the consistent conservatives.

The Radicals

The opposition to Lewis at the convention comes under three general headings. First were the communists, who fought Lewis on principle, because of his social outlook, plus his general conduct. Next came the radicals, or militants, who believe in fighting the coal operators, and who are disgusted with the subservient and complacent attitude of Lewis toward the bosses as against his ruthless persecution of the fighter in the union. This element is sympathetic to the communist message and is excellent fighting material. Last come those who, for various reasons, are anti-Lewis for other reasons, generally of a local character.

The militants lacked sufficient floor material, with the result that the few speakers they had spoke oftener than would be desirable were it possible to do otherwise. These few had to take the floor on every question where the radical point of view was at stake. The great majority of the communist delegates, owing to difficulties with the English language, or lack of experience in speaking, were unable to make themselves heard, and yet they were the backbone of the opposition and the nucleus of what will grow into the near future into the most formidable machine that ever challenged reaction in the United Mine Workers of America.

The non-communist radicals represented the largest opposition in the convention. This group was gradually learning to fight with the communists and, at the close of the convention, the voting strength of this element numbered around 450. This was demonstrated in the voting on the election of international delegates to the Mining Congress when John Hindmarsh, who fought with the communists on practically every issue that came before the convention, received 449 votes.

It is from this fighting element that the bulk of the organized opposition must come. Under communist leadership and discipline it is even now numerically strong enough to overthrow the present autocratic administration, but until the masses of the membership are ideologically in harmony with it, and a sufficiently large number of lieutenants are trained to man the union, such a victory would not be lasting, and might be disastrous.

The Fight for Leadership

The administration leaders understand the miners. The miners are intensely loyal to the organization. It is the big thing in their lives. It gives them whatever protection they have. They have sacrificed much for it, and without it they know from experience that their conditions of work would be almost unbearable.

The reactionary leaders take advantage of this fact and endeavor to picture every opposition leader as an open or secret enemy of the miners' union, whose actions are inspired by a desire to bring about the destruction of the United Mine Workers of America. Such a charge, delivered in deep sepulchral tones, to the nineteen hundred delegates, has a telling effect. No argument or evidence is needed.

The miners will not tolerate any leader who accepts a cut in wages. Therefore Lewis and his gang meet every attack on their leadership with an array of figures, tending to show that they have been instrumental in securing more wage advances than any other leaders in the history of the union. While, during the fight against the Nova Scotia miners, he waves the red flag and sounded the charges on the Third International, Lewis emphasized still more strongly the discrepancy between the wages of the Nova Scotia miners and that of their American fellow workers. He accused the radical leaders of the Nova Scotia miners with having accepted wage reductions, while he brought into the pockets of the anthracite miners the large sum of $44,000,000 a year in wage increases.

That the Nova Scotia miners looked beyond wage increases to the ultimate emancipation of the entire workingclass, where the producers could determine their own wages, while struggling for improved conditions in the meantime, was lost sight of in face of the fact that they receive less wages now than the miners of America under the leadership of John L. Lewis.

The delegates were in ideological accord with Mr. Lewis. They were not concerned with their emancipation from wage slavery; they only thought of selling their labor power for the highest possible price.

The point Lewis stressed most in dealing with the violation of the agreement between the British Empire Coal Company and the District 26, was that a violation of an agreement between the coal operaters and any section of the union weakens the confidence of the coal operators in the integrity of the union, thus rendering the making of contracts more difficult and the periods of unemployment thru strikes more frequent.

In the fight against Howat Lewis did not over stress the fight against the Industrial Court Law, but laid heavy emphasis on the lack of friendly relations between the coal operators and deposed Kansas officials for which he blamed the miners' leaders.

So far as Lewis is concerned, the miners' union is a business, of which he is manager. His commodity is the labor power of the members. Any department head who antagonizes the buyers of that commodity commits a crime that merits the severest punishment. The manager's job is to keep the miners satisfied so that they will give maximum service to the buyer.

The Artillery Preparation

The coal diggers are not afraid of radicalism as such, therefore the old leaders picture to them a broken and demoralized union with reduced wages the result if ever the radicals gain control. The first two days of the convention were practically consumed in psychologizing the delegates against the radicals, and the radical leaders who took the floor to stem this torrent of red phobia somehow got confused in the minds of the less mentally alert with the destructive bogey man, which was manufactured by Mr. Lewis. Immediately after he laid down the psychological barrage he sent forward his shock troops with the most dangerous resolutions and passed them safely thru the enemy lines while the latter were still groggy from the effects of the poison gas.

Being successful in his first brush with the progressive foe, Mr. Lewis oozed confidence, which resulted in giving him the support of the neutral mass, which always belongs to the strongest.

His Vulnerable Point

John L. Lewis stands brazenly on a platform, the only plank in which is the alleged ability to sell the miners' labor power to the coal operators at the best possible price. But he has no solution of the problems that confront the miners in the introduction of new machinery in the mines, which is increasing the production of coal per man to an unprecedented degree, thus throwing hundreds of thousands of miners out of work.

That is the big problem for the miners, the problem of unemployment.

Here the radicals hammer with effectiveness. They have a program. They come forward with the immediate demand of a six hour day and the nationalization of the mines. While Lewis claims there are over 200,000 men too many in the coal industry, the radicals say "No, there are too many coal miners outside the union. Let us bring them in

Where Is Our Prosperity?

THE official propagandists of the employers are overworking themselves spreading the illusion amongst the workers that we are on the threshold of a new era of prosperity. In many ways the publicity smacks of being an organized effort to befuddle the minds of the working men. One cannot pick up a newspaper or financial journal of any standing and fail to find columns stuffed with the great prosperity predictions.

But when one discards these romances of finance and examines the official reports of the Government and the authoritative statements of leading banks and manufacturing corporations he is confronted with a different story. He is then face to face with grim realities that the mass of workers must put up with.

The latest report on employment issued by the Department of Labor indicates that there has been a continuous decline in the number of workers employed since last June. The month of December which has been painted as a month of extraordinary prosperity in the daily press shows a decline of 1.5% of workers employed. Payrolls thruout the country have decreased 1.7%, the sugar refining industry and the steam railroad car building are the heaviest sufferers.

The daily record of pig iron production in December as well as the value of building permits shows a substantial decrease in December from the preceding month. The number of commercial failures increased from 1653 in November to 1862 in December. The same holds true for the value of the liabilities incurred thru these failures.

The situation in Illinois is particularly acute. The official statement of the Illinois Department of Labor speaks of the blight of winter having fallen rather heavily on the labor market. It goes on to say: "Unemployment of considerable proportions has made its appearance in several localities and is at its worst in Chicago, where the market is already glutted, from the migration of workers from the farms, from the South, and from down State mining towns, where operations have been suspended, has had to bear the strain". In the State the building industry has suffered a decline during December. Six of the largest producers of iron and steel, employing about 20,000 workers have dismissed 30% of their force in the last 30 day period. Automobile production was at low ebb during the month. At the same time the number of workers placed in industry by the State Employment Bureau fell by about 4,000.

These are the cold, dismal statistics that face the worker in his every day life. These are the facts of industry that give the lie to the prosperity propaganda being spread so assiduously by our employing class press.

THE THIRD PARTY QUESTION - -

By GEORGE HALONEN

WHEN the last party convention decided to withdraw from the Labor-Party thesis the part relating to the Third Party, it was distinctly understood that the question would be discussed in the party press. However, fundamental discussion has been carried on only in the language press. Comrades John Pepper, C. E. Ruthenberg and Max Bedacht, from whom we would have expected analytical ability and theoretical knowledge, have dealt with this question mostly polemically and so that they have erroneously "analyzed" more or less imaginary "groupings" in the convention and, instead of fundamental discussion of the Farmer-Labor movement, we have had assertions that the "majority" do not "love" farmers so ardently as the "minority," that the "majority" is formed from "sectarians," "propagandists," etc., that "something more than an assertion of a report in the Volkszeitung is needed to make the wo[illegible] believe that the Finnish language group in alliance with Comrade Ludwig Lore, Alexander Trachtenberg, Juliet S. Poyntz, etc., are all at once promoted to custodians of radicalism in the party," and other such nonsense.

Without troubling myself to answer these silly "analyses" and "polemics," which, I must confess, have in my mind minimized the analytical ability of these comrades in other respects, I wish to say that the majority of the delegates from the Ninth district considered the Third Party thesis, not only untimely but of such nature that, published as the resolution of the Communist convention, it would have created confusion and mistrust not only among our own members, but also among other sections of the Labor movement, and so, instead of clarifying our position and guiding us, the real work for a Farmer-Labor class party would have been weakened and confused.

The question of forming an alliance with a bourgeois Third Party, depends wholly upon a given situation, on actual conditions and the stage of development of the class struggle. Therefore, it was tactically wrong to state in the Third Party thesis: "Where the Farmer-Labor party candidates have no chance to win and the Third Party unquestionably can win against the capitalist parties with our support we will vote for the third party candidates."

Suppose, that the May 30th convention be so successful that a national Farmer-Labor party is formed, fundamentally based on the plan of federating at least many of the different workers' and farmers' organizations? Naturally, the Workers Party would be with this movement. Even if LaFollette were named as the presidential candidate, our position would not be different, if the party were fundamentally based on workers' and farmers' organizations and not on artificial territorial, political lines.

Let us then assume that LaFollette did not join this Farmer-Labor party, but instead, after the old party conventions, being defeated there, with the other "radical" politicians and in conjunction with the Railroad Brotherhoods, would launch a Third Party regardless of the Farmer-Labor party established on May 30th, then we would have the Farmer-Labor Party and the Third Party. How to solve this question? It would be clear that the requirement of our thesis, "where the Farmer-Labor candidates have no chance to win," was self-evident and many of our party members would speculate that "the third party can unquestionably win" and therefore, according to our thesis, "we will vote for the third party candidates."

Would that be the right position, altho it were according to our thesis? Of course, the solving of a situation like that would require, not a speculative thesis, but a careful analysis of the actual situation. It might be possible that the Farmer-Labor party, in spite of the LaFollette Third party, would be real enough, strong enough, to get a vote of a million or two. That after all would clearly indicate that at least the real beginning of a large class party had been achieved. But we, with our thesis, might be adventuring with the "winners" and instead of profit we would have to record a big deficit, by losing the faith of those labor elements which remained in the Farmer-Labor party and whom we betrayed with our thesis.

This simple example is sufficient to show that the thesis was untactical, giving weapons unnecessarily into the hands of our "yellow" as well as "leftist" opponents, creating confusion in our own ranks and making us, in the eyes of many workers and farmers, just the same as bourgeois politicians, because without actual happenings, real facts before their eyes, they could not understand our tactics otherwise than that they were based on the same "dealings" with the "winners" as they have seen in the other parties.

The communist tactics are so well defined that details how to vote and whom to vote for, do not need to be given before the situation requires it. The Central Executive Committee of the Communist party is well qualified (especially when of such quality as the majority of the present C. E. C. of the W. P.) to decide questions of this nature when the actual struggle with its experiences can convince us of the real necessity and benefit of such steps.

THEY WILL TELL THIS TALE

By IDA DAILES

MANY years from now, when the united human race is living the world over under the administration of things, the adults, after a full happy day of work and study, will gather their children around them and tell them this tale:

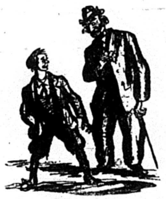
"Long years ago, when the world was divided into states, there was a section of the world that you learn about in your histories, called the United States. This state was established by means of a revolution, and those who were instrumental in establishing it called it a Democracy. Democracy in those days was a skeleton and the statesmen and politicians of that state saw that a skeleton could not rule over millions of people, so they sought to clothe it in flesh and blood.

"But they could not make a real, living thing out of a skeleton, so before they proceeded to compound the clay with which they intended to cover the skeleton, they told the people that those who would not believe in the Democracy were unpatriotic, traitors, and many other ugly but meaningless things.

"You see, these statesmen were the servants of a rich and powerful class of people called capitalists. Capitalists were men who, by some accident of birth or fortune, had come into possession of land or machinery, and allowed others to use these instruments of production for the purposes of earning a bare livelihood, in exchange for which the Capitalists received what they called Profit. Thus the Capitalists did little or no work and lived in ease and luxury, while great masses of people toiled many hours each day, scarcely earning enough to obtain the necessities of life.

"So you can see that the great majority of the members of the human race were slaves to land and machinery, and also to the owners of this land and machinery. The Capitalists devised many ways of keeping them enslaved, such as encouraging them to hate people who lived in other sections of the world and spoke different languages, or had skins of different color, magnifying their religious differences, and teaching them to hate those whose opinions differed from their own.

The Young Comrade



Come on to the Meeting.

"The servants of the capitalists compounded their clay of many substances, such as 'Freedom of Religious Worship,' 'Equality Before the Law,' 'The Right to Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness,' 'Government of the People, and By the People,' and similar phrases.

"As the country grew, it came into conflict with other nations and engaged in wars, when the servants mixed some new clay, made of some now phrases, and renewed in the minds of the people the illusion that they were governed by Democracy. When the United States entered the great World War of 1914, for example, the statesmen told the people that this was a 'War for Democracy,' a 'War to End All Wars,' and so on. And countless numbers of workers died fighting for this sham Democracy, this lifeless thing of clay.

"By this time there were people who realized that Democracy was but a skeleton dressed up in phrases that meant nothing but that were intended to keep the workers in bondage. You see, the workers used up so much of their time and energy in producing profits, that they had very little opportunity to learn the truths of history and science, so that most of them did not know what was wrong with the world they lived in, and thought that things always had been and always would be as they were then. They therefore, believed everything the capitalists told them thru their statesmen, their newspapers, their schools, churches and motion pictures.

"So when these few wise people tried to show the workers that Democracy was only a lifeless figure, all the mouth-pieces of the Capitalists said to the workers: 'These people are traitors, anarchists, horrible Bolsheviks. They are 'interfering with our sacred War to 'Make the World Safe for Democracy.' And the workers, because they were too tired and uneducated to do their own thinking, silently permitted things to go the Capitalists' way. The servants of the Capitalists passed laws which permitted them to put some of these wiser ones among the workers in a place where they could not talk to other workers, called a prison, and kept others quiet by threatening them with punishment, but they could not suppress this new message altogether, and a brave few, inspired by the successful establishment of the First Workers' Government, at that time called Soviet Russia, kept up their work.

"As you all know, they were finally successful, after many hard struggles, in exposing Democracy. When the workers finally came to examine Democracy, and pulled off the painted and perfumed clay, what do you suppose they found? Not even a solid skeleton, for in the course of times the bones had crumbled and now, at the touch of the workers, they fell into a little heap of ill smelling dust, which the workers buried deep underground."

The Structural Iron Worker.

A VISIT TO MAX HOLZ

By DR. FELIX HALLE, Berlin

THE main entrance to the prison where Max Holz lies, opens on a quiet suburban street in the north of Breslau. It is a modern institution. The officials live in separate houses near the street. Four security police patrol the street. The sign "police station" at the main entrance shows that the bourgeoisie deems it necessary to guard the dangerous revolutionary with special police as well as with prison officials.

I ring at the main entrance. The gate is noisily opened. I show my credentials, am permitted to enter, and led across two courtyards with accompanying unlocking and locking of doors to the main building for men. The secretary informs me that the director ordered that I am to go to him immediately. The director, a Roman Catholic priest, receives me in his office. After greeting me, he assures me that Holz has all the privileges that can be granted in a prison. He orders Holz brought in. Comrade Holz enters. I have often had the opportunity, professionally, to see prisoners, especially those who have been sentenced to long terms in prison. I was shocked. Holz has been in prison since April, 1921—barely two years. The last time I saw him was in Moabit, the day he was sentenced. What inroads these two years have made on him! His face is marked with the inexpressible suffering caused by deprivation of liberty. Max Holz is a man of action. The mass influences him and he influences the mass. His strength lies in his temperament. He called out the uprising of the slaves and will continue to do so, and his whole soul yearns for freedom. His will and his health are being broken against the walls of the prison. On the basis of the impression I received during my conversation with Holz, for several hours, I can testify that Max Holz must be pronounced unfit for imprisonment. He is troubled with nervous and rheumatic pains. He suffers from lack of sleep and appetite. He eats no bread, but lives only on nutritives, nerve foods, etc. He has frequently collapsed. He hurt himself in a fall in which he suffered must loss of blood. It is possible, even probable, that with continued imprisonment, Comrade Holz may reach such a stage of despair that in a moment of sudden abberation he may lay violent hands upon himself.

The cell in which Holz, with the exception of the brief interval of exercise, must spend his days and nights, is 25 cubic meters in size, with a floor space of 8.4 square meters. Even for a normal person, a long residence in so small a space, results in an impairment of health. But for so high-strung a person as Holz, a long residence in this cramped space, is absolutely unbearable. Disregarding his rheumatism, a heritage of the war, the bourgeoisie condemns him to languish in a cold cell on a stone floor, and gives him only a paltry straw mat which Holz sent back because of its musty odor. The little light that enters the high window is merely a continual torture to a nervous person. But one must not imagine the prison to be a dark dungeon of the middle ages. The prison is a modern institution, and it should be emphasized that it is very clean. But that very fact is the most provoking—modern means are being applied in an absolutely senseless way, not to help people, but to torture them.

The Workers must not remain in ignorance of the gravity of Comrade Holz's situation. They must do everything possible to help Holz and free him from his miserable condition.

Before the Parliamentary Election in France

(Note: A declaration by the Communist Party of France giving a very good picture of the political struggles in France.)

Against the Bourgeoisie Bloc, for the Bloc of the Workers and Peasants.

THE majority of the Parliament has rejected the principle of proportional representation, as it would have made all parties in the electoral contest in the spring, appear under their proper colors. It has retained an election procedure, that falsifies the representation of the parties, and compels them to form coalitions, that is, to an inevitable confusion of programs.

The Communist Party is of opinion, that the elections of 1924 have a significance far surpassing all previous elections.

The country will be able to judge even better than in 1919 the policy of the war, and of those who brought it about. The Peace of Versailles marked the triumph of French imperialism, whose policy, since the end of the war, has led the world to destruction, France to bankruptcy, and has created prospects of a new war.

Within the country itself, this imperialist policy of the bourgeoisie is essentially anti-labor.

The electoral contest must bring into the field against those responsible for this policy, the mass of their victims—workers, officials and small peasants, tenants and consumers with small incomes. The country must sweep away those responsible for this policy of bankruptcy, famine and war.

The party alignments are already becoming apparent. The bloc of the left is setting itself in opposition to the National Bloc which since 1919 was the support of French imperialism and which is directly responsible for the present state of affairs. The left, if not yet officially, contains the leaders of the so-called Left-bourgeoisie and the leaders of the Socialist and Socialist-Communist parties.

The Communist Party has refused to enter into such a bloc, and has persistently warned the workers and peasants against such a trap . . . The division of the bourgeosie into a "Right" bourgeoisie and a "Left" bourgeoisie is but a superficial one. In reality, all the capitalists have common class interests. The employers of the Right and of the Left have the same interest in exploiting their workers, the property-owners of the Left and of the Right have the same intention of plundering their tenants, the dealers and speculators of the Left bring about increase of prices in the same way as those of the Right.

This struggle between the Left and Right bourgeoisie, is simply a superficial political struggle for the privileges of power. At bottom the bourgeoisie class is always prepared to defend its prerogatives against the worker and peasant classes whom it exploits. This superficial division was only set up in order to conceal the real class division, and to prevent the struggle next spring from assuming its true character, the character of a class struggle between all the exploited and their exploiters.

Great masses of workers, employees, peasants, clerks and small men are dissatisfied with the regime that continually renders their lives more insecure, and are prepared to resist, not only the national bloc, but the very capitalist regime—the thing which is really responsible.

The bloc of the "Left" is only a maneuver of one section of the bourgeoisie to prevent the expression of this justifiable discontent from injuring the vital interests of the bourgeoisie, and under the mask of the "Left," still to keep the discontented to serve the profit of the capitalist system, as dividend earners and cannon-fodder. The proletarian parties which join in this movement, hand over a section of the proletariat to the capitalist class, and betray the working class.

It is an absolute fact, that the bourgeoisie of the "Left" does not differ from the government of the National bloc, that it has not ceased to support the imperialist foreign policy of Poincare, that, immediately after the strike of 1920, it concurred in the anti-labor policy of the National bloc, and that it still today helps to support the ministry by means of three radical members. The Senate, which has a left majority, has recently agreed to a scandalous increase in rents of 104 per cent. Renauld Jean has exposed the details of this out and out capitalistic and anti-labor policy from the tribune of the Chamber.

The antagonism between the right and left is so artificial, that their dividing lines are still very indefinite and they move more to the right every day. This goes so far that finally even Poincare will be regarded as an element of the "Left." An editorial note, which the Ere Nouvelle recently made on the occasion of a speech by M. Chaumet, contained the following significant lines: "As soon as Poincare places himself on the side of the Republic against reaction, he will meet with no more opposition from us."

And that is the extreme "Left" of the Radical-Socialist Party, the "socialist" wing, which issues such declarations! It is not the bloc of the "Left," which will defend the interests of the workers in town and country against those who enslave them.

The Workers and Peasants Have Their Own Demands.

The workers and the peasants have their own demands for which they can unite on the firm ground of the class war against the whole bourgeoisie.

Together they must:

1. Set themselves against an adventurous foreign policy, which brings destruction in the world, and bankruptcy in public finances.

2. Fight for the annulment of the Treaty of Versailles and its disastrous results.

3. Strengthen the solidarity and the will to peace of the workers.

4. Demand the official recognition of the Soviet Republic.

5. Defend the working class, officials, clerks and small farmers against speculation, increase of prices, high rents, and against attacks upon the eight-hour day.

6. Demand for civil servants freedom of opinion and right of organization, and the 1,800 francs bonus.

7. Demand a system of social insurance, under which there can be no fraud or theft.

8. Demand a financial policy which abolishes wage taxes and indirect taxation, and which takes from the huge capital of the war-profiteers, dealers and speculators.

9. Strive for equality of political and economic rights for working men and women.

The Workers' and Peasants' Bloc.

As against the formation of a bloc of the left, the Communist Party is setting up the idea of the creation of a workers' and peasants' bloc. The bloc of the left necessarily signifies the collaboration and blending of classes, the workers' and peasants' bloc on the contrary, means the clear and irreconcilable class war.

The Communist Party demands from the other two proletarian parties, the setting up of a united front of all workers against the bourgeoisie, which is artificially divided into a right and a left.

Profound differences of opinion divide us on the questions of defense of native country, the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, and revolutionary methods. They render a unity of organization of the political parties of the proletariat impossible. But for a definitely circumscribed and important action, in which it is a question of bringing the whole of the proletariat into the struggle against the bourgeoisie, the Communist Party is ready to set aside the questions which divide us, to set up the unity of the proletarian forces for a minimal program of struggle. In making this sacrifice, it proves its will to see the unity of the forces of labor realized on the solid foundation of the class war.

The Communist Party, therefore, suggests to all proletarian organizations, a Central Conference, to examine the platform to be set up and the practical problems which will arise in the formation of a workers' and peasants' bloc.

This general discussion and the formation of a class bloc of the workers and the peasants, necessarily presumes two elementary conditions:

1. United tactics thruout the country. It would be making a farce of the working class bloc, if it were only partly carried thru in certain localities, while in others the bloc of the "Left" was formed. The workers' and peasants' bloc must at the next election evoke the class war on a national scale.

2. A practice of real class war involving the absolute break with the bourgeois left parties. A certain number of socialist and socialist-communist federations have already created, with the radical party, the bloc of the left in their districts. Altho the two parties have not officially defined their attitude their most eminent leaders are daily working at the creation of the bloc of the left, together with the leaders of the radicals, both in meetings and at public demonstrations, as well as in the special press of the "Left" Bloc, Ere Nouvelle, Quotidien, Paris Soir, etc.

One cannot maintain at one and the same time, the left bloc, and the workers' and peasants' bloc, the collaboration of and the struggle between the classes. Therefore, the Communist Party by suggesting to the other proletarian parties the formation of the workers' and peasants' bloc, places before these parties the unavoidable alternatives: with the Communist Party, to create the unity of the struggle of the working class against the bourgeoisie of the left and of the right; or, with the Radical Party against the Communist Party, which latter absolutely refuses to take part in the collaboration of the classes.

The Communist Party is prepared to make the necessary sacrifice for the formation of the workers' and peasants' bloc, whose task it will be to arraign the whole capitalist regime.

THE NEGRO AND AMERICAN RACE PREJUDICE

By LOVETT FORT-WHITEMAN

THE student of social problems may easily discover, after but little investigation, that race prejudice, almost all cases, has its roots in some form of economic or industrial competition. Race prejudice is not something inherited—transmitted thru the blood from one individual to another. Thus, despite the fact that probably most persons believe such to be the case. One may see in any place in the South, black and white children playing together, even in sections where the greatest degree of animosity exists between the races. Nor is the Negro regarded in any of the European countries as a peculiar object of hatred or prejudice such as in the United States.

No social bitterness greeted the Negro at his advent on American shores from Africa. His enslavement was a matter simply of meeting the need of a labor supply in the colonies. Further, it is a well-known fact that there was much intermixing of white women and male Negro slaves before slavery became a definite and recognized institution in the country; that is before the greater value of the Negro as a slave was appreciated.

With the growth of the tobacco and cotton interests, there was an ever-increasing legislation restricting and defining the social status of the Negro. And the ruling or slave-owning class, in order to give its position some sort of moral justification, claimed that slavery brought the Negro in touch with civilization a higher plane of existence. This slave-owning class, controlling the and christianity and elevated him to agencies of public opinion, preached the inherent inferiority of the Negro.

It should be easy to understand that a public opinion wholly shaped by a slave-owning class, the belief of the inherent inferiority of the Negro and his social unfitness, after a time, became thoroly established, and part and parcel of the American social consciousness.

Even after the emancipation of the Negro from chattel slavery, it has remained to the interest of an exploiting class, to maintain a popular opinion of the social inferiority of the Negro. Today, the Lords of Industry, thru a servile press, the school, the church, and other agencies of public opinion, are able to keep the ranks of the working class divided on sentiment of race differences. Some of the unions bar Negroes from membership. And this is greatly to the interest of the capitalist class. This permits of a sort of a reserve army of Negro workers that may be employed to break strikes. And to enumerate the most out-standing manifestations of this sickly sentiment of American race prejudice as it effects the Negro, as follows: in the South, the latter is compelled to ride in rear seats in street cars, he is politically disfranchised, lynched and burned at the stake and in the North as well suffers industrial discrimination, residential segregation, and often denial of public accomodation. There may be such a thing as one race having a natural antipathy for another, but this does not imply hostility. Strife between races is based on some economic condition. And a struggle for economic and industrial advantages reflects itself in mutual hatred and groundless prejudice.

The Negro worker is unorganized and everything possible is done to keep him thus. We even find such organizations among Negroes as the Urban League, which is maintained by the capitalist class, and which functions as a nation-wide labor agency, supplying the Northern industries with raw cheap Negro labor from the South. And this has been a leading circumstance in the development of race riots in our Northern cities. When unionized white labor finds itself confronted in the labor market with the Negro who is willing to do the same work for much less money, the natural reaction is one of hostility toward the Negro. And the willingness of the Negro to work for less money than the white man is rather a necessity—as has been shown.

Bitterness between the Negro and the white man in America, is stimulated and promoted by the capitalist class who necessarily resort to such a method in order to split the ranks of the working-class as a whole and to thus better affect its exploitation. It is simply a case of "divide and rule." But the practice having become deep-seated in our social organism, it has colored the social mind and the unthinking person regards prejudice against the Negro as a natural inheritable mental condition.

Yet this principle in the art of subjecting one race or class to another is a world-wide practice and as old as the institution of private property. When England entered India, she found the caste system which had been created by a previous conquering race, yet at the time was in a state of rapid dissolution. It has been of paramount advantage to England to keep this social system alive. Thus rendering joint action against her rule impossible. In the British West Indies, she establishes a social cleavage between the mulatto and pure-blooded Negro. But, in Ireland, where there is but one race, she resorts to the religious sentiment. Protestants and Catholics are inspired to hate one another and even abetted to a state of civil war.

The working-class in America, shall succeed only after the workers have laid aside all racial bitterness and shall have recognized the fact that class interest far transcends race interest; that as long as the workers fight among themselves and remain disunited, just so long will they be exploited, robbed and plundered by the employing class.

To the DAILY WORKER. Please congratulate Max Bedacht on his "Our Attitude Towards the Third Party" in the Saturday magazine section of February 2nd. It is the most precise, concise, lucid explanation of the party analysis as of the last party convention and stand for the party as well, that I have read. It is as if I were at the convention myself, not thru the direct description of externals, but the abstract stand of the whole party.—Lewis Mikelberg, Colorado.

THE CITY OF DREADFUL NIGHT - - -

By O. HENRY

"DURING the recent warmed-over spell," said my friend, Carney, driver of express wagon No. 8,606, "a good many opportunities was had of observing human nature thru peekaboo waists.

"The Park Commissioner and Commissioner of Polis and the Forestry Commission gets together and agrees to let the people sleep in the parks until the Weather Bureau gets the thermometer down again to a living basis. So they draws up open-air resolutions and has them O. K.'d by the Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Comstock and the Village Improvement Mosquito Exterminating Society of South Orange, N. J.

"When the proclamation was made opening up to the people by special grant, the public parks that belong to 'em, there was a general exodus into Central Park by the communities existing along its borders. In ten minutes after sun-down you'd have thought that there was an undress rehearsal of a potato famine in Ireland and a Kishineff massacre. They come by families, gangs, clambake societies, clans, clubs, and tribes from all sides to enjoy a cool sleep on the grass. Them that didn't have oil stoves, brought along plenty of blankets, so as not to be upset with the cold and discomforts of sleeping outdoors. By building fires of the shade trees and huddling together in the bridle paths, and burrowing under the grass where the ground was soft enough, the likes of 5,000 head of people successfully battled against the night air in Central Park alone.

"You know I live in the elegant furnished apartment house called the Beersheba Flats, over against the elevated portion of the New York Central Railroad.

"When the order come to the flats that all hands must turn out and sleep in the park, according to the instructions of the consulting committee of the City Club and the Murphy Draying, Returfing and Sodding Company, there was a look of a couple of fires and an eviction all over the place.

"The tenants began to pack up feather beds, rubber boots, strings of garlic, hot-water bags, portable canoes and scuttles of coal to take along for the sake of comfort. The sidewalk looked like a Russian camp in Oyama's line of march. There was wailing and lamenting up and down stairs from Danny Geoghegan's flat on the top floor to the apartments of Misses Goldsteinupski on the first.

"'For why,' says Danny, coming down and raging in his blue yarn socks to the janitor, 'should I be turned out of me comfortable apartmints to lay in the dirty grass like a rabbit? 'Tis like Jerome to stir up trouble wid small matters like this instead of—'

"'Whist!' says Officer Reagan on the sidewalk, rapping with his club. 'Tis not Jerome. 'Tis by order of the Polis Commissioner. Turn out every one of yez and hike yerselves to the park.'

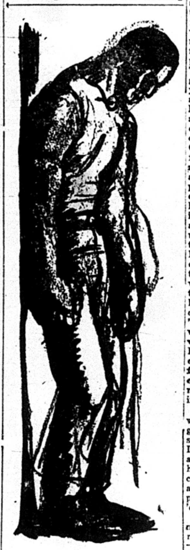
"Now, 'twas a peaceful and happy home that all of us had in them same Beersheba Flats. The O'Dowds and Steinowitzes and the Callahans and the Cohens and the Spizzinellis and the McManuses and the Spiegelmayers and the Joneses—all the nation of us, we lived like one big family together. And when the hot nights come along we kept a line of childher reaching from the front door to Kelly's on the corner, passing along the cans of beer from one to another without the trouble of running after it. And with no more clothing on than is provided for in the statutes, sitting in all the windies, with a cool growler in every one, and your feet out in the air, and the Rosenstein girls singing on the fire escape of the sixth floor, and Patsy Rourke's flute going in the eighth, and the ladies calling each other synonyms out of the windies, and now and then a breeze sailing in over Mister Depew's Central—I tell you the Beersheba Flats was a summer resort that made the Catskills look like a hole in the ground. With his person full of beer and his feet out the windy and his old woman frying pork chops over a charcoal furnace and the childher dancing in cotton slips on the sidewalk around the organ-grinder and the rent paid for a week—what does a man want better on a hot night than that? And then comes this ruling of the polis driving people out o' their comfortable homes to sleep in parks— 'twas for all the world like a ukase of them Russians— 'twill be heard from again at the next election time.

"Well, then, Officer Reagan drives the whole lot of us to the park and turns us in the nearest gate. 'Tis dark under the trees, and all the childher sets up to howling that they want to go home.

"'Ye'll pass the night in this stretch of woods and scenery,' says Officer Reagan. ''Twill be fine and imprisonment for insoolting the Park Commissioner and the Chief of the Weather Bureau if ye refuse. I'm in charge of thirty acres between here and the Agyptian Monument, and I advise ye to give no trouble. 'Tis sleeping on the grass yez all have been condemned to by the authorities. Yez'll be permitted to leave in the morning, but ye must retoorn be night. Me orders was silent on the subject of bail, but I'll find out if 'tis required and there'll be bondsmen at the gate.'

"There being no lights except along the automobile drives, us 179 tenants of the Beersheba Flats prepared to spend the night as best we could in the raging forest. Them that brought blankets and kindling wood was best off. They got fires started and wrapped the blankets round their heads and laid down, cursing, in the grass. There was nothing to see, nothing to drink, nothing to do. In the dark we had no way of telling friend or foe, except by feeling the nose of 'em. I brought along me last winter overcoat, me tooth-brush, some quinine pills and the red quilt off the bed in me flat. Three times during the night somebody rolled on me quilt and struck his knees against the Adam's apple of me. And three times I judged his character by running me hand over his face, and three time I rose up and kicked the intruder down the hill to the gravelly walk below. And then some one with a flavor of Kelly's whiskey snuggled up to me, and I found his nose turned up the right way, and I says: 'Is that you, then, Patsey?' and he says, 'It is, Carney. How long do you think it'll last?'

"'I'm no weather-prophet,' says I, 'but if they bring out a strong anti-Tammany ticket next fall it ought to get us home in time to sleep on a bed once or twice before they line us up at the polls.



Discouragement.

"'A-playing of my flute into the airshaft,' says Patsey Rourke, 'and a-perspiring in me own windy to the joyful noise of the passing trains and the smell of liver and onions and a-reading of the latest murder in the smoke of the cooking is well enough for me,' says he. 'What is this herding us in the grass for, not to mention the crawling things with legs that walk up the trousers of us, and the Jersey snipes that peck at us, masquerading under the name and denomination of mosquitos. What is it all for, Carney, and the rint going on just the same over at the flats?'

"''Tis the great annual Municipal Free Night Outing Lawn Party,' says I, 'given by the polis, Hetty Green and the Drug Trust. During the heated season they hold a week of it in the principal parks. 'Tis a scheme to reach that portion of the people that's not worth taking up to North Beach for a fish fry.'

"'I can't sleep on the ground,' says Patsey, 'wid any benefit. I have the hay fever and the rheumatism, and me ear is full of ants.'

"Well, the night goes on, and the ex-tenants of the Flats groans and stumbles around in the dark, trying to find rest and recreation in the forest. The childher is screaming with the coldness, and the janitor makes hot tea for 'em and keeps the fires going with the signboards that point to the Tavern and the Casino. The tenants try to lay down on the grass by families in the dark, but you're lucky if you can sleep next to a man from the same floor or believing in the same religion. Now and then a Murphy, accidental, rolls over on the grass of a Rosenstein, or a Cohen tries to crawl under the O'Grady bush, and then there's a feeling of noses and somebody is rolled down the hill to the driveway and stays there. There is some hair-pulling among the women folks, and everybody spanks the nearest howling kid to him by the sense of feeling only, regardless of its parentage and ownership. 'Tis hard to keep up the social distinctions in the dark that flourish by daylight in the Beersheba Flats. Mrs. Rafferty, that despises the asphalt that a Dago treads on, wakes up in the morning with her feet in the bosom of Antonio Spizzinelli. And Mike O'Dowd, that always threw peddlers downstairs as fast as he came upon 'em, has to unwind old Isaacstein's whiskers from around his neck, and wake up the whole gang at daylight. But here and there some few got acquainted and overlooked the discomforts of the elements. There was five engagements to be married announced at the flats the next morning.

"About midnight I gets up and wrings the dew out of my hair, and goes to the side of the driveway and sits down. At one side of the park I could see the lights in the streets and houses; and I was thinking how happy them folks was, who could chase the duck and smoke their pipes at their windows, and keep cool and pleasant like, nature intended for 'em to.

"Just then an automobile stops by me, and a fine-looking, well-dressed man steps out.

"'Me man,' says he, 'can you tell me why all these people are lying around on the grass in the park. I thought it was against the rules.'

"''Twas an ordinance,' says I, 'just passed by the Polis Department and ratified by the Turf Cutters' Association, providing that all persons not carrying license number on their rear axles shall keep in the nubile parks until further notice. Fortunately, the orders comes this year, during a spell of fine weather, and the mortality, except on the borders of the lake and along the automobile drives, will not be any greater than usual.'

"'Who are these people on the side of the hill?' asks the man.

"'Sure,' says I, 'none others than the tenants of the Beersheba Flats—a fine home for any man, especially on a hot night. May daylight come soon!'

"'They come here be night,' says he, 'and breathe in the pure air and the fragrance of the flowers and trees. They do that,' says he, 'coming every night from the burning heat of dwellings of brick and stone.'

"'And wood,' says I, 'And marble and plaster and iron.'

"'The matter will be attended to at once,' says the man, putting up his book.

"'I own the Beersheba Flats,' says he. 'God bless the grass and the trees that give extra benefits to a man's tenants. The rents shall be raised fifteen per cent tomorrow. Good-night,' says he."

Did you ever hear of Editor Whedon
Giving to the public treasury of the money he received
For supporting candidates for office?
Or for writing up the canning factory
To get people to invest?
Or for suppressing the facts about the bank,
When it was rotten and ready to break?
Did you ever hear of the Circuit Judge
Helping anyone except the "Q" railroad,
Or the bankers? Or did Rev. Peet or Rev. Sibley
Give any part of their salary, earned by keeping still,
Or speaking out as the leaders wished them to do
To the building of the water works?
But I—Daisy Fraser, who always passed
Along the streets thru rows of nods and smiles,
And coughs and words such as "there she goes",
Never was taken before Justice Arnett
Without contributing ten dollars and costs
To the school fund of Spoon River!

The Fate of the Farmers

THE more one looks into the conditions in which the farmers find themselves today, the more one becomes convinced that two of the most ardently advocated relief proposals of the capitalists—the cutting of wheat acreage and diversified production—are utterly worthless.

Many farm experts of Wall Street have been yelling for a cut in the acreage of seeding wheat. The fact that our wheat exports fell 40% in 1923 has caused some to be misled by this propaganda. It is interesting to note what the application of this remedy means to the farmers. Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana show a decrease of 600,000 acres seeded to wheat. Yet, it is these very states that have applied the wheat acreage cut that are today suffering most from the acute farm depression.

The self-appointed saviors of the farmers who are doing the bidding of their Wall Street masters are also trying to convert the wheat farmers to the idea of livestock raising. The latest figures of the Department of Agriculture estimate the value of all farm and range livestock on January the 1st as much lower than that of the corresponding date of last year. Since January 1st, 1923 the estimated value of farm animals has decreased more than a quarter of a billion dollars. The value per head of milk cows, horses, swine, and cattle shows a substantial decline since the depression of 1921 set in on the farms.

The fate of the farmer is hopelessly bound up with the difficulties confronting world capitalism today. The fate of the farmer depends on the world economic conditions and on the status of our own industry. As long as these two factors make for farm depression, the farmers will be unable to get out of their present serious conditions. Under these circumstances, all remedies of the capitalists, regardless how extensively they may be advertised, are not worth an iota to the farming masses.

THE CRUX OF THE PHILIPPINE CONFLICT

By JAY LOVESTONE

ONE of the most pressing questions confronting the Sixty-Eighth Congress is the problem of Philippine independence. There are several bills dealing with the American occupation of the Philippine Islands before the senate and house.

Were it not for the practically undivided attention the Teapot Dome affair is now receiving, the Philippine crisis would today have been in the forefront of our national political arena. Just now the Teapot politics eclipse everything else. But the Philippine question has its own little scandal, and its a mighty big one at that. And there is oil in it, too. It is very likely that the next scandal congress will tackle will be the General Wood family oil splash. No less noted an investigator than Samuel Untermeyer will probably step in to this exposure, which will be of first rate importance. Besides, startling evidence is promised by an investigation of the peculiar way in which General Wood has permitted concessions to be handed out to some of his political friends in the Archipelago.

To the American workers and farmers the Filipino problem is a matter of serious and far-reaching dimensions. Today the Philippines are the key to American imperialist supremacy in the Pacific—the theatre of the next great capitalist world conflagration. The very pith of the increasingly serious problem of militarism is today bound up with the acute crisis in the Philippines. No one can deny that militarism and imperialism in all their numerous dangerous ramifications are taking on ever-more threatening proportions, involving the life and security of the exploited workers and dispossessed farmers. To the extent that our working masses have a vital interest in this growing menace to their very existence, to that very extent are they drawn into the Philippine maelstrom.

Strategic Importance of Philippines

The Philippine Islands are the economic and military gateway to the Far East. From the naval and commercial point of view, the harbor of Manila and the Islands are the key to economic and naval supremacy in the entire Pacific. Kobe, Osaka, and Yokahama, the flourishing business cities of Japan; the Chinest coast from Shanghai to Hongkong, and the ports of North China Dairen and Tientsin; Singapore, the British Gibraltar of the Far East guarding the treasures of India; the Dutch East Indies, and the route southward to Australia—all lie within a steaming radius of 2,500 miles from Manila as a center. In this sphere of influence encircling Vladivostok, the Pacific gateway to Siberia, "India to the Arabian Sea, and Oceanica to Perth and Brisbane in Australia" there live and work close to eight million people—the prize labor market of the world.

The overshadowing importance of this strategic location of the Philippine Islands has won for the Archipelago the covetous role of being at "the cross-roads of the greatest trade routes of the future." Manila can well serve as a convenient distributing center for merchandise in this most densely populated section of the world.

Tremendous Natural Wealth

The Philippines are still a virgin field for economic development. Of the total area of 115,000 square miles, equivalent to the combined areas of the States of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, only about 11,500 square miles are under cultivation today. This 10 per cent of the total area is worth close to a quarter of a billion dollars.

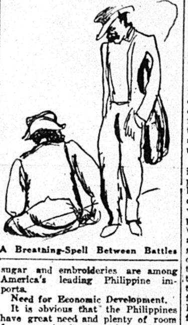
This American dependency has close to 65,000 square miles of commercial forest land The islands can support a population at least three times their present number. The Philippines afford unbounded commercial opportunities. The field in sugar refining is practically untouched. The same holds true for fishing, canning and fruit and vegetable raising. Wide areas of grassy lands and hillsides are available for livestock raising. The mountains are teeming with such mineral wealth as coal, iron, silver, gold and other precious metals. Rubber, cocoanut oil and hemp afford inviting investments. The islands are rich in petroleum, and are said to fall in the Borneo Oil field section, one of the six greatest oil areas of the world. With all its undevelopment, the Archipelago's total wealth today is estimated at about $6,000,000,000.

The Philippines are making great headway in economic development. The value of their six leading agricultural products—rice, corn, sugar, hemp, cocoanut, and tobacco has increased almost 300 per cent, from $122,000,000 to $343,500,000 in the period 1917-1920.

From 1903 to 1918 the number of manufacturing plants increased 156 per cent and the value of their products rose 754 per cent. The cocoanut oil factories, sawmills, sugar and rice industries have been making especially noteworthy progress. The Atlantic, Gulf & Pacific Co. and the Earnshaws Slipways and Co. have built modern iron and steel foundry plants and ship construction yards.

In the period 1917-1920 the total annual foreign trade of the Philippines practically doubled, rising from about 160 million dollars to more than three hundred million dollars. In the 25-year period of American domination, Philippine trade with the United States has risen from the meager share of 11 per cent in 1900 to 65 per cent for the first ten months of 1923. Cotton and cotton goods, iron and steel, machinery, automobiles, wheat, flour, meats and dairy products chemicals, dyes and drugs are among the leading articles exported by America to the Philippines. Hemp, cigars, leaf tobacco, cocoanut oil, hats, lumber, sugar and embroideries are among America's leading Philippine imports.

IN WEST VIRGINIA



A Breathing-Spell Between Battles

Need for Economic Development.

It is obvious that the Philippines have great need and plenty of room for economic development. And here is where we come to the crux of the whole Filipino independence question. The pivotal point of this problem like all other colonial questions of imperialist exploitation, lies in the investment of foreign capital by the financiers and industrialists of the more developed capitalist countries. The movement of the Filipino people for national independence is inextricably tied up with the titanic struggle now being waged by the dominant capitalist powers for raw material and new spheres of influence.

The Filipinos want capital. They need capital. But they do not want to give themselves away in bondage to foreign capitalist masters, they do not want to surrender their national independence in order to secure this capital. The Filipino people would like to have the foreign capitalist come in, invest his capital, get his profit, big as it might be, and then get out of the country. The Filipinos, however, are determined not to barter away their nationality for the capitalist mess of pottage, for the help that the foreign banker or manufacturer might give them.

On the other hand, the foreign capitalist, whether he be American or English, Italian or French or Japanese, just can't see how it can pay him to sink his capital into the development of railways, harbors, public utilities, the drilling of oil wells, the opening up of coal and iron areas, and the expoitation of the other natural resources unless he himself, thru his government, has undisputed charge or outright ownership of these territories so that he might be assured of the security of his original capital and in addition be guaranteed a handsome profit.

A Capitalist Dilemma.

Herein lies the dilemma confronting the colonial peoples struggling for national freedom, for complete independence from the big imperialistic capitalist powers. The imperialist colonial problem presents another one of the many insolvable contradictions inherent in the capitalist system of production and exchange. Economically the Philippines, like all other industrially undeveloped countries, need the capital now controlled by the foreign capitalists of the highly developed industrial countries; politically, this very much needed capital is a millstone around the neck of the less industrially developed nation, a dagger at the heart of the nation, a menace to the very existence and independence of the people.

The Filipinos thus find themselves between the devil and the deep blue sea, between Scylla and Charybdis. The capital they would welcome economically strikes terror into their national hearts politically. There is no way out of the terrible difficulty for the colonial peoples as long as capital which is social in use remains private in ownership. The Filipinos can as much hope to make the economically welcome capital of the American banker and manufacturer politically palatable as they can hope to change the leopard's spots. Hence the utter impossibility of complete genuine national independence ever being voluntarily granted by the United States capitalist government to the Philippines.

The Government In Business.

Aware of the difficulties and dangers that accompany the investment of foreign capital, the native Filipino government attempted to meet the situation by getting into business itself, by taking over the role of the foreign capitalist itself. The development of the Islands' natural resources, banking, transportation, the sugar and coal industries were some of the enterprises embarked upon by the Filipino government.

In 1916, while American capitalists were busy piling up fabulous profits thru their supplying the belligerents with the means of life and death, the needs of industry and war, the Philippine Legislature passed Act 2,596 to encourage the organization of various industries along the Japanese lines thru the guarantee of a 5 per cent dividend on stocks of certain kinds of industries for a period of five years. In the same year Act 2,612 was passed to provide the proper fiscal agency for these native developments. The Philippine National Bank was thus founded on Feb. 4, 1916. Then there were formed in quick succession, the National Coal Co. under Act 2,705 on March 10, 1917, to develop the coal resources; the National Petroleum Co. under Act 2,814 on March 4, 1919 to develop the Filipino oil fields; the National Development Co. under Act 2,849 on March 10, 1919 to help the Philippines become self-subsisting thru the financing of isolated enterprises; the National Cement Co. on March 12, 1919 under Act 2,855, to meet the great demand for cement in the Islands. In the meanwhile the Manila Railroad was taken over by the government from British capitalists.

All of these corporations were organized on the basis of the native government owning at least 51 per cent of the stock so that foreign capitalists could not sneak in thru some financial back door and stifle the Filipino people.

General Wood Butts In.

For a few years the situation was developing rather favorably. Then the great economic depression of 1920-1921 that swept the world set in and set its heavy foot on the throat of the rising enterprises of the native government. Of course, these government industries, like all industries everywhere suffered and suffered severely thru the acute economic crisis.

Here the American capitalists saw their chance, who the precise extent to which their observation was conscious cannot be guaged accurately, to throttle these dangerous attempts at what is often called State Socialism. Our capitalist government seized upon the losses suffered by the new native state industries thru the depression as an excuse to drive the Filipinos out of national business. The utterly fraudulent intentions and the brazen arrogance of this anti-native policy adopted by Harding are exposed in all their naked ugliness and dishonesty by the fact that in the depression of 1921 Philippine commerce fell only 32 per cent while American commerce dropped 48 per cent.

The first bombshell fired into the camp of the Filipinos was the report of the Wood-Forbes mission denouncing "the dangerous way in which the Filipinos had involved the State in business." Then General Wood's entire policy to date has been resolute and aggressive, highhanded and militarist, with the object of driving the Philippine Government out of business and having it stay out of business for good.

The choice of Wood as Filipino Governor General is in itself the best indication of the economic and naval importance attached to the Islands by the American imperialists and of the serious concern with which our capitalists viewed the entry of the native government into national business. General Leonard Wood has the unenviable record of being the most tyrannical and efficient servant of our employing class. The strikebreaker, General Wood has left his bloody imprint on the struggles of the West Virginia miners, on the 1919 steel strike in Gary, on the race troubles in Omaha, and on the Cuban people.

Governor General Wood's imperialist policy is aggravated by his being in a position to hand out valuable concessions to some of the tobacco, railroad, and oil millionaires who invested $2,000,000 in his disastrous 1920 presidential primary campaign. In April, 1923 Colonel Procter, who spent close to $750,000 on Wood in 1920, organized in the Islands a special corporation called the "Procter and Gamble Trading Co.," to exploit the cocoanut oil possibilities of the Philippines.

Here we have the conflict of imperialist capitalist interests with the needs and demands, and with the welfare and existence, of the Filipino nation. Here we have the lie given to all the sham pretenses at the self-determination of nations so grandiloquently mouthed by our ruling class in the last world war slaughter. In the case of the American imperialist attempt to uproot the most substantial basis for Philippine national freedom, the economic basis, the workers and farmers of the United States and the world are presented with a view of what our capitalism really is—stripped to the skeleton in all its naked brutality.

Salvation Lies in Unity of Oppressed

It is plain therefore that the very economic conditions of capitalist imperialism militate against the Filipino people being given freedom from our employing class exploitation and oppression.

It is likewise clear that because twice as much British capital is today still invested in the Philippines, the American imperialists will not dare to throw away the inestimable political advantages at their disposal thru the present political domination of the archipelago by Wall Street. The spectre of Anglo-Japanese unity in the Pacific still haunts our imperialists.

The inestimable value of the Philippines as a source of new raw materials, as a naval base, as the commercial gateway to the Far East, is uppermost in the minds of our capitalist rulers.

Consequently the Philippine crisis is bound to develop and grow ever more acute. Our exploiters will never surrender the bargain they got from the decrepit Spanish government when they paid $20,000,000 for these treasure islands. The best that can be forced out of our employing class, the most the Filipinos can hope for as long as the capitalists dominate our political and economic life, is some incomplete, limited national autonomy of some form or other.

The salvation of the Filipino people lies only in their union with the oppressed of the world, under Communist leadership and for Communism.

Complete economic and political freedom for the Philippines, genuine national freedom without strings attached to it, can and will be secured by the Filipino people and by all other oppressed nationalities only when capitalist imperialism is abolished, only when the rule of the exploiters is ended, only when the Workers and Farmers Republic is established.

COAL DIGGERS CALL STRIKE ON THE KLAN

Mines Close As State Troops Reach Herrin, Illinois

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill.—Twelve mines are already shut down and a general strike of all the coal diggers in Williamson county is expected in labor's defensive fight against K. K. K. usurpers who have taken over the government of the county and arrested Hugh Willis, state official of the United Mine Workers of America, Mayor Anderson and Sheriff Galligan, on framed-up charges of murder.

The strike comes as hundreds of militiamen, members of the 132nd Infantry, arrived as reinforcements to S. Glenn Young and his policemen, who have lawlessly taken possession of the city.

Veteran of Herrin Case.

Willis' arrest on the charge of murdering Constable Cagle, is the second attempt of operators' forces to frame him. The first was at the famous Herrin trial where he was completely vindicated by a jury.

Arrested with Willis by the Klan police under S. Glenn Young, is the mayor of Herrin, an anti-Klansman, C. E. Anderson. Other defendants are Hezzie Byrn and M. J. Trout, deputy sheriffs; Jim Davis, John Murray, J. W. Brown, Alvin Thomas, Pete Smith, James Johnson and Ora Thomas. All are held in the basement of the Elks' Club headquarters, where Klansmen foregather.

Klan Arrests Sheriff.

Sheriff George Galligan, who sought to restrain the terroristic policies of the Klan, is lodged a prisoner in the city jail, also charged with murder. No direct evidence supports the Klan's charge.

S. Glenn Young, whom the United States invested with the authority of a federal "prohibition enforcement" agent as he directed the Ku Klux Klan raids on the foreign born miners of Williamson county, is in control of the local police forces in Herrin and working hand in hand with the guardsmen.

Soldiers Save Klan.

The military forces of the State of Illinois came while Mayor Anderson's men were fighting gallantly against a mob that was trying to break into the hospital to lynch Deputy Sheriff Layman who had been shot by Ford, the Klan police chief, who preceded Young. The soldiers' arrival at double quick with fixed bayonets, saved the Klan gunmen from the anti-Klansmen who were coming in response to a hurry call.

The Klan dictatorship of the new chief of police, S. Glenn Young, sworn in by the assistant chief irregularly, is shown by his failure to make arrests for the shooting of Deputy Sheriff Layman by Chief John Ford. Witnesses saw Ford fire.

Klan Password Required Under Military Regime

HERRIN, Ill., Feb. 11th.—With troops patrolling Herrin the Klan password is required from all persons who would enter or quit the town limits.

Young, the Klansmen, rules the town, guarded by Illinois soldiery. Soldiers' fixed bayonets surround him, and a machine gun is mounted on his desk. There is talk of a friendly arrest by the military to allay the resentment with which the town is seething.

Great All-Race Negro Congress Opening Today Seeks to Weld Oppressed Against Oppressors

All previous attempts to bring American Negroes together will be overshadowed by the All-Race Assembly or Sanhedrin, which opens its doors in the Wabash avenue branch of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., today, for a week's deliberations.

That is indicated by the large advance guard of delegates from the 41 registered organizations. There is now assurance that several hundred colored men and women will participate in the United Front congress which seeks to weld the Race together against the lynching, disfranchisement, peonage and Jim Crowism that is going on in full blast today in violation of the ordinary criminal laws, the 14th and 15th amendments and all principles of human justice.

Minor, Fort-Whiteman Speaking.

Speaking on a theme which is near to the hearts of negroes thruout America, Robert Minor, editor of the Liberator, and Lovett Fort-Whiteman, of the Chicago Defender, spoke last night at the Wendell Phillips High School, 39th St. and Prairie Ave., of the heroism and genius of Frederick Douglass, the colored fugitive who helped to organize the forces of abolition north of the Mason and Dixon line.

The Minor-Fort-Whiteman meeting was the first of several supplementary mass meetings during the progress of "Negro Week."

Some of the most distinguished negro leaders in America will be present at the congress and there will be a full sized delegation of colored men from the Workers Party and the African Blood Brotherhood. The five Workers Party delegates are Lovett Fort-Whiteman, Gordon O. Owens, P. Eugene Burton, Ethel Hall and C. Phillips.

Asking Recognition of Russia.

The congress will put itself on record in favor of the recognition of Soviet Russia, if the program of the worker element goes thru. Recognition will be urged because Russia is the only powerful nation that puts theories of racial equality into practice and that is carrying on an active campaign thruout the world for the equality of the darker peoples.

Fearing that the convention might neglect the fundamental economic issues which underlies the persecution of the black race a strong group of delegates will do all they can to keep these issues to the fore and will strive for the adoption of a vigorous program for industrial freedom of the negro in northern industries as well as on southern plantations.

Prominent Negroes Attending.

William B. Dubios, editor of "The Crisis"; Alain Lock, philosopher from Howard University; Jessie Fausset, literary critic; William H. Moore, poet and critic; Mrs. Ida B. Well, known far and wide among the members of her race for her agitation against race discrimination in the south; Monrose Trotter, editor of the "Guardian," of Boston, and president of the Equal Rights League; William Braithewaite, poet and critic, of the staff of the Boston Transcript;" Bishop Jones and Bishop Hurst, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, are among the prominent Negroes who will take part in the deliberations in the day sessions at the Wabash Avenue Y. M. C. A. and speak to mixed audiences at the Wendell Phillips High School, 39th and Prairie, in the evenings.

No representatives will be present from the Garvey movement. The United Negro Improvement Association holds to its African nationalistic policy and refuses to take part in a movement that is concerned primarily with winning rights for Negroes where they live. The Garvey movement urges the return to Africa as the objective of the Negroes.

Workers Standard of Living Falls As Rents Rise; Worst Victims Are the Negroes, Daily Worker Reveals

By JAY LOVESTONE.

Not only are the workers compelled to live under the most deplorable conditions of sanitation and congestion, but they are also being forced to pay exorbitant rents—rents far beyond the reach of their scanty budget allowances for housing.

More and more the workingmen and working women of New York are being driven to cut down on their food, clothing and education in order to be able to pay the high rents that are

FILIPINOS CABLE THANKS TO THE WORKERS PARTY

Greeting by Philippine Labor Confederation

(Special Cable to the Daily Worker)

MANILA.—The Philippine Labor Confederation has just passed a resolution thanking the Workers Party of America for the declaration recently made in the form of a resolution adopted by the labor elements of Chicago, demanding that congress and the government of the United States vote and act immediately to grant the Filipino people complete independence from the rule of American imperialism.

The resolution in question, was unanimously adopted by the workers attending the massmeeting for Filipino national freedom held under the auspices of the Workers Party in Chicago, Feb. 1st.

This is the second time in recent weeks that the workingmen of the Philippine Islands have expressed their gratitude to the Workers Party for its campaign to unite the American and Filipino workers in a common struggle against their common capitalist imperialist enemies. At the last national convention of the Philippine Federation of Labor, held in January, similar action was taken in the unanimous adoption of a resolution of thanks to the Workers Party for its help in the campaign to liberate the Filipinos.

C.P.P.A. WILL MISS McADOO, LOST LEADER

Farmer-Laborites Strong At Third Conference

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS.—The Conference for Progressive Political Action opened its sessions here today with the greatest uncertainty for future plans prevailing among all except the left wing delegates, such as William Mahoney, of St. Paul, Robley D. Cramer, of Minneapolis, and others, who came here definitely committed to the formation of a Farmer-Labor party as opposed to the Conference's present program of non-partisan action.

Chester Pratt, Wisconsin Non-Partisan, who opposed the Farmer-Labor party movement at the Chicago, July 3, Conference was heard from the rank and file thru a referendum on the question and is instructed to try and swing the conference for independent workingclass political action; ninety per cent of the Wisconsin league farmers were for a Farmer-Labor party.

Others Have Change of Heart.

There are other delegates here who have had a change of heart and are ready to desert the capitalist parties under pressure from the rank and file, but what their voting is will not be known until the conference gets down to business.

Close observers of labor's political activities know that the Conference for Political Action has been built up around the McAdoo for President idea and everything looked good until McAdoo was caught in the flood of oil that rolled out of the teapot.

The officialdom of the conference, William H. Johnston of the International Association of Machinists the officers of the Railway Brotherhoods, controlling the voting strength of previous gatherings, are now without a candidate unless a deal has been made with Senator LaFollette. What these labor officials will do in the present difficulty will be interesting to watch.

One thing is certain. Recent developments, the Teapot Dome scandal involving both old parties, and the continued depression in the agricultural sections has strenghtened immeasurably the elements who want to cut loose from the old parties and begin to build a solid political party of workers and farmers with the economic organizations of these groups as its foundation.

May Do the Foolish Thing.

It may be that the cautious leadership of the Conference for Progressive Political Action may be foolish enough to try and put the oil-spattered McAdoo over; again they may endorse LaFollette either as a potential republican party candidate or a a "third party" candidate.

Both of these proposals if made will be fought strenuously by the strengthened left wing who will endeavor to get the Conference, if outright endorsement of the Farmer Labor party movement is impossible, to postpone any action and endorse and send delegates to the May 30th convention in St. Paul.

Teachers Strike, 200 Strong, When Pay Is Held Back

(By The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY.—When 200 teachers were fired in Ueuvo Lareda after the teaching staff had waited over a month for pay, the whole teaching body went on strike. They are still out, and one of them, a principal, is in jail for refusing to give up the keys of his school. The schools are now locked but the teachers and pupils are planning open them by force.

A conciliatory commission is at work on the matter.

The Industries for the workers!

Forward to the Farmer-Labor Party

To the Delegates to the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

THE Republican and Democratic parties are discredited as never before in the history of this country. It has been generally known that these parties are the parties of Wall Street and the privileged class but the Teapot Dome looting of the nation has made this clearer than ever before. Senators, cabinet officers and even presidents of both political parties are exposed as the agents of big capitalists struggling for greater profits and looting the nation in the process.

On the other hand, the farmers and workers of this country are more determined than ever to create a political party which will represent their interests. The May 30th Convention of the Farmer-Labor forces at St. Paul in this country will bring into existence a great Farmer-Labor party which will fight the political battles of the workers on the land and the workers in the industries.

Will the Conference for Progressive Political Action in the face of these events continue its bankrupt policies of trying to pick out republicans and democrats, and vote for these on the old party tickets, or will it align itself with the forces of the militant workers and farmers who are struggling forward to a Workers' and Farmers' Government of the United States? This is the question which the Conference at St. Paul will decide.

The reactionary leaders of the Conference, who are pledged to old party candidates, who want to make the farmers and workers again vote for a McAdoo, or some other so-called "good man," will do their utmost to continue the old policies.

These delegates in the Conference who really represent the interests of farmers and industrial workers will fight for the adoption of a new policy and the endorsement of the great Farmer-Labor Convention on May 30th.

The policy of the Conference for Progressive Political Action thus far has been a betrayal of the farmers and industrial workers whose desire for independent political action brought about the original conference.

The first conference in Chicago in February, 1922, sprung out of the desire in working and farming masses for a political party, separate and distinct from the old parties, which would fight their battles.

The industrial workers of the city had learned during the experiences in the years since the war that the existing government, whether a republican or democratic administration was in power, whether a good or bad republican or democrat was elected to office, was always on the side of the special privileged class and Wall Street.

The farmers have had the same lesson taught to them. They have seen the government use its power thru the Federal Reserve Board to bankrupt the farmers of the United States. They have seen the government use its power in the support of the railroads that robbed the farmers thru high freight rates. They have seen the government use its power to help the bankers to hold the mortgages on their land while refusing assistance to them. They have learned their lesson in the fact that millions of farmers have been driven from the land because they could not gain even a living under the conditions which Wall Street and the exploiters forced them to submit to.

These industrial workers and farmers express their discontent with the acts of the government in the demand for the organization of a political party which would fight their political battles.

They had high hopes when the first conference of farmers' and workers' representatives was called in Chicago. They still had high hopes after that conference, that the representatives who had gathered in Chicago would in the Cleveland conference adopt the program which they had refused to adopt in Chicago.

The action of the first conference at Chicago was a betrayal of the farmers and workers. The action of the second conference in Cleveland was an even greater betrayal.

Will the St. Louis Conference answer the demands of the industrial workers and farmers or will it again follow the wishes of a few reactionary leaders, like Johnston and Keating, who have their own political game to play?

The Conference will be asked to endorse the May 30th Convention of farmers and workers. It will also be asked to endorse the Republican or Democratic candidates who have betrayed the farmers and workers many times. Will the Conference again take its stand with the agents of Wall Street or will it align itself with the farmers and workers?

Those delegates in the Conference who really represent industrial workers and farmers—and there are many such—will not again support the agents of the republicans and democrats in the Conference in betraying the Farmer-Labor movement.

The May 30th Convention is the hope of the farmers and workers of this country. In the Twin Cities, on May 30th, there will come into existence that organization which the farmers and workers desired to create when they forced their representatives to go to the first Conference in Chicago.

The May 30th Convention will nominate a Farmer-Labor candidate for president. It will adopt a platform representing the interests of the farmers and industrial workers of this country. The St. Louis Conference is the last opportunity of the Conference for Progressive Political Action to show that it really represents the workers and farmers. If it holds to its policy of endorsing republican and democratic candidates, it aligns itself with Wall Street no matter what it endorses. If it gives its support to the May 30th Convention it will align itself with the workers and farmers and show that it really has an interest in their struggle for a better life.

THE TIME FOR DECISION IS AT HAND. IS THE CONFERENCE FOR PROGRESSIVE POLITICAL ACTION FOR WALL STREET, OR FOR A WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT IN THE UNITED STATES?

RADICAL NEGRO SEES SANHEDRIN AS EPOCH MAKING

Race Congress Hailed by Fort-Whiteman

By LOVETT FORT-WHITEMAN.

The Negro has always been perfectly conscious of the injustices attending his social existence in American life. And his organizations for securing and safeguarding his civil and political rights are numerous and daily on the increase. This fact that each organization has its distinct methods and program for attaining a common goal, thus causing a waste of much vital social energy, has given rise to a desire to make some attempt at a confederation.

The Sanhedrin Conference was organized a year ago by Prof. Kelly Miller, of the Department of Mathematics in Howard University, Washington, D. C. He is regarded by all Negroes as one of the most eminent scholars of the race. He is best known to the white race by his two books, "Race Adjustment" and "Out of Bondage." Kelly Miller is endeavoring by means of the Sanhedrin Conference to bring all Negro organizations together on a common program of action in the general work of race adjustment in American life.

The Sanhedrin Conference begins its sittings Monday noon, Feb. 11, in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A., Wabash Ave. and 37th St. Its evening sessions, thruout the week, will be held in the auditorium of Wendell Phillips High School, Prairie Ave. and 39th St. Only the evening sessions are open to the public. The conference will continue thru the entire week, and it goes without saying that it will be epoch-making in its new social attitude and its resultant decisions.

There will be several hundred delegates, coming from all parts of the country, and representing many organizations. The Workers Party of America is sending five delegates, the African Blood Brotherhood is sending two. These two organizations being wholly class conscious shall no doubt find it to their mutual interests to consolidate many times thruout the conference.

Car Crew in 13-Hour Shift When Indiana Traction Wreck Killed 19

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The crew of the eastbound Union Traction car which was in the collision at Fortville a week ago today was required to work 13 hours on the day of the accident, it was revealed today.

Rollin Flynn, motorman, and Sidney Sawyer, conductor, of the eastbound car are held on a charge of involuntary manslaughter as the result of the death of 19 persons in the wreck.

Under a new schedule adopted by the company, all motormen and conductors on the Anderson division were required to work a 13-hour day alternatively with an eight-hour day.

On the day of the accident, Flynn and Sawyer began their run at 4:30 A. M., it has been learned. They were required to report at the station at Indianapolis at 4:15 A. M.

Both men had been working approximately 12 hours when the accident happened at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Women Are Taboo in Rep. Party Councils, Says Mrs. McBride

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—That the Republican party bosses do not care a rap for the opinions of the women whose support they seek in drumming up votes for them was the charge made by Mrs. McBride is a fiery speech to a meeting of the Republican Women's council.

The occasion for the outburst was a "pep" meeting called to jazz up the waning enthusiasm of the women. Mrs. McBride resented the lack of consideration shown the women who do the hard work. She said she was thru with partisan organizations and wasting her time supplying the mantle of feminine delicacy to the putrid cesspool of republican party politics.

Mrs. Nettie Clapp, another member of the committee said the best policy was to play with the men and work into gradually into the inner circles, and not seek to burst in suddenly into their political sanctums.

Intelligent women are beginning to rebel against being compelled to play the part of hewers of wood and drawers of water in the politicacl camps of the capitalist parties.

New Culture to Come from Russia, Declares Composer

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—The great art of the future will come from the east, said Ernst Von Dohnanyi, pianist, composer and conductor of the Philharmatic orchestra of Budapest, as he wrested with a menu that contaned the names of innumberable pies, from which he was trying to select one for dessert.

"And by the east I don't mean Japan—bring me a cherry tart—I mean Russia," went on the famous conductor between frowns and gestures of exasperation as he looked in vain for a strawberry shortcake. "Russia is a country that has not yet had its say. It has had its culture, but it was a European culture imposed from the top as a thin veneer, true culture must grow out of the hearts of the people."

A capitalist reporter asked Mr. Dohnanyi, what he thought of American women. This stupid question almost threw his temperament out of gear but he rallied nobly and said that he had not yet got into the heart of America and therefore could not speak with authority.

Communists the Issue.

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—The annual conference of the Australian Labor party will meet at Sydney during Easter week of 1924. The biggest question to be decided is whether the motion carried at last conference to admit Communists to the Labor party will be ratified.

BOSSES LAY OFF 500,000 WORKERS LAST DECEMBER

Railroads, Mines, Factories, Slowing Down

Over half a million workers were laid off by American employers during the last six months of 1923, according to figures in the December employment report of the United States bureau of labor statistics.

Railroad lay-offs totaling 73,960 and tens of thousands of miners idle in Illinois and Indiana brings the number turned off by industry above the half million mark without any attempt to include farm workers and men engaged in highway construction who have been laid off since the summer months.

Still Better Than Last Year.

Compared with December, 1922, employment is 3.1 per cent higher. Very material decreases in nearly all branches of textile and clothing manufacture as well as in the manufacture of boots and shoes, railroad equipment and auto tires are more than balanced by increased employment in the food, iron and steel, lumber, automobile and electrical industries.

In addition to the decrease in number employed between November and December the percentage of full time operation fell 4 per cent. In December 23 per cent of the establishments reported part time operation and 2 per cent were entirely closed down. Approximately one-third of the establishments reporting full time operation were operating below capacity. Less than capacity operation was especially characteristic of the steel industry in which only 57 per cent of the establishments were operating full time and only a third of these reported that they were utilizing their entire capacity.

Wage Increases Cease.

The development of unemployment has brought wage increases to a standstill. The report shows that during the preceding 11 months 4,373 wage increases were recorded. In May the peak of wage increases was reached with a total of 1,279 reported during the month. By November the number of increases had fallen to 113 while in December only 21 were reported. And during December 17 establishments reported that wage rates were decreased. More employes were affected by the decrease than by the increases.

Average weekly earnings during December amounted to $26.73 or approximately 7.3 per cent higher than in December a year ago.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The Boro Park group, who recently changed their name to the "Lenin Group", will start the drive for a motion picture machine with an entertainment and dance Friday evening, Feb. 15th, at the Finnish Hall, 764 40th St., Brooklyn.

Appeasing the Jobless

BERLIN—About 60 per cent of the industrial workers registered in the Ruhr district are unemployed. Emergency work is being undertaken by the government, costing 250,000 gold marks per day, to avoid complete idleness and militant action on the part of those unemployed.

Famous Criminal's Escape South Inflames Minneapolis Populace

By "BILL" SANDBERG.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 10.—Straying down Fourth Street, the DAILY WORKER special correspondent spied a crowd of men and women in front of a book store, jesticulating and peering in thru the window. Curious to know the cause of the commotion, the reporter skirted around the young, but steadily growing crowd, all set for a revelation.

An excited voice from near the window could be heard piping, "And he beat it—Can you beat it—He beat it." "He ought to be hamstrung," grunted a husky voice. "Yes, lynched," supported another, evidently a kluxer.

The straying reporter was at a loss. If the Bolshevik proprieter of the book store, who many times in the capitalist press has been reputed to be a nuisance, had closed up shop and beat it, it would to the hundred per centers be good riddance; and the straying reporter could not fathom this inordinate desire to hamstring and lynch.

Just then a "Hay Seed" in Uncle Sam's whiskers and high boots, chuckled, "He should be sentenced to a farm for the rest of his life," and then gloated in the sweetness of the thought of revenge.

To the wondering reporter the mystery was becoming more mysterious—and he would have died with a wondering mind had not the man with the piping voice come to his rescue, by nabbing him by the elbow an pointing to a Feb. 7th issue of the DAILY WORKER and calling attention to Attorney General Daugherty's picture—then piped again—"He beat it—can you beat it—he beat it."

Needless to say the straying reporter has smilingly strayed all over the village with the strange news.

Bankers Would Float Immense Loan to Mexico

(By The Federated Press.)

MEXICO CITY.—American bankers are negotiating for a possible loan of 200,000,000 pesos ($10,000,000) to Mexico. J. M. Buckner and Franklin Helm have been hanging around the Hotel Regis here for over a week, refusing to make any statement whatsoever, but it is gradually leaking out that they are here with the knowledge of the U. S. state department to negotiate a loan, that the amount has been fixed and the conditions of guarantee fairly well settled.

It appears that they wish to make the first delivery in arms and ammunition, the figure being fixed at some 100,000 rifles and the corresponding ammunition to cost about 5,000,000 pesos. This is to be followed with a second delivery of 45,000,000 pesos to make up the first quarter of the total loan. The final agreement has not yet been arrived at.

DOUGLASS, NEGRO LEADER AGAINST SLAVERY, LAUDED

Speakers Honor Great Colored American

The memory of Frederick Douglass, the great Negro abolitionist, was honored at a big mass meeting in Wendell Phillips High School, last night, under the auspices of the Liberal Culture Society.

"A great American," was Robert Minor's characterization of the colored libertarian. Minor dealt at length with the numerous Negro slave uprisings prior to the rise of Frederick Douglass and pointed out with great clarity the economic roots of the slave system and the class relationships which gave rise to race hatred in American life. He continued with a scientific analysis of the social forces of the future which alone will give the Negro race its new emancipation.

Lovett Fort-Whiteman spoke on the "Aim and Purpose" of the Liberal Culture Society. He gave a clear description of the economic condition of the Negro in America and logically discussed the impossibility of any great Negro cultural achievement within the present social order.

"There is no racial group in American life," said Fort-Whiteman, "better endowed by nature to give America a distinct music, art and poetry than the Negro race. His imagination is rich and colorful; his feeling deep and universal. The Negro is spiritual, as his love for religion attests. Yet at present the Negro is giving almost nothing to the art life of America. And why? Because the present sociological and economic condition of the Negro is direfully miserable. His best energies must go to maintain his head above water. The higher artistic expression of the Negro cannot be achieved in the present capitalist society.

The Liberal Culture Society is endeavoring to promote a proletarian culture among Negroes.

There was an excellent musical program, by eminent Negro artists.

Workers Standard of Living Falls as Rents Rise; The Worst Victims Are the Negroes

steadily soaring away above their low wages.

In the great increase of rents in the last three years the poor have been hit much harder than the rich. The rents of the cheaper apartments have risen much more than the rents of the expensive ones.

300 Per Cent Rent Increase.

The rents have increased by leaps and bounds was made clear beyond challenge by the Housing Commission's survey of the average monthly payments for rooms by workers living in eight typical city blocks. In the Commission's preliminary report we find that:

"Instance after instance is recorded where the new tenant pays fifty per cent to 300 per cent increase over the rental of the old tenants. Little wonder that the old tenants hold on to what they have, bad or good."

It is a practice among New York landlords to charge new tenants much more than the old ones.

Likewise, Miss Lillie Grant, Acting Chairman of the Mayor's Rent Committee, testified that rents were being increased in Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn between 100 and 300 per cent.

The huge rent increases shown block by block in the table below are the result of the survey conducted by the State Housing and Regional Planning Commission of the conditions prevailing in eight typical city blocks. The Commission emphatically points out that "in reading the rent figures it should be borne in mind that nearly half of the apartments were not heated; in some instances it cost the families an additional $19.00 a month to keep the apartments comfortably warm."

A Sunday Off

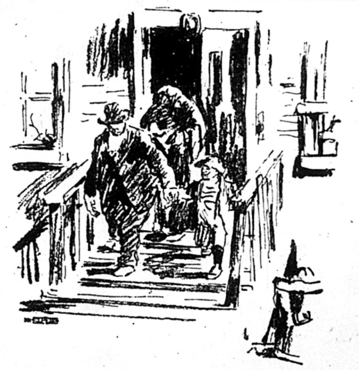

Table Showing Hugely Increased Rents in Blocks Largely Inhabited by Workers

	Average monthly rent 1920	1923	Percentage increase
Block 1—Cherry, Pike, Monroe, Rutgers	$13.63	$19.06	40
Block 2—28th, 29th Sts., 9th, 10th Aves.	15.70	22.81	45
Block 3—66th, 67th Sts., 9th, 10th Aves.	17.12	24.24	42
Block 4—66th, 68th Sts., 2d, 3d Aves.	19.35	28.63	47
Block 5—61st, 62d Sts., 1st, 2d Aves.	12.66	18.98	50
Block 6—103d, 104th, Sts., 2d, 3d Aves.	15.09	21.41	42
Block 7—133d, 134th Sts., Lenox, 5th Aves.	21.97	37.70	72
Block 8—Liberty, Glenmore Aves, Thatford, Osborne Sts.	15.15	29.39	93

For the mass of workers the conditions are much worse than the above table would tend to indicate. These blocks are typical and not merely the blocks occupied by the poor people. Besides, the figures cited here do not include the money many workers' families are compelled to spend for repairs in order to be able to stay in their homes.

"A Bunch of Bolsheviks."

How the workers react to this high tribute levied on them by their landlords for the right to live in abominable houses and what it means to their lives are well represented in the following instances:

"I must pay $35 now for three smaller rooms, and when I lived before I was there for nine years, and that house when I came in I paid $15, and the $15 he raised me $17. After he raised me to $19. and then sold the house maybe for $15,000. That house, old tenants was in there; they paid only $13. Now they pay $60, and the landlord—maybe tenants he don't want to give so much raise. He bring me $17. After he raised me to $19, bring others half a dozen times. Leave it to the Magistrates' Courts to come down there with a summation in the neighborhood. We have this movement few years ago, and I think all the people we know are mentioned by the Bronx League three years ago. We was all a bunch of Bolsheviks. Now I would think everybody start to be a Bolshevik, because Bolshevik mean honest people. Bolshevik don't mean crooked."

This was the way Pancrazio Genonese spoke before State Industrial Commissioner Bernard L. Shientag at the hearings of the Housing Commission.

Children Overworked and Underfed.

After visiting the home of Mr. Gerson, a father of six children and employed at sewing burlap bags, at —— East 113th St., I was given the following shocking picture of the housing crisis:

"We have five rooms here. We don't get our steam regular. Three years we live here and the landlord raised us rent from $19 to $60. I cannot move. There are no rooms here in the neighborhood and new tenants pay more anyhow. My two girls work and I to pay landlord every month or we get put out on the sidewalk. We keep a boarder and have my son work after school and in night so we can send him thru high school. We are all very stingy with our eats, even the two youngest, Mollie and Sam, so we can pay rent regular and have clean house and so have my daughters have company come up to the home. It's very hard for us and we are crowded, but what can I do."

The findings of the State Commission abound with examples of such and much worse hardships being inflicted on the worker's family by the terrific rent bills that must be met regularly.

Negroes Victimized.

That particularly high rents were being imposed on the Negroes and that colored families suffered considerably from the exorbitant rentals were revealed in testimony before the State Commissioner, Mr. Frederick Q. Morton, Municipal Civil Service Commissioner, declared:

"There are in Harlem upwards of 200,000 Negroes. Nearly half the residents of the community are lodgers. This in itself constitutes a great menace to public morals and also gives deepest concern to the thoughtful leaders of my race as to the welfare of our coming generations in this city.

"The average respectable Harlem family cannot, without taking lodgers, pay rent in Harlem. Rentals average from $12 to $14 a room and in some instances go as high as $18 and $20. The monthly income of the average Harlem family of good standing is about $125. It is obvious that the great need of our community, therefore, is small apartments which could be procured at rentals commensurate with the average income of the ordinary family. . . .

"In many cases, colored tenants pay double, or nearly double the rents paid by the last white tenants of property vacated by white tenants.

"Banks and other financial institutions controlling real estate capital have always discrimintedagainst Negro property. It is a fact that when an owner of Negro property desires to refinance it he must pay exorbitant bonuses and rarely ever obtains new capital from the large financial institutions controlling such capital."

And Mrs. Eddie Aspinwall told of a house on West 140th St. where a Negro occupant paid $70 for a four-room railroad flat having no improvements and having no light for four weeks. The tenant was compelled to give $15 for an electricity installment deposit. This apartment once rented for $25. The white tenants had been paying $22 and $24. Mr. Aspinall then went on:

"I can take you to a school in the winter time where the children have no more soles on the bottom of their feet than if they hadn't anything because the parents have to spend all of the money to pay the landlord. . . . Those people are more afraid of the landlord than the Fifteenth was in No Man's Land, where they were fighting, standing behind the machine guns."

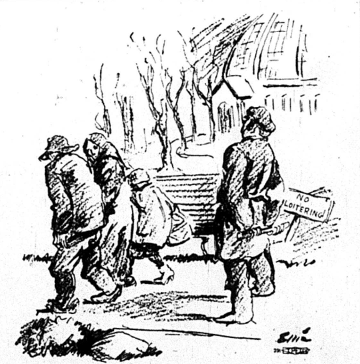
To find Negro children unclothed, sometimes with no underclothes, with sleeves out of coats, with no overcoats is a very easy matter.

RENTS NOW 80 PER CENT HIGHER THAN BEFORE THE WAR IN NEW YORK CITY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—Rents are 80 per cent higher then before the war, says a statement issued by the National Industrial Conference Board. During 1923 rents increased 8 per cent. The estimates are based on figures gathered in 181 cities thruout the United States. The board sees no hope for a reduction in rents.

The Workers Enjoy Their Park



Workers' Income Very Low.

No analysis of the housing crisis can be complete unless the income of the tenants as well as the rent they pay is considered. No housing conditions can be satisfactory, even if the apartments are habitable, unless there are rooms available at the rentals which the working masses can afford to pay.

Turning to the latest, 1920, figures on the estimated distribution of families in the sundry income groups of New York State we find the following startling disclosures about the poverty of the families of the workers in the wealthiest state, in the Empire State of the Union, brought forward in the Report of the State Housing Commission:

About three-fourth (73.4 per cent) of the families in New York State have annual incomes of less than $2,500.

Only about one-fifth (22.1) of the New York State families have a total income of $2,500 to $5,000 a year.

Less than onetenth of the families of New York State have annual incomes in excess of $5,000.

In New York City more than two-thirds of the families receive total incomes of less than $2,500 a year; about one-fourth have annual incomes between $2,500 and $5,000; and less than one out of every ten families has an annual income of more than $5,000.

Rent Burdens Stagger Poor.

Under these circumstances it is obvious that the high rents are a staggering burden to the great mass of New York workers. All budget studies made to date establish the fact "that the smaller the income and the smaller the family, the larger is the proportion used for rent. . . The proportion decreases rather rapidly as the income becomes more adequate."

Thus the Housing Commission found in its survey of 3,841 families in New York State (1923) that families having an annual income of less than one thousand dollars spent 28.4 per cent of their total earnings for rent; those having $1,000-$1,500 every year spent only 15.4 per cent for rent.

Assuming even that the average working class family spends only about 20 per cent of its total annual income for rent we find that about seventy per cent of the families in New York City and about seventy-five whose income was $2,500 or more spent 23.0 per cent for rent; those per cent in New York State cannot afford to rent apartments costing more than $500 a year. Consequently the families of the workers are the hardest hit by the enormous rise in rent.

How Longshoremen Suffer.

What agony and suffering these high, unbearable rents bring to the workers of New York cannot be measured adequately in dollars and cents.

Speaking for the 30,000 longshoremen in the port of New York, Vice-President John P. Ryan, of the International Association, minced no words on the troubles of the workers engaged in this extra-hazardous occupation, whose weekly wage is $27 to $30 and who must often pay rent as high as $40 a month.

"The homes for the longshoremen in the Chelsea, South Street, Red Hook and Bush Terminal districts have no modern conveniences. The tenants must paint the places themselves and clean the halls," Ryan further testified.

Tenement Babies Work for Fifth Avenue.

The high rents have also greatly increased the number of children forced to work in the homes of the poor. In the survey of 2,000 working class families made by George A. Hall, of the New York State Child Welfare Commission, it was found that economic pressure compelled tenement babies to work for Fifth Avenue trade. Seventy-nine per cent of the children thus employed were under fourteen. Thirty-five per cent were under ten years of age.

Describing this desperate ecomonic want that prevails among the families of the workers in the Harlem district, Miss Margaret M. McGroarty, a school teacher, called this section "the forsaken spot" and went on to tell of this heart-rending condition:

"Children as young as three were put to work on artificial flowers. With their tiny fingers they apply paste to the bowl of the flower so that the mother or the older sister may apply the petals.

"The wages are deplorable. Crochet dresses which sell for $49.50 are finished for $1. Conditions in East Harlem are simply appalling. Personal articles of apparel are made in homes where disease is prevalent. The children come home from school, don't wash their hands but go right to work during the noon intermission, and eat when they can."

Rents Drive Poor Insane.

The boundary lines of the extreme sufferings of the workers because of the enormous rents they have to pay doesn't stop at child labor and a general lower standard of living. Insanity and death also claim the poverty-stricken worker compelled to pay a rental beyond his means for a house that is unfit for habitation.

One woman told the Commission how her husband was driven insane by the repeated increases in rents. Since 1919 the landlords have raised the rent of his little photographic shop from $75 to $175 and his apartment from $33 to $58. At the demand for the last increase the husband collapsed. He is now in the Bloomingdale Asylum—a State ward. Today, the wife is forced to go to work, and to leave a ten-year-old girl in the apartment alone all day.

Finally, Mrs. Aspinall told the State investigators of the case of a Negro woman whose husband died because he was forced to live in an abominable flat which was all he could afford to pay for. For three years the landlord of this apartment wouldn't fix the roof. The husband was taken sick because water was running down the bed. The dampness in the room brought pneumonia. Death soon followed.

POINCARE DEPUTY IS PELTED WITH RED PROPAGANDA

Debate Assumes Novel Form in Chamber

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS.—While a regiment of cavalry cleared the street outside the French chamber of workers engaged in a demonstration against the new tax proposal of the Poincare government the opposition on the inside under the leadership of the communists and the radical socialist, Edouard Herriot, hurled everything from Billingsgate to movable furniture at the government benches.

Andrew Maginot, minister of war in a rage that left him shrieking like a whirling dervish, picked up a copy of L'Humanite, crumpled it into a ball and hurled in at Marcel Cachin communist deputy. He only succeeded in hitting a neighbor in the eye. Cachin a more experienced sharpshooter managed to land a copy of the Temps, rolled into a ball between the optics of the minister of war. Howling with rage the latter attempted to make an assault on the nearest radical deputy, but was held down by friends.

A scandal resembling the Teapot Dome affair was the cause of the first assault on the premier a few days ago. Frauds in the payment of indemnities to certain individuals were discussed, but the battle shifted to the issue of giving the government authority to immediately take whatever measures of economy it considers advisable.

New Labor-Saving Cars Opposed by Ontario Workers

TORONTO.—Legislation to prohibit the use of one-man cars on street railways was asked by a deputation representing labor, which waited upon the government of the province of Ontario.

The deputation asked further for: an eight-hour day bill; relief of unemployment; regulation of the barber trade to require all barbers to undergo an apprenticeship; continuation of the provincial savings banks; inclusion of all workers, irrespective of age, under the workmen's compensation laws; extension of mothers' allowance act to include widows with one child; and the appointment of a representative of labor on the Ontario Hydro-Electric commission.

Police Union to Enter Elections; Asks Labor's Aid

MONTREAL.—The local policemen's union is carrying its fight with the city council into municipal politics. It proposes to place two candidates of the union in the field at the coming city elections. Application for approval of this step has been made to the Montreal assembly of the Canadian Labor party, the political body associated with the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. The assembly has referred the request to its executive for examination, as the Policemen's Federal Labor union is not affiliated with the party. The Montreal assembly of the Canadian Labor party itself has already nominated one candidate for the municipal council.

Co-operatives in Flourishing State Down in Mexico

(By The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY. — Thirteen new peasants' co-operatives were founded in the state of Guanajuato alone during the last six months with the aid of the federal department of agriculture. The co-operatives have not only received government credits but free legal service, machinery at cost and other facilities. Previously they were given land and free water and timber rights as a basis for their co-operatives.

Such facts explain why the peasants are rallying to the defense of the present government.

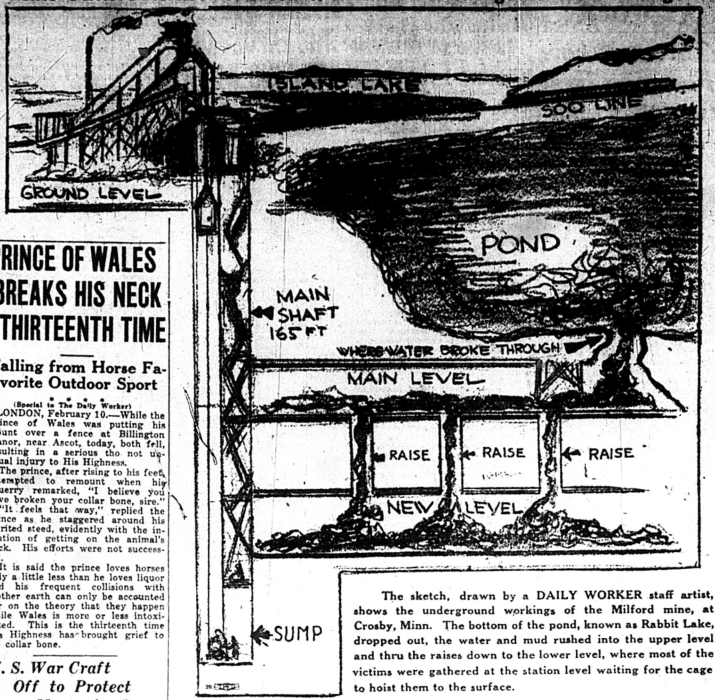
Mine Owners Refused to Heed Workers' Protest Against Death Danger



The sketch, drawn by a DAILY WORKER staff artist, shows the underground workings of the Milford mine, at Crosby, Minn. The bottom of the pond, known as Rabbit Lake, dropped out, the water and mud rushed into the upper level and thru the raises down to the lower level, where most of the victims were gathered at the station level waiting for the cage to hoist them to the surface.

PRINCE OF WALES BREAKS HIS NECK THIRTEENTH TIME

Falling from Horse Favorite Outdoor Sport

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, February 10.—While the Prince of Wales was putting his mount over a fence at Billington Manor, near Ascot, today, both fell, resulting in a serious tho not unusual injury to His Highness.

The prince, after rising to his feet, attempted to remount when his equerry remarked, "I believe you have broken your collar bone, sire."

"It feels that way," replied the prince as he staggered around his spirited steed, evidently with the intention of getting on the animal's back. His efforts were not successful.

It is said the prince loves horses only a little less than he loves liquor and his frequent collisions with mother earth can only be accounted for on the theory that they happen while Wales is more or less intoxicated. This is the thirteenth time His Highness has brought grief to his collar bone.

U. S. War Craft Off to Protect Morgan's Loans

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON. — The American cruiser Rochester has again been dispatched to Honduras to protect the dollars of the American bankers invested in that country.

The State Department announced today that a civil war is imminent in Honduras and that American interests are endangered. This means, of course, the interests of Wall Street.

Many an old tar is today shedding salt tears over the degeneration of the U. S. navy into a collecting machine for the millionaires of America. Besides a knowledge of geography and the laws of navigation, candidates for captaincies in the navy may in the future be selected from the staffs of the dollar-a-week credit houses. The ancient mariner is being pushed off the map by the bill collector.

Jobless Fighting on New Orleans Docks for Work

By J. W. LEIGH
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

NEW ORLEANS.—Conditions in this city from the standpoint of the workers are deplorable. Despite official reports unemployment is on the increase. Every week hundreds are added to the already long list of those who are seeking a job of any kind in order to live. The influx of scabs brought here by the shipping interests to replace the 2,000 white and colored longshoremen, the hundreds of strikebreaking electricians, the northern tourists who come to escape the winter, added to the citizens out of work and on part time, increase the unemployment evil.

The other day 500 able bodied men were waiting on the fruit docks, fighting for the opportunity of carrying bananas at 25 cents an hour. An installment house advertised for salesmen and out of 68 who applied when told that the average earnings would not exceed 50 cents a day, 60 clamored for the jobs. Only five men were selected.

Mid-City Branch Discusses Tactics of Workers Party

Harrison George was the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the Mid City Branch of the Workers Party held on Feb. 6.

He explained the Communist position and the attitude of the party toward the I. W. W. Citing the movements in Italy and Germany as examples he brought out the folly of isolated abortive movements and the necessity for concerted action.

Discussion was participated in by the members. The next meeting of the branch will be held Feb. 20. Enthusiasm for The DAILY WORKER must be translated into action and every member of the branch must do his duty in the circulation drive for The DAILY WORKER.—Dan Horsley, Branch Secretary.

TEAPOT SCANDAL SPLITS TWO OLD PARTIES ASUNDER

Factionalism Grows as the Leaders Fall

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON. — The Ford-for-President movement showed signs of reviving today as the smell of oil grew heavier on the political air. There was talk among Ford's friends here of drafting him to run, in spite of his announced support of President Coolidge.

This was but one manifestation of several, amid the oily reek from Teapot Dome, of the squirming of politicians who are mightily concerned about the public's reaction to the evidence which has connected men of both parties, in some degree, either with the oil scandals themselves, or with the men who are principals in the scandals.

As for McAdoo, his opponents were busy today writing him off as a possibility, while he and his friends vigorously refused to be written off. McAdoo will go before the senate Teapot Dome committee tomorrow to make the effort on which his political future probably depends.

The McAdoo clan is not indignant at the dragging of McAdoo's name into the oil scandal, thru E. L. Doheny's testimony that McAdoo has been and is one of his lawyers. The clan is not indignant—it is filled with murderous fury at what is termed a stab in the dark. McAdoo's speech to the senate committee tomorrow will be as forceful as he can make it.

In Republican ranks, Hiram Johnson serves notice he will not be "run out" of the race. Johnson says the Coolidge forces spread the story he would withdraw because they are afraid of the use he will make of the oil scandal issue against the administration. These tactics, he says, will prove a boomerang.

The Denby question is bothering the Coolidge leaders, because they say, there is no effective way to fight back. The demand for Denby's summary dismissal they regard as pure politics. A leading member of the Coolidge organization said today the president will not fire Denby without a hearing, even if that course should cost him the presidency.

Oil Mess Breeds Factionalism.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—Bitter factional hatred grips the senate in the oil scandal dispute as the committee of inquiry delves further in its investigation.

There were signs of an impending split in Democratic ranks on the Robinson resolution calling for the resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby.

To such proportion has the breach widened that one or two votes may result in victory or defeat for those attempting to oust the navy secretary.

Encouraged by this turn of affairs Republicans were rallying a strong defense of Denby's action in signing the leases which the senate formally declared were "without authority of law and against the expressed will of congress."

McAdoo Quits Doheny.

As the investigation got under way today developments included:

Senator Lenroot, chairman of the senate public lands committee, had a letter from William G. McAdoo, stating he had left the employ of E. L. Doheny, who holds the leases on naval oil reserves No. One and Two in California.

Lenroot said McAdoo will be permitted to testify almost at once before the committee to explain his exact connection with Doheny.

Criminal prosecution of former Secretary of the Interior Fall, who received a $100,000 "loan" from Doheny, appeared possible following the investigating committee's decision not to call him as a witness.

The public lands committee reopened hearings to trace the reports that government officials "cleaned up" in stock speculations in connection with the leases.

Seymour Cromwell, president of the New York stock exchange, was expected as the first witness before the committee.

McAdoo, candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, sent a long letter to Lenroot demanding an immediate hearing to dispel what he said were unfair impressions created by Doheny's testimony that McAdoo had some connection with the leases, which the senate has ordered cancelled as illegal and corrupt.

McAdoo said that it was important that he testify at once, in spite of Doheny's correction of figures on the money he has paid McAdoo as his lawyer.

Lake That Drowned Milford Miners to be Drained Now; 41 Deaths Prove Necessity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CROSBY, Minn.—Engineers here stated that before the Milford mine, in which 41 miners were drowned, can resume operations, the Whitmarsh mining company will have to drain Lake Foley, the body of water of which Rabbit Lake, whose bottom the Milford drift penetrated, is a part.

George H. Crosby, president of the Whitmarsh mining company, has indicated that the Milford mine will be reopened; before that can be done, say the engineering experts, the lake must be drained or a dam built that will keep its waters from the ground above the mine.

The restoration of the damaged workings will cost between $50,000 and $150,000 depending upon the amount of silt that has flowed into the workings and the damage done to the timbering.

The value of the ore blocked out and known to be in the property is around $1,000,000. It is pointed out here that the Whitmarsh mining company will incur little financial loss except that due to the interruption of operations as it carried liability insurance while the cost to the state in workmens compensation will come close to $400,000 it is believed.

Pipes are now laid at Lake Foley to carry the water into Island Lake on the other side of the mine.

It is this scheme that the miners urged as far back as last August and which if carried out would have saved their lives.

COOLIDGE BOOST WRECKS LEAGUE IN NORTH DAKOTA

Farmers Quit Committee that Names "Cal."

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D.—The Nonpartisan league controlled republican state central committee in session here has refused to rescind its former action endorsing the Coolidge candidacy.

The motion to rescind was made by "Dad" Walker who mercilessly flayed the action of the committee.

Committee Chairman Ray Frazier, burst into tears when trying to defend his and the committee's recommendation, after J. E. Engel of Maddock had accused him of "carrying around a package to be christened in the historic Potomac".

Frazier said he wanted to fight but the meeting broke up with mutual recriminations coming thick and fast altho no blows were struck.

This meeting is taken by the forty league delegates who formed the North Dakota Farmer-Labor Party as complete proof of their contention that the league has degenerated into a catspaw of the republican machine and has driven the last nail in the political coffin of that once militant farmers' organization.

DAILY WORKER'S Fears Realized in Brazen Whitewashing Report of School Board Denying 'Firetraps'

In one of the most brazen reports ever made in a whitewashing probe the Chicago School Board asserts that "there is no such thing as a firetrap school."

This absurd falsehood is in flat violation of the report of the fire department and the board's own engineer and there were 50 firetraps and it is in still more glaring contradiction with the facts established by the investigators for the DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER's prediction that the school board's report would be a slick coat of whitewash for its own criminal negligence and indifference to the lives of the hosts of little ones entrusted to its care has been abundantly brought out.

Wooden Fire Escapes Ingnored

Such murderous devices as wooden fire escapes, wooden stairways, antique buildings, either without any fire escapes or with these refuge places difficult of access were quietly and completely ignored in the board's report.

None of the "minor recommendations" which they made involve the spending of more than the meagerest sum, in spite of the $4,000,000 additional revenues that have been voted by the tax payers when they raised the school tax from $.75 to $1.00 on each $100 of taxable property, at the last election.

Only 30 Schools Visited

Only 30 schools were visited, or 20 less than the minimum number of fire traps admitted by the fire department. They said they were ready to make only minor recommendations.

The investigators were Frank McAuliffe, of the bureau of fire prevention, William Bending, inspector for the city building department and Cornelius J. Lamb, in charge of the bureau of repairs of the board of education.

The statement of one of the inspectors that many children are safer in school than they are at home, brought only a smile to persons who know the condition of some of the schools. "It sounds nice, but doesn't mean anything. To say that the public schools are safer than many tenements is not saying that they are safe or fit for use," is the way one person put it.

Must a Tragedy Come?

When Lamb tried to excuse the report of the inspectors by saying that he did not know of a fire in any public school during the last thirty years, people who are interested in the school building problem pointed out that it would only take one fire to make a tragedy in most of the schools of the city.

The recommendations of the inspectors consisted in such suggestions as that wooden partitions should be removed in certain schools. None of the suggestions made would cost the board of education any money which is taken as an indication that the report was practially dictated by board of education employees.

Among the schools visited, the J. N. Thorp school at 8915 Burley Ave., the inspectors reported that this school has "one of the best fire escapes" in the city. The fact that the fire escapes are extremely difficult of access was ignored as the Thorp school is, was not made plain. They said that the sanitary conditions "would stand improvement." The DAILY WORKER found when investigating the Thorp school that the sanitary arrangements were absolutely rotten.

Principal Is Aghast

At the Brown school on Warren Ave., the inspector said, they found "conditions very satisfactory." They recommended that the enclosed spiral fire escapes should be used in fire drills. The principal at the Brown school was informed the superintendent of schools that he would not take the responsibility of using these fire escapes because he considers them dangerous. He has told the board of education and the fire inspectors that he thinks that if the doors at the bottom of the fire escapes do not open, children would be sure to be smothered to death. This is the oldest school in the city.

At Branch No. 1, of the Mayfair school, which is a two story affair built in 1880, and which has wooden fire escapes, the inspectors recommended that a fire alarm box be put in front of the building.

They said that the Foster school on O'Brein St., should have several wooden partitions removed in the basement. This is one of the worst fire trap schools seen by the investigator for the DAILY WORKER.

At the Fallon school for crippled children at Wallace and 42nd Sts., the inspectors found that moving pictures were being shown and inflammable film being used. They recommended that the movies be discontinued. To recommend that noninflammable film be used, would cost the board of education money and would run counter to their policy of economy. Many of the crippled kids at the Fallon school never see movies except at school.

WILSON SEEN IN IMMORTAL LIGHT BY BISHOP BROWN

But Immortal Only for Lies and Crime

By BISHOP WILLIAM M. BROWN

Whether at Babylon or Washington,"
Whether the Cup with sweet or bitter run,
The Wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop,
The leaves of Life keep falling one by one.—Omar.

Wilson is dead, yet he lives, both because he left undone those things, which he ought to have done, and did those things which he ought not to have done.

Wilson still lives, and his immortality is secure, because he did not do what he ought to have done: (1) Keep his promise to save this country from the war,—he did not attempt to do it; (2) Keep his promise, after taking us into it, to make it a war to end wars by forcing a peace upon fourteen points which would make future ones unnecessary and indeed impossible;—he did not even present them to the Versailles conference, and (3) Keep his promise to have the war make the world safe for democracy—he did not add one item to our liberties, but took many away.

Wilson, still lives, and his immortality is secure, because he did what ought not to have been done: (1) He created and operated the largest and most efficient lying, coercing and robbing machinery in the interest of the owing class and against the working class that any nation has ever possessed; (2) He crowned money as our king and influenced his majesty to appoint corruption as the prime minister, and (3) He placed the name of our country above that of every other as a symbol of gold, graft and crime—the triune divinity in which his 100% Americanism lives, moves and has its being, and to which divinity he sacrificed thousands of young men and billions of wealth, helping mightily to flood the world with blood and tears.

New Immigration Bill Puts Bars on Political Refugees

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — Irish republicans and other immigrants who have done time for political offenses at home will be interested in Par. c, Sec. 6, of the new immigration bill accepted by the house committee and soon to be reported to the house for passage. It reads:

"The immigrant shall furnish to the consular officer, with his application, copies of his 'dossier' and prison record and military record, if any, a certified copy of his birth certificate if required by the country of his birth, and copies of all available public records concerning him kept by the government to which he owes allegiance. The documents so furnished shall be permanently attached to the application and become a part thereof."

Armed with this information, plus the secret reports which the police of each country will furnish to the consular officer in his character as judge of the fitness of the alien to come to the United States, the consular officer will determine whether the alien is safe for American industry. If the police record, the prison record and the military record indicate that the applicant has made trouble for bosses and dictators in Europe, his chances with the consular officer will be poor. The new system, as approved by the house committee, is designed to exclude "dangerous" persons—the type of Karl Schurz, Eamon de Valera and Ramsay MacDonald.

Fake Eight-Hour Day, Liberal Bait for Labor's Vote

(By The Federated Press)

VICTORIA, B. C.—There is now further proof of the falsity of the proposed Eight-hour Day bill which the present Liberal provincial government proposes to enact to enable it to make a bid for votes. When the bill was being considered the lumber interests were consulted frequently but when the Vancouver Trades and Labor council made a similar request it was put off with an evasive answer.

The measure as framed will not benefit the workers. There is strong likelihood that the bill may be repealed before it comes into operation. The provincial election is held this year and the Eight-hour Day bill does not go into effect until 1925 so that once the votes are secured the present provincial government may have the effrontery to annul the measure. Many believe that this will be done.

"The Utopian and humanitarian psychological viewpoint is, that the new man must first be formed, and that he will then create the new conditions"

STATES ATTORNEY SEEKS TO FRAME LABOR IN CAB WAR

But Get No Evidence Against Teamsters

States Attorney Robert E. Crowe has vainly thrown the entire force of his newly organized homicide squad behind an effort to connect the officers and members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs with the killing of two men and the serious wounding of one other in a gun fight at the offices of the Checker Taxi Cab company, at 4462 West Madison St. late Saturday. So far the effort has failed.

There has been keen rivalry between the Checker Cab company and rival concerns for years and the Checker outfit has just completed plans to put out a large number of new cabs seriously threatening the prestige and business of its rivals. The rivalry between the various cab companies is responsible for the outbreak Saturday, union men believe.

Auto Gunmen Did Job.

The gun battle ocurred when an auto load of men drove up to the office of the cab company and several men jumped out and began shooting. They ascended to the second floor where they killed Israel Rappart and Leo Gistenson and wounded John Madsen. The men their escape in the auto in which they came. It was found that Rappart had been hired as a guard by the Checker Company to defend the officers in just such an emergency. He had started work only a few hours before he was killed.

Officers of the company believe that the gunmen were after Emanuel Goldstein, president. At the time of the shooting Goldstein was at the office of chief of police trying to arrange to have a detail of police stationed at the offices of the company to guard the officers.

All Night Grilling.

The police took several wagon loads of witnesses of the shooting to the office of the states attorney where they were questioned and cross-questioned till early Sunday morning.

Police were ordered to find and arrest Daniel Stanton, Dave Ostran, Martin Foley, John Sherbo, James Mogley and his brother Sydney as the men who did the killing. None of these men are known to have any connection with any union.

Coolidge Crowd Is Surely Rich on Conferences

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—President Coolidge's special conference of business men, including Thomas Fortunatus Ryan and Julius Barnes, summoned here to settle the farmers' financial difficulties, met, listened to hard luck speeches by farmer representatives, and then went home. They adopted a resolution referring all remedial plans to the farmers.

The next administration conference is one to discuss co-operative marketing as an immediate remedy, and to oppose the Norris-Sinclair bill creating a government marketing corporation to handle both the domestic and the export crop without paying a toll to grain gamblers.

THE PARTY AT WORK

Workers Party Throws Whole Strength into Focusing Eyes of Labor on Teapot Scandal

The Workers Party has addressed the following communication to all Party Units:

Comrades: Following you will find a copy of a resolution adopted by the Central Executive Committee of the Party in regard to a campaign to be initiated by the Party AT ONCE.

1. The Teapot Dome scandal offers the best opportunity for focusing the eyes of the workers and farmers upon the government and Congress. The tremendous publicity, the new exposures daily, have created a rare, a great and deep, resentment in the worker and farmer masses. We must utilize this anger and indignation for the political education of the masses, and at the same time lead the masses to political action.

2. Our propaganda must make it clear that the Teapot Dome scandal is not a case of individual corruption, that it is inseparably bound with the essence of the capitalist government. We must explain that it is not a case of kept men in the government, but that the United States has a kept government. We must utilize the Teapot Dome scandal to expose the connection between finance capital and government. We must make every effort to destroy the democratic illusions of the masses.

3. The fortunate circumstance that the Republican and Democratic parties are at the same time equally involved in the scandal, as being bought by the oil magnates, gives us the best opportunity to make it clear to the masses that the Republican and Democratic parties in equal measure are the parties of big capital. This situation gives us the best and the unexampled opportunity to increase and broaden the propaganda for a class party of workers and farmers. We must take the Teapot Dome scandal as material for a gigantic, nation-wide and continued political campaign, and we must tie up this campaign with the May 30 Farmer-Labor convention. Our slogan of workers' and farmers' government must now be pushed into the forefront of our daily fight. We have treated this slogan too abstractedly until now. The Teapot Dome scandal gives us the opportunity to set it up as a concrete and immediate demand. The aroused masses will not only understand this slogan, but it is certain that they will take it up with enthusiasm.

4. The Teapot Dome scandal and the tremendous disillusionment of the masses over the capitalist parties and politicians will give a new impetus not only to the movement of farmers and workers but also will strengthen the sentiment for a Third Party. We must intensify our campaign to force LaFollette and other so-called progressives to split from the old parties.

5. The Teapot Dome scandal has shown clearly that the oil magnates have held the Wilson, Harding and Coolidge cabinet in their pay in order to force the United States government to sharp measures against Mexico. That gives us the best opportunity to make our campaign against imperialism concrete and understandable to the great masses. We must tie up the revelations of Doheny with the United States intervention in Mexico in 1916 and 1924, and with the intrigues centering about the recognition of Mexico.

6. The leasing out of the oil fields of the navy to private capitalists, the squandering of the oil reserves of the navy show openly how the biggest capitalists and the government conspired to weaken the armed strength of the country at the same time that they stirred up war dangers repeatedly. We must utilize these facts to give our campaign an anti-militarist edge, and to expose the patriotism of the ruling class.

7. The naval reserve oil fields were the property of the nation and they were given thru the government to private capitalists who openly boasted that they made hundreds of millions of dollars profit out of them. That gives us the best opportunity to inject into our campaign the question of private ownership versus public ownership. We must utilize the indignation of the masses, in order to make the nationalization of railroads, mines, etc., an immediate demand. It is very important to make it clear to the masses that the nationalization of public utilities, etc., is possible only if a workers' and farmers' government is set up, and that such a government is possible only thru the organization of a national Farmer-Labor Party.

8. We must make this campaign the central campaign of our party and we must mobilize the whole party for carrying it out. We must employ the following measures:

(a) The Party shall issue at once a manifesto which shall contain all the above mentioned phases of the Teapot Dome scandal.

(b) We shall instruct all Party units at once about the importance of the campaign. Party membership meetings shall be called at once in every city to discuss the matter thoroly. The discussion shall be considered in the branches, in such places where there is no city organization. After the general membership meeting every branch shall take up the matter. The district committees and city central committees shall elect special sub-committees to study the local situation from the viewpoint of how to apply the general policies of the campaign.

(c) We shall arrange as soon as possible mass meetings in every big city and industrial center. We must prepare the mass meetings so carefully that they shall be real mass meetings. We must show that what we did in the Lenin memorial meetings we can also do against the American government. These mass meetings shall invite all labor organizations and working class political parties, but they shall be held under the auspices of the Workers Party. At each meeting one speaker shall devote himself to showing the importance of The DAILY WORKER as the only paper which will tell the whole truth about the existing government.

(d) The DAILY WORKER must print as much as possible about the Teapot Dome scandal and about our campaign.

(e) We should immediately bring in resolutions in all labor and farmer organizations which will tie up the matter of the Teapot Dome scandal with the May 30 convention of the Farmer Labor Party, and with the slogan of farmers' and workers' government.

(f) A pamphlet on the Teapot Dome scandal shall be published immediately.

(g) The article, "The Kept Government of the United States," shall be printed as a mass leaflet at once.

(h) A special leaflet to the sailors shall be written and printed at once.

(i) The Young Workers League shall enter into the campaign with the special task of anti-militarist propaganda.

Every Party Unit must immediately begin work to put the instructions in regard to this campaign into effect. The first steps is the calling of membership meetings in all cities where there are central committees for discussion of this resolution and to familiarize every Party member with the part he must play in this campaign.

City Central Committees and District Executive Committees must also immediately appoint special campaign committees who are to proceed with the preparations for mass meetings. These meetings should be held the first week in March. Sufficient time for proper preparation should be allowed so that we can make them real mass meetings equaling, if possible, the great meetings held everywhere in the country as Lenin Memorial meetings.

Editors of all Party papers must give the widest possible publicity to the exposures in Washington and comment upon them editorially linking up the Party campaign with them in accordance with this resolution.

All Party papers must give the widest publicity to the mass meetings to be arranged by the Party.

A form resolution is attached to this letter which should be introduced by Party members who are members of workers and farmers organizations such as trade unions, fraternal organizations, cooperatives and any other kind of workers or farmers organization.

The National Office will have printed immediately, the leaflet "The Kept Government of the United States," and will circularize all Party units, sending them sample copies and informing them of the price at which these leaflets can be purchased. Other instructions will be sent to the Party units from time to time. This letter is intended to begin the campaign.

Comrades, the opportunity which lies before us in this campaign is one of the greatest our Party has had offered it. If we take full part in the present situation we can build a great mass movement and make the May 30 Farmer-Labor convention a great demonstration against the capitalist government of the United States and for a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

Every Party unit must mobilize its whole strength for this campaign.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary,
Workers Party of America.

DON'T FORGET THE SECOND ANNUAL RED REVEL
FEB. 16, 8 O'CLOCK
BENEFIT OF
DAILY WORKER and LABOR DEFENSE

RESOLUTION THAT WILL BE PRESENTED TO ALL WORKERS' ORGANIZATIONS

The Senate Investigation of the Teapot Dome oil leases show that the Government of the United States under both Republican and Democratic administrations serves the capitalists as an instrument for looting the nation. Senators, cabinet officers have been shown to be the paid men of big capitalists' oil interests and even presidents are not immune from their influence. Fall, Denby, McAdoo, Daugherty, Lane, Roosevelt: these are the names which the workers and farmers of this country have been asked to honor, but now they are all covered with the slime of corruption and graft.

The Teapot Dome exposures only prove again on a large scale what has been proven in this country hundreds of times; that the government of the United States serves the interests of a privileged class and is the enemy of the workers and farmers who produce the wealth of the country. It proves again that not one among the high and mighty of the old parties is immune from the corruption, grafting and looting thru which the capitalists take for themselves the wealth of the nation. It proves again that the existing system of industry and government is part of one system of special privilege and exploitation thru which the workers and farmers are robbed of what they produce.

There is only one answer to Teapot Dome and whole system of Teapot Domes which is capitalism—the organization of a Farmer-Labor Party and the struggle for a Workers and Farmers Government. Only the Workers and Farmers government will end the looting of the nation by the capitalists. A great, mass Farmer-Labor Party must carry on the struggle to establish that Workers and Farmers Government.

Whereas, a Convention has been called for May 30th at St. Paul, by the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the Farmer-Labor Party of Washington, Montana, and South Dakota, and other organizations, for the nomination of a Farmer-Labor candidate for president and the adoption of a national platform and this convention gives the opportunity to create the mass farmer-labor party which will carry on the fight for a Workers and Farmers Government.

BE IT RESOLVED, that we endorse the May 30th Convention and pledge ourselves to send delegates to this convention, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the labor press and to the representatives in Congress and the Senate from this territory.

Red Revel Will Be Brilliant Success; Everyone Welcome

The biggest social affair in Chicago promises this year to overshadow last year's success.

The RED REVEL, drawing every element of Labor-Reds, Pinks (real and Parlor), Trade Unionists and sympathizers—thru the increased number of Revelers has made necessary the transfer of it's operations to a larger hall, and on February 16, this second great social event will take place at the Ashland Auditorium.

Groups in national costumes will add to the color of the original and artistic costumes that have made last year's affair talked of for months. Advance notices of competitors for the $100 in cash prizes to be awarded predict a battle of beauty and originality in costumes that will test the wisdom of the wisest judge.

For music, the famous Husk O'Hare's Ten Wooden Soldiers will delight the heart of all who love to trip the light fantastic.

Food for the Gods!—prepared by specialists will add to the fame of this yearly classic.

The sale of tickets is going on at a rate unheard of in the history of social gatherings of Labor. The benefits of this affair go to the fighting DAILY WORKER and the Labor Defense. These reasons are enough to draw out on the night of Feb. 16. every single fighting militant in and around Chicago. The gayety, color, music and food will well repay coming from as far as China.

There are surprises in store for even those who have seen the RED REVEL.

Bring your union brother, your shop-mate, your friends, this affair will convince and please them.

The Red Revel will be radically different!

SIGMAN STALLS THO EXPULSIONS RUINING UNION

Local 100 Committee Submits Statement

Following the meeting of a committee appointed by Local 100 of the International Ladies Garment Workers to take up the cases of the expelled members with President Sigman and the failure to come to any understanding, the same committee met with the expelled members and the following statement was forwarded on their behalf to President Sigman in compliance with his request that such a statement be made.

Expelled Members' Statement.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 7, 1924.

Mr. M. Sigman, President,
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir and Brother:

We have been informed by the Committee from Local No. 100, which visited you for the purpose of restoring unity in the unions of Chicago, that you stated that this could be accomplished only if the expelled members made a statement that they accept the policies laid down by the present officials. We desire to state our position.

It is our profound desire to cure the demoralization now existing in our union. We wish to do everything in our power to strengthen our union against the employers who are trying to take advantage of this demoralized condition. We want to see every worker in our industry solidly united in a great movement to improve our conditions and wages. We are ready to go to great lengths to accomplish these things. But we are not so simple, nor is the membership of our union so childish, as to believe that these things can be brought about thru our surrender of the inalienable rights of the rank and file membership to propagandize for amalgamation, for the labor party, for the shop delegate system, and the other measures associated with the left-wing. It is not thru abandonment of these fundamental rights that unity is to be achieved. Rather it is thru bringing our officialdom to respect them and thru reinstatement of the expelled members that our union will be restored in strength and solidarity.

We are forced to the conclusion, that the demands made upon us are demands that we change our opinions, that we abandon our right to speak for policies which we believe to be necessary for the best interests of our organization, that we surrender the rights of free speech and criticism within our organization. For us to agree to any such demand would be treason to the labor movement. We will never agree to any proposal that involves such a violation of the fundamental principles of unionism.

The actions taken against us were not based upon charges of any specific actions on our part. It is impossible, therefore, for us to make any agreement to cease particular kinds of activities that may be displeasing to the General Executive Board, because no specific charges have ever been made. We were expelled because we advocated the program of the left-wing. While methods of advocating this program may be made a matter of discussion, we feel that it is useless to further discuss our right to advocate the policies in which we believe.

We are ready at all times to meet with you, with any members of the General Executive Board, or with committees from any part of our union, to work out ways and means of restoring unity in the organization upon this basis. Whatever may be your action in the matter, we will continue to fight for the interests of the workers in the shops, and we confidently expect to retain the esteem of these workers in the future as we have in the past.

Fraternally yours,
Dora Lipschutz,
Authorized by the Expelled Members.

Sigman had stated that before the expelled members could be reinstated they would have to quit the Trade Union Educational League and the above letter is in answer to this ultimatum.

The committee of Local 100 gave Sigman the answer of the expelled members and a meeting was arranged in which Sigman reiterated his statements concerning the duality of the Trade Union Educational league. Seemingly the only reason he consented to meet the expelled members was to get rid of the committee from Local 100.

Other unofficial committees of members have waited upon Sigman to press the question of reinstatement but to all he gives the same answer or evades the question entirely altho admitting that in expelling the left wingers the international officials had gone too far.

Nothing is being done by President Sigman to remedy the deplorable state of disorganization that now prevails in the ladies garment industry in Chicago that has followed the expulsion of the most active union workers.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS

MEXICO CITY.—Angel Gonzales owns a local shoe factory where profits are extracted from the hides of cattle—and workers. When two of his employers forgot for a moment their low wages and hard conditions and whistled at their toil, he fired them.

But when the labor commission heard about it, he paid them three months' wages for firing then without sufficient cause. Now, if you want to make Angel Gonzales feel like taking wings, whistle under his window any night. Musically, he is more sensitive than ever.

Bursom Would Turn Over U. S. Doughbag to Needy Bankers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The Federal Reserve board would be required to bolster credit of failing banks, under a bill introduced in the senate by Senator Bursum, New Mexico, Republican.

The bill instructs the board to turn over $50,000 to the comptroller of currency to loan to any needy banks.

U. S. LEADERSHIP OF KLAN RAIDERS BRINGS PROTEST

French and Italian Embassies See Hughes

The crime occurred as Sheriff Galligan and Layman were arresting Ford and two other Klansmen as they were leading a mob that was storming the hall where the Knights of the Flaming Circle, an anti-Ku Klux society, was meeting.

One of Galligan's last official acts before arrest was to save Ford and the two other Klansmen from a crowd of men who wanted to roughhandle the prisoners as they were being taken away by the Sheriff. Ford and two colleagues were taken to the county seat, Marion. Young then took over the post of chief of police.

Against Foreign Born Miners.

Klan raids in Williamson county have been under the guise of "prohibition" measures but they have been used to terrorize the militant foreign-born miners the companies fear. So extreme has been the house wrecking and physical violence that both the French and Italian consuls in Chicago have appealed to their ambassadors in Washington to protest to the state department. The Klan raiders even went so far as to raid Johnston City while that town was in the midst of mourning for the 38 miners slain in the gas blast for which the coal company has been proved responsible by a coroner's jury.

Protests against the violent treatment of foreign-born workers in Williamson County, Illinois, where United State prohibition enforcement officers S. Glenn Young and his Ku Klux Klan raiders are spreading devastation, are rolling into the office of Secretary of State Hughes from the other members of the diplomatic corps.

Diplomatic intervention against the federal agents' program was first asked by the French consul in an urgent message to M. Jusserand, French ambassador, outlining to him the treatment French citizens had received in Williamson County, and asking him to take the matter up with the State department.

The French consul is protesting against the treatment of more than a hundred French citizens in Johnson City, Ill., where in the guise of "dry" raiders, their homes were raided and looted. In more than one case religious objects were desecrated and French citizens beaten. The raids, French people wrote the consul, were really holdups. They are doubly vicious coming while the town is still overwhelmed in the grief of the great mine blast.

Italian Consul Aroused.

While the French consul here is taking up the treatment of French citizens with the French embassy, Giovanni Pico, Italian consul at Springfield, is forwarding to the Italian embassador in Washington scores of affidavits made by Italians in and around Herrin, telling of the treatment they received at the hands of the Ku Klux Klan.

Do American Workers Know a Good Thing When They See It?

WE SAY THEY DO AND CITE A RECORD OF A 50 PER CENT INCREASE IN THE DAILY WORKER CIRCULATION DURING THE LAST TWO WEEKS TO PROVE IT.

Cynics and pessimists and renegades excuse their impotency by bewailing the lack of intelligence and class-consciousness of American workers. The reception which THE DAILY WORKER has received everywhere it has appeared, disproves this conception once and for all.

There are hundreds of thousands of American workers, rebels at heart, who have been looking for a daily newspaper just like THE DAILY WORKER.

How to notify these thousands that THE DAILY WORKER is here, how to make them aware that at last there IS a daily labor paper that supplies all the newspaper needs of the working class is the big problem which THE DAILY WORKER must solve.

Those who now read THE DAILY WORKER are the ones who can reach these thousands for us.

If every reader of THE DAILY WORKER will make it his business to distribute copies of the paper among the workers he meets, will advertise THE DAILY WORKER everywhere as the Militant Organ of the Advancing Working Class

the problem will be solved and for every thousand workers now participating in the struggles for working class emancipation there will be TENS OF THOUSANDS, each of them a militant fighter in labor's cause.

For a limited time THE DAILY WORKER will send FREE to anyone making the request, a bundle of sample copies of THE DAILY WORKER for free distribution.

33 SHIPMENTS OF SUPPLIES SENT TO RUSSIA BY F. S. R.

Splendid Relief Work Shown by Report

Thirty-three shiploads of supplies were sent to relief agencies and famine sufferers in Soviet Russia during the two years the Friends of Soviet Russia were devoting themselves exclusively to that cause, says a statement issued by that organization.

The two year period closed with the fiscal year, July 31, 1923, shows $1,182,000 was raised at a cost of $63,000 for office expenses, or 7 per cent of the total, and $199,000 for literature advertising and speakers.

In the first fiscal year a total of $725,000 was sent in 17 shipments. In the second year a total of $49,000. A direct transmission of $96,000 in cash was made and about $50,000 was spent in Russia in a number of ways, such as conducting a package service, sending relief investigators into the famine region who returned and reported, etc. This makes a total of $920,000.

Of this total we spent $199,000 as cost of gathering the funds, advertising, literature, speakers, etc., and $63,000 which is about 7 per cent) for office (administration) expenses.

This accounts for a gross total of $1,182,000. A tabulated form of this report would be as follows:

Summary for two fiscal years of FSR activities:

33 shiploads, totalling 393,544 lbs.— Clothing	$250,000
Food, medicine, tractors, machinery, etc.	524,000
For Soviet Russia	50,000
Direct transmission of cash.	96,000
Cost of gathering thru literature, advertising, speakers	199,000
Office expenses (7 per cent of actual cash gathered, exclusive of clothing)	63,000
Total	$1,182,000

This fact statement is effective refutation of the slanders of the Jewish Daily Forward, which has been endeavoring to knife relief for Russian sufferers from the first.

Cost of Living in Canada Puts K. O. on "Higher" Wage

OTTAWA.—Altho wages in six skilled trades in Canada are 77 per cent higher now than in the pre-war year, according to a bulletin of the Dominion department of labor, increased living costs cancel the wage gain. The six trades included are building, metal, printing, electric railway, steam railways and coal mining. The statement of the department also sets forth that there have been similar or greater increases in the wages of common factory labor, miscellaneous factory trades and lumbering.

For the six trades mentioned the report covers the last 23 years. Taking the average wages in 1913 as 100, it shows a value of 67.8 as the average in 1901 and of 178.4 in 1923. Wages in the building trades in 1923, on a similar scale, are given as 166.4; in the metal trades 174; in the printing trades 188.9; in electric railway trades 186.2; steam railways 157.4; coal mining 197.8; common factory labor 181.7; miscellaneous factory trades 196.1; lumbering 170.4.

The last issue of the Dominion Labor Gazette gives three different measures of the increase in the cost of living since 1913. According to these figures the cost of living in Canada in 1923 varied from 151% to 162% of its cost in 1923. So on this basis wages have only a little more than held their own.

Aftermath

Nicolai Lenin, the premier of Russia, is "at last" dead, and has gone to his reward whatever that may be thought, according to the viewpoint of the average citizen. Whatever criticism can be made of his administration in over six years of counter-revolution, attempted assassination, famine and drouth, one thing stands out as the white light of his regime, and that is, his entire lack of self interest, and his refusal to exploit his people. Therein, lay his tower of strength. He received no more salary than what is the equivalent in American money, of thirty-six hundred dollars yearly, and in times of shortage of provisions, he took the common rations. He may have been a fanatic, but he certainly was honest, and his fanaticism and devotion to what he conceived to be the common good, might be copied, with benefit to the people in this country.

• • • •

Other men, who have "stood in the fierce light that beats against the throne," have enriched themselves, their relatives and their political friends. Napoleon made his brothers kings and viceroys, and made all things bend to his ambition for a dynasty. General Grant had a tender regard for his companions in arms, and was betrayed by some of his friends. Washington charged only for his expenses during the war of the American Revolution and secured land bonuses for his soldiers. Jackson believed in the doctrine which he promulgated: "To the victors belong the spoils," but Lenin, like Lincoln, was just to his enemies if they would not approve his ideas, altho he was a bitter foe to the enemies of Bolshevism. His disinterestedness in everything will be his lasting monument.

• • • •

As David said of the death of Abner: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?" Like Napoleon, Lenin was a man without a model and without a shadow. His life was too strenuous, like that of Theodore Roosevelt, who died, like Lenin, in his later prime. Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, died prematurely owing to incessant overwork and thus perished the well grounded belief of his admirers that he would be president some day. President Harding exhibited the marks of the daily conflict, before he died so suddenly.

• • • •

While it is better to rub out than to rust out, yet too much is demanded by the pressure of these vigorous days of public men. One lesson learned of Lenin's death is that "the strenuous life" is not good for the statesman and for his constituents. Overwork is as disastrous as laziness, and the golden mean lies between the two extremes, ever and everywhere. The time will come when long trips and platitudinous speeches and tedious handshakings, will not be demanded of public men, but will be avoided. Labor, in order to conserve energies and preserve life, has demanded an eight-hour day, and is willing to concede that to all officials, some of whom, tho, perhaps, too insignificant in numbers have burned their midnight oil, and thereby consumed their vitality. One of the rudiments of long life is easy labor, little care.

• • • •

But the other lesson of Lenin's life is the more important, and that is, in a profligate age, saturated with cunning and graft, he never lusted for wealth. Whatever may be said of the cruelties of the Soviet administration, he was never selfish or ignoble, but had ever before his eyes a triumphant proletariat, where caste, cunning and cupidity had no lodgement. This is conceded to him by his enemies, who denounced him as a fanatic, but expressed their admiration of his blazing zeal for communism and his impeccability. After all, the old lady was right when her grandchildren asked her is honesty is the best policy, and her answer was: "Bless you, children, it is the only policy."

Callous Doctors Let Poor Die in Frisco Hospital

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO.—Charges of ill treatment of the indigent sick continue to pile up against the County hospital. They include allowing a boy, delirious after an operation, to lie unconscious on the floor for four hours, with his consequent death from exposure; the turning away of a number of patients when it is claimed there was room in the hospital; neglect, lack of food, and constant upbraiding by the attendants. "The physician in charge constantly screamed at patients for being in the hospital," said one tubercular patient. "If we are to die, why can't we die in peace?"

A widow, the mother of three children, says she was denied treatment for a broken leg; another San Francisco mother, a paralytic, was turned away from the hospital; a woman long resident in San Francisco, was turned way on a technicality and shipped out of the city in a baggage car.

The board of supervisors is investigating the charge and has summoned before it the city health officer, Dr. Wm. Hassler, and Mrs. Clara B. Tyler, chief of the social service branch, who has the power of saying who shall and who shall not enter the hospital.

Steam Shovelers Report Increase in Membership

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — At least one trade union has gained in membership since the war peak, according to the latest report of F. E. Langdon, general secretary, Steam Shovel and Dredgemen, whose headquarters are here. They had only 10,000 men in 1918-19, while now they have only 11,500. In three of the seven districts into which they are divided—eastern Canada, western Canada and the Pacific coast of the United States —they claim 100% organization of the men in their industry. The continent over, they are 60% organized.

Steam shovel and dredge engineers get $250 a month, cranemen $200 and firemen $150, on the basis of the eight-hour day with time and a half for overtime and double time for Sundays and holidays. They report no unemployment.

"Sillinsky Club" Is Organized in Kansas City, Mo.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Local No. 64, of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, has organized a "Max Sillinsky for Secretary Club," to work for the election of Max Sillinsky as secretary-treasurer of the Tailors' Union. The club has called on all locals of the Tailors' Union to work for the election of Sillinsky. They say that his record for efficiency and progressiveness is the best possible endorsement he could have.

KLAN FIGHTS FOR THE PAPER TRUST IN BANGOR, ME.

Deports Members of I. W. W.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BANGOR, Me.—The Ku Klux Klan deported five organizers of Lumbers Workers Industrial Union from Greeneville Junction, a center for pulp wood operations, last night, and now it has its work to do over again for the union is back in the town in greater numbers.

The Koo Koo intervention on the side of the paper trust came unheralded: ninety members of the order marching into the union headquarters and ordering the delegates to quit the town. The loggers refused, and the Klan, after consultation, forcibly escorted them to the railroad station and put them on a train bound for Bangor, after paying their fares.

Next day Greeneville Junction had more than a hundred union loggers and sympathizers and the town is awaiting the next move of the Klan which says that no member of the labor organization dare stay.

Klansmen deny that they are employed by the paper trust and declare that they are seeking to purge the community of radicals and catholics. They declare that many members of the union, which is affiliated with the Industrial Workers of the World, are French-Canadian Catholics. In reply, Bob Pease, member of the general organization committee of the union says that his delegates are not concerned with the religion of the loggers and that the union will continue to organize men without regard to race or creed.

The lumber workers' union began organizing last July and has met with considerable success because of the sunlight-to-dark conditions of labor in the pulp wood forests.

Melbourne Cops' Wages Higher as Result of Strike

(By The Federated Press)

MELBOURNE, Australia. — Altho the policemen who went on strike at Melbourne as a protest against espionage in the service, were not reinstated in their former positions they forced the state government of Victoria to abolish spying and grant better conditions and wages.

The government has introduced legislation granting the policemen pensions on a liberal scale, increased privileges, no espionage, higher wages, and special allowance for conspicuous services.

Most of the policemen who went on strike have been given jobs in other government departments, mainly on the government street cars. The government found them the jobs because of the strong public opinion behind the men, but refused to reinstate them as policemen because of a former proclamation announcing that they would not be reinstated

One gratifying result of the strike is that the ex-policemen are now all good unionists and in their new jobs are getting better wages and working conditions than they were in the police service.

Australian Court Fixes Wages in Garment Trades

(By The Federated Press)

MELBOURNE, Australia. — The minimum basic wage for clothing trades workers has been fixed by the federal arbitration court at $20.76 a week for men and $11.40 for women. A bonus for skill is fixed above the basic rate, but nobody is allowed to be employed in the trade, no matter how unskilled, below the minimum basis rates.

Some idea of the wages paid to skilled workers—that is basic rate plus bonus—can be gathered from the following: Factory cutters get $27.48; coat hands, trimmers, fitters machinists, pressers, $25.08. These rates are paid irrespective of sex.

Women coat and skirt machinists get $13.80, while vest and trouser machinists get $12.55. Other rates are in proportion. Dyeing, cleaning and repair workers get $26.76; machine dry cleaners, $23.16; hot blockers, $22.92. All rates are adjustable every three months to the rise or fall in the cost of living.

Jim Crow Schools Against Kansas Law, Rules Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOPEKA, Kan.—Race segregation in high schools of this state is illegal, according to an opinion handed down by the Kansas supreme court. The court granted a writ of mandamus against the Coffeyville board of education to admit Victoria Thurman, a 16-year-old negro, to the Roosevelt junior high school.

"Discrimination on account of race or color is forbidden by statute in all high schools of the state, except the high schools of a single city (Kansas City)," the supreme court holds. "Neither the board of education nor the superintendent has the authority to separate pupils of the negro race from those of the white race on account of color or race."

State statutes permit city boards of education to segregate negro children in the elementary grades.

Section Hands Get $69 Per Month As Davis Gasses About "Saving Wage" and other Bunkshooters Shoot

If a man can save $75 a year on a $1500 income how much ought he to save on an $850 income when he isn't sure of that? There's a conundrum for you presented each month by the interstate commerce commission wage report and you'll have to go to the railroads for an answer.

During November, the report shows, 210,071 section hands averaged $69 for the entire month with all overtime included. Another 62,056 classified as extra gang and work train laborers averaged $75. The straight time earnings of these men averaged 35¼ cents an hour which makes it about $850 for the full working year if they are among the lucky ones who are not laid off as winter approaches.

Lay-offs In Swing.

The winter lay-offs were in full swing by November, the report shows. The number of full-time jobs available for section and track labor had fallen off 15% in a single month dropping from 282,973 in October to 249,655 in November. From the peak of the season in August when the railroads offered 309,159 jobs to this class of labor the jobs available had declined by 59,504 or approximately 25%.

In other words railroad management not only feels no obligation to pay these adult workers a living wage while it employs them but also feels that its responsibility to pay any wage at all terminates when the seasonal demand for such labor passes. The possible $850 a year which such labor might earn shrinks in the face of this uncertainty.

In terms of the "saving wage" advocated by Secretary of Labor Davis how much ought these men to save?

Need $1,500, Says Babson.

A recent report by Babson's statistical organization which set out to determine how much a man ought to save might have answered the question if it had attempted to sound the depths of pauperism which underlie the deceptive average American wage. According to this report average savings should vary from $300 out of an income of $10,000 down to $75 out of an income of $1500. As the report does not go below this level it is probable that in the lower scales the savings indicator began to show negative results—either increasing debts or the sacrifice of necessaries of life.

Such figures turn a glaring spotlight on the report of the New York Federal Reserve Bank which describes the present period as the peak of prosperity for wage earners. For these quarter of a million unskilled employes of the railroads are representative of the great masses on which modern industry rests.

Australians Are Exploited Less Than U. S. Workers

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—A comparison of the statistics of manufacturing in Australia, Canada and United States shows that the average wage paid to employes in factories in Australia is roughly about $500 a year less than in the United States and Canada. This, however, is counterbalanced by the higher cost of living in the latter two countries.

When allowance is made for the higher rate of wages and superior plants of Australian manufacturing is satisfactory. For every $5,000 expended in salaries and wages in factories, $9,545 is produced in Australia, $9,325 in the United States, and $11,235 in Canada, while $3,410 is added to every 5,000 worth of raw materials in Australia, compared with $3,350 in the United States and $4,180 in Canada.

The return from capital is remarkably close in the three countries, the percentages of added value to capital invested in Australia, Canada, and the United States being 56 per cent, 53 per cent and 56 per cent respectively. The percentage of factory employes to total population is 7 per cent in Australia, 8 per cent in Canada, and 10 per cent in the United States.

Use of 1890 Census for Immigration Quotas Discriminates

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—How the use of the 1890 census as the basis for calculating the immigration quota for various countries, under the proposed new immigration law, discriminates against the Baltic and Balkan and Mediterranean countries, is shown by a chart furnished by the Immigration Bureau to the House committee on immigration.

The two per cent quota, established in the bill, would give Finland, for example, the right to send 3,213 immigrants annually if the 1920 census were used, or 2,814 under the 1910 census, or 1,465 under the census of 1900. But under the 1890 census only 345 Finns will be admitted.

A comparison of the admissable quota under the 1920 and the 1890 census, for the various countries, follows:

Austria, 11,610 and 1,190; Belgium, 1,456 and 709; Bulgaria, 411 and 200; Cheko-Slovakia, 7,450 and 2,073; Denmark, 3,944 and 2,982; Esthonia, 1,584 and 302; France, 3,277 and 4,078; Germany, 33,805 and 50,329; Great Britain, North Ireland and Irish Free State 43,729 and 62,658; Greece, 3,725 and 235; Hungary, 8,147 and 688; Italy, 32,415 and 4,089; Latvia, 1,781 and 317; Lithuania, 2,901 and 502; Poland, 23,002 and 9,072; Roumania, 2,267 and 831; Russia, 25,261 and 1,992; Sweden, 12,749 and 9,761; Yugoslavia, 3,600 and 935.

It will be observed that the final figures, which are the ones proposed in the pending bill, are in all cases much less than those for 1920 which are first set down—except in the case of Germany, Britain and France. Two per cent quotas, on the basis of the 1920 census, would total, from all countries, 249,867 immigrants; on the 1890 basis the total would be only 169,083.

Queensland Best Labor State.

BRISBANE, Queensland. — After nearly nine years continuous Labor rule in Queensland, wages are higher and the working hours are less than in any other state in Australia. The cost of living is lowest in Queensland. Further than this, the balance of trade is in favor of Queensland, and is more favorable to Queensland than any other part of the commonwealth.

Wefald Charges Mellon Plan Will Break More Banks

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — Representative Knud Wefald, of Minnesota, sole Farmer-Labor Party member of the House, has protested to Secretary Mellon against the campaign conducted in the farming towns of his state by the treasury for the sale of treasury savings certificates. Wefald told Mellon that if he kept on, he would break the rest of the small banks in the northwest.

It appeared that one bank reported $100,000 drawn out by depositors and invested in these treasury certificates, which pay nearly 6 per cent, just before the bank was forced to quit. Another bank was crippled by the withdrawal of $65,000 of deposits for the same purpose. The depositors had a perfect right to entrust their money to the government at a higher rate of interest than the bank gave them, but the banks could not stand the shock, and the community suffered from the bank failures.

Wefald believes that Mellon has deliberately boosted the rate of interest paid by the government, knowing that this would lay a further burden on small banks and on the farmers who must borrow or go to the wall.

Mellon announces that sale of these certificates has been stopped in 17 agricultural states.

Senator Shipstead's speech of Feb. 1, assailing the certificate sale, is said to have "leaked" thru a press reporter, to Mellon's office before it was delivered, and to have hastened Mellon's retreat.

London Laughs at Chicago Tribune's Soviet Strife Yarns

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON.—The Soviet Government has replied to Ramsay MacDonald's note offering de jure recognition and immediate steps are being taken by both governments to appoint commissions to look into every phase of their past and present relations.

Stories published in the Chicago Tribune relating to internal strife and incipient civil war in Russia are laughed at here. The yarns originate in quarters unfriendly to Russia and the Tribune is petulently giving them extra space since their correspondent was barred from Russia for his papers' lies. The Chicago Tribune is considered here to be one of the most unreliable papers in America.

Holland is expected to follow England in recognizing the Soviet Republic. Considerable pressure is being brought to bear on Foreign Minister Van Karnebeek by commercial interests who fear Britain's start may leave the Dutch with little chance of success in securing Russian trade.

A former Dutch consul in Bern and one of the Dutch delegates to the Bern conference is preparing to leave for Moscow as soon as diplomatic relations are established.

DAVIS PUSHES HIS BILL TO ENSLAVE FOREIGN WORKERS

Alien Registration Act Ready for Congress

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON. — Secretary of Labor Davis has prepared, for introduction in congress and for report by the house committee on immigration, his notorious "alien registration" bill.

This measure would require every immigrant, 16 years of age or older, when he arrives at a port of entry to the United States, to make a sworn statement that he intends to become an American citizen, learn the English language, become acquainted with our governmental scheme and institutions, and obey the laws. He must also make affidavit that he will follow up all the steps to becoming a citizen, or accept the penalty of deportation within six months after his three-year period is up. The bill seeks to be retroactive upon all aliens living in this country six months after its passage.

The social action department, Natl. Catholic Welfare council, after a study of Davis' bill, remarks that "apparently this astonishing bill had its origin in the same anti-alien hysteria and fear which was responsible for the infamous Palmer raids in 1919 and 1920. . . . Of the 10,000 persons arrested, less than 800 were found to be legally subject to deportation. Of those deported, all but an insignificant number were found guilty of nothing worse than membership in an organization which professed the creed of violent revolution. The illegality, the injustices and stupidities of the Palmer raids have recently been set forth in a book by Louis F. Post. . . . The will for the registration of aliens would make a repetition of that outrage simple and easy. . . The bill should be opposed by all genuine lovers of liverty and all lovers of genuine Americanism."

Hoan Not Bluffed by Legion's Rage at His Dry Eyes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE.—Talk of impeaching Mayor Hoan for refusing to shed crocodile tears for Woodrow Wilson was characterized as pure bluff in municipal circles today.

That Mayor Hoan's action has the support of most of his fellow citizens is the concensus of opinion. The town is sick of the hypocritical mourning that certain so-called leaders are indulging in for a man whose libertarian words were continually denied by his reactionary deeds.

Opposition to the mayor's resolute stand is chiefly confined to the local Kiwanis and rotary movements, to the Ku Klux-Klan and the American Legion. Mrs. Earl Norcross, of the American war mothers, attempted to put a resolution thru her organization censoring the mayor but vote was put off. She charged that Hoan let the soldiers go away in 1917 without an official farewell and that he gave them no welcome when they returned two years later.

Hoan, who has received at least one threatening letter signed "K. K. K." seems to consider the whole resolutionary program of the opposition a tempest in a teapot.

Promise "Immediate Investigation" of the Standard Oil Trust

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The federal trade commission promises an investigation of high gasoline prices, which President Coolidge ordered.

Houston Thompson, chairman of the commission, notified Mr. Coolidge that "the commission will make an immediate investigation of the conditions described by Governor McMasters."

McMasters, governor of South Dakota, told the president in a telegram that the Standard Oil company and its allies had raised the price of gas 130 per cent at refineries. McMasters demanded federal action to protect the gas users of South Dakota against profiteering, which he said had been stamped out so far as it originated within the state.

If the commission finds McMaster's charges are true a complaint will be filed against the offending oil companies and they will be summoned before the commission.

The Workers Party Grows

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY.—The Lenin Memorial Meeting, held under the auspices of the Workers Party, was the greatest mass demonstration that the workers of this city have ever held.

Twenty-five thousand workers came to pay their tribute to their departed leader, and convince the enemies of the workers that Lenin lives in the hearts of the workers and that Leninism is the weapon the proletariat the world over will use to destroy the present system of society.

Early in the evening it became evident that the huge Madison Square Garden could not hold all the workers who were anxious to join in the mass demonstration, and the committee in charge engaged the Central Opera House, where an overflow meeting was held with many still unable to gain admission.

The demonstration has proven beyond doubt that the influence of the Workers Party has increased tremendously, and that there are thousands of workers in this city still outside our ranks, who must be brought into our Party. It has also shown that there exists in the Workers Party a spirit of cooperation and sacrifice, as shown by the willingness of our comrades to perform any assigned task, that will make for a great strong communist Party that will lead the workers to victory.

We are certain that the comrades, who, having bought their tickets in advance, were unable to gain admission will take it in the proper spirit, and consider the price of the ticket as a contribution to further the work of the man they came to pay tribute to

The Daily Worker Greets All-Race Negro Congress

The DAILY WORKER, as the official organ of the Workers Party of America, extends its greetings to the great conference of American Negroes—The All-Race Assembly—that meets today in Chicago.

The overwhelming majority of the American Negroes are workers and no section of the American working class has so many urgent reasons for unity, so many grievances to protest, is so bitterly persecuted and exploited.

Other nations oppress subject races in their colonial possessions. The American ruling class brought the Negroes to America so that the oppression could be more efficient and profitable. The wrongs of 12,000,000 American Negroes give mass testimony to the brutal and callous character of American capitalism.

All over the world, since the Russian revolution with its working-class interpretation of the policy of self-determination for races and nationalities brought new hope to the subject peoples, their voices have been heard with increasing clearness.

In the Philippines, in Cuba and in Haiti, the American imperialists see the native peoples preparing to throw off their yoke.

Great Britain finds India and Egypt restive under her rule. Arbitrary restrictions of the franchise have not prevented the returning of anti-imperialist majorities in the colonial parliaments, nor have the machine-guns and the airplane bombs prevented great mass-uprisings that bring the people of these ancient nations a little closer to national independence.

The path of the American Negroes is beset with dangers and difficulties. As workers their problems will be solved only as part of the problem that the working class as a whole has to solve.

We hope that the All-Race Congress of the American Negroes will recognize this, organize with the left wing of the American labor movement and give added strength to the revolutionary forces, which are striving to unite the workers of America, regardless of color or creed, into one gigantic and closely-knit organization for the overthrow of American capitalism—the common enemy of white and colored workers.

We join with the All-Race Congress of American Negroes in sending fraternal greetings to the oppressed races and nationalities the world over.

In the Light of Facts

Dr. C. H. Levermore has been declared the winner of the Bok Peace Prize Contest. This declaration and the incidental handing-over of $50,000 as a reward of services rendered to the League of Nations have created somewhat of a stir on Capitol Hill, in Washington.

Were it not for the fact that the Teapot affair has not yet been liquidated the country would undoubtedly been treated to another regular congressional investigation of the "interests" behind the peace plan. Of course, this investigation would be simply an attempt on the part of the Old Guard and last-ditchers in the Republican machine to strike a blow at the League of Nation advocates.

Primarily, the workers are not interested in mud-slinging contests amongst the capitalist politicians who inhabit the congressional cesspools. But the workingmen are interested in getting at the bottom of the real character of this newly-proclaimed "inventor" (Mr. Levermore has made no discovery) of a new universal "peace" panacea.

The facts of the story weave a rather interesting tale about Dr. Levermore. It may be the irony of history, but it is the truth all the same, that Dr. Levermore, while president of Adelphi College of Brooklyn, was conducting a campaign of vigorous persecution of students, who held anti-militarist opinions. While president of this college, Dr. Levermore fought all efforts to prevent this country from being hurled into the world war. The students who were opposed to the American workers and farmers fighting for "dollar democracy" were faced with expulsion from the institution.

This apparently contradictory phase of the peace contest should not stir anyone to sinister doubts. It is perfectly normal for capitalists to pick as their peace prize winners men who have been steadfast servants of militarism. As long as the employing class maintains its hold on the system of production and exchange the best peace that can be obtained will be the truce between wars. Under these conditions it is evident that the most efficient peacemakers of capitalism are those who can chocolate-cover best the bitter pill of militarism with the high-flowing hypocritical phrases of capitalist idealism. At this game Dr. Levermore, who is under his skin a thoro-going militarist, is an expert. Like almost all experts under capitalism he has his price.

One might even ask Dr. Levermore whether his next step will be to invest his $50,000 in Victory Bonds. Wouldn't that be an effective step to help the League of Nations today? What is more, weren't these very Victory Bonds issued in order to plunge America into the League of Nations?

The whole affair would be too ludicrous to deserve serious attention were it not for the fact that this choice of a militarist as peace prize winner brings home to the workers very painfully the menace of wars and rips the cloak of hypocrisy off the capitalist peacemakers.

Loyalties

Lloyd George has not added any luster to the Wilsonian halo by his reluctant admission—which has all the earmarks of being forced from him—that Clemenceau and Woodrow Wilson fixed up the matter of the Rhineland occupation while he was unavoidably absent.

In our comment on the Lloyd George disclosure we said that we were not interested in anything but the admitted fact that both Wilson and Loyd George had agreed to the military program of the French imperialists while posing as friends of the German and all other peoples.

We are not astonished at the repudiation of the interview by Lloyd George in which he accused Clemenceau and Wilson of having made a secret agreement on the Rhineland occupation; it serves only to confirm his reputation for slipperiness but does not alter the fact that an agreement was made between these two capitalist statesmen concerning possibilities which later became actualities in the shape of a French army of occupation and untold misery for millions of workers and their families.

Listen to the smug manner in which Lloyd George makes peace with the Wilson and Clemenceau admirers who had been shocked by the possibility that the arrangements for bringing terror and death to the masses had not been made "honorably":

> "Mr. Wilson, I need hardly say, acted in perfect loyalty," and it cannot be imputed as blame of either Wilson or Clemenceau that I was called to England when these grave matters were under discussion. The fact that Wilson and Clemenceau had to come to an agreement during my absence was communicated to me on my return."

It will be a source of immense consolation to the families who were driven from their homes, who had their belongings confiscated, to the workers who were imprisoned, to the families of those who were bayonetted and shot in the name of the Versailles peace, to know that the feelings of Lloyd George were not hurt and that only pressing business prevented his presence when this glorious plan was outlined.

"The Big Three" were loyal to one another and after all that is what matters to the capitalists of the world and their lackeys.

The Venality of the Press

Tomes could be written and libraries filled with evidence of the role played by the kept press in keeping the workers in capitalist subjection.

There is at hand a shocking disclosure of the venality of the employers' press that reveals a situation which, if brought home to the laboring and farming masses, will go a long way towards disillusioning and enlightening the working class.

The noted French Communist, Boris Souvarine, has made an analysis of Czarist-Kerlusky documents that fell into the hands of the Soviet Government showing how the French and some leading British newspapers and journalists were bought outright by the imperialist governments of Czar Nicholas and Kerensky.

Souvarine has examined the documents proving that for thirteen years the Russian governments spent close to fifteen billion francs lining up about twenty of the leading French papers and such British papers as the London Times and the Daily Telegraph for counter-revolutionary, imperialist policies. In 1905 alone the Czar spent nearly four billion francs to help it float a loan of billions of francs for the purpose of financing the forces of reaction in strangling the revolution.

It is especially significant that Kerensky continued this costly banality of prostituting the French press in the interests of the Russian imperialists. It was only the victory of the Communists, the organization of the Soviet Government, that ended this abominable curse.

This affair bristles with painful lessons for our workers. Corruption and graft, a "Brass Check" press, social imperialist lackeys, are not the peculiar affliction of any one government. These diseases are as international in scope as capitalism itself and are inherent in the capitalist organism. Special conditions may only color the appearance of these evils in one country differently from another.

In this French edition of Teapot politics we have another very powerful argument for the need of a strong Communist party with a mighty fighting Communist press, speaking solely for the interests of the workers and farmers against the capitalist class.

With a fervor that strikingly recalls the cabled descriptions of the great Russian tribute to Nikolai Lenine at the funeral of the Soviet leader in Moscow, fifteen thousand Communists, Socialists, and in between admirers of the Soviet system filled Madison Square Garden last night at the memorial meeting of the Workers Party of America. The crowd overflowed the Garden and filled a second meeting at the Central Opera House. It was notable for the intensity of its admiration for the dead leader and the orderly conduct of the meeting, despite the evident emotion of the throng.

Four hundred patrolmen, fifty sergeants and five captains of police under Inspector William Coleman were gathered in and around the Garden, keeping order and prepared for any emergency. Despite the fact that an admission charge ranging from twenty-five cents to a dollar was made and that a collection was taken, a crowd from all quarters of the city pressed forward and tried to get in.

Professional Revolutionists

(N. Y. Times Editorial, Feb. 6)

The Workers Party of America may be against capital, but it has no objection to capitalizing. Its expertness in that was again shown when it sought to capitalize for its own purposes the Lenin memorial meeting on Monday night. Being a workers' party, it naturally spent most of its oratory in denouncing workers. It attacked "renegades" like Abraham Cahan in this country and Kautsky and Scheidemann in Germany, for refusing to identify themselves with the Communists. It also assailed Mr. Gompers and the Federation of Labor, which numbers in its ranks at least a thousand times more actual workers than the American Communists can muster. They are but a feeble folk, but as each one of them is a sort of professional revolutionist, they can make a great deal of noise and sometimes frighten timid people.

They apparently have learned something from experience, and took pains to avoid anything like the open advocacy of violence or sedition. At least, nothing of the kind was reported, and the police authorities had detectives present to take note of any violation of the law. Jack London used to sign his letters "Yours for the revolution," and there is nothing criminal in that, so long as there is no specification of the ways and means by which the revolution is to be made. The word has, in fact, come to be in the mouths of many merely a mystic thing, empty of concrete meaning. Yet those of our Communists who can speak English roll it from their lips with all the unction of that other "blessed word," Mesopotamia.

Their demonstration Monday night was little more than a sort of self-glorification, more annoying than harmful. Not to this little group of sworn upsetters need the country look for the danger of a political upheaval in the United States. What is going on in Washington is much more significant, and may become much more ominous, than anything which happens in a meeting of Communists at Madison Square Garden. If it shall appear that the taint of corruption has deeply penetrated both political parties, a great impetus will be given to discontent. Should Congress fail to show itself absolutely determined and fearless in cleansing our public life, the effect would be most unsettling in many sections of the nation. Congress may also work much more mischief than the Communists, if it proves to be so torn by petty and partisan motives that it cannot dispatch the public business efficiently, and cannot respond promptly and intelligently to the demand of the country for legislation imperatively needed. "Revolution" will remain an idle phrase in the United States unless men in responsible position at Washington and in the conduct of large affairs so bear themselves as to stir popular impatience, exasperation, and revolutionary impulses.

Chileans Send Russia Message of Sorrow for Death of Lenin; Steel Trust Stops Meeting in U. S.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SANTIAGO, Chili.—The shock which Nicolai Lenin's death has given the entire world was recorded in the Chilean chamber of deputies when a resolution went thru for a message to the Soviet government expressing the official condolences of the Chilean people.

The measure was taken on the demand of the left wing elements who said that the death of the Russian premier must bring forward the same homage accorded Wilson.

Reactionary deputies fought the proposal but were overwhelmed in the final vote. At the last moment the government threw in its vote with the proponents of the resolution fearing to lose support for certain domestic measures it was attempting to put thru.

The Chilean chamber today has a large bloc that is resisting the efforts of the old guard of deputies who represent the mining, shipping and nitrate interests.

Big Washington Meeting.

WASHINGTON.—The workers of Washington mourned the loss of Nicolai Lenin at an overflowing meeting held at Pythian Temple.

Police sought to stop the meeting, but their plans were foiled by Senator Wheeler's declaration that if the meeting were interfered with he would make a public issue of the affair.

Ben Gitlow spoke and Western Starr, a Washington liberal, presided. At the rear of the platform was an artistic portrait of Lenin, draped with red and black silk. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Workers Party and a Workmen's Circle branch.

Lenin's work in shaping the program of world revolution left a debt to the working class which they can only pay by carrying on the movement to final success, declared Gitlow. He appealed to the men and women present who had not already done so to join the party of Lenin, the Workers Party, which was functioning in Washington as in the other proletarian centers of America.

"Lenin was the pilot of the Soviet ship, which weathered all the storms that threatened to destroy the proletarian revolution which gave it birth," said a resolution adopted at the meeting, which will be forwarded to the Council of People's Commissars at Moscow.

Steel Trust Stops Meeting

MONESSEN, Pa.—True to the reactionary record of this steel city, where the murders committed by employers' agents during the steel strike are still fresh in the memory, the Lenin Memorial meeting was prevented by the American Legion and the police.

Threats of violence had been made by the Legion should any meeting for the departed Soviet leader be held and police had announced that the Legion would be protected in stopping the meeting.

The night of the meeting, two auto-loads of Legionaires rolled up to the hall intent on trouble, but they found the hall dark with a squad of police about it. The police had come on the same errand as the Legion.

Workers in Monessen had called off the meeting, feeling that useless bloodshed would flow, but they are continuing with their work of organizing the radical forces so that such tyrannical procedure can be prevented in future.

The Steel Trust owns the jobs and the government of Monessen. During the great steel strike scabs imprisoned within the mills revolted, and more than a dozen were slain by the trust's gunmen. The matter was carefully kept out of the news agencies at the time and officially hushed up.

Italians Hold Lenin Meeting

BALTIMORE, Md.—The Italian Educational Club gave a memorial meeting in honor of Lenin at their headquarters at 829 E. Pratt street.

The meeting was well attended. Comrade T. Owerking, local organizer of the Workers Party, spoke in English and Vincent Betros in Italian, on Lenin's life. Nick Ciatte was chairman.

Syracuse Lenin Meeting.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The doctrines of Nicolai Lenin will be universally accepted by the working class of the world in the not distant future.

This was the thing that speakers at the Lenin Memorial meeting at Labor Hall impressed on the eager audience that filled the auditorium. There were speakers in English, Jewish, Russian, German and other languages.

A portrait of Lenin, draped in mourning, was exhibited from the platform and the Russian funeral march for fallen heroes was rendered. Boris Vodneff presided.

Lenin Memorial at Glace Bay.

GLACE BAY Nova Scotia.—A huge Lenin memorial meeting was held here under the auspices of the Glace Bay branch of the Workers Party at the Russell Theater. In spite of the bitter cold weather and the poverty under which the miners are suffering owing to the unemployment and the present strike since Jan. 16, the theater was jammed.

The meeting opened by the singing of the Internationale and the Red Flag. The chairman, Alfred Nash, called the attention of the meeting to the fact that all over the continent the workers were holding similar meetings to show their devotion to the greatest revolutionary leaders the workers ever had. The other speakers were Alex. A. McKay and Tom Bell. They dealt with the life of Lenin and the development of the Bolsheviki party from obscure groups of workers leading an "underground" existence to the ruling party in Russia. The struggles of the Russian workers and peasants during the revolutionary struggle against the whole capitalist world, and the magnificent role which the Communist Party, the party of Lenin, played in these struggles, were spoken of and evoked cheers and applause from the workers present.

Moving pictures taken during the second congress of the Communist International in Moscow and Petrograd were shown. The pictures of the leaders of the revolution the workers' demonstrations, the Red Army and Fleet, were greeted with great enthusiasm.

During the meeting the following message was ordered sent to Moscow on behalf of the meeting:

"Gregory Zinoviev, President Third International, Moscow, Russia: Glace Bay workers in mass meeting, express sorrow at loss of leader, Comrade Lenin. Long live the Communist International!"

SCAB HOTEL HOLDS LAST OF C. P. P. A.

St. Louis Conference Is Small Gloomy Gathering

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 11.—R. D. Cramer, editor of the Minneapolis Labor Review, and a delegate to the Conference for Progressive Political Action here, caused a sensation just before the noon adjournment when he asked:

"Why is this conference meeting in a scab hotel?"

Convening its first session in a parlor of the Hotel Statler here with scarcely one hundred delegates present, the Conference for Progressive Political Action, which last year filled the auditorium of the Engineers building in Cleveland, opened with a dismal atmosphere prevailing. Most of the delegates present are from railway unions.

Chairman William H. Johnston did nothing to relieve the general appearance of discouragement when he opened his speech with an apology for not having prepared a longer report, pleading pressure of other duties.

A reading of the report soon showed, however, that its brevity was due to the fact that nothing had been done since the Cleveland session except the collection of $16,000 and the expenditure of $15,000. The conference also needed money, said Johnston.

Same Old Stuff.

In the name of the national committee a recommendation to the conference was read proposing work for the election to public office of men pledged to a program of public ownership of railroads, the abolition of the use of injunction in labor disputes and the punishment for contempt without a jury trial, etc.

The recommendation indicates that the standpat leaders of the organization intend to stick to the old "reward and punish" non-partisan policy and are against the farmer-labor party movement.

Congressman Sinclair of North Dakota, addressed the conference on the Sinclair-Norris marketing bill. He said:

Sinclair Pessimistic.

"Democratic government is on trial in the United States and I doubt whether democratic government will survive. The farmers are the most downtrodden group in the country. Fifty per cent of the North Dakota farmers are reported bankrupt.

"Revised figures will show that even more than fifty per cent are totally ruined. The farmers are so badly off that many creditors are not foreclosing because they can get nothing by foreclosures.

"In the country as a whole, at least twenty-five per cent of the farmers produced goods sold to the consumers for $22,000,000,000 but received for their product but $7,000,000,000. The profiteers took the remainder."

Sinclair caused a laugh when he suddenly announced: "I farm by proxy." Continuing he said: "I do not know whether the Sinclair-Norris bill will solve the problem. I am inclined to believe that nothing will be accomplished until the farmers and workers take control of the government."

Historic Negro All-Race Congress Makes Unity Its Watchword and Sees Labor as Big, Dominant Issue

Visitors to the great Negro All-Race Assembly, or Sanhedrin, which began its sessions at Wabash avenue Y. M. C. A., Wabash avenue and 38th street, Chicago, yesterday, could not fail to be impressed with the zeal for unity, which prevailed among the delegates.

Unity was the watchword of all, from Dean Kelly Miller, of Howard University, the presiding officer, down to the various representatives of the 61 national Negro organizations present.

Labor Issue Recognized.

Most encouraging of all, there is recognition that the dominant question before the Negro Race is that of Labor.

As Dean Miller said:

"The Negro group is essentially a labor group, therefore the labor issue is the most important issue before the Race."

Dean Miller said this to a labor reporter before the first session, held yesterday afternoon, and he said it again when a delegate from the Workers Party, Lovett Fort-Whiteman, arose and asked him whether Labor would be discussed.

Daily Worker An Issue.

An implied objection to recognition of the international character of the labor movement came from the conservative wing at the afternoon session when a representative from a Louisville theological seminary asked rather sharply if the DAILY WORKER's report that the convention would adopt a resolution for the recognition of Soviet Russia was true. He was promptly corrected by Mr. Johnson, National Odd Fellows Secretary, who said that he had read the DAILY WORKER'S story and that it did not state that such a resolution was going thru but only that it would go thru if the labor element's program was adopted. Copies of the DAILY WORKER, the only Chicago daily to report this important convention, were bought eagerly by delegates.

Dean Miller, in conversation with newspapermen, showed himself sympathetic to Russian recognition. He went further. Tho not classed as a radical he is a sociologist, and very frankly declared that it was only common sense that labor should receive all it produced, and that it produced all.

The real test of the convention will begin this morning. Most of yesterday was taken up with the appointment of committees and other preliminary work and the evening was given over to a public reception at the Vincennes Hotel.

Committees Will Be Permanent.

On the wisdom shown in selecting committeemen will depend the value of the united front congress, for it is very probable that the convention will decide to continue the committees as permanent committees or commissions to function for the Negro race until the next congress.

These standing committees for Labor, Education, the Negro Press,

OBREGON SENT CONDOLENCE ON LENIN'S DEATH

Only Head of Capitalist Government to Act

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 11.—Alvaro Obregon, president of Mexico, was the only head of a government to send condolences to Russia on the death of Lenin, according to advices received here from Mexico. His telegram read:

"The death of Lenin, chief of the international workers' movements, causes us profound sorrow. A. Obregon."

The Communist Party of Mexico, on learning of this, sent the president a telegram to army headquarters on the Western front, where he is directing operations. The telegram read:

"In the name of the workers and peasants of Mexico, the Communist Party thanks you for your cable of condolence on the death of Lenin."

The State of San Luis Potosi, under its new governor, Aurelio Manrique, member of the Agrarista (Farmer-Peasant) Party, who was supported in his campaign by the Laborista and Communista Parties, declared a three days' mourning for the death of Lenin, and much to the indignation of the conservative press of this city and of the state in question, all flags flew at half mast for the period designated. The Communist Party also sent a telegram of thanks and congratulations to Manrique.

The Agrarista and Communista Parties held a joint ceremony of mourning for the death of Lenin, Feb. 8, in one of the largest theaters of Mexico. The theater was decorated by the Union of Communist Painters, including such prominent artists as Diego Rivera. He and a peasant member of the Agrarista Party made brief speeches. The funeral march and two minutes of silence followed. The singing of the International terminated the ceremony. Diego Rivera painted a big picture of Lenin for the occasion.

Locomotive Engineers Quit Their Affiliation With the C. P. P. A.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 11.—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has sent no delegates to the St. Louis meeting of the Conference for Progressive Political Action and has decided definitely to sever its connection with that organization.

Warren Stone, head of the Brotherhood, has characterized the future of the C. P. P. A. as "hopeless" and the decision to send no delegates to St. Louis is the official notification to that organization that the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has withdrawn its support. Intimation of this action was given by the Locomotive Engineers Journal for February when the official organ of the Brotherhood, edited by Albert Coyle, gave not one line of publicity to the St. Louis conference.

Whirlwind Start Made in Chicago Sub Campaign

An avalanche of new subscriptions taken on the first day of the Chicago subscription competition, has made it impossible to give tabulated reports of the standing of the contestants as this issue of The DAILY WORKER goes to press. From the returns turned in thus far it has become apparent that instead of the thousand new subscribers by March 10, the goal set for the campaign, the figure will be doubled at the very least before the campaign is over.

Live wires were busy in every part of the city Sunday visiting prospective subscribers. Contestants in the campaign have reported that they are surprised at the extreme ease with which they are able to sell subscriptions. There are few English speaking workers in the city, they say, who are not somewhat familiar with The DAILY WORKER, and it requires but little salesmanship to get half year and one year subs.

The DAILY WORKER business office promises that from tomorrow on statements will be printed showing the standing of the competition as the campaign progresses from day to day. Those who have not registered for the campaign should do so at once, as the drive will terminate promptly on March 10 and the way matters have started every day will be of great importance to busy militants who are ambitious to gain the honor and rewards which go to the winner of the contest. New registrations are being taken at the office of The DAILY WORKER and at the city office of the Workers Party, 166 W. Washington St., Room 307.

WAS DOHENY ADVISER TILL FEBRUARY 2

As Legal Mentor Was Innocently Ignorant

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Two political careers teetered in the balance today as William Gibbs McAdoo went before the Senate Teapot Dome Committee and Secretary of the Navy Denby faced a vote of condemnation in the Senate.

McAdoo appeared to explain his relations as attorney for Edward L. Doheny, lessee of two California naval reserves.

The candidate for the democratic presidential nomination has already denied any connection with the leases and has said his association with Doheny was merely as legal adviser in connection with Doheny's Mexican oil affairs.

As the senate prepared to vote on the Denby ouster resolutions, rumors were set afloat that Denby had resigned. The secretary answered these, telling the Daily Worker, "I have no intention whatever of resigning and you can make that just as strong as you please."

Tones Down Resolution.

Simultaneously word came from Capitol Hill to President Coolidge and other cabinet officials that "the Robinson resolution will not pass." This sentiment in the senate is said to have been wrought by introduction of Senator Jones, Washington, of a "softening" resolution which does not flatly demand Denby resign but says public welfare would be preserved if he would quit.

It appeared certain however, that a resolution in condemnation of Denby's action in the oil leases would pass not later than five p. m. Under an agreement debate is limited to two hours before that time and the voting upon amendements must begin before five.

McAdoo on Defensive.

McAdoo went before the committee to eradicate any taint of oil that might have been smeared upon his presidential campaign by Doheny, who testified that McAdoo had been paid $150,000 retainer fees in the last four years.

McAdoo prepared an elaboration of his recent letter to the committee in which he protested against inferences that he was implicated in any way with Doheny's leases.

A score of witnesses are under subpoena to appear before the public lands investigating committee. J. Leo Stack, Denver oil man, who with associates obtained promise of $1,000,000 from Harry F. Sinclair for claims to Teapot Dome, is scheduled to take the stand tomorrow.

McAdoo's Oil Patriotism.

In a statement to the senate Teapot Dome committee, McAdoo said it already has been shown clearly that neither he nor members of the law firm of McAdoo, Cotton and Franklin, with which he formerly was connected "have had any relations whatever to the leases made of Teapot Dome and naval oil reserve. There is, therefore, nothing more to be said on that score."

McAdoo accompanied his unqualified denial of any connection with the leasing of the naval reserves with an intimation that his name had been drawn into the case for political purposes and with a scathing denunciation of any who are guilty in connection with the leases.

He said that as director general of railroads he realized the importance of fuel oil from Mexico. Preservation of "our internal economy" depends on this oil supply, he said. "Not alone is this true but the question of an adequate oil supply and of an adequate oil reserve is one of the most important for any nation under conditions of modern warfare. In fact, the crucial test in the next war, if one should come, is going to be

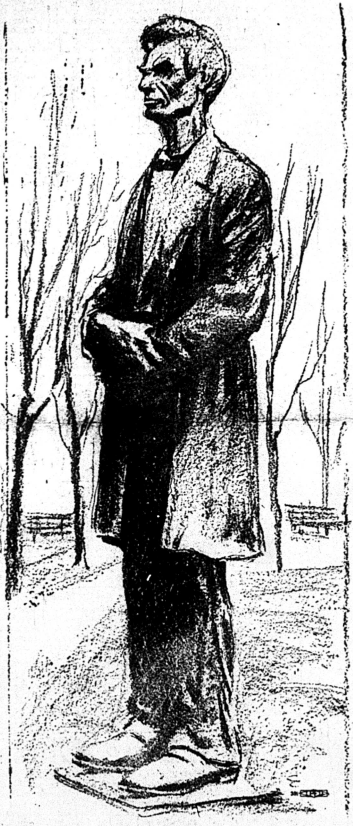
Abraham Lincoln
His Birthday Today, February 12th



Abraham Lincoln said: "The strongest bond of human sympathy, outside of the family relation, should be the one uniting all working people of all nations, and tongues and kindreds."—Before the New York Republican Workingmen's Association. (Article on Lincoln on Page 2.)

In place of the daily cartoon today we reproduce above a picture of the only statue of Lincoln which gives a working class conception of the great leader. The statue is the work of George Gray Barnard. It was made to be sent to Manchester, England. When it was completed the plutes and big wigs protested against it because Lincoln's pants weren't pressed and in general he didn't look like a great man.

When the statue was unveiled in Manchester the cotton workers, who were the children of the cotton workers who, under the leadership of Karl Marx had kept England out of the American Civil War on the side of the South, gave the statue their approval by attending the unveiling by the tens of thousands.

COCA COLA GETS MORE ADVERTISING WITH ONE BOTTLE IN THE CASE

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 11.—Society was startled today as news spread that a woman, said by Chief of Police Beavers, to be Mrs. Asa Candler, pretty wife of the aged multi-millionaire soft drink manufacturer, had been arrested in an apartment with two men.

The news came to Atlanta, thru out-of-town newspapers which rushed hundreds of extra copies here for sale. Enterprising newsboys posted themselves in front of the 13-story Candler Building and sold papers at 25 cents a copy as long as the supply lasted.

HERRIN UNDER MARTIAL LAW, YOUNG IS OUT

Troops and Klan Are Patrolling the Streets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill., Feb. 11.—Fear of a strike of several thousand coal miners further complicated the situation today. Members of the United Mine Workers of America declared they would not tolerate klansmen in their ranks. Many of the miners are klansmen and the bulk of the miners are said to be ready to strike until the klansmen are ousted.

Adjutant General Carlos Black is determined there shall be no repetition of the massacre of June, 1922, when 25 union and non-union miners were slain.

Herrin is under "military law," which differs from martial law in that the military is not in absolute control of the town. Under military rule the troops are technically subordinate to the civil authorities.

Limited military rule was extended to Marion and Johnson City.

Three companies, two of them cavalry, were quartered in Johnson City, and four are held at Marion, where an armed guard was stationed over the county jail where Mayor A. C. Anderson of Herrin, and 14 known anti-Klansmen are held on charges of complicity in the murder of Caesar Cagle, Klan leader, Friday night.

Sheriff George Galligan, who called the troops here following the slaying of Cagle and the shooting of Deputy Sheriff John Layman, was held captive in the city hall here by the followers of S. Glenn Young, dictator of Herrin. Galligan was arrested for the murder. Young has taken over the office of chief of police here.

Military Deposes Young.

S. Glenn Young, "prohibition czar of Williamson County," and acting chief of police of Herrin, today was deposed by the military.

Major General Milton Foreman, arriving here with 1,000 state militiamen from Chicago, notified the former prohibition agent he was ousted.

Two automatics strapped about his waist and several hundred Ku Klux Klansmen under his orders, S. Glenn Young, dominated Herrin today.

Two Klansmen with machine guns were stationed in front of the city hall, where Young established himself after usurping the job of chief of police.

Sheriff A Prisoner.

Sheriff George Galligan, arrested on Young's orders, was held a prisoner in the basement of the same building. Young refused to turn him over to the acting sheriff, Coroner William McCown.

Young's Klansmen and the seven companies of state troops quartered here are patrolling the city separately without recognizing each other.

Many miners were loafing about the streets today. They were talking mostly about Young. The troops have been called out by violence six times in the last fifty years, but only once has there been a Glenn Young.

Miners Are Idle.

All of the coal mines in "Little Egypt" reported "work today," but many of the miners didn't work. They came to Herrin to see what was doing.

Adjutant General Carlos Black is here, but no action to establish complete martial law has been taken.

General Milton Foreman, arriving here this afternoon with the 132nd Infantry Regiment of Chicago, will take charge of all troops, and probably will take positive action to quiet the bitter hatred between drys and wets, Klans and anti-Klans, that broke out Friday night in a half dozen gun battles, the death of Constable Caesar Cagle, Klan leader, and the critical wounding of Deputy Sheriff John Layman, anti-Klan chief.

Brigadier General Milton J. Foreman arrived today with 1,000 men of

JOBLESS RELIEF IN GREAT BRITAIN IS C.P. CONTRIBUTION

Plan of Communists Gets Congress O. K.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Feb. 11—The Unemployed Workers Committee, representing the 2,000,000 jobless wage-earners in England, and the Council of the Trade Union Congress is initiating a great national campaign for relief of the critical unemployment situation.

"The Unempoyed Workers Charter", consisting of the minimum demands of the unemployed and the Trades Union Congress, will be made the issue in the national drive and the campaign intended to have these demands embodied in legislation that will become part of the British legal code. The demands are:

First—Work or effective maintenance for all unemployed and increased Government assistance, to be provided thru the trade unions, all relief being completely dissociated from the poor law administration.

Second—Immediate development of Government schemes for employment to absorb the unemployed in their own trades at trade union wages.

Third—Establishment of State workshops to supply the necessary service or commodities to meet the requirements of the governmental departments.

Fourth—Reduction in the hours of labor sufficiently to absorb the unemployed workers, the normal working day or week to be regulated by the requirements of industry.

Fifth—Establishment of occupational training centers for unemployed workers, with effective maintenance.

Sixth—Provision for suitable housing accomodation at rents within the means of the wage earners.

These demands originating with the Communist elements in the British labor movement and given much publicity thru the unemployed committees have heretofore been regarded as impossible of realization but their endorsement by the Trade Union Congress and the launching of the national campaign for their initiation brings them into the field of practical political questions.

The Daily Herald characterizes the campaign as an indication of the increasing co-operation between the Trade Union Congress and the organized unemployed.

The Communist Party of Great Britain for the last two years has been devoting much of its efforts to the organization of the unemployed and a network of unemployed committees has been established all over Great Britain.

No Workers Spending Money at Miami, Fla.; Parasite Rich Talk of Weather, Bathing Suits and Dogs

(NOTE—The winter season is on full blast in Florida as northern states are now devoting themselves to digging out of snow and sleet. Following is the first of a series of stories giving a picture of what's going on in the winter retreats of the parasite millionaires.)

• • • •

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 11.—Aside from the storms and cold weather back home, the chief topic of conversation in the warm and sunny parts down here is the appearance of the new stream-line body feminine bathing suit, finished in bright yellow, no upholstering and known as the "Florida Special."

Making its first appearance on the white sands today, the new "Special" attracted added interest, universal approval and might well be classed a knock-out.

The skirt consists of a ruffle around the waist, a sort of abbreviated coping for cute little pantalets and a base for a decollette Jersey—this is all; there isn't any more.

To set it off properly it appears necessary that a naked little dog, preferably a Mexican hairless on the leash, shall accompany the fair bather, the dog also wearing a bathing suit, which, be it said, covers more of its shape than the Florida Special does that of the lady.

With the tremendous influx of tourists from all over the country, this seaside resort has been turned into a winter version of Newport, Atlantic City, Long Beach and a dash of Coney Island. Thousands of people swarm the beaches. Colors of costumes dazzle the eye.

All clothes are summery—filmy and vari-colored. At the height of the bathing hour the beach resembles a carnival. Prevailing styles for men are white flannel trousers, soft shirts and sport coats. Straw hats and caps are worn. Any one appearing in a fedora is suspected of taking a nasty crack at the climate.

The streets of Miami are so crowded it's hard to get around, and not only the leisure class are favoring the resort this year. Thousands of so-called middle class folks are spending their vacations and money among the millionaires. But their are no workers here with money to spend.

Women Workers Are Waging War on the Rent Profiteers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—An organization called the United Council of Working Class Women, with the object of protecting the interests of the workers, was formed here recently. Forty-six working men's and working women's organizations are affiliated with the council, with many more offiliations and promises of support forthcoming.

The first problem to which the new organization devoted itself is that of housing. The rents in New York and other cities are exorbitant and tenants have no protection against gouging landlords except thru their organizations.

In an appeal sent out by Mrs. Kate Gitlow, secretary-treasurer, from the offices of the organization at 137 University Place, New York City, declares "it is the duty of organized labor and all other working men's and working women's organizations and all friends of the workers to support morally and financially the United Council of Working Class Women."

Not Like the Movies.

As George Dodd, manager of the Valentino Inn, cabaret in the center of the downtown district, prepared to deposit Saturday and Sunday's receipts in the bank today, three bandits entered the place, took $2,000, and escaped. Dodd and four employes were bound and gagged by the bandits. The money was in Dodd's inside pocket.

CANNON LAUDS HERRIN MINERS' STRIKE AT KLAN

Calls K. K. K. Enemy of the Foreign-Born

"I am glad to see that the miners of Williamson county are striking as a protest against the treatment the foreign-born workers of Williamson county are receiving at the hands of the Ku Klux Klan," James Cannon, chairman of the Workers Party of America, said in a statement made yesterday.

"When the native born American workers stand shoulder to shoulder with the foreign-born workers to protest effectively against the anti-foreign-born and anti-union activities of the Ku Klux Klan the K. K. K. will soon be forced to stop.

"The lawless activities of the K. K. K. are but another expression of the same attitude that tries to have all foreign-born workers registered and made safe for the bosses. The workers who protest against the treatment accorded foreign-born workers by the K. K. K. should remember this and fight all attempts to coerce and intimidate foreign-born workers whether made by the K. K. K. or discriminatory laws."

Lincoln and the Working Class

By JAY LOVESTONE

OF ALL our presidents to date Lincoln has been the one most entangled in a maze of mythical traditions.

At this moment when a strike-breaker is at the head of the government and when the country is in the midst of the unfolding of the worst tale of plunder in its odious annals of the looting of its wealth by the capitalists, it was not our task to unravel these mythical mysteries. A few words about Lincoln's relationship with the working class in the struggle to abolish chattel slavery in the United States will be appropriate.

All ideals, social attitudes, political and economic rights, take root in the material conditions at hand and transmitted. In these material conditions the economic conditions are the dynamic force, the changing influence. Lincoln spoke and reflected the ideals of the lower middle class who with the farmers made up the decisive majority of the population of the United States in 1860. It was in this role that Lincoln was at the helm in the fight against cotton culture.

The weakness and the wavering of this social class, in so far as they manifested themselves in Lincoln, counteracted by the strengthening influences of the working class and the enslaved class of Negroes. In the story of the Civil War the part played by these factors cannot be over-estimated. We recall how Frederick Douglass, the Negro advisor to Lincoln, sized up the early phases against chattel slavery in these words: "I reproached the North that they fought with one hand, while they might strike more effectively with two; that they fought with the soft white hand, while they kept the black iron hand chained and helpless behind hem; that they fought the effect while they protected that cause; and said that the Union cause would never prosper until the war assumed an anti-slavery attitude and the Negro was enlisted on the side of the Union."

Lincoln was very well aware of the fact that the heart of the English popular sentiment for the North was the working class of England. Lincoln called the conduct and the attitude of the suffering textile workers of Manchester towards the North whose blockade of the Southern ports was responsible for the shutting down of the British mills "an act of sublime Christian heroism which has not been surpassed in any age or any country."

Charles Francis Adams then in charge of the American legation in London replying for Lincoln to the address of the General Council of the International Workingmen's Association of which Karl Marx was at the head declared: "They (the United States) derived new encouragement to preserve from the testimony of the workingmen of Europe."

The United States would never have been able to pull thru the revolutionary crisis of the Civil War if the workingmen of Europe had not rallied whole heartedly to the fight against Negro slavery, tho the immediate economic advantages dictated them to favor the Southern cotton barons.

It was only the heavy hand of the International Workingmen's Association that stopped the British capitalists and their government from lining up with the South in order to have the South independent with tariff regulations of its own enabling England to have "undisputed free trade." Famine fever, as Marx called the hunger typhus, starvation, wage cuts, jails, and poor houses were the lot of the English workingmen who did so much to make possible Lincoln's victory over chattel slavery. The suffering of the English workingmen was so deplorable that committees were formed in New York "for the purpose of collecting money for the starving weavers in the North of England and thus alleviating their misery."

This far-sightedness of Lincoln in appreciating the decisive importance of the working class in the struggle was crystallized in his address to the New York Republican Workingmen's Association in which he said: "None are so deeply interested to resist the present rebellion as the working people. Let them beware of prejudice, working division and hostility among themselves. The most notable feature of a disturbance in your city last summer was the hanging of some working people. It should never be so. The strongest bond of human sympathy outside of the family relation, should be the one uniting all working people of all nations, and tongues and kindreds."

The splendid international solidarity and sacrifices of the English working class in the Civil War and these memorable words of Lincoln take on redoubled significance for the American workers today. These heroic deeds and true words should remind our working men of their great need for solidarity at home against their common capitalist enemy and for international unity with the workers of the other countries in the fight against world imperialism and fascist reaction.

HISTORIC NEGRO ALL-RACE MEET SEEKING UNITY

Labor Seen as Big, Dominant Issue

the African-American's Relation to Worldwide Race Movements, Fraternal and Benevolent Organizations of the Race, the Religious Question, Inter-Racial Co-operation, Agitation against Lynching, Segregation, Disfranchisement, Peonage and other racial abuses, will act as advisory bodies striving to unite the efforts of the various organizations attempting to handle these issues and undertaking special jobs at the request of the affiliated organizations.

The tremendous problem created by the migration of a million Negroes into northern industrial life in the last few years will form the basis for a large part of the work of the committee on labor. The convention is greatly interested in finding who will go on this committee; which will play an important part in Negro life after the convention.

Middle Class In Majority.

The majority of the delegates are from the middle class and include editors, small business men, clergymen and others, but there is a considerable proletarian element also. Even the middle class representatives are far more cognizant of the labor question than a similar representation from the white race, for the persecution of the Negroes from the days of slavery to the present policy of maintaining the Negroes as a voteless, unskilled labor force has so obviously its roots in the industrial system.

Informal discussion among the delegates reveals a more aggressive attitude than that likely to be expressed on the floor. This from a Negro lawyer from Washington, D. C.:

"When they started killing Negroes in Washington a few years ago the Negroes fought back better than our enemies. That's why they haven't tried wholesale lynching again. If the Negroes of America hadn't resisted in Washington and other places there would have been massacres all over the country."

Saving the Race.

"The Basic Importance of the Physical Stamina of the Race" will be the subject for speakers at tomorrow mornings session and will furnish much opportunity for scoring the industrial conditions responsible for the diseases that are racking the poorly paid workers. The long work day in the steel industry where so many Negroes are employed; the adulterated food, sold to industrial workers and the lack of medical attention given to the producers on southern plantations; all these will be dealt with by able speakers; including Dr. A. M. Curtis, ex-president of the National Medical Association; Dr. Algernon L. Jackson, director School of Public Health and Hygiene, Howard University, Washington, D. C.; Dr. A. Wilberforce Williams, Chicago and Dr. U. G. Dailey, Chicago.

The Fight For Education.

"Our Educational Program" will be the topic for the afternoon, and the bitter truth of the southern educational systems, which allow Negro schools only a fraction of the funds provided for whites will be exposed. This southern educational policy makes a mockery of the American boast that there is equal opportunity for all, and is but part of the systematic policy of maintaining the Negro as an unskilled worker. The educational efforts of racially conscious Negroes will be explained in answer. Speakers will include:

Prof. Gilbert H. Jones, Dean, Wilberforce University, presiding.

Prof. Garnet C. Wilkinson, Assistant Superintendent, Public Schools, Washington, D. C.

Prof. John M. Gandy, Principal, Normal and Industrial School, Petersburg, Va.

Prof. John Hope, President, Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. R. C. Woods, President, Virginia Seminary and College, Lynchburg, Va.

Combating Race Hate.

The Negro Press, which is resisting the vicious propaganda of race hate of the American capitalist dailies will be dealt with at the evening sessions at Wendell Phillips High School, 39th street and Prairie avenue.

Speakers include Mr. Robert L. Vann, Editor, Pittsburgh Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa., presiding; Mr. R. S. Abbott, Editor, Chicago Defender; Mr. Carl J. Murphy, Editor, Afro-American, Baltimore Md.; Mr. Claude A. Barnett, Director, Associated Negro Press, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. W. J. Walls, Editor, Star of Zion, Charlotte, N. C.

Discussion will follow all talks. A full list of organizations participating in the congress will be given in tomorrow's paper.

control of an adequate supply of petroleum.

Doheny Then Respectable.

"Mr. Doheny's companies, as well as Mr. Doheny, enjoyed an enviable reputation when he called on me in 1919.

"His companies were the outstanding independent oil companies furnishing the required supply of Mexican fuel oil to our industries along the Atlantic seaboard. They were also the only strong companies offering competition with the so-called "oil trust" in the United States.

"When Mr. Doheny therefore, asked my firm to act for him professionally in trying to prevent the confiscation of his valuable petroleum properties in Mexico—representing several hundred million dollars—it appealed to me because of my general knowledge of the oil industry and of Mexican and Latin-American relations and because it was in line with the declared policy of the administrations to protect American properties against confiscation in Mexico.

"Public Service".

"I believe the opportunity was presented to render a genuine service, outside of my professional work, in promoting Latin-American commerce and was particularly interested in the protection of all American rights in Mexico from retroactive and confiscatory effect to Article 27 of the Mexican constitution."

President Wilson filed a strong protest against Article 27 in 1918, he pointed out. The Harding administration also opposed it.

There were more than 500 spectators packed into the room as McAdoo took the oath and began reading his statement.

Senator Walsh, Montana, brought out that McAdoo quit as secretary of the treasury Dec. 6, 1918, as director general of railroads Jan. 11, 1919, and entered the law business in April, 1919.

"When did you first become attorney for Doheny?"

"I think it was Nov. 30, 1919."

"Did you have anything to do with him before that?"

"I had met him but once before that."

McAdoo was asked explicitly what duties he had performed for Doheny.

"I was merely his special counsel," McAdoo said. "I think I may say that if he had sought my advice about this matter he would not be in his present difficulty."

McAdoo went to Mexico for Doheny in January, 1921, remaining ten days or two weeks. He gripped both sides of the witness table as he answered Senator Lenroot.

Fall "Not Equally Guilty."

"If it be true that an ex-cabinet member has betrayed a public trust do you consider Mr. Doheny equally guilty?"

"Not equally—but it appears he is guilty of a very grave matter. Of course I don't intend to pass judgment upon anyone before you complete your investigation."

Senator Dill, Washington Democrat, questioned McAdoo as to the money he had received. McAdoo said he himself got $50,000 in two annual retainers of $25,000 each and that his firm got $190,000.

"Did Doheny deliver it in a satchel?" Dill asked.

"He did not, sir. It came in the form of checks."

Chairman Lenroot then ordered the committee into executive session. The nominations of Silas Strawn and Atlee Pomerene as special presidential counsel were brought up for discussion behind closed doors.

After being in session two hours the committee adjourned without taking any action on the nominations. They will be considered again tomorrow, altho no additional witnesses are expected.

Three railroad brotherhood representatives appeared in opposition to Pomerene.

Weeks Is Hardboiled.

"I do not expect any resignations from the cabinet today—or soon," Secretary of War Weeks said today, on leaving the White House after an extended conference with the president.

Weeks said adoption by the senate of a resolution calling for Secretary of Navy Denby's resignation "would make no difference, as the senate has no jurisdiction over the cabinet except to confirm it."

At Denby's office it was said today he had no intention of resigning, no matter what action the senate took.

LaFollette Warns G. O. P.

Forecasting "defeat and possibly ruin for the Republican party" as a result of the naval oil reserve scandal, Senator LaFollette today declared in a speech in the senate that President Coolidge was in part responsible.

LaFollette declared "the administration of President Coolidge is employing the same tactics in this case that the administration of President Taft employed in the Ballinger case."

He asserted the Ballinger case brought about Republican defeat and prophesied the same fate for the Coolidge administration if it continued "hiding behind a paper barricade of legal technicalities."

LaFollette demanded the resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby and scouted all arguments that it was not within the proper province of the senate to ask for it.

"Albert B. Fall must bear the responsibility for his conduct, but he must not be made the scape-goat so that others may be allowed to evade responsibility for what they have done," said LaFollette.

Denby Strictly Accountable.

"Mr. Denby must be held to strict responsibility and accountability. He knew Fall well. He knows the latter's record with regard to conservation. Fall's record in the senate was one of consistent opposition to and contempt for all conservation legislation.

"It will be recalled that Denby in addition to turning over the naval oil reserves to Fall also turned over to him the naval coal reserves in Alaska. When he did this he knew and must have known that was Fall's purpose and desire immediately to transfer these reserves to private interests for private exploitation.

"So, although, the President must bear his full measure of responsibility. He was aware of the policy of both Denby and Fall in dealing with the naval oil reserves and other public property long before the present investigation called public attention to their conduct.

Shows Coolidge Connection.

"When I introduced the senate resolution authorizing and directing the investigation upon which the public lands committee is now conducting into the subject of leases upon naval oil reserves, the vice president, now the president, was then in the chair. This was on April 21, 1922. When that resolution was called up for discussion and the whole subject thoroly gone into on April 28, 1922, the vice-president, Mr. Coolidge, now the president, was then in the chair and heard the discussion. At that time the revelations were foreshadowed which have since been publicly made.

"So, altho the President must cial bear his own responsibility. Let there be no whitewashing, no vicarious atmosphere.

Says Denby "Morally Abnormal."

"I say it with shame and mortification, but it is unfortunately true that the political party of which I am a member, as represented by those in control of the machinery of the party, has played as sorry a part in this investigation as it did in the Ballinger investigation. The action of the leaders of the Republican party in the Ballinger case as much as any other one thing discredited the Taft administration and drove the Republican party from power.

"It would seem as tho the Ballinger case should have taught us a lesson, but apparently it has not done so."

LaFollette termed Secretary Denby "intellectually and morally abnormal" and "not fit and trustworthy man for the office."

MINERS WAGE SCALE PARLEY OPENS IN FLA.

Lewis Wants Easy Sailing for Four Years

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 11.—The wage scale parley between the coal operators of the central competitive field, comprising Ohio, Illinois, eastern Pennsylvania and Indiana and the representatives of the United Mine Workers of America opened this morning at 10 a. m.

The present agreement expires on March 31 of this year. Unless an agreement is reached that is satisfactory to the members of the union a shut down may take place on April 1.

Nine delegatets from the Pittsburgh Coal Producers Association are here. This group broke away from the Cleveland agreement which was signed in 1922.

The conference is expected to last for two weeks. The Lewis administration is understood to be satisfied with the present wage scale but insists on a four year contract. The scale now in the bituminous mines is 94 cents a ton for machine mining and $7.25 to $7.50 for day labor.

The mines in the four states produce 36 per cent of the 500,000,000 annual tonnage of bituminous coal.

That the coal operators are gleeful over the manner in which John L. Lewis held his power at the Indianapolis convention by riding rough shod over the rights of the progressives is demonstrated in the current issue of Coal Age, considered the most representative and authoritative magazine of the coal industry from the operators' standpoint.

It states that Mr. Lewis and his supporters are taking the right stand. It pleads with the coal operators not to attempt a reduction in wages, fearing that the government might step in and take over the coal industry. "Let us keep the hands of Congress off the industry by going quietly about our business, lest the public try to make it their's," an editorial in the Coal Age says.

The Coal Age also gives Secretary of Labor Davis' anti-alien speech in full and tells of the handshaking incident when Davis called Lewis "the greatest president the United Mine Workers ever had."

the Illinois Militia, and promptly took over command of the situation, just as a coroner's jury began an inquest into the death of Constable Cagle.

Adjutant General Carlos Black indicated just before the arrival of the Chicago troops, that Young would be ousted from control of the city very soon.

The coroner's inquest, held on the second floor of the city hall, was closed to all save jury men, witnesses and newspapermen.

The stairways to the room and all doors of the building, were guarded by soldiers. All who were authorized to enter the jury room, even the jurors, were searched for concealed weapons.

Arrest Former Mayor.

A. T. Pace, former mayor of Herrin, was arrested on a charge of complicity in connection with the murder of Cagle. The warrant, sworn out by Young, was served on Pace just as he was being sworn in as foreman of the coroner's jury.

Jack Rowse, 23, one of the witnesses at the inquest, described the attack upon Cagle. He said he met a group of men in the downtown district Friday night. They were all brandishing guns, he said.

"Get out of the way," the men shouted.

Rowse got out, he said, then followed the men to the Jefferson Hotel, where they commenced to shout, "There he is," and surrounded a man.

The man, who was Cagle, a member of the Herrin police force, reached under his armpit as if for the revolver that the participants in the Klan and booze war all carry.

A man in the mob hit Cagle on the head with a shotgun.

Cagle dropped, Rowse said, and three men stepped forward with drawn revolvers and fired. Cagle was instantly killed.

"I knew two of the three men," Rowse said. "One was Ora Thomas, and another was one of the three Shelton brothers. I can point him out if you bring him here."

Thomas is said to be a leader of the anti-Klan forces.

QUAKER PRISON SEES CONVICTS IN LIBERTY FIGHT

Gas Explosions Precede Freedom Dash

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 11—Two prison officials were killed today when 100 convicts at the Western Penitentiary made a dash for liberty following two gas explosions in the lower end of the institution.

The dead are: John A. Pieper, assitant deputy warden of Beechview, and John T. Coax, yard sergeant of North side, Pittsburgh.

Rioting broke out in the Western Penitentiary today and all available police and detectives and deputy sheriffs were rushed to the prison.

Crowds gathered outside the penitentiary walls and saw windows being broken by stones hurled by rebellious prisoners. Hoarse cries and yells mingled with intermittent firing.

The last outbreak at the penitentiary occured about three years ago when several of the rioters were killed and many wounded. About five hundred prisoners are lodged in the penitentiary at the present time.

First reports said two of the prisoners were shot and killed.

About 100 of the prisoners were running loose in the penitentiary yard attacking the guards and policemen with clubs, picks and stones.

The battle had reached a terrific stage at 10:30 a. m. and all police were called from their beats and rushed to the prison in taxicabs.

A call was sent to the central police station for more guns and ammunition and these were sent in a patrol wagon.

Like the riot of three years ago, the fighting today broke out following outbreak of fire in the main prison building. The convicts, many of whom were reported armed, dashed into the yard, fighting madly in an effort to escape.

Superintendent of police John Brophy led a second squad to the prison, armed with tear gas bombs.

The fire department was called out and streams of water were played on the rioters.

Leaking gas mains caused the explosions, and officials of the prison said there was no evidence that any of the convicts was responsible or that the explosions were a part of a plan of the prisoners to escape.

STUDENTS RESENT HUGE BEQUESTS BY MILLIONAIRES

Goose-Step Broken by Northwestern Lads

By CARL HAESSLER.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 11.—Student rumblings against Northwestern university's alliance with big business are being heard in unexpected quarters. Money obtained for the institution from socially questionable sources failed to receive the indorsement of a majority of students meeting in an "echo conference" in the First Methodist church of Evanston following the recent Student Volunteer quadrennial convention in Indianapolis. The uniformity of the goose-step is being demoralized.

The gift of over $4,000,000 from the widow of Montgomery Ward, late mail order magnate, drew the fire of the conference in a resolution that did not name the donor of the amount but said:

"We protest against endowment by great accumulations of capital, when such accumulations have resulted from exploitation of wage workers." This was passed by a vote of 56 to 40, with several faculty members sitting tense and anxious as they realized the meaning of this slap at rich friends of the university.

Mayer Money Tainted.

Another bequeathal that is exciting antagonism is the gift of $250,000 from the widow of Attorney Levy Mayer. The money is to go to the new law school of Northwestern. Mayer drew huge fees from the liquor interests and spent considerable effort in a vain attempt to break down the university's four-mile dry zone in the days before national prohibition. He failed, but it is regarded by critics of the gift that a Methodist institution like Northwestern should not take money gathered in part from sources that bent every effort to corrupt its campus life from the standards set by the university authorities.

Trustee control of faculty opinion, particularly by such trustees as Northwestern has gathered unto itself, draws further student fire. Not only are Elbert H. Gary of the U. S. Steel Corporation, and Robert W. Campbell, Gary's son-in-law, on the board, but there are three or four other men identified by retainer or otherwise with the steel trust. Both sides of controversial subjects are not freely handled in the classrooms, students charge. A resolution dealing with academic freedom was passed by 82 votes to 6, declaring:

Against Trustee Rule.

"We protest against trustee control that says what a student may or may not study."

Honorary degrees have become a private joke at Northwestern that sometimes bubbles over merrily into classroom discussion. The cream of the jest was the voting by the university's board of trustees of an honorary degree to Trustee Elbert H. Gary in 1922. It is not recorded that Gary or any of the Gary gang on the board voted against this self-starter degree.

Royal Bank Seeks to Rob Miners of Nova Scotia

(By The Federated Press)

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 11.—An attack on the fighting Nova Scotia rank and file of the U. M. W. is planned by the Royal Bank of Canada. When during the steelworkers and miners' strike in Sydney last July, the then rightly and legally elected executive of District 26, Dan Livingston, president, Alec S. McIntyre, vice president, and "Old J. B." McLachlan, secretary-treasurer, were disposed of by John L. Lewis and Silby Barrett, known as a labor fakir far beyond the district boundary, appointed provisional president, the Royal Bank held as an account some $6,500 to the credit of District 26.

The supreme Court of Nova Scotia then decided against a claim of Silby Barrett to the ownership of said amount, which, as was pointed out in the sentence, legally belonged to the district. But as the district, according to the constitution of the United Mine Workers, had complete autonomy within the organization, the appointment of Barrett by John L. Lewis did not give Barrett the right to dispose of the money altho the old executive had been disregarded.

Now the Royal Bank has again brought about action in the supreme court of Nova Scotia to determine the ownership of the money. The hearing, in which the old executive inclusive James M. McLachlan, who at present serves a two years' term for seditious libel, as well as the present provisional president of the district are supposed to appear will be held here on the 15th of February.

Seek to Free Houston Negroes Doing Life in Leavenworth Prison

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—A delegation of Negroes, representing colored citizens thruout the country and led by the secretary of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, called upon President Coolidge to submit a petition, containing 120,000 signatures, requesting presidential pardon for 54 members of the 24th infantry still serving sentences at Leavenworth for their alleged share in the Houston, Texas, riot of 1917.

The spokesman of the delegation, James Weldon Johnson, put forward the following reasons for a pardon: The acknowledged excellent conduct of the 24th infantry; the provocation of the imprisoned men because of their color; the excessive punishment inflicted upon "incriminated" members of the 24th infantry, of whom 19 were hanged—all but six without privilege of appeal; and the exemplary behavior of the sentenced men as prisoners.

Johnson declared that the Houston riot was incited when the 24th infantry provost guard had been disarmed and a colored soldier and a corporal brutally beaten and fired upon by white Texas policemen for remonstrating at the maltreatment of a colored woman.

Signatures on the petition included those of civic, fraternal, educational, religious and journalistic spokesmen of the Negro race in the United States.

Church leaders and editors, acting on behalf of hundreds of thousands of followers, supported the petition.

City Denies Aid to Nurses Succoring Mothers in Agony

(By The Federated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 11.—This city has a child welfare association, which devotes its services free to the poor, employing four nurses whose time for the past few years has been limited to maternity cases. Many a life, both of the infant and the mother has been saved. A few months ago funds were practically depleted and in order to carry on the work Miss Mary Raily, secretary of the association, requested the New Orleans Public Service, Inc., to allow the nurses free transportation while on an errand of mercy. This corporation, which is employing uniformed policemen at $7.25 a day to guard their imported scabs from the wrath of an offended public, refused the request.

Scab taxicab companies which not so long ago demanded and received free police protection at the expense of the taxpayers also refused the request. In order to carry on this humane work four nurses have purchased Ford cars on the deferred payment plan out of their slender incomes. The great city of New Orleans furnishes armed police to guard imported scabs, at the expense of hundreds of dollars a day, but has no money to relieve the wants of the poor and children in distress.

Open Shoppers in New Orleans Try to Frame-up Workers

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 11.—Adherents of the open shop, backed by capitalist newspapers are endeavoring to send four union linemen to the electric chair on the unsupported "confession" of Thomas Pickleheimer, a chauffeur.

His confession implicates others in the murder of Fred Bentley, a private detective, who while holding a union card, was reporting union strike activities to the Pendleton detective agency which employed him.

Pickleheimer claims that he and Bentley were invited to a party in which wine, women and cards were to be the attraction; that later he changed his mind and lured Bentley to a stable where he was nearly killed, the job being finished outside the city.

There is no evidence to confirm this confession save the word of a man who was either under the influence of the third degree or himself a dick employed by a rival agency. Those implicated deny the statement of Pickleheimer.

Workers Protest Blanket "Equal Rights" Proposal

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Spokesmen of many important women's organizations, interested in the advancement of the industrial and social welfare of women, joined in a protest against the National Woman's party proposal of a blanket "equal rights" amendment, before the senate judiciary committee on Feb. 7.

Their argument was in substance that any constitutional change which undertook to remove "discriminations against" women in the law would be used by reactionary courts to nullify all of the industrial welfare legislation for women which has been so painfully won in past years.

Spokesmen for the Woman's Party declined to accept a hearing on the day of Woodrow Wilson's funeral, and asked for another chance to present their case. Senator Ernst, in the chair, announced that they had "failed to appear." They will insist that they be given a hearing.

Standard Joins Anglo-Persian in Looting Asia

By FREDERICK KUH.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

NEW YORK.—Reports that the Standard Oil Co. has struck a secret bargain with the Anglo-Persian Oil group to thwart the Sinclair Oil in Persia, have obliged Standard Oil officials to attempt a denial in the current issue of The Lamp, their official organ. This statement is illuminating both in its confused shiftiness and its eloquent ommissions.

Standard Oil makes a denial, then explains that denial, and finally denies its explanation. In one breath, the Standard statement says that it is untrue that it has become associated with a British syndicate for the purpose of excluding "an American company"—meaning Sinclair, of course—from procuring the North Persian concessions. In a second, rather subdued breath, the statement recalls its "fifty-fifty" agreement with Anglo-Persian Oil in 1921. It is admitted that this agreement, in part at least, is still valid.

This denial is a confirmation. It substantiates the reported relations between Standard Oil and Anglo-Persian and asserts that the Persian government had previously conceded the northern oil fields to Anglo-Persian, so that the Sinclair grants are ineffective. This, obviously, is an issue to be decided by the Persian parliament and courts.

In any case, it serves as a timely reminder of the foreign alliance and counter-alliance being formed by American private interests, in which the American government, openly or secretly concurs. It is such commitments which lead to wars of "self defense."

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—After months of postponed trail, Tom Connors, secretary California General Defense committee, has been convicted of "jury tampering" and sentenced to five years in prison. The charge arose from the trial of ten men in Sacramento for criminal syndicalism last spring. At this time a bill was before the California assembly to abolish the criminal syndicalism law. Connors, as part of his official duties, circularized California on behalf of this bill, some of his printed appeals being distributed in Sacramento. One of these fell into the hands of a juryman, who promptly turned it over to the prosecution, and Connors was arrested for attempting to influence the jury in the criminal syndicalism case. The conviction will be appealed.

A criminal syndicalism charge placed against Connors at the same time resulted in an acquittal—another illustration of the erratic manner in which the law is administered, for Connors made no pretence of not being a member of the I. W. W., and that is the only ground on which over a hundred convictions have been brought about. The present trial took place in the court of Judge C. C. Busick, author of the anti-I. W. W. injunction, who has tried nearly all criminal syndicalism trials here, and has repeatedly been accused of violent prejudice.

Australian Union Men Hired First on Jobs at Docks

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—Members of the Waterside Workers' federation, have succeeded in securing preference for unionists in all work along the waterfront at the various Australian ports. The federation enjoyed preference until the general strike of 1917, when preference was withdrawn and given to a non-union body recruited by the employers.

In restoring the preference to unionists, the president of the federal arbitration court said it was an anomaly for the arbitration court to continue to deprive members of a registered union of rights for more than a reasonable time in favor of members of an organization not subject to the court. He did not think such action was ever intended under the arbitration act, when it authorized the registration of unions, and granted privileges to and imposed liabilities on members of registered unions.

"BIG FOUR" RAIL UNIONS PRESS FOR ALASKA CLEAN-UP

Say Conspiracy Rival to Teapot Scandal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Representatives of the "Big Four" Railroad Labor Unions are preparing to press President Coolidge for action on their request for a "clean up" in Alaska.

In a letter to Mr. Coolidge, the labor men said, that such an investigation "will reveal conspiracy of magnitude and ramifications more serious and baneful by far than the disclosures resulting from the naval oil investigation.

Road Victim of Intrigue.

"Our investigation convinces us that the Alaskan railroad is a victim of deliberate intrigue and conspiracy, carried on over a long period, directed by influences hostile to it, which are determined to destroy it as a government-owned railroad and to exploit Alaska for their exclusive benefit.

"After forcing its construction cost to excessive figures, they have prevented tonnage development for it, making it a financial failure," the letter added.

The investigation called for by the labor leaders would center on the Alaskan railroad but would include also steamship lines and other industries.

Mine Ordered Closed.

Several years ago an appropriation of $1,000,000 was obtained from Congress for development of the Matanuska coal field, which if developed, would constitute an important factor in obtaining increased freight tonnage on the railroad.

Former Secretary of Interior Fall, in May, 1922, obtained the transfer of this mine, which was a naval reserve, from the navy department to the department of the interior, by the signing of an order by Secretary Denby.

Immediately after the transfer, Fall ordered all operations in the mine stopped. Meantime a special board of the navy department conducted tests of the Matanuska coal to determine if it could be used for naval fuel.

Alaska Coal More Efficient.

At this time the navy was using coal from West Virginia, so the tests were made in comparison with the West Virginia fuel.

In its report, the special board said, that the Alaskan coal was 15 per cent more efficient than the West Virginia fuel; that the Alaskan coal developed more horsepower, despite a lesser tonnage.

Despite this report, the Alaskan coal was held unsuited for navy purposes.

Textile Mills on Part Time While 1,500 Are Jobless

MONTREAL, Feb. 11. — Textile workers in the province of Quebec are now on short time, a 40-hour week having been announced by the plants of the Dominion Textile Co. in order to avoid laying off men. In spite of this union officers state that there are only about 4,500 textile workers of the National and Catholic unions at work at present as compared with a normal roll of about 6,000.

A petition asking for an increase in the tariff on English cottons into Canada, in view of short time now being worked in the Montreal mills, is being organized by the unions in the city. The petitioners claim that English cottons were imported into Canada in October and November in sufficient quantities to have kept busy, had Canadian cottons been used, ten big textile plants all the year round, employing about 10,000.

Leiserson Sees Big Unemployment Crisis with Ending of 1924

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOLEDO.—The end of 1924 will probably see a grave unemployment problem, according to Dr. W. M. Leiserson, impartial arbitrator chairman of the arbitration boards in the clothing industry in the various markets of the country.

"Three types of fluctuations affect industry," he declared. "The seasonal fluctuation in demand, which is noticeable particularly in the building industry and the clothing trade; the irregular fluctuations caused by the introduction of labor-saving machinery; and the four and five-year periods of prosperity and depression which are noted in the iron and steel industry."

Dr. Leiserson urged unemployment insurance and the holding off of public work until slack periods.

Austria to Recognize Soviets.

VIENNA, Feb. 11.—Austrian recognition of Soviet Russia is being considered by the Austrian cabinet, Chancellor Seipel stated at Budapest. "We are waiting the decision of the great powers on this subject," said the Chancellor. "Austrian Russian relations are already well developed by two treaties, one dealing with commercial relations and the other with transportation."

Maniac Shoots Conductor.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Feb. 11.—Gripped by a sudden manacial insanity, W. H. Barnett, 53, a passenger on a westbound Southern Pacific train, shot and killed Conductor Norton, as the train was pulling out of Barstow, Calif.

Economist Exposes Mellon As Friend of Tax-Dodgers: Tells How Vast Sums Are Kept From U. S. Treasury

Multi-millionaires are revealed as a bunch of common sneaks by Mellon's tax reduction campaign. Shamelessly this rich man's secretary of the treasury publishes the fact that they are slinking tax dodgers and evaders of the law.

Of course he points out that it's perfectly legal evasion. Trust their legal retainers for that. So is the Pennsylvania railroad's evasion of the Transportation act judged perfectly legal by the supreme court. Can it be that laws are framed to allow a loop-hole for the rich?

Mellon does not propose to stop up these loop-holes and make the rich pay their share. He proposes merely to legalize their evasion. In other words he says law or no law the rich won't pay a cent more than they think is right so you might as well make the law conform to what they are willing to pay. Mellon is one of the richest men in the country and he ought to know.

Decrease Is Fake

Mellon frankly admits that the decrease since 1919 in the number of incomes reported as over $300,000 is largely due to such evasion and this is demonstration by the following figures which show side by side an increase in the total income from property and a decrease in the number of persons declaring large incomes which are more than 75% derived from this source.

	Income from property	No. if incomes over $300,000
1916	$3,861,150,687	1,296
1917	4,469,901,354	1,015
1918	4,847,914,601	627
1919	4,937,648,190	679
1920	5,492,568,961	395
1921	5,345,249,176	246

Note the rapid drop in the number of very large incomes following the establishment of high sur-taxes in 1917 and this in spite of the fact that the chief sources far from drying up actually increased. The surtaxes collected from these very wealthy men fell from $243,601,410 or 30% of the total surtax in 1919 to $134,709,112 or 23% of the total in 1920 and to $84,797,344 or 21% of the total collected in 1921. These men of great wealth were evading their share of the country's total tax bill, chiefly by dividing up their estates among members of their families but also by reporting excessive capital losses and in small measure by investment in tax free securities.

Tax Free Securities Shown

Senator Couzens has pointed out the relative unimportance of the tax free security as a means of tax evasion. He shows that there are only $11,000,000,000 worth of tax exempt securities or approximately 8% of the $136,000,000,000 worth of American securities outstanding. At least $4,442,000,000 of these tax exempt securities are in the hands of banks, life insurance companies, etc., which pay no income tax. So total tax exempt income can not amount to more than $278,715,000 and, according to Couzens, the latest income tax statistics dealing with this point show that only $53,062,000 of this was received by persons reporting incomes over $50,000. Which means that tax evasion from this source would involve less than $16,000,000 of a total surtax of $596,803,000.

The method of dividing up or turning a large income into a number of smaller incomes to avoid high surtax is too simple to require description. But the capital losses stunt is worth a word. About the end of the year worthless stocks and bonds with high face value are sold in bundles for a song in order to establish losses which may be deducted from income when making out tax reports. These are known to the financial world as "cats and dogs." According to the report of this year's transaction bundles of securities with a face value as high as $100,000 brought only a few dollars. The list includes $46,000 worth of Turman Louisiana Oil stock sold for $35 and 3000 shares of Confidence Gold Mining Co., stock sold for $1. Such losses, largely fictitious, run into the millions of dollars.

All of which proves that the real income tax problem is similar to the problem of enforcing the 18th amendment. But a special army and navy won't be provided to enforce either against the rich.

Unemployment in Europe

STOCKHOLM, Sweden.—For the first time since February, 1923, the number of Sweden's unemployed showed an increase. This is said to be largely due to unemployment in building construction work, 80 per cent of which has been adversely affected by the cold weather. The total quoted by the Unemployment Commission at the close of the year 1923 was 13,800.

Resume 10-Hour Day.

ESSEN, Germany.—Iron and steel industries in the Ruhr section and copper and coal mining industries in the Altenburg, Borna and Leipsiz districts have resumed the ten-hour working day, whereby a new scale of wages will become effective and the margin between the wages for productive and unproductive work widened.

On Jan. 4, 1924, the number of persons seeking employment in the Breslau district increased from 113,000 to 118,000, and the number receiving public aid rose from 88,000 to 94,000. Dismissals from the sugar factories are said to be the principal cause of the increase.

Increase In Denmark.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark.—Official statistics of the Danish Government, released Jan. 8, 1924, show that the unemployment total increased by 17,000 persons during the last half of December, 1923. The total of 49,022, however, is considerably under the 56,900 and 82,000 idle people in Denmark as of Jan. 1, 1923, and Jan. 1, 1922, respectively.

According to the results of a survey of the fifty principal towns of Denmark, excluding Copenhagen, recently made public by the Statistical Department of the Government, there were, on the October "moving day" of 1923, 1,675 homeless families consisting of 8,971 individuals, of whom 3,792 were adults and 5,179 were children. Copenhagen's 2,801 homeless families consisted of 11,117 individuals, and the grand total for the entire country is a large increase over figures for the two previous years.

How would you like to have all those rules stand between you and the outside world? Three hundred and sixty-five days a year and the prospect of about ten such years.

If some one sent you the DAILY WORKER for a year and you could look forward to spending a couple of hours a day reading it and forgetting that you were in prison you would certainly be a happy guy.

There are scores of political and class war prisoners in the prisons of the country who would be pleased as Punch to receive the DAILY WORKER regularly so that they might keep in touch with the outside world.

The DAILY WORKER will be sent to any political prisoner in the country for $3 a year. That is half the regular price. All you have to is to send us the $3 and the name of a political prisoner and we will see that he gets the paper for a year.

If you want to send the DAILY WORKER to a political prisoner and and are willing that we should judge where to send it, all right, send us $3 and say, "To a prisoner for a year." We will put a prisoner's name on our list and let you know who it is. By doing it that way we will be able to see to it that every prison that has a political prisoner is receiving the DAILY WORKER.

When one political in a prison gets a radical or labor paper they all read it while it holds together.

Have you got $3 worth of consideration for the political prisoners? Express it by sending the DAILY WORKER to at least one prisoner.

ALL CONNECTICUT LENIN MEETINGS HUGE SUCCESSES

Workers Party Expects Big Accessions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 11.—The Lenin Memorial meetings held in Connecticut have been the best attended mass meetings held in this state for several years.

The meeting at Hartford last Sunday filled the large hall of the Labor Educational Alliance to overflowing. Alexander Trachtenberg was the speaker, and his activity in the Socialist movement in this city years ago brought to the meeting many radicals. It is expected that a goodly number of these will again join the movement and help form the basis for a strong English branch in Hartford.

The Bridgeport meeting, held in Carpenters' Hall, was also well attended. Here Jos. Brahdy and Alfred Wagenknecht spoke in English and A. Chunak in Ukrainian. Many Lenin pictures were sold. The Hungarian chorus, joined by the audience, sang the Internationale.

The Ansonia comrades secured the city hall for their meeting. H. S. Bloomfield and A. Radzidovitch were the speakers. Many comrades and sympathizers from Seymour and other surrounding cities attended.

The most successful meeting since the organization of the Workers Party was held in New Haven Wednesday night. The Arbeiter Mannerchor and Mixed Chorus assisted in the program by singing the Internationale, "Ein Sohn des Volkes," and other appropriate songs. The Russian comrades sang their native funeral march.

Alexander Trachtenberg, A. Chumak, in Ukrainian, and Alfred Wagenknecht were the speakers. A large collection was taken for the purpose of building a monument to Lenin in this country, namely, a mass Workers Party.

The audience voted that the following cable be sent to Moscow: "We grieve with you in the loss of Lenin, but with you we have resolved that the greatest monument we can build in his honor is a strong revolutionary party of workers and farmers. This we shall do."

The threat of the American Legion to break up our meetings has remained a threat. Even in Springfield where both the Legion and the mayor had forbidden the meeting, the mayor changed his mind and has decided to allow the meeting to proceed ||providing it is lawful and the red flag is not waved."

William Simons will speak in Springfield and Rebecca Grecht in Stamford.

Starving German Kids a Challenge to Christianity

NEW YORK.—In what is termed a "challenge to the churches of America," the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, issues another appeal for relief to German children. The appeal, which is part of an expansive publicity campaign inaugurated by the council, replies to objections from anti-German citizens by dwelling upon the plight of children in Germany and by asserting that the issue at stake is not anti-anything, but pro-children.

"A Week" Every Day

THE decision has been made. The world-famous story of Russian life since the great revolution of November, 1917, will appear DAILY in the DAILY WORKER. The first installment of "A Week" will appear Saturday, Feb. 16.

The daily installments were decided upon so that the DAILY WORKER will live up to its best traditions as "A DAILY." Our paper is a DAILY. It is in the fight from day to day. It wants its readers to realize this fact. It wants everyone to feel it. Publishing only weekly installments of this great novel would still perpetuate the idea that we are working on a weekly basis. This must be swept away forever.

But this means that all our readers, and thousands more, must get on the mailing list and stay there from now on. Get others to subscribe. See that your own subscription is renewed. There will be no chance to get back numbers once this serial has got under way. Send your subscriptions and renewals to The DAILY WORKER, 1640 N. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

Urge the Five-Day Week to Help Save Lives of Painters

By MARTIN A. DILLMON
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

ST. LOUIS.—The five-day week which is being sought by union painters here, will mean improved health for the workers, the unionists point out. Painters suffer greatly from lead poisoning. An extra day in the open air each week will reduce the danger of contracting the complaint. Many employers are said to favor the five-day week, claiming that the four hours now worked on Saturdays are not worth the expense incurred.

By doing away with Saturday work, the union hopes to spread employment more evenly over the entire year, thus giving the men steadier work. There will be room for more men under the five-day week system.

In addition to the shorter week, the painters will demand increases of wages ranging from 12½ cents to 52½ cents an hour, establishing a minimum scale of $1.50 an hour, with double time for work performed on Saturdays. Painters and paperhangers now recive $1.12½ an hour. Fifteen cents an hour extra will be asked for outside work where the painters work on swinging scaffolds more than five stories above the ground. The new scale for decorators (fresco painters) when doing artistic work, is to be $1.65 an hour. The present scale is $1.12½ an hour.

Ornamental glass workers, lead glaziers, etc., now receive rates varying from 82½ cents to 95 cents an hour, and will demand a flat minimum scale of $1 an hour.

When the wage slashing campaign was being conducted against the St. Louis building trades two years ago, the painters were the only craft in the building trades council to voluntarily accept a cut in pay, being reduced to $1 an hour from $1.25. A two-year agreement was entered into, but last year the union succeeded in opening the agreement and negotiating an increase of 12½ cents an hour. The two-year agreement will expire this spring. If the painters are successful in establishing the new scale this year, it will benefit more than 2600 workers affiliated with the district council.

Fuel Shortage Aids Nova Scotia Miners' Struggle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 11.—A change has come over the British Empire Steel Corporation as regards its attitude toward the strikers' demands for a continuance of the 1923 rates.

The fuel shortage is responsible for their present conciliatory mood. Some time ago they declared that 65,000,000 tons of coal were on hand in the United States which could be shipped to Nova Scotia if the miners there refused to produce. But the execution of this plan was not so easy as was the talk about it. And in consequence a general fuel shortage is noticeable over the whole of Nova Scotia, especially in Halifax. The few steamer cargoes of Virginia coal, arriving here recently, have been merely drops of water on a hot stone.

Not only Nova Scotia, but New Brunswick, too, is affected, a great need of bunker coal being noticed in the N. B. winterport of St. John.

"Right on the spot," too, the shortage is experienced. In Sydney, Besco officials admitted recently that the supply on hand was entirely exhausted, the shortage causing the closing of the company's steelworks in Sydney, which not long ago received an order from the Canadian National Railway for 56,000 tons of rails. The car works at Trenton have indefinitely discontinued operations and the steelworks at New Glasgow also have partly closed, both firms being subsidiaries of Besco.

All signs indicate that "good old Besco" is in a pretty fix.

Cut Out Middleman.

PERTH, Western Australia.—The Housewives' Assn. of Western Australia has put into operation at Perth a scheme for reducing the price of milk from 18 cents to 14 cents a quart. The producer is the distributer, instead of the milk passing from the producers to the wholesaler and to the retailer as in the past.

Under contract, the producer is guaranteed 36 cents a gallon for 12 months, and he provides the means of delivery.

Widows Left by Hamburg Revolt in Desperate Need

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HAMBURG, Germany, Feb. 11.—The fighting in Hamburg, conducted with so much heroic courage by the workers, demanded many victims. A great number of workers fell on the barricades, many were arrested, and many of them are in flight. The families of these workers are all in great need. They have absolutely no claim on the state for support. Neither do they get any unemployment benefit, since the men lost their work "thru their own fault." The authorities say that the workers "wantonly" laid down their work in order to go to the barricades.

The children suffer most of all. In Hamburg today there are 400 children whose fathers participated in the recent barricade fighting. There are families with two, three, four and even seven children to support, who are in the greatest need. The women can do next to nothing to support these children. They can get no work anywhere. Everywhere they are marked as wives of "plunderers" or "criminals," with whom an honorable employer will have nothing to do. These women are filled with despair; they live in continual worry about their husbands who are in the clutches of reaction, and they have no way of caring for their sick and starving children.

The families of revolutionary fighters must not be abandoned to such an uncertain fate. The 400 children in Hamburg must immediately be given the required care and assistance.

Red Aid has, of course, taken steps in this direction. For this purpose great sums of money are needed. The workers of all countries must try to do everything possible to alleviate this terrible suffering. Children's homes must be established or the children must be taken into families. We must not leave the children of the courageous Hamburg fighters in the lurch.

Overtime Pay Is Won by Canadian Railroad Workers

(By The Federated Press)

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—An agreement has been reached between the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes and the Canadian Pacific Railway in regard to the revision of the rules but the increase in pay of 12½ per cent asked for has been postponed. The chief gain made by the men, who are chiefly clerks and station employes, is that overtime will hereafter be paid after the eighth instead of after the tenth hour. A number of other changes in the rules, beneficial to the men, have also been secured. The new agreement is now in effect.

Among the proposals made to the C. P. R. by the C. B. R. E. was the establishment of a board of adjustment to settle disputes in regard to the interpretation of agreements. A body of this kind is now functioning between the railways and six of the big international unions. This matter was held over for further consideration.

Negotiations for a revision of pay and rules are also in progress with the Canadian National Railways, but no agreement has been announced.

Women Boycott Profiteers.

SIDNEY, N. S. W.—Thru a well organized boycott, the Housewives' Assn, at Sydney succeeded in reducing the price of potatoes from $120 a ton to between $20 and $25. When the prices were high, they asked all householders to refrain from buying, with the result that huge quantities of potatoes were allowed to rot, at great loss to the profiteers. When the price was hammered down to bedrock, the association lifted the boycott.

HUDSON COUNTY, N.J., SHOWS BIG PARTY GROWTH

Socialist Party Again Rejects United Front

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 11.—The Workers Party organization in Hudson county, New Jersey, is a living factor. They now have 14 branches including a very active English branch, all of them eager to carry on the task of the advanced guard of the exploited workers.

They are about to send out a call for a conference for "protection of foreign born" and another conference for relief of the starving German workers. The Executive Secretary, Chris Blohm, was instructed to seek participation of the Socialist Party and other political and economic organizations. Valentine Bausch, Secretary of the Socialist Party, who was approached by Blohm, was in favor of the proposition. The Workers Party, altho much stronger numerically, agreed to limit their delegation to the number sent by the Socialist Party.

In their desire to bring about a united front they made every concession asked for. Bausch promised to bring the matter up in the state committee of the Socialist Party and promised to use his influence to convince his comrades as to the necessity of a combined effort to fight dangerous bills from incoming laws, which would not only degrade foreign-born workers to a state of peons, but also would be extremely dangerous to other workers.

Comrade Blohm later received the following letter from Bausch:

Comrade: I did just as I pledged you I would, and advanced your proposal from the Workers Party. I presented it in detail and after considerable discussion the county committee decided to reject the proposal.

They decided that the only cooperative action that can be brought about is when these comrades once again join the ranks of the Socialist Party.

With best wishes and hopes for the future, I remain,
VALENTINE BAUSCH,
Executive Secretary.

Poor Socialist Party. Let us pity them. Numerically they have vanished to almost nothing. Their influence among the workers is down to zero. And yet they are arrogant.

Y. M. C. A. Is Labor Feeder to Alaska Cannery Sharks

By SYDNEY WARREN,
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 11.—The Y. M. C. A. is running true to form. Young men returning from the Alaskan fish canneries tell stories of how they were sent up there thru the Y's employment service in Seattle. One reports that in order to get a job in the canneries up north the applicant had to be first a member of the Y. M. C. A. and then preferably a university boy anxious for a vacation job. Before he was given a card for a job he was induced to part with $10 as the year's membership fee for the Y. The boys were sent up steerage. Food conditions in the cannery camps where the university boys were employed were fair but the big stakes promised did not materialize to the extent expected. Anyway the Y got its membership fee and the cannery bosses got cheap high-power labor, so who should kick.

Old cannery workers here declare that the Alaska cannery bosses have found it more profitable to employ university and high school boys for cannery work during the rush season because the boys can be speeded up, paid lower wages and there is practically no danger of any strikes for better conditions or pay. Moreover, the boys going north change each season and consequently there is little danger of any organization being formed among them.

Speaker Before Boss Painters Bemoans Women in Industry

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALBANY.—The increase of women in industry will break down the home and destroy the institution of marriage, according to E. C. Beck, of Boston, speaking before the International Association of Master House Painters and Decorators, in convention here.

"The employment of women," he said, "has three effects: It makes them economically independent of men so that they cease to be subject to their husbands. It makes it difficult for them to bring up their children themselves and it reduces the number of children. This is destroying the economic unit of the family and probably will be fatal eventually."

The speaker went on to say that, "It seems that men no longer exist to be happy, but worship the machine and make it more efficient."

Eat Uncooked Pork—Die.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, Feb. 11.—A strange malady, diagnosed by physicians as "trichinosis," has caused the death of one man and five others are in a dangerous condition.

The malady, physicians said, proves fatal in almost every instance. The victims, all Italians, contracted the malady thru eating uncooked pork at a supper at the home of the dead man.

THE POWER COLUMN

Marianna, Pa., Feb. 9, 1924.

THE DAILY WORKER,

Dear Comrades: I have been elected DAILY WORKER agent for Marianna, Pa. In the first week, I secured seven subscribers for THE DAILY WORKER, eight for The Young Worker, and one for Soviet Russia Pictorial.

Everybody likes THE DAILY WORKER and I mean to make this territory one of the most successful ones.

Everybody must read THE DAILY WORKER to help better the conditions of the working-class people. I would like to hear what other DAILY WORKER agents are doing and what they have to say.

Comradely yours,
Mrs. Mike Gergitch, Marianna, Pa.

South Chicago, Ill., Feb. 9, 1924.

THE DAILY WORKER,

Dear Comrades: Being unable to attend the first campaign meeting for the DAILY WORKER, I am sending in my suggestions for the coming campaign.

Every branch of the Workers Party should get enough sales books so that every one of its members will have one. Members of each branch should attend the meetings of their unions, fraternal and political organizations and solicit subscriptions. When unions or other labor organizations are giving dances and entertainments, party members should go there and approach the militant workers who are not subscribers. Send in bundle orders and take them with you.

Every member of the Workers Party should read THE DAILY WORKER. Members of the Federation branches should do likewise, if you can't read the English Daily, as good as American comrades, you will learn in the course of time. Don't buy the capitalist papers when going to or coming from work, take THE DAILY WORKER with you, you will find all you want to read in it, and all that's of good and interest to you and all of the working class.

Place THE DAILY WORKER on every news stand in your locality, if branch agent cannot get news agent to handle THE DAILY WORKER, every member of the branches should inquire for it daily until it is placed on the stand. Many young boys would be glad to make a little money after school and why not give them a chance, order in bundles daily, boys will sell them where workers are coming out from factories and mills, also from house to house.

Let's make the campaign successful.

Victor Sarich,
South Slavic Branch, South Chicago.

COMRADE LOEB: I have another suggestion for the Power Column, namely:—All city agents when obtaining a bundle order, from a newsdealer, should suggest to the dealer that he solicit monthly subscriptions from the people to whom he sells single copies. The city agents should point out to the news dealer that he can make as much profit on obtaining one regular subscription as he could by selling a large bundle by the copy for an entire week.

I know that the dealers will take subscriptions because I will allow them the regular news dealers' commission and I should think that there are a great many other news dealers thruout the country who would also find it profitable to follow the same procedure.

Workers on State-Owned Railways to Get Pensions

By JOHN ROBUR
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

MONTREAL, Feb. 11.—The provisions of the Grand Trunk pension fund have been temporarily extended to all employes of the Canadian National Railways, which comprise the government roads of Canada. A committee has been appointed by the management to supervise the grant of pension to employes on lines on which pensions do not now exist. This is a temporary measure to be kept in operation pending the establishment of a general pension fund for the entire Canadian National railway system.

The old Grand Trunk pension system was the subject of a big fight between the unions and the company some ten years or more ago. After a strike in 1910 a large number of employes were excluded from its benefits. The unions carried the fight into parliament, and after the Grand Trunk was taken over by the government, these G. T. R. employes had their pension rights restored to them by the present King cabinet.

Under the existing G. T. R. pension rules it is provided that any employes may be retired at the age of 65, or in some special circumstances earlier. Any employe after ten years' service, who is incapacitated by injuries in the company's service, is eligible for pension. The pension payable is based on length of service, being 1 per cent a year of service calculated on the basis of the highest average rate of pay during any ten consecutive years. The minimum pension payable for a full time employe is $200.

Bosses' Sheet Says Employers' Gold Cause of Some Labor Troubles

The Employers' News may have shed some light on the prevalence of shooting fatalities among certain labor unions in this city. Commenting on the recent outbreak in which several labor leaders were killed or wounded the February issue of the above paper says:

"These incidents are only additions to the many of like character that have punctuated the history of unionism in Chicago. Why do such things occur? Is it because the type of men who make up the rank and file of labor unions are criminally inclined? Is it because there is honor and glory in being the leader of the union? Is it because the salary consideration that goes with the presidency of any union is so great that it excites the murderous tendencies of rivals for that distinction? We think not. Unfortunately, there are other and monetary considerations inherent in these positions in most unions, that employers themselves have created. Remove these factors and there will be less violence in union elections." (Emphasis ours.)

It is as plain as the nose on one's face that what the employers' organ means is that it is the graft which the bosses grease the palms of purchasable labor leaders that attracts men of the type who use firearms to determine election results.

Countess In Alienation Suit.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—An alienation suit for $500,000 filed against Countess Margaret Thaw Carnegie de Perigny by Frank P. Walsh, prominent Kansas City and Denver attorney, on behalf of Mrs. Madeline Helen Modica, came to light here today, with application for an order requiring an immediate deposition by the countess, who is sailing for Europe Feb. 14.

Polish Federation of Workers Party Meets in Detroit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 11.—The Polish Federation of the Workers Party opened its convention here with delegates representing 31 branches in 18 cities. All the principal industrial centers and coal fields from the Atlantic coast to Illinois were represented.

A cable to the Communist International expressing sorrow on the death of Lenin and pledging the Federation to carry on his work was one of the first acts of the gathering. Greetings were extended from the Polish Farmers' and Peasants' Alliance to the Convention by I. Lensky, representing that organization in America. Report from the Central Executive of the Workers Party was delivered by Earl R. Browder. Greetings were extended by representatives of the Jewish, Russian and Ukrainian Federations and by the District Committee of District No. 7, Detroit.

The convention overwhelmingly approves of the policy of the Party on relations to the Polish paper, Glos Robotniczy, of Detroit, with which the Federation has had difficulties. The former editor of the paper, Comrade Gebert, was elected chairman of the convention. The convention is a unit in demanding that the Polish section of the Workers Party must have a party-controlled organ.

The convention is expected to last for two more days, and the convention agenda promises, in conjunction with the completely unified party behind its decisions, to make the Polish Federation one of the strongest in the Party before the end of 1924.

Relief Conference in Boston.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 11.—The Boston branch of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany will hold a second conference of labor unions, fraternal bodies and working class political organizations at 62 Chambers St., Sunday, Feb. 24th, at 2:30 P. M. The first meeting of the conference was a great success and it is hoped that this meeting will be able to push the work of collecting for German relief along in a big way.

LABOR COUNCIL'S TALK SHOWS NEED FOR LEFT WING

Vital Issues Ignored in Addresses

By CYRIL LAMBKIN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich.—The meeting of the Detroit Federation of Labor Wednesday night presented an excellent opportunity for appraising the fitness of the general organized labor movement in the present serious period. Communications from several labor bodies and addresses by a number of trade union officials indicated no new vision and showed the need for the left wing movement.

One of the communications read was from the Seattle Central Labor Council, which urged the Detroit Federation of Labor to petition the Government for the limitation of production of narcotics by agreement with other powers. In the face of the marked decline, both in numbers and in power, of the organized labor movement, and in the face of an impending industrial depression, one would have expected the Seattle Central Labor Council to call attention to the far greater dangers confronting the workers than the production of narcotics.

To Organize With Tips.

The President of the International Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union, in an address to the delegates, appealed to them, and thru them to the rest of the organized workers in Detroit, to help organize the food workers by promising tips to waiters and waitresses who join the union. A novel plan, indeed, but one demonstrating little conception of modern problems of organization. He further suggested a revised interpretation of the Volstead Act.

Eugene Brock, district representative of the International Association of Machinists, extolled Johnston's plan for converting the unions into agencies fur supplying willing slaves to the employers. His eulogy of the contract in force between his organization and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which provides for a minimum number of employment days and for sharing equally with the company whatever profit accrues as a result of the elimination of waste, failed to arouse the enthusiasm of the delegates, many of whom have had experiences with promises of employers and whose conception of the labor movement goes beyond a mere day's wage when there is work to be had.

Supporting a Republican.

The course which the leaders of the Detroit Federation intend to pursue in the fall elections as far as State officials are concerned was indicated in their request to approve a telegram sent by President Taylor to Herbert Baker, a leader in the farmer movement, who is seeking the nomination for Governor on the republican ticket, informing him that the Detroit Federation would support him in his quest. This telegram was sent to counteract a statement of the Big Four Railroad Brotherhoods of the state, which was unfavorable to Baker's support. Far be it from us to suspect the Big Four leaders of an intention to support a candidate on a Farmer-Labor ticket. Their intention is simply to support a regular machine republican.

The only note of political maturity was sounded by Delegate Mollenhauer of the Musicians Union in speaking on a motion to demand of the Land Committee of the Senate and of the Michigan senators, the continuation of the investigation of the Teapot Dome scandal until everything connected therewith was brought to light and the culprits punished. Mollenhauer called attention to the slackening efforts of the committee, and predicted that the investigation now threatening to unmask both the republican and democratic parties as the tools of the big capitalists, it will soon be cleverly relegated to the rear, and the thoughts of the people turned to the baseball contests.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TELLS OF GRAFT AND MILITARISM

Big Textile Concern Avoiding Taxes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 11.—A report to be published shortly on the agricultural and forestry resources of the state, by a commission under the leadership of the State Commissioner of Agriculture, will bring out the unjust exemption from taxation of certain interests, especially the Amoskeag Manufacturing Corporation, with the consequent additional burdens on the farmers. It will explain why 24 per cent of all farms were withdrawn from cultivation from 1910 to 1920, according to census figures.

The preservation of the military caste is evidenced by a get-together to be held this week by all the officers in Concord, of the regular army, national guard and officers' reserve, of whom there are fifty in the city. Down with Militarism! Long Live the Army! So cry the backbone of the American Legion and the Coo Coo Clucks.

H. L. Trumbull of the Bureau for the Promotion of State Police of New York City, was in New Hampshire to interest in his plans the Farm Bureau Federation, and the New Hampshire Manufacturing Association. It is not certain whether his efforts will be successful at this time, because of the extra tax burden on the farmers, alread victimized by the textile interests who dominate state politics. It is interesting to note that there is a special bureau in New York, propagandizing for the state police, who act as a strike breaking agency in every state where they exist.

The foolishness of our statesmanship is shown by the answer of Senator George H. Moses to the Financial Digest question on general business conditions: "Any opinion I might express in answer to your question would be of little value because I am not at all a business man." Such refreshing ignorance! But Gary and Morgan should not permit leading politicians to flaunt their ignorance, for if Moses isn't wise enough to know anything about business, how the devil can he legislate about business?

And if Moses knows nothing about business, why is he such a staunch upholder of the Mellon plan to reduce the taxation burden of the rich? So far the workers of New Hampshire have given little thought to these questions.

CONTINUED SWEEP OF VICTORY FOR OBREGON FORCES

Final Defeat of Fascisti in Mexico Is Seen

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11—Official advices today reported a continued sweep of victory for the Obregon forces in their campaign against the de La Huerta counter-revolutionists.

Puerto, Mexico has been evacuated by the Fascisti and federal troops are expected to arrive at Vera Cruz today, American consul Wood at Vera Cruz reported to the state department.

The victorious battle of Obregon forces with the Fascisti on the Jalisco front which began Saturday morning, lasting eleven hours "means the final defeat of the Jalisco enemy, who are now retreating towards Michoacan," the Mexican embassy said.

Morale of Dry Forces Hurt.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—A new organization to replace the Anti-Saloon League, whose morale it is believed, has been affected by the recent conviction and imprisonment of former State Superintendent William H. Anderson, is considered by many protestant clergymen here, according to Rev. Dr. F. S. Idleman, prominent in the cause of prohibition here.

Get unity thru the Labor Party!

United Front of Progressives Will Carry Northwest For New Party, Said Mahoney--Last Month

This Is the Case of Mahoney vs. Mahoney.

William Mahoney, chairman of the Workingmen's Political Non-Partisan League of Minnesota, who recently published a statement recommending that the Farmer-Labor Convention called for May 30th be postponed, in the January, 1924, issue of the "Labor Age," writes as follows, answering his own proposal:

"No New Party at First."

"The plan is not to organize a new party. It is to unify all progressives in a great campaign for joint candidates for President and Vice-President. If, after the close of the contest, conditions are favorable, it may be possible to form a united Farmer-Labor-Progressive Party. If this program can be put across, it will mean that all the Northwest states can be carried for the New Party.

"Some little difficulty will be encountered from those in the movement who still like to flirt with the old parties. Here in Minnesota a few of the old-time Democrats oppose a national party as it clashes with their allegiance. But these do not belong with us and will have to be laid aside. The movement calls for fundamental changes, and there is nothing in common between the purposes of the new movement and other dominant parties.

"The general sentiment is unanimously for Robert LaFollette for President. It is felt that he will accept the nomination if it is clear that there is unity and harmony. The representatives from all the Northwest border states, which have Farmer-Labor movements developed about the same as Minnesota, were and are solid for LaFollette.

"Some advance the argument that the convention should be held after the old party conventions. This proposition was rejected with vigor by the conferees as implying that there were no principles at stake and it was just a case of getting a sop. It is now argued by the opportunists in the movement that we should wait and see if a progressive is selected by the Democrats or the Republicans. If so, they declare, no other nominations should be made.

"The same argument was encountered in the development of our state movement. It was disregarded, and it is now felt that it should be ignored in the national situation. It is pretty well assured, however, that neither of the old capitalist parties will nominate a progressive. There will be just that much time saved in the campaign, if the convention is held in May."

IRISH RADICALS HOLD MEETING IN CLEVELAND

Organize Connolly Club Boost Daily Worker

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 11.—Albert F. Coyle, editor of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, and Thomas J. O'Flaherty, of the editorial staff of The DAILY WORKER, were the principal speakers at a meeting of Irish radicals held here Sunday.

At the close of the meeting a club was organized to carry the Communist message to the Irish workers in Cleveland, working in co-operation with the local section of the Workers Party of America.

T. J. O'Flaherty spoke on the life work of James Connolly and his influence on the labor movement in Ireland and the correctness of his tactics. In leading the Irish nationalists against the British government in 1916, he did not betray his communist principles, but was putting his Marxian knowledge to good advantage. Connolly was a man of action as well as a theorist. He was misunderstood at the time by the petrified dogmatists, who in parrot fashion quoted Marx page by page without understanding him, but could not link up the essense of Marxism—which is revolution—with the situation that confronted them in 1914 when the world war broke out.

Albert F. Coyle, spoke on the communal system in ancient Ireland and the contribution the Irish workers can make to humanity, once they are freed from political and economic slavery. He appealed strongly for the formation of a labor party and urged his audience to leave the parties of capitalism that are serving the money power and not the producers. Mr. Coyle was made a decided hit and was applauded at the conclusion of his speech.

The DAILY WORKER was sold at the meeting as well as several copies of James Connolly's Labor in Irish History and the The Irish People, the official organ of the Irish American Labor League.

There is a large Irish population in Cleveland, and the James Connolly Literary Society has set itself the task of bringing Connolly's message—the communist message—to those workers and making them a part of the revolutionary army of labor in the United States.

An "Ad" Is Always Welcome

The February issue of the Employers' News followed the example of the Journal of Commerce in giving the DAILY WORKER a little free publicity. It is welcome:

"The Daily Worker"

"On January 13th appeared the first issue of "The Daily Worker," which is published in this city by the Workers Party, the American branch of the Communist International. This publication consists of six full sized pages filled with labor news as interpreted by those seeking to establish a new social order. Any thinking man will find his time well spent in securing a copy of this paper, and in seriously reflecting upon its effect upon those readers who are not informed in relation to the underlying principles which form the basis of this nation's political and economic growth and prosperity."

Moreover, the fact that an applicant has dealt with former czarist officials will seriously injure his standing with the Russian government and prevent his return to Russia.

KEEP UP FIGHT FOR FREE SPEECH AT NEWARK, N. J.

Foster Will Make New Attempt to Speak

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Charging Director Brennan and Deputy Director O'Leary with "using their public office in Newark to play labor politics on behalf of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor," of which they are members. Dr. Harry F. Ward, chairman of the Civil Liberties Union, announced today that William Z. Foster would speak in Newark, Friday night, and that the fight for free speech in that city would be carried on "until that right can be assured without police censorship."

Foster, it was announced, would speak at eight o'clock under the auspices of the Civil Liberties Union and the Labor Defense Council at Broad and Market streets, where the Jan. 11th meeting was broken up.

William Z. Foster, on whose behalf the American Civil Liberties Union thru its Newark attorney, John Larkin Hughes, is suing Captain Ebert of the Newark police for false arrest, was denied a permit to hold another meeting either in a hall or on a street corner by the Board of Public Safety this morning.

Foster appeared in person to ask for the permit at the request of Deputy Commissioner of Public Safety O'Leary. In reply to a question by the Civil Liberties attorney, Mr. Hughes, as to whether the board would take any steps to interfere with a hall or street meeting, Deputy O'Leary said: "I refuse to answer."

A representative of the Civil Liberties Union present at the conference stated that the bulk of the brief conversation consisted of personal abuse of Foster by O'Leary without any reference to the specific request for a permit.

Foster stated after the conference that he did not wish to indulge in personal altercations but merely wished to obtain his rights as a citizen to free speech and peaceful assembly. In reply to a question by Deputy O'Leary as to the purpose of the meeting he wished to hold, Foster stated that its sole purpose was to raise money for the Labor Defense Council.

The suits for false arrest of Foster and Bishop Paul Jones, of the Episcopal church, in connection with the breaking up by the police of a meeting on Jan. 11, ask for $30,000 in each case. The Civil Liberties Union has announced its intention of fighting the issue of free speech thru to the highest court of the state if necessary.

Capitalist Solons Grease Chutes for Mellon Tax Bill

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—The Mellon tax reduction bill was ordered favorably reported to the house by the ways and means committee on a strict party vote. Formal report will be made Monday.

The bill contains Chairman Green's provision for a 25 per cent reduction on personal income taxes that are payable this year.

While the Democrats voted against the bill, they made no attempt to block the report.

Chairman Green and at least three Republicans voting to report the measure reserve the right to oppose the 25 per cent surtax maximum on the house floor.

Deportation of California Labor Captives Feared

(By The Federated Press)

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. — A new attempt to deport a criminal syndicalism prisoner is launched in the deportation proceedings brought against James Olson. Olson's term is nearing its end; he was one of the men sent up from Oakland early in the history of the criminal syndicalism law.

An attempt to deport Jack Gaveel, another criminal syndicalism victim, was unsuccessful. If the authorities succeed in securing federal deportation action against any of these men, a precedent will be established which will be used against every political prisoner of foreign birth.

Chicago Foreign-Born Workers Unite to Fight Davis' Laws to Thumbprint Them Like Convicts

Protests against the proposed laws for "selective immigration" and "registration of foreign-born workers" are growing in volume in Chicago. More workers are joining daily in voicing their opposition to these proposed vicious measures.

Under the leadership of the Workers Party units, several Lithuanian co-operative, political and fraternal organizations and trade unions composed of Lithuanian workers, have formed an alliance, including over 5,000 workers. This alliance is now actively engaging in the campaign for the protection of the foreign-born workers in America.

It has already published leaflets on the subject and the whole Lithuanian working class population is aroused to danger, even including those belonging to organizations of nationalistic tendencies. The Lithuanian nationalistic papers have definitely voiced their opposition to the proposed repression of the foreign-born workers. The scope of the alliance has become extended by inviting these nationalistic organizations to participate in the campaign, and a mass protest meeting is being planned for Feb. 24th.

Jews and Slaves Lead.

Under the leadership of our Party units the various South Slavic workers' organizations in Chicago, comprising several thousand members, are establishing a united front for the protection of foreign-born workers against the proposed finger print laws. A like movement is taking place amongst the Italian workers in Chicago.

The Jewish Workers Party branches in Chicago have taken the initiative to form a united front of all Jewish workers' organizations to participate in this campaign. The Jewish Daily Forward, fearing that such a united front should be accomplished, countered with a call for another conference, at which among other things one item way down on the agenda referred to the question of the foreign-born workers.

The Jewish workers, being interested in the establishment of a united front on questions of common concern to all of them, no matter who takes the initiative in the city. However, the Daily Forward crowd again showed that it did not want a united front. The steerers of the conference refused to seat the delegates from the left wing Workmens' Circle branches. This traitorous act resulted in the delegates from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Local No. 39, from the Cap Makers local and from the branches of the Left Poale Zion walking out and leaving the conference with the unseated delegates. Since then many of the Workmen's Circle branches which are considered right wing, have protested against the disruption tactics.

A provisional committee of Jewish workers' organizations, including the organizations whose delegates left the Daily Forward conference and the Workers Party branches, has now been formed. This committee has called a conference to prepare to arouse all the Jewish workers to active opposition to the proposed restriction laws.

Steel Workers Join Move.

That the proposed restriction laws against the foreign-born workers are an equal dangerous threat to the native-born American workers is keenly recognized by the local trade unions in the Lake County, Ind., steel region. Here an overwhelming proportion of the workers engaged in the dangerous racking toil of the steel mills, car shops and oil refineries are of foreign birth. Some of these local unions are alive to the fact that the further enslavement of any part of the workers engaged in these plants would be the best weapon in the hands of the bosses to beat down the standard of the workers generally.

The Machinists local union of Hammond, Ind., a few days ago took the initiative to swing into line in the united front campaign by electing a committee with full power to invite other unions and workers' organizations to participate in the campaign. Two carpenters' unions from two of the small cities and several fraternal organizations responded immediately, and joined in a preliminary committee, which is now calling a conference to form a united front for the protection of the foreign-born workers.

CHICAGO FORMING COUNCIL TO GUARD THE FOREIGN-BORN

Will Fight Davis' Registration Bills

Preliminary steps towards the formation of a Chicago Council for the Protection of the Foreign Born were taken at the conference of the Czecho-Slovakian Workers' Council yesterday, when the council decided to call upon the entire labor movement of the city to send delegates from every local union to come together with representatives of the Czecho-Slovakian workers for the purpose of forming the protective organization.

Danger threatening the foreign born from the Davis bills for selective immigration on a contract basis and for the registering, photographing and finger-printing of the foreign born are forcing unity in self defense, the members of the council declared in the discussions that preceded the resolution for a big delegate conference.

Czecho-Slovaks Issue Call.

The Czecho-Slovakian Workers' Council is composed of six local trade unions, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, several local educational societies, athletic clubs and the branches of the Czecho-Slovakian Federation (Workers Party).

It has always taken an advanced militant position in the struggles of the workers. By this last action it has also gone on record to take a militant lead in this vital issue, which as clearly pointed out at the yesterday's conference, concerns the native born workers to exactly the same degree as the foreign born workers. The resolution adopted follows:

WHEREAS, proposals are now pending before Congress to enact two laws, one providing for selective immigration on a contract basis, and the other providing for the registering, photographing and finger printing of foreign-born workers, like criminals, and

Both of these proposed laws represent a serious danger to the American foreign-born workers and the native born workers as well, because of the fact that selective immigration of workers to be brought here under contract to work for certain industries is intended only for the purpose of forcing such workers to be strikebreakers when needed. And also because of the fact that the registration and finger printing of foreign-born workers are intended to enslave these workers in an effort to hammer down the standard of living of both native and foreign-born workers, and

In an effort to defeat both these proposed measures so detrimental to the working class it is necessary to engage in an active campaign to arouse all workers, both native and foreign-born to a mass protest against their adoption, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we the Checho-Slovak Workers Council go on record to further the campaign of opposition to the proposed laws already initiated by various labor organizations, and that we invite all local trade unions, labor political parties and workers organizations to send delegates to a conference to be held not later than March 2nd at a place to be designated, for the purpose of forming a joint council for the protection of foreign-born workers, and to enter an active campaign to defeat these proposed measures.

Call Out 7,500 Men to Battle Snowstorm in New York City

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Thousands of New York and suburban dwellers are suffering from backaches today, a reminder that the heaviest show fall of the season blanketed this section Sunday to a depth of 2.7 inches.

Accompanied by a high wind which at times gave the storm some of the aspects of a mild blizzard, the fall brought out 7,500 men of the city's street cleaning forces, 400 plows and several hundred carts for the first time this winter. The entire downtown section of the city was swept clean by midnight.

Haven't Forgotten About Repeal of Esch-Cummins Law

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Repeal or drastic amendment of the Esch-Cummins transportation act has not been forgotten, Chairman Smith of the Senate interstate commerce committee tells The Federated Press.

Smith feels that the subject is one of "overtowering importance", and must be studied with extreme care, and at great length, before any action is taken. However, he hopes to be able to announce hearings on the matter before the end of this month.

De La Huerta Is Blamed.

MEXICO CITY.—The murder of Felipe Carrillo, Socialist governor of the state of Yucatan, is openly laid at the door of de la Huerta, in a manifesto by the Mexican Labor party. The manifesto is signed by Luis N. Morones and Juan Rico. The Labor party calls upon the Mexican workers to bring the criminals to justice.

Public Slow to Respond.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Finding the public slow in responding to appeals for funds to finance the American Expedition to the Paris Olympic Games, the American committee may ask Congress for an appropriation.

CAME TO SCOFF, BUT REMAINED TO GET EDUCATION

Little New England Town Is Waking Up

By WILLIAM SIMONS.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LANESVILLE, Mass., Feb. 11.—Many speakers from the Workers Party had been in Lanesville, had had their say, but still the town slept on, except for the Finnish comrades of the Workers Party. But this day the whole town was in a whirl. Signs were put up, announcing that Max Salzman, National Organizer for the Young Workers League, would speak on "Youth in Industry"; and, horror of horrors, "Children, come and hear of the lies that your teachers tell you."

Shades of our revolutionary fathers! Their memory must be revered. And so they gathered, these town folk, near the cart of the voluntary firemen, near the Finnish Hall—and like true patriots, they vowed to stop the meeting. They appealed to the police, who tore down the few typewritten posters, and who flocked to the meeting, five weak, with the people following them, as tho they were followers of the Pied Piper of Hamlin.

Lanesville is a granite town, where a year ago, practically all the crafts in that line struck and stuck together to resist a wage cut, the Finnish workers giving a splendid example of solidarity, even as the West Concord, N. H., Finnish workers did in their quarry strike. But the unions are generally weak, and are permeated with the idea of class collaboration, especially the leadership which is native to Lanesville. At present there is universal unemployment, and the men have had to leave for the woods in search of a job.

Like all provincial towns, Lanesville, or rather the 100 percenters pride themselves on their patriotism, and the fact that neither they nor their ancestors had the daring to leave for more thriving parts. A recent candidate for mayor, who showed some sympathy for the workers during the last strike, when he was mayor, appealed to them for their support, extolling the natural beauty of their city, which compared favorably, he said, with the middle west, which he had traversed by auto. He dragged in his ancestors who had been born, had lived and died near Cape Ann, evidently a glorious accomplishment. And into this blissfully dead spot, there fell the ad depicting the schools of democracy as factories of fabrications, like a match in an oil vat.

The cops were there, together with an official stenographer. And the town was there, in greater numbers than ever before to a radical meeting. For an hour they listened to an analysis of capitalist society, and the reason for unemployment; to the role of the youth in industry, and especially child labor in the state of Massachusetts. The meeting was a great success.

Chicago Employers' Association Out in Defense of Finks

A movement has been initiated by Chicago aldermen to compel detective agencies having offices in this city to file with the City Clerk duplicate records concerning their employes. This would destroy the secret character of the work of the dick agencies in the opinion of the Employer's News, the official organ of the Employers' Association of Chicago and render the detection "of those trying to destroy the existing order more difficult." Perhaps, but it would also aid in solving 99 per cent of the unsolved burglaries that have made life in this city the most insecure in the U. S. if not in the world.

Poincare Rests After Big Excitement in Chamber of Deputies

PARIS, Feb. 11.—Premier Poincare is slightly indisposed, his secretary announced today, and remained at home yesterday and this morning.

"M. Poincare's indisposition is not serious," his secretary said. "He is only tired after the severe strain he was under during the recent debate in the Chamber."

Mussolini in Herrin

Stripped of its designedly theatrical character the recent outrages on the civil liberties of the citizens and residents of Williamson county appear to be nothing else than a brazen conspiracy entered into by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, the Ku Klux Klan and the prohibition enforcement authorities to terrorize the union miners and their sympathizers in Herrin and the surrounding country, break up the United Mine Workers in that territory and establish an armed dictatorship over the workers of that vicinity.

Swashbuckler Young quite evidently has the assurance of powerful backing for any crimes against persons and property that he may commit. We are somewhat familiar with this type of individual and it has been our experience that they do not go into action unless they have about one thousand per cent the best of it. Machine-guns cost money and Young seems to have about as many of these as the average gunman has automatics.

Homes of miners have been invaded without warrant or any pretense of due process of law simply on the pretext that they had liquor of one kind or another on their premises; it is significant that the names of the victims have a foreign sound and that they are members of the United Mine Workers of America.

The reactionary interests of Illinois have never forgiven the citizens of Williamson county because they refused to hang wholesale the workers who took part in the battle at the Lester strip mine in which the scabs and gunmen got the worst of it. An enormous sum was raised by the Illinois chamber of commerce for the prosecution of the miners and it is extremely probable that what remains of the fund is now financing Glenn Young and his 100 per cent American cohorts in their assaults on the lives and liberties of the workers of Williamson county.

The sympathetic statements concerning the activities of Young and his Klan forces emanating from prohibition enforcement headquarters in Washington, D. C., lend color to the belief that this governmental agency with its new appropriation of $50,000,000 is the latest recruit to the anti-labor legal instruments that the United States government has placed at the disposal of the employers. With its thousands of operatives responsible to no one, apparently able to escape the consequences of their illegal acts because of assumption that they are enforcing the law of the land, the prohibition enforcement branch of the federal government becomes a valuable ally to the department of justice and other anti-labor agencies.

Why Williamson county should be selected for a law-enforcing campaign when in Chicago there is an almost virgin field for this form of activity can be explained only by the theory that enforcement of the prohibition law is merely the legal veil for an orgy of terrorism directed against the miners.

From the news dispatches it seems quite clear that the national guard units now in Williamson county are co-operating with the Klan forces and that a considerable number of them are acting as a bodyguard for Young, who has taken over the Herrin city hall, sits at a desk, on which a machine-gun is mounted, and issues orders to his underlings. The Klan password, according to the dispatches, is just as effective in getting thru the military cordons as is the military countersign.

All of which indicates that the employers of this country are organizing here and there skeleton detachments, military and semi-military forces, that can be linked up with government agencies for purposes of suppression.

The Herrin episode has all of the braggadocio and opera bouffe characteristics that were to be remarked in the early exploits of the fascist movement in Italy. It combines all the motives of puritanical morality, revenge for the shattered prestige of employers and hatred of organized workers, native and foreign-born, that distinguishes fascism the world over.

Hired mercenaries, aided by the ignorant and servile element of the population in an offensive against workers in strikes, is no new phenomenon in the United States.

An open declaration of war against the workers of an entire community during a period of industrial peace, so far as we know, is without precedent in the United States and can be taken only as an indication of the ruthless character of the new tactics, which the rulers of this country are preparing to adopt in the war on labor.

There will be many Herrins in America unless American labor awakens to its danger before the movement gains impetus.

LaFollette's Game

Senator Robert M. LaFollette is playing a double game and a dangerous one—as all double games are.

He is gambling for the republican nomination while whispering words of sympathy to workers and farmers, who want him to break clean with his party of reaction and head a national Farmer-Labor party.

In Illinois such notorious labor fakers as John H. Walker are endeavoring to organize a movement to place him on the ticket in the presidential primary, and the son of the senator, Philip LaFollette, is to speak at the meeting where the project will be broached as proof that the scheme has Senator LaFollette's endorsement.

That LaFollette has not done his best to tear the last rags of respectability from the quivering form of the republican party is shown by his surrender of the leadership in the Teapot Dome expose to Senator Walsh, a reactionary democrat, after LaFollette had started the investigation; he has taken no prominent part in the proceedings, but has profited from the exposure of his rivals in both parties.

If LaFollette does not intend to attempt to salvage the wreckage of the republican party by driving for the presidency as its candidate, why has he not taken the greatest opportunity ever presented to a man in public life and with the proof of the bi-partisan corruption of American capitalist government at hand in the oil graft exposures, called upon the masses to desert the stinking carcasses of elephant and donkey?

The explanation is to be found, we believe, in the self-evident fact that LaFollette wants to be president and is more than willing to sabotage the mass movement of the workers and farmers for political independence to satisfy his personal ambitions. He would much prefer to be a republican president, owing a certain amount of allegiance to the respectable middle-class elements in the republican party and a certain amount to the capitalists of America than to be elected president by a Farmer-Labor party, warring upon all the privileged elements in American economic and political life.

LaFollette is no leader of the masses. He is a middle-class politician with all the weaknesses and vacillation of his class and in our opinion is the ideal type for the reactionaries to use in overcoming the discredit brought upon the republican party by their kept politicians.

LaFollette in the presidential chair as the spokesman of a political party of workers and farmers might give the working masses an opportunity to organize their forces for a stronger assault of American capitalism.

LaFollette elected to the presidency on the republican ticket would be another Wilson—or worse. His fighting qualities—considerably overestimated, in our opinion—would be used in behalf of the employers and not of the workers and farmers.

Senator LaFollette would do well to consider another aspect of the situation that arises from the interest in which the workers and farmers are watching his maneuvers. He may not get the republican nomination after all and he may have some difficulty then in convincing the militant farmers and workers of his desirability as their candidate on a Farmer-Labor ticket.

It is quite possible that Senator LaFollette is making the mistake so often made by those who profess great concern over the wrongs of the masses, but who are careful never to attack these evils at their root—the mistake of believing that the masses can be fooled forever by phrases, when they want action.

Poor Mr. Mellon!

That stalwart guardian of our national treasury, Mr. Andrew Mellon, of Pittsburgh, has let out a wail unto the heavens against the attempt of the democrats and insurgent republicans to inject politics into the tax question.

If ever the old adage, that "People who live in glass houses should not throw stones," was true, it is infinitely truer in this instance. Mr. Mellon has all too often used his office to help politically and financially the powerful manufacturing and banking interests supporting his party. Besides, Mr. Mellon has, with increasing frequency, more than made up for the sacrifice he incurred when he took this "poor man's" job in Washington by his sundry rulings on tax payments and amortization in the cases of the Gulf Oil Corporation, the Standard Steel Car Company, and the Aluminum Trust. Mr. Mellon is personally and directly interested in these three gigantic concerns.

But the most timely blow yet struck at Mellon's hypocritical cry for non-partisanship in the tax question is that delivered by the report of the Bureau of Internal revenue for 1921. This report shows that one person in Pennsylvania made a return of net income of between two and three million dollars. Another return of net income of between one and one and one and a half million dollars was filed in Pennsylvania. The wealthier of these persons was undoubtedly Mr. Mellon who had a net income of $2,223,058.00. On a net income of two million dollars, Mr. Mellon would be saving under his "non-partisan tax scheme" approximately $503,406.00.

When these figures are compared with the fact that in 1921 there were 47,646 persons in Pennsylvania who made returns on incomes between three and four thousand dollars the glaring hypocrisy of Mr. Mellon comes into painful clarity. As a matter of fact, Mr. Mellon alone would save more under his plan than all these small tax-payers put together.

Workers Party in Action at Coal Miners' Convention

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

THE coal miners' convention, held in Indianapolis, Ind., which ended in a near riot, brought out more clearly the new turn which the American labor movement has been slowly taking, swinging it more consciously into the world labor movement, than any previous convention.

To the casual observer, and the chronic pessimist, the surface indications were that John L. Lewis retained his control over the organization, by the will of the majority, in spite of the Communist faction and the progressive delegates in the convention.

The convention can be summarized as follows:

(1). Convention opens with John L. Lewis seemingly in complete control.

(2). In spite of the terrific red baiting, the Communist faction is recognized by the progressive element as the leaders of the opposition.

(3) Majority of delegates in open revolt against the administration.

(4). The progressives determined to reconsider all progressive measures that had been railroaded thru in early days of the convention.

(5). Lewis loses his control completely, ending the convention, without finishing the work of the convention and without the consent of the delegates.

(6). A post-convention meeting, with 1,187 delegates participating, decides to call a special convention for the purpose of impeaching the Lewis administration, to give Howat a fair hearing and for the reconsideration of the political and trade union measures that Lewis railroaded.

This, however, does not give a real living picture of the convention. To get the proper focus, one must know the conditions under which the battle was fought, the arena where it was fought as well as the combatants, the principles involved, the future potentialities and the actual results of the convention.

Power of Machine.

The Lewis machine is without doubt the most powerful reactionary combination in the world trade union movement. They have an annual income of a million dollars with which to perpetuate their power. Lewis' constitutional authority over the membership is greater than any ruling monarch in the world.

Even the names and addresses of local union secretaries are known only to the administration. When the A. F. of L. wishes to circularize the miners' unions, it is done by the Lewis machine—they trust nobody.

The appointive power of Lewis puts the convention from an organizational point of view completely under his control. All officer's reports are printed and in such a way as to purposely confuse the delegates, and are only given to them during the report.

The resolutions, of which there were 728, are thrown together in book form, with no index and are numbered. Related resolutions are purposely scattered and are only referred to in the report and by the committee by their number. Substitutes covering numerous resolutions are carefully prepared by the Lewis hand picked committee, worded to confuse the delegates and camouflage the issue.

Machine Preparations.

With machine delegates ready to make the proper motion, speakers galore prepare to talk on the reports as instructed, tellers who count "one for you and two for me," with a payroll vote of around five hundred who vote for the machine on every question, Lewis, the most unscrupulous labor official in the American labor movement, in the chair. Tomlinson Hall, a huge auditorium, with a special sounding apparatus, specially tuned so that the officials on the stage are clearly heard, while the voice of the delegate in the body of the hall sounds like a whisper, with a huge gathering of 1,800 delegates, that is more like a mass meeting than a convention, the militants had some work cut out for them.

Arrayed against this formidable army were forty-five Communists and about 120 progressives, very few of them having had previous convention experience, with only a corporal's guard that could be termed capable floormen. This determined little group, fighting with their backs to the wall, under the leadership of the Comunists, finally broke thru this seemingly impregnable fortress, won the majority of the delegates, forcing Lewis, in order to temporarily save the situation, to prematurely end the convention in confusion at a time when hundreds of delegates were demanding the floor.

Issue Always Clear.

It was a remarkable achievement, and will go down in labor history as the first really intelligent attempt to wrest the leadership from the reactionaries. The issue at all times was clear, no matter what the question was, the reds were on trial.

In the Lewis report it was Soviet Russia and Communism that were on trial. Amalgamation, the appointive power, the labor party, Nova Scotia, constitutional changes, no matter what it was the vote occurred on the question: Are you with the reds or are you with the yellows?

For a time the Lewis-Green combination psychologized the delegates with one of the most terrific barrages of anti-red ammunition ever laid down in a labor convention, but this dogged few who never accepted defeat, who waged their fight with a Communist understanding and with a perseverance that was admirable, finally convinced the majority of the delegates, that the Communists and progressives were the only ones who had a constructive program and the courage to fight for it.

Communists Without Rivals.

One thing that became very noticeable as the convention went on, was how the ever-growing anti-administration forces, from the pure and simple trade unionists who wanted an honest administration to the party sympathizers, looked to the Communists for leadership. There was no competition in that field; the socialists had completely disappeared.

The value to our party of the work at the miners' convention can only be measured by the way in which we take advantage of it; our program has gone into every district of the miners' union, the Workers Party is now a recognized factor in the political as well as the everyday struggles of the miners, we must be alert enough to capitalize this situation by organizational measures.

Out of this convention has come a powerful left wing movement, some hundreds of delegates actually giving their names and addresses so that they can organize their forces against the reactionaries. These hundreds of leaders, in their local unions, will carry the fight back to the membership. They are determined to first get rid of Lewis. To do so they are going to call a special convention to impeach the administration. Lewis is not resting easily since the convention.

The Result.

All in all, the results of our activity were splendid; Lewis' machine is badly damaged, his throne is undermined, a strong left wing movement has been organized, with the Workers Party political leadership as a recognized fact. We cannot rest on our laurels, however. The militant forces in the miners' union must be thoroly solidified.

The sting of defeat of Indianapolis must be wiped out, and that can only be done by the impeachment of the Lewis administration, their removal from office and the election of a leadership that has a fundamental understanding of the class struggle and will fight on that basis.

This is the immediate objective and it will be reached.

North Dakota

The Convention of the Non-Partisan League of North Dakota that has just closed with the organization of a state Farmer-Labor party, arising out of the bankruptcy of the republican politicians in the League, is an historic event of paramount importance to the working masses of this country.

North Dakota has for many years been the pivotal, keystone state in guaging the political temper and conduct of the agricultural masses of the Northwest. It was North Dakota that first gave us the revolt against the grain gamblers and the Supreme Court's high-handed decision supporting these plunderers of the farmers. The Non-Partisan League of North Dakota was the banner organization as well as the first of its kind.

The most important points brought home by what happened at this gathering are the following: First of all, the convention threw the last spadeful of earth on the false report spread by the administration press that Coolidge was gaining in popularity in the Northwest. Except from the professional political job seekers, and those who either had been or were still seeking to be baptized in the unholy waters of the Potomac, Coolidge met with no favor and received no support at this convention.

The organization of a state Farmer-Labor Party by forty delegates representing at least 20 of the most densely populated counties of the State is particularly significant because this act can only be interpreted as a challenge to LaFollette. The farmers have made up their minds that LaFollette must either break with the republican party and bid it good-bye forever or else drop all his pretenses of being the leader of the attack against the Old Guard corruptionists and reactionaries. The organization of a state Farmer-Labor Party in North Dakota is a warning to LaFollette that the farming masses of the Northwest are not going to wait for him and again be left in the rut and slough of economic bankruptcy and political impotency. LaFollette must get out or he is thru.

Above all, this convention shows the urgency of cementing the solidarity between the dispossessed rural masses and the exploited city workers. It is the workingmen massed in the big industries of the big cities that have had the most experience in the struggle against the overlords of our economic life. The experience of these city workers is essential to a successful fight against the common enemy of the farmers and the industrial masses.

The unity between the workers of Pittsburgh, Chicago, and New York and the farmers of Minnesota, North Dakota, and Nebraska is drawing nearer.. The recent events in North Dakota will go a long way towards securing this unity and the victory of the workers and farmers in their struggle to establish a workers' and farmers' government in the United States.

Cal's Campaign Managers

The administration has let loose a flood of words appealing to the Democrats and insurgent Republicans not to make a partisan issue out of the Teapot Dome scandal. Naturally, Coolidge, being at the head of the government, has been the most eloquent pleader for non-partisanship and disinterestedness in the grave disaster that has befallen his party thru Fall being caught red-handed.

How empty all these stressed words of the President are is known to almost everybody. But the death blow to these Puritanic confessions of "Silent Cal" is struck by the present political situation in California where Coolidge is in a desperate fight to win the State from Hiram Johnson. Two of the President's five campaign managers are oil men in California. One of these managers, Mark L. Requa, was once vice president of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation of which Harry F. Sinclair was at the same time president. Another Coolidge angel in California is Ralph Arnold, a geologist and engineer who was in the employ of Trinidad Lake Petroleum Company.

These oil experts were chosen as campaign managers by William Butler, the Boston millionaire adviser of Coolidge, in a special message on the occasion of the choice of this committee. Mr. Stearns declared: "I heartily approve the names suggested."

This California situation gives the lie to the noise being made by Coolidge and his clique that they intend to prosecute the oil thieves. When the President appointed Attalee Pomerene, who, after being decisively repudiated in the Ohio Senatorial elections, was awarded the lucrative job of being counsel for fifteen railroad corporations whom he served in the Senate by helping to put over the Esch-Cummins Railroad Act, he showed his ugly hand in the whole oil steal. When Coolidge appointed oil men, particularly a Sinclair oil official, to run his campaign in so important a State as California, he drove the last nail into the lid of the coffin in which all his innocent pleas for political disinterestedness now lie dead.

New York Rent Relief

In view of the New York State Assembly's voting to extend the present emergency rent laws to 1926, the workers of the metropolis may consider government action in the housing crisis closed.

The extension of the emergency rent laws enacted in 1920 for two years will be hailed by many liberals as the cure-all for the deplorable housing conditions of the working masses. Nothing of the kind is true. At best the emergency rent laws only limit the speed with which the landlords are permitted to boost the rents skyward.

The rent laws haven't helped an iota to save the workers from oppressive rents. These laws have not been of the slightest service in improving the sanitary conditions, the dreadful congestion, and the general filthy, delapidated state of affairs in the working class districts.

The report of the New York State Commission on Housing and Regional Planning is in itself a monument to the failure of these emergency laws to relieve the acuteness of the crisis. The report states very definitely that since 1920 the housing conditions have become steadily more miserable, bordering on disaster.

The only reason for the Legislature's quick action in adopting unanimously the bill to extend the emergency rent laws two years is the desire of the government to circumscribe the landlord's policy of rule and ruin in such a way as merely to avoid a social explosion on the part of the suffering tenants against the disgraceful living conditions.

These laws were not re-enacted to help the tenants. They don't strike at the huge profits of the landlord class. These laws don't even pretend to check the persistent vicious malpractice of the landlords in refusing repairs and in forcing calamitous unsanitary conditions on the houses occupied by the workers.

These laws will not help the workers because they deliberately do not strike at the root of the housing evil—the control of this most vital necessity of the working masses—their homes—by the capitalist class for private profits.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

A gentleman by the names of Weil who became known to fame and penitentiaries thru his ability to accumulate money outside the sacred circles of capitalist legality, was pardoned last year by Governor Small. Mr. Weil is also known in his favorite haunts as the "Yellow Kid."

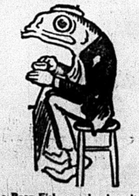
On his release he acted very much like a reformed Socialist. He mourned over his life of sin and promised to walk the straight and narrow path in the future, conform to the rules of capitalist society and serve as a beacon light to guide other sinners along the righteous road.

A real estate shark, probably hoping that the "yellow kid's" experience in the gentle art of separating gullible citizens from their cash, would place his experience and his conversion at his disposal employed him as a salesman. Mr. Weil, with a keen eye to the advertising value of a Bible took the Lord's book with him and returned to Joliet to give his late associates a word of cheer and encouragement. The capitalist press wrote long and solemn editorials on the curative power of prayer and the business value of clergymen.

But it seems that it is almost as hard to reform a confirmed capitalist as a confirmed drunkard. Mr. Weil found no romance in selling house lots. About this time Coolidge's cabinet was turning over the oil supply of the U. S. to their friends for satchels—not empty ones. Oil therefore intrigued the "Yellow Kid."

He is again in the toils of the law, for committing the crime of robbing the robbers. There is a legal way to do most anything. Even murder can be committed with impunity under sanction of government. Robbing can also be committed legally. The capitalist system itself is legalized robbery. The "Yellow Kid," however, went outside the sacred circle and fleeced a millionaire. He committed an unforgivable crime, and the penitentiary is yawning for him. Mr. Weil may soon have the pleasure of listening to some preacher advising him to reform.

The United Mine Workers Journal is not blessed with a sense of humor else it would expire with laughter at the cartoon that appears on the cover of the current issue. An automobile loaded with coal operators and a coal truck filled with miners are on the way to Jacksonville, Fla. The vehicles with their human freight approach the point where the two roads converge. Jacksonville can be seen in the distance. Both groups hail each other. But the amusing part is that the vehicle in which the miners are approaching the scene of the conference is drawn by a jackass.



The Poor Fish says he doesn't approve of violating the constitution but that he believes the foreigners in Herrin ought to be shown an example of Americanism.

CPPA HANGS ON TAILS OF BOSS PARTIES

Hold Cleveland Meet After Dems, and G. O. P.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 12.—A convention of political parties and the railway unions will be held in Cleveland on July 4, "to discuss the merits of the presidential nominees" as a result of the decision of the Conference for Progressive Political Action here today. The call is to include farmer-labor, socialist and affiliated parties.

The motion to adopt the resolution providing for the conference after the democratic and republican conventions was seconded by Morris Hillquit. Attempts to have the call read that the purpose of the proposed conference was to "select a candidate" failed after a bitter fight.

The real fight of the conference came this morning when the organization committee brought in its report providing for a convention on July fourth in Cleveland "to take action of nominating candidates for president and vice president and such other questions as may come before the convention."

For two hours the advocates of the May thirtieth convention and Farmer-Labor Party battled to amend the report to put the conference on record for independent political action and an earlier convention.

The report was so drawn as to leave open the question whether the Cleveland convention would nominate its own presidential ticket or endorse one of the old party tickets. When the question was raised as to which it meant, Chairman Johnston ruled: "It is broad enough for us to either endorse or to nominate."

Morris Hillquit followed with a speech in which he said: "This call does not commit us to any course of action. You may say at Cleveland we will not have anything to do with the old party candidates, or you may say endorse the candidates of one of the old parties."

These statements showing that the conference was to once more straddle the big question which has aroused the workers and farmers of this country stirred the fighting spirit of the delegates who want a Farmer-Labor Party.

Delegate Sullivan was on the floor with the following resolution putting the conference on record for the May thirtieth convention:

Whereas, all the actions of the government during recent years have shown that under the Republican and Democratic administration alike the existing government is the agency of Wall Street and the specially privileged class, using its power to aid in the exploitation of the farmers and industrial workers by his privileged class, and,

Whereas, the exposures in connection with the Teapot Dome naval reserve oil leases have again proven that both the Republican and Democratic parties are but tools of the privileged interests for the looting of the nation, and these exposures have involved men of both parties including so-called "good men" and "bad men," thus proving the utter hopelessness of the workers and farmers achieving anything for themselves by voting for candidates on the old party tickets, and

Whereas, the only means thru which the exploited farmers and industrial workers can secure relief from the evil conditions which

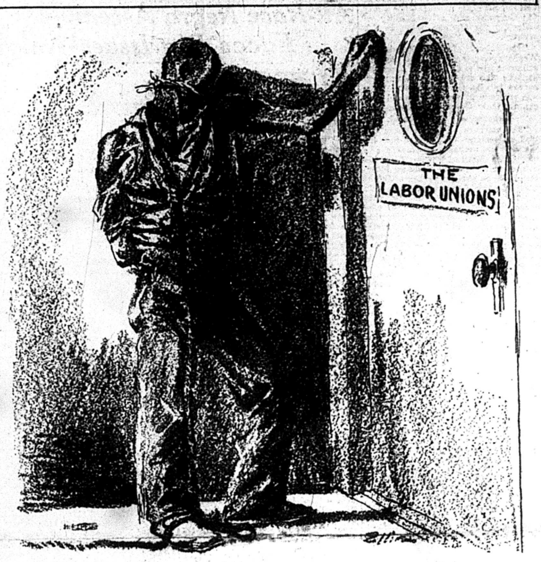
A BROTHER IN DISTRESS



The Common Enemy of the Negro and White Workers is Capitalism.

Negroes at All-Race Congress Are Called to Join Foreign Born in Resisting Common Enemy, the Klan

The great Negro All-Race Assembly, or Sanhedrin, meeting in the Wabash avenue Y. M. C. A., 38th street and Wabash avenue, faces its supreme test, tomorrow or Friday, by which it will be judged by the workingclass of the Negro and white races.

The Sanhedrin's test will come when the resolutions for aggressive action against lynching, disfranchisement, peonage, segregation and Jim Crowism come on the floor at the hall of the labor representation at the congress.

K. K. K. Common Enemy.

The Negroes will be called upon in ringing resolutions proposed by the Negro delegates from the Workers Party to unite with foreign-born workers against their common enemy, the Ku Klux Klan, which is hunting, torturing and burning the workers in the industries in this country, whether they are Negroes or men born in other countries.

Alliance with labor organizations regardless of color is proposed in the resolution against lynching. Local councils composed of representatives of union labor and members of the persecuted race would be formed for taking action to end the evil which is disgracing America.

Negroes and Labor Party.

Organized labor and the Negro race would further be united thru the proposal submitted by the Workers Party for the Sanhedrin to send delegates to any national convention that may be held for the formation of a Farmer-Labor party.

Refusal of the Democratic and Republican parties to enforce the 14th and 15th amendments and protect the Negro in the rights guaranteed to him after the Civil War, call for the formation of a Third Party of Labor, that will enforce these pro-

Farrell Raid on W. P. May Start Klan Bank Run

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FARRELL, Pa., Feb. 12.—Police here raided the hall of the Workers Party branch and confiscated $176 worth of literature, $1.50 in cash and a box of cigars.

While the hall was vacant the police invaded it and after reading a search warrant to unknown parties confiscated the property in the name of the law.

No one has been arrested as yet but the local law and order league has called in department of justice agent Lennon from Pittsburgh; he claims to have the revolution well in hand and has promised to deport the workers whose names were turned over to him by the police.

Local representatives of the Civil Liberties Union are on the job and a fight will be made for the return of the confiscated property.

This town is like all other steel towns in this section. It is klan-ridden and all officials were backed for election by the klan.

The burgess is also the town banker and a campaign is now starting for the withdrawal of workers' funds from his bank for deposit in banks advertising in The DAILY WORKER.

Relief for the Farmers at Last; Call Conference on Nuts and Bolts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—Relief for the farmer at last!

While legislators wrangle over farm panaceas, the Department of Commerce has taken definite action.

It has called a conference here on February 19 to discuss standardization of nuts and bolts used on farm implements and machinery.

"To help the farmer," it says.

JOHN L. LEWIS' SPEECH PLEASES MINE OWNERS

Big Operators Said to Favor Lewis' Plan

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 12.—A subcommittee of the joint wage scale committee was appointed today by operators and miners to consider a tentative offer of a one to three year working agreement at the present scale for the central competitive field.

The commitee will consist of John L. Lewis and William Green for the miners; Phil H. Penna and Michael Gallagher for the operators.

Lewis stated that he would not compromise in the demand for a four-year agreement, claiming that the coming election was a point in his favor.

Mr. Lewis' speech on the opening of the conference in presenting the miners' terms to the oprators was highly praised by the coal barons. They said it was a masterpiece of diplomacy and conciliation and the most rabid anti-union operator could not but be impressed with the desire of the mine union chief to avoid a conflict with the bosses.

Whether the rank and file of the miners like it so well is another question. The operators are aware that Lewis' hold on the union is precarious and one of his strongest arguments here in making his deal is that unless the bosses agree to a settlement that will enable him to go before the members of the union and boast of getting a good bargain that they will have to deal with radicals.

Strike of 10,000 Anthracite Miners Is Set for Monday

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 12.—An ultimatum was delivered to officials of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company today that unless they adjusted all existing grievances by Monday night, all of the 10,000 miners at their colleries would strike.

The strike order was decided on at a meeting of the union general grievance committee here last night.

CREEL ADMITS APPROACHING 'THE EXPERTS'

Admits He Helped Put Over Blackmail Plot

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—George Creel, head of the government publicity during the war, told the committee at the afternoon session that he approached naval experts to induce them to advocate leasing of the oil reserves.

Creel said he was employed by J. Leo Stack, of Denver, who was associated with F. G. Bonfils of the Denver Post in dealings with Harry Sinclair regarding Teapot Dome.

The Virtuous Creel.

Creel said he did not know Doheny was behind the effort to have the reserve lease.

He said he met Doheny one day in a Washington hotel.

"When he told me I was working for him I immediately resigned," said Creel.

Creel told the committee his testimony was in reply to the statement that he had hired Creel because of the latter's influence with the Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

"There was never any question of influence," Creel declared. "As a matter of fact I don't believe I had any.

"I knew then that I had just as much a chance to change Daniels as a Missouri mule. I thought my friendship for Secretary Daniels would be a hindrance rather than a help."

Consider Appointees.

Creel testified he received $5,000 from Stack for his part in the matter. He said the reason he quit was not because he thought there was anything crooked about the deal but because he didn't like Doheny.

After a short hearing the committee went into executive session on the nominations of Strawn and Atlee Pomerene, but recessed without making a decision.

Strawn's connection with the Standard Oil bank in Chicago was discussed and some Democratic members of the committee indicated they might oppose his confirmation on that ground.

Strawn Under Fire.

Silas Strawn is understood to have been summoned to appear before the committee again as a result of his testimony given by Melvin Traylor,

TWO-THIRDS SENATE VOTE LACKING FOR DENBY IMPEACHMENT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Impeachment of Secretary of Navy Denby at this time is unlikely because of inability to get a two-thirds vote of the Senate to oust him.

This was the conclusion today of senators canvassing the situation to see whether impeachment would succeed in forcing Denby from the cabinet, after President Coolidge last night in defiance of a senate resolution calling for Denby's resignation said he would not ask Denby to quit.

Final decision regarding impeachment proceedings will not be made, however, until further conferences.

STRAWN, COOLIDGE'S "SPECIAL COUNSEL" IS ROCKEFELLER BANK HEAD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Senate Teapot Dome committee today got evidence connecting Silas H. Strawn, Chicago, one of President Coolidge's "special counsel," to prosecute the oil leasing cases with a Standard Oil bank.

Edward E. Brown, vice-president of the bank, today told the committee his bank handled finances of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and was in fact known as "The Standard Oil Bank."

Brown's testimony came while the committee was trying to establish some connection between Albert B. Fall, the Standard Oi' [illegible] and the sale in May, 1922, of the Albuquerque, N. M., [illegible] involving $200,000, was financed thru the Chicago bank.

WORLD MEET TO BE CALLED BY BRITISH REGIME

Want Parley on World Reconstruction

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Feb. 12—Premier Ramsay MacDonald announced in the House of Commons today that one of the first international proposals of the new labor government will be a world conference on reconstruction.

In response to a question, the premier said that details of a memorial, appealing for such a conference, were now being considered by the cabinet and "I am glad to report that the prospects are bright."

Replying to another question, MacDonald expressed hope that the Anglo-French negotations in regard to the separatist movement in Germany would soon be satisfactorily concluded.

House Crowded

The House of Commons was crowded when the labor ministers began handling routine questions fired from the floor. Among other interesting disclosures made by MacDonald was that the government would save the salary of 5,000 pounds sterling paid to the foreign secretary so long as he combined this portfolio with his premiership as now.

Parliament reassembled today after the change of ministry and prime minister Ramsay MacDonald and his followers took over the "government side" of the House for the first time in British labor's history. The liberals took seats in a lower row, on the government side.

Members began assembling early to get good seats. Viscount Curzon was the first seated. Ben Smith was second and Viscountess Astor third.

MacDonald was scheduled to speak at 3:30 p. m. Loud cheers greeted his arrival.

Ex-premier Baldwin and members of the late conservative cabinet occupied the opposition front benches.

In making his first formal speech as directing chief of parliament, the premier made it clear that labor would maintain its control until ejected by positive and direct action of a majority in commons.

"The labor government," he said, "will go out only when the responsible members of either party or any party move a direct vote of lack of confidence and that vote carries this body.

"We are going to pursue a policy of confidence on the part of the whole nation," MacDonald continued.

The government's aim, he said, in meeting the housing problem, is building houses costing 500 pounds sterling, with an average rental of nine shillings a week.

Heretofore, he said there has been mere nibbling at the problem of unemployment.

Chief of Police Gets Sick and Coca Cola Queen Doesn't Go to Court

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 12—Mrs. Asa G. Candler, pretty young wife of the 73 year old coca-cola king, went to police court today to defend her reputation and save her home.

But the ordeal was postponed indefinitely when the city asked a continuance because of the illness of chief of police Beavers who in a "raid" on an apartment in a fashionable residential section Saturday arrested the multi-millionaire's bride and W. J. Stoddard and G. W. Keeling, prominent business men.

'GRAND JURY FOR YOUNG' MINERS' CRY

Coal Diggers Incensed By Lawless Raids

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill., Feb. 12—"A grand jury investigation of S. Glenn Young and the Ku Klux Klan" is the demand of the miners here since Young has been deposed and some semblance of civil liberty restored with the reinstatement of Chief of Police Ford known to be friendly to labor. A grand jury may be convened.

The Klan booze raids under the leadership of Young who admits receiving $5000 from the Klan have been a thinly camouflaged attack on the foreign-born miners of this vicinity. The dethronement of Young and his klansmen is the direct result of the miners' threat to strike if the terrorism of the klan was not stopped by state authority. Most of the miners are hostile to the klan.

The militiamen from Carbondale and the surrounding territory were friendly to the klan and tolerated its dictatorship. Before the arrival of General Foreman from Chicago the national guardsmen were intolerably insolent to the miners.

S. Glenn Young, Klan-appointed dictator at "Bloody Herrin," was dismissed from the prohibition enforcemen service in December, 1920, for "acts unbecoming an officer," records at prohibition headquarters in Washington disclosed today.

Young was a prohibition agent from January to December, 1920. He was attached to the supervising prohibition agents office for the central department, including Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana.

Young, the records show, is a native of North Carolina. Officials here would not reveal what acts caused Young's dismissal from service. He never served in Washington, but had headquarters in Chicago.

This Mussolini Abdicates.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HERRIN, Ill., Feb. 12.—S. Glenn Young abdicated from the dictatorship of "Bloody Herrin" today and civil authorities are again in power.

On Saturday, Young, gun-toting Klan employe, declared himself ruler of Herrin, taking the place of the chief of police.

Major-General Foreman, in a public proclamation, announced the civil authorities of the county would be allowed to continue but that the troops would remain to assist them.

Danger of further immediate outbreaks in the war between Ku Klux Klan forces and anti-Klansmen seemed averted.

Young left his barricaded and fortified headquarters in the city hall, where he has been chief of police, judge and jury, and returned to his home in Marion, as General Foreman today posted a proclamation saying:

"Hereafter, wearing or carrying of firearms or other weapons by any but duly authorized officers of the law is prohibited, and troops are instructed to confiscate all firearms and weapons so carried and to hold the offenders for appropriate action."

Threat of a miners' strike against the Klan dictatorship is believed responsible for the speedy disarming of Young's forces.

Young Without Authority.

Without mentioning Glenn Young, the order laid down the law against the man who became dictator by virtue of the backing of several hundred armed deputies, Klansmen, after arresting the sheriff, the mayor of Herrin, and most of the sheriff's deputies:

"Only such persons as are legally elected or appointed will be permitted to exercise the functions of deputy sheriff, police officer or other peace officer, and all appointments for special deputy sheriffs and special police officers heretofore made are hereby revoked and annulled."

Adjutant General Carlos Blac told General Foreman he knew o

BUSINESS MEN WOULD PAY LOT FOR THIS BOOK

Thackeray's 'The Snob' Brought Only $1,650

By NORMAN SMYTH

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—"The Snob," written by William M. Thackeray, the famous English novelist, brought $1,650 at a sale of first editions held here. There is a first edition, consisting of one volume, that quite a few prominent Chicago business men who would willingly give ten times $1,650 for it. It is a small innocent-looking memorandum book that was found in the apartment of Louise Lawson.

You can buy this book for a trifling amount. Not this one, but one exactly like it. This particular one is not for sale. It contains the names of rich Chicagoans who made frequent "business" trips to this city. Louise Lawson knew life and she also knew her admirers. She knew how unstable these "leading" citizens are and so she did not depend upon one—not Louise. Millionaires vied with each other to pay her attention. And Louise kept their names and telephone numbers in her little book.

The Transcript Inactive.

The "Boston Transcript" has not made any attempt, as yet, to secure the contents of the book. And it is hardly likely that they would dare to print them if they could. They printed the minutes of the Michigan convention—but not the contents of this book. How are our "leading" citizens of Chicago, whose names are in this book, going to put across another foul lie like the one on the nationalization of women, if it becomes known that they had respectable homes in Chicago and "love nests" in New York?

"I am sorry that Louise is dead," said the slim young waitress who serves us our morning "coffee an'," but I don't blame her for the life she led. Last week a guy gave her an ermine cape that cost $1,500. I've gotta work nearly eighteen months for that and by the time I have finished a sixty year old iceman will look like Rudolph Valentino to me."

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—As the metropolitan press was announcing that William Rockefeller had died, leaving over eight million dollars, Fred Werner, 30 years old, was picked up on Broadway in an unconscious condition. He was found to be suffering from complete exhaustion, due to his being without food for over six days.

Building Trades in N. Y. Sign up with the Employers' Trust

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Practically all the unions in the building trades here have signed an agreement with the Building Trades Employers Association. Only two unions are still negotiating for a settlement, these being the composition roofers and the waterproofers, who are asking for an advance of 50 cents a day, to $9.50, and the stonecutters, who have been offered $10.50 from Jan. 1, but who insist that this wage be made retroactive from Dec. 1, 1923.

The steamfitters have signed to work for $10.50 a day from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1925; the housesmiths' rates were increased to $10.50 from Feb. 1. The duration of the agreement with the structural ironworkers is indefinite, while that with the finishers and ornamental bronze workers runs into Dec. 31, 1925.

The elevator constructors have signed for $10.50 a day up to Dec. 31, 1925, dating from Jan. 1. All of these trades received an increase of 50 cents a day.

Workers! The Parasite Profiteers Expect to Make Good Business Out of the Next World Conflict

By FREDERICK KUH.

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—On the eve of the death of Woodrow Wilson, once hailed as the apostle of peace, a group of American heavy industrialists and high military officers foregathered at the groaning feast boards of a New York City hotel to rejoice that the United States has the inside track in the international armaments race.

The guests, assembled under the auspices of the Army Ordnance Association, included Elbert H. Gary, Col. James L. Walsh, chief, New York ordnance district; Gen. J. J. Carty, vice-president, American Telephone and Telegaph Co., and Dwight F. Davis, assistant secretary of war.

You may believe the assurances of these gentlemen that the next war is not going to be any little semi-pro affair as the last one. In their remarks delivered at this festive dinner, the speakers left no doubt that the coming unpleasantness would be a good business propostion.

Inventions for destruction, which were considered epochal until 1918, are now antiquated. Colonel Walsh announced, with ill-concealed pride, that his own department has perfected a 75 milimeter cannon which can carry twice as far as the most powerful French cannon in the world war. Aerial bombs are now constructed in this country, which destroy whole towns and, upon striking their mark, rip open craters 150 feet wide and 50 feet deep. These harbingers of democracy contain 2000 pounds of explosives. Tanks which hitherto could move only at the rate of 12 miles an hour will hereafter tear across land and water and up 45 degree grades at 30 miles an hour. The latest American model of machine guns shoot projectiles weighing four times as much as their predecessors, while carrying three times as far.

You may take it from Gary and his military friends, when you volunteer or register in the next draft, you can be fairly certain of not returning disappointed. Of not returning in fact. For the delight of its illustrious guests, the Ordnance Association exhibited a few of the modern war machines in the banquet hall. Obviously, to whet the diners' appetite.

The quests generally agreed that they enjoyed a pleasant evening. A message of cordial greeting from President Coolidge was read amid happy applause. The announcement of each new contraption of death and destruction brought cheerful smiles and approval and encouragement. The hard-faced men who got rich out of the last war were in accord that the next session would afford them incomparably greater prosperity.

The concensus of the diners was the Bok and Levermore and similar pessimists need not be taken too seriously; for the prospects are, indeed, rosy. The conversation at the banquet table showed unreserved confidence in the government at Washington.

Big Battle Raged Over the F.-L. P. Issue at St. Louis

they are subjected to by the capitalists exploiters is thru organizing their political power in a farmer-labor party and fighting their own political battles thru such a party. Therefore, be it,

Resolved, That this Conference declares itself in favor of the organization of a Farmer-Labor Party and independent political action by the industrial workers and farmers, and be it further

Resolved, That this Conference endorses the convention called for May 30th in the Twin Cities to nominate a Farmer-Labor candidate for president and vice-president and adopt a national program, which convention is called by the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the Farmer-Labor Parties of Washington, Montana, South Dakota, the Progressive Party of Idaho and the Committee of 48, and urges each organization represented in this Conference to send delegates to the May 30th Convention.

He had hardly finished reading when Chairman Johnston declared the resolution out of order because "it is contrary to principles of this conference." Delegate Cramer, of Minneapolis, thereupon moved as an amendment, "That the convention shall nominate a candidate for president and vice-president on a Farmer-Labor Party."

One of the railroad delegates was quickly on the floor to move to table the amendment and this was carried, cutting Cramer off from debate. The first section of the call was thereupon adopted. The next section provided for the date of the convention and delegate Cramer was again on his feet with the amendment "that the convention be held in St. Paul on May 30th."

Another railroad delegate quickly moved to table the amendment, attempting to cut off Cramer again. This was too raw and the chairman was forced to hold the motion in abeyance while Cramer spoke. Cramer said, "The workers and farmers of the Northwest are thru with the old parties. They have called their convention for may 30th to nominate on a Farmer-Labor Party ticket. They are suspicious of this conference. They have no faith in it. If you don't want a dual movement and two parties you should change the date to May 30th when the farmers and workers have already determined to hold their convention."

Cramer's speech made a strong impression but the machine quickly railroaded thru the motion to table his amendment.

Another fight was precipitated when Cramer amended the report to provide for representation in the Cleveland convention from local unions. Delegates Sullivan and Strong of Canonsburg ably supported his amendment, but the effort to give the rank and file some voice in the Cleveland affair was lost in the same manner as other amendments offered.

The Second Battle.

Another struggle was precipitated when Delegate Mahoney of St. Paul offered a motion adding to the call that all other organizations joining in the call should be given two representatives on the national committee. Supporting his motion Mahoney said, "The workers and farmers of the Northwest are for immediate action. They have called their convention for May 30th. They look upon this organization with suspicion because of its hesitation and vacillation in the past, or as John Fitzpatrick called it 'A dual organization to the A. F. of L.' If you want to unite them and have one movement you must give them representation on the arrangements' committee." Objection was raised to the fact that the vagueness of the motion would leave in any one who would come.

Delegate Sullivan immediately moved the following amendment to clarify the proposal: "That in addition to the national committee elected by this convention each of the organizations which participated in the November 15th conference at St. Paul and who authorized the call for the May 30th Farmer-Labor convention shall be invited to send a representative into the national committee with the same rights as members elected by this convention provided the organizations in question endorse the call for the convention issued by this conference." Sullivan made a powerful speech in support of his amendment. Hillquit proposed that the representatives should be subject to the approval of the national committee. Delegate Starkey of St. Paul declared, "The representation must be made definite. The workers and farmers out our way or skeptical of this conference. They have been trimmed too often. They will tell Mahoney that this conference has stolen his thunder if he comes back with such vague proposition."

Delegate McGowan moved that the whole matter go back to the organization committee for a recomendation and this motion carried just before the noon recess. At the opening of the session a bitter controversy between Delegate Ryan, of the New York Railroad Union, and Hillquit, of the Socialist Party, was aired, because as Hillquit complained, "We were compelled to cool our heels on the sidewalk for two hours at Albany."

GERMAN DRY EYES FOR WILSON DON'T TROUBLE F.S.R.

Aid to Starving Kids Will Continue

Reports that the refusal of the German ambassador to half mast the flag at the German embassy on account of the death of Wilson will seriously interfere with collections for German relief were branded as "nonsense" by Rose Karsner, national secretary of the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany yesterday. Dispatches from Washington have quoted various bankers and big business men as saying that the action of the German ambassador will kill all chances of floating a loan for Germany and all possibility of collecting for German relief in this country.

"The Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany will not pay any attention to the talk of the American bankers who are willing to use any excuse to stop German relief. They will continue to send all the aid they can to their German brothers.

Ambassador's Act Natural.

"The workers of this country can well understand the motives that led the German ambassador to refuse to mourn the death of Wilson. That his refusal to mourn will seriously interfere with collecting for the relief of the starving German workers and their children is the sheerest nonsense. The bankers and others who hope that this incident will interfere with German relief have not themselves been helping the German workers and their children. They are afraid of the spirit that is manifest when American workers give for German relief. They would like to see it killed," the secretary's statement said.

"The bankers know that the workers of Germany who are starving today are the very German workers who were opposed to the war and were forced into it against their will. The bankers who made fortunes out of the war welcomed it. The Hohenzollerns were closer to them than the workers who fought the war that made their fortunes.

"As long as the German workers are starving they are willing to work for almost nothing. That forces the wages of the workers of all other countries down.

Bankers Welcome German Want.

"The bankers and big business men are glad to see the German workers starving. When they were hungry they were rebellious. When they are starving they are meek.

"The workers of the world thru the International Workers' Relief Committee are running 55 soup kitchens in Germany. Thru these soup kitchens they try to keep alive the German workers and their spirit of rebellion. A total of 15,000 meals are served in these soup kitchens daily. That is annoying to the bankers. When they know that these soup kitchens are kept going by the workers in every country they become really angry."

"We want the American workers to show how much they think of the best efforts of the American bankers, so we ask them to send a contribution for German relief to the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany, 32 S. Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill."

New Fire at "Penn" Prison, But Convicts Cause No Excitement

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 12—A small fire today in the laundry at the Western Penitentiary, scene of rioting yesterday which caused two deaths, brought every available policeman to the prison.

The police were called out as a precautionary measure, it was said at the warden's office. The fire, caused by crossed wires, was extinguished without much damage. There was no excitement among the 1,100 prisoners.

Worst Prison in Country.

The Western Pennsylvania Penitentiary, where the revolt of prisoners occurred, is probably the worst prison in the country. Years ago it was decided to abandon the use of this prison and use a prison farm to be built in Center County; as a result no repairs were made in the prison, which went from bad to worse. When the prison farm was completed it was found that the number of prisoners in Pennsylvania had increased so that it was impossible to abandon the use of the Western Penitentiary. Nothing has been done to improve conditions that had been growing worse for years. There have been several revolts of prisoners here during the last several years. After each revolt the prison authorities have "put on the screws" instead of trying to improve conditions.

There are three political prisoners in the Western Penitentiary. They were all convicted of violations of the state criminal syndicalism laws.

Observe Great Ceremony in Hunt for Mummies in Egypt's Tombs

LUXOR, Feb. 12.—The huge stone slab which forms the lid of the sarcophagus of the emperor Tut-Ankh-Amen was lifted this afternoon.

Only a small group of scientists headed by director Howard Carter and officials of the Egyptian government were present, but it was understood the body of the dead pharaoh was found as had been expected..

Disappointed archeologists gathered gloomily around king Tut's tomb, as officials announced that only Director Howard Carter and his staff and a small group of dignitaries will witness removal of the lid from King Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb today.

This removal was without ceremony and its sole purpose, officials said, will be to ascertain the condition of the mummy and contents of the tomb. If the preliminary observation indicates a "good find" ceremonies will be conducted later, at which the Egyptologists and archaelogists, who have gathered here from many places, will be admitted.

The lid of the coffin, a huge stone affair of great weight, was lifted a few inches yesterday, with block and tackle, as a test of the apparatus. The coffin is supposed to contain three mummy cases, with the actual remains of the long-dead Pharaoh enclosed within the last one.

All-Race Negro Assembly Faces Big Issues Today

visions. This is all the more necessary for the Negro because his race is composed of farmer and laborer in larger proportion than any other race.

Resolution Assails Strike-Breaking.

Employers are fiercely assailed in another resolution, for trying to stir up race prejudice by attempting to use whites against Negroes and Negroes against whites, during strikes.

Other resolutions denouncing high rent discriminations against Negroes, white juries for Negroes, Jim Crowism in the army and navy, denial of liberty to the colored peoples of America's West Indian possessions, may go thru without any opposition. It is those resolutions which plan for aggressive action of the Negroes as workers against the tyranny of white capitalists that will show the temper of the congress—as a group organizing for effective resistance against oppression, or not.

The K. K. K. Terror.

The terror society that masks itself under the cabalistic letters, "K. K. K.," is a vital issue for the delegates from the southern states where this terror rides by night.

There are southern delegates who say that if they speak their mind about the order they will face the lash and tar and feather pot and very likely the rope when they return home. But the hatred which they all feel towards the hooded order that the white capitalists are using is evident.

Klan Murdered His Father.

One case where the Ku Klux Klan took a hand in heightening the high Negro death rate was told by Dr. A. Wilberforce Williams, of Chicago, who addressed the delegates on the health issue yesterday morning.

Denying the fiction that the Negro was congenitally weak or short lived, he declared:

"My father, born a slave, lived until he was 76—when he was killed by the Ku Klux Klan."

Negro mortality from disease is high, however, said the speaker. Insurance statistics give the death rate of babies under one year as 50 per cent. But this is not because of the inherent qualities of the individual or the Race but because of the conditions under which Negroes are forced to live, he declared.

Lovett Fort-Whiteman, taking the floor, showed that the negro death rate is high because they are the poorest paid industrial workers and have to pay the highest rents. The death rate is not a matter of race, he asserted, but of living conditions. As the wages go down the death rate goes up, therefore to lower the Negro death rate his industrial conditions must be improved.

Fort-Whiteman, Labor Committeeman.

Fort-Whiteman is a member of the Labor Commission appointed by Dean Kelly Miller which will make recommendations for action to the convention, Mr. Eugene Jones is chairtinue to function until the next convention, M.r Eugene Jones is chairman of the commission, and associated with them are Messrs. T. Arnold Hill, Morris Lewis, J. H. Jones, and Perry Park. Another delegate from the Workers Party, besides Fort-Whiteman, will probably be appointed, Dean Kelly Miller feeling the need of additional labor representation on this important commission.

The congress, made up as it is largely of men and women from the professional classes, is making use of the proletarian elements from the Workers no official authority possessed by Young.

"I do not understand that Young occupies any official part in the government of Williamson county, and we have determined on one thing, that is, that no government shall prevail that is solely by consent of an individual."

Troops patrolled the streets and searched suspicious looking men for guns, disarming them.

"Tomato Can" Deputies.

The tin stars carved with pocket knives out of tin cans, that served his deputies as badges of authority for the three days he controlled the town, have disappeared.

No Martial Law.

Herrin has military law, but not "martial law" in the legal sense. Governor Len Small refused to proclaim absolute military control after Adjutant General Black had recommended it.

Young's "authority" during the three months in which he "cleaned up" the county, has been the six shooter, altho he claimed to have back of it federal deputization to carry out the liquor raids in which he and the Ku Klux Klansmen who hired him, have arrested approximately 1,200 men. Federal agents aided him in many of the wholesale raids.

Young a Killer.

Young is credited with having killed from 12 to 27 men in his activities as internal revenue agent, Department of Justice deserter-hunter during the war, and federal prohibition agent since. He lost his job as dry agent a year ago after he was tried for murder of a raid victim in Madison.

Young was hired by the Klan six months ago, ostensibly to clean up bootleggers in Williamson county. Actually he has been warring upon foreign-born miners and anti-Klan elements.

The "dictator" jumped into the Herrin fights Friday night as soon as he heard of the killing here of Caesar Cagle, Herrin policeman, klan leader, and Young's first raid-lieutenant. He dashed in an automobile to Herrin and swore out warrants for Mayor A. C. Anderson, Sheriff Galligan and a dozen of the sheriff's deputies, served them after shooting up the Herrin hospital, and took over the police power of the town under the nose of the first companies of troops.

For the $5,000 salary the klan has paid him so far, Young has 500 cases charging violation of the Volstead Act to come before the March term of the federal court at Danville.

GERMAN MARK SUFFERS NEW FAINTING FIT

French, British Money in Sympathetic Tumble

The German mark, which is no longer useful even as a vaudeville joke, revived sufficiently to take another dive into the abyss into which it has been rapidly sinking after Woodrow Wilson's death last week. Some financial observers are of the opinion that the demise of the former American president merely coincided with the further downward progress of the mark while there are others who attribute its relapse—if the death wiggle can be termed such—to the rumors floating around Berlin that Hell and Maria Dawes, the Chicago banking and obscenity expert, is not having pleasant sailing in the German capital and is threatening to quit.

This is more likely to be the cause of the mark's new spasm of financial depravity than any feeling of indignation on the part of the American Legion over the refusal of the German embassy in Washington to honor the memory of Germany's most bitter enemy.

Figures mean very little to the average person in relation to the mark. One American dollar can buy so many of them that a good sized forest must be turned into pulp whenever a citizen of the United States asks for the change of a one dollar bill in paper marks.

Until the last flurry it took 4,348,000,000,000 to exchange for a dollar. After Dawes cursed for a quarter of an hour the mark dropped to five trillions. Fear is expressed that Mr. Dawes may deliver a speech which may necessitate the calling in of Arthur Conan Doyle or some one who is on speaking terms with the spirit world. The mark is becoming a metaphysical problem.

The mark, however, is not the only currency to hit the toboggan. The French franc, Belgian franc, the British pound and even the Italian lire moved downward in harmony. The French franc, formerly worth 20 cents in American money, is now worth only 4½ cents and the British pound is down to $4.29. The Italian lire slid 1¼ points and the Belgian franc tumbled 10½ points. The Soviet chevronetz on the contrary is going up and quoted on the New York exchange above the British pound sterling.

General Dawes has threatened to abandon his work on the reparations commission. Hope was expressed that the American bankers would grant a generous loan to the German capitalists in return for a first mortgage on the economic life of Germany, but evidently there is a hitch somewhere and the American money lords will not "save" that country unless the wealth producing machinery is handed over to them.

The capitalists are caught in the revolving wheels of evolution and cannot save themselves. A revolution that will sweep them from power is the only salvation for the world which has outgrown the capitalist system. That is the explanation of the falling currency.

INDIAN TROOPS WIN DECISIVE MEXICAN BATTLE

Backbone of Fascisti Broken at Octlan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12.—"We broke the backbone of the counter-revolution at Octlan," General Obregon wired here today from the front.

"The fascists lost 3,000 in casualties in the 11 hours fighting there and already have been forced to evacuate Guwdalajara, in addition to Vera Cruz."

With a graphic description of the Octlan battle, Obregon described it as a "strenuous combat unprecedented in my experience. It stands alone in Mexican military history."

Describing the battle itself, Obregon wired:

"The enemy had built modern entrenchments, carefully camouflaged, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that our aeroplane scouts ferreted out their positions.

"In spite of this, after a heavy bombardment, our loyal Indian troops, for whom I have only the greatest praise, crossed the Lerma river under a terrific fire from machine guns and rifles.

"For 11 hours the battle raged. The enemy lost 3,000 casualties to perhaps 350 on our side, altho it is impossible yet to make accurate estimates.

"The final splitting up of Fascisti activity will come not later than a few days more. This rebellion will end counter-revolutions in Mexico."

SINCLAIR GETTING PERSIAN OIL, BUT BRIBE IS DENIED

John D. in Background, Is Suspicion

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Hussein Khan Alai, Persian minister to the United States, tells The Federated Press that there is no truth in the story published in the Hearst papers, to the effect that a bribe of $100,000 to $200,000 was received by the Persian foreign minister in connection with the Sinclair oil concession in north Persia.

According to a statement prepared by the minister, the Sinclair deal is still before the Persian parliament, which meets this month to determine whether the Sinclair bid conforms to the oil concession law adopted last June. Under this law, he says, it was provided that concessions might be given, with the consent of parliament, for 40 to 50 years, provided a loan of at least $10,000,000 was arranged by the concessionaire thru reputable American banks. Twenty per cent of the net profits in any case, and as high as 28 per cent if the profits run beyond a certain level, will go to the Persian government.

It seems that Standard Oil was about to get the concession for exploitation of oil in the five northern provinces of Persia, in November, 1921, when the Anglo-Persian Oil Co., controlled by the British government, blocked the agreement. It claimed rights under a previous concession, which had been cancelled on the ground that none of the conditions had been performed by the company. But the Anglo-Persian, according to Hussein Khan Alai, was able to force the Standard Oil to give it a half interest in the deal. The Persians refused to accept the British partnerships, and in the summer of 1922 entered into discussions with Sinclair's agent who had reached Teheran.

Standard Oil then made a bid, on an all-American basis, but the Persian government favored a wholly independent concern, and enacted the new law in order that everything should be open for competition. Standard was asked, along with Sinclair, to bid under the new law, but failed to do so.

This is Persia's official version of the deal on which Sinclair is understood to be staking his fortune in Asia. The failure of the Standard Oil to bid against Sinclair excites no surprise in Washington, where they are commonly understood to be in agreement if not in formal alliance. Anglo-Persian Oil is kicked out of Persia, but comes back as a silent partner of Standard Oil. This combination is kicked out, and Standard steps aside from independent bidding to give the "truly American" Sinclair concern the field. No one need be surprised if, when the deal is consummated, Sinclair will confess that Standard Oil is to share the venture with him.

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

By PROJECTOR.

Uncensored Movies.

Will Rogers in this Pathe comedy uses the film to satirize the films, just as he used the after-dinner speech to poke fun at after-dinner speeches. Actors, censors, reformers, directors, continuity men and even the "dear public" itself comes in for some of the sharp barbs of his wit. He plays the part of a film reformer who presents "Uncensored Movies" to a select and high-minded audience gathered (in the interests of reform) to test the perils of the screen even at the risk of their own purity. Then each of the prevailing types of program pictures are burlesqued, and directors, stars, and even the lowly title writer come in for their share of attention. A half-hour of fun that cuts like a razor.

Enemies of Children.

Program picture that leaves the working class alone for a change. All the villains are distributed among the underworld and the upper crust. And even Chinatown is used as a background without villifying the yellow man. The picture is more remarkable for its omissions than for its commissions. The title is obviously intended to snare those looking for "birth control" thrills but it's not that kind of a picture, kidnapping, burglary, and embezzlement are the limit of its crimes.

Story? Rich crook parks baby heir in the slums where she is raised as a boy. Fate makes her the ward of her wealthy and unsuspecting grandfather. When she reaches marriageable age her life is devoted to the search for her parents' marriage license. In the end she finds it. And they live happy ever after.

Our murmurs, indistinct,
Have menaced the silence of years,
But now you shall be our voice
And our words will ring sharp and McAdoo's Oily Political Ghost Hovers Over Halting Conference For "Progress" at St. Louis, Mo.

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 12.—The third convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action finds this body reaping the results of its betrayal of the demand of the workers and farmers of this country for a Farmer-Labor Party and independent political action.

The first convention in Chicago, in February, 1922, expressed a great mass demand by the workers and farmers for a party of workers and farmers. At the second convention in Cleveland, in December, 1922, there were representatives present of many of the great industrial unions, central labor bodies, state federations of labor and a score of farmers' organizations. The convention which is in session here is little more than a convention of representatives of the railroad unions.

Only 106 Delegates Present.

Only 106 delegates were reported present by the credentials committee. Of these 44 are delegates from the sixteen standard railroad unions and 24 others represent state organizations of the Conference for Progressive Political Action. As these state organizations are made up almost entirely of railroad men these twenty-four delegates can be counted as coming from the same unions, making a total of 68 delegates representing those unions.

The only international unions represented outside of the railroad unions are the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Fur Workers. The miners, the printers, and other international unions, who sent delegates to the Cleveland conference, are absent.

Besides the above there are about twenty-five delegates from miscellaneous organizations such as the League for Industrial Democracy, American Labor Party, Non-Partisan League, co-operatives, etc., including seven delegates from the Socialist Party. The credentials committee report included only two delegates from farmers' organizations. There were only six representatives from central labor unions and five from state federations of labor. Local unions are barred.

Workers and Farmers Lose Hope In Conference.

The only conclusion which can be drawn by a person who saw the gathering which assembled in Cleveland, who analyzes the make-up of this convention and watches it at work is that the farmers and workers have lost faith in anything of interest to them ever coming out of it, and have directed their effort to secure representation upon the political field into other channels.

Compared to the great gathering of rank and file delegates who formed the Federated Farmer-Labor Party on July 3, this convention is a dismal affair. Here sit the conservative leaders of the railroad unions, all of them big prosperous looking men, together with the representatives of the dying Socialist Party. They indulge in formally eloquent words, but there is no life nor spirit in the whole convention. They applaud references to a Workers' and Farmers' government, but no movement which will win the goal of a Workers' and Farmers' government can come out of the dismal, deathly atmosphere of this gathering.

While the Conference for Progressive Political Action has been conducting its work to organize local and state organizations to reward the friends and punish the enemies of labor, it seems the rank and file movement has been crystallizing in local and state labor parties, which have turned their back upon the Conference as hopeless as an instrument thru which the national crystallization of the movement is to come. The facts that the actual existing farmer-labor organizations have practically boycotted this convention is a good omen for the May 30th Farmer-Labor Convention. The hopes of the farmers and workers are not upon the convention. They have turned their backs upon and are looking elsewhere.

Another Convention Proposed.

It is rumored around "Parlor A" of the Statler Hotel, in which the convention is being held, that the leaders of the organization are very much at sea as to how to proceed. Their pretty little scheme for endorsement of McAdoo as the candidate for president on the Democratic ticket has gone awry. McAdoo is dear to the hearts of the railroad unions. But they are afraid to give the endorsement now that he has been splattered with the oil from Teapot Dome. So the proposal seems to be to wait and call another convention after the national conventions of the old parties. Maybe McAdoo may still run. Maybe some other good man will be nominated by one of the old parties. We'll wait and see what the republicans and democrats have to offer and then we'll decide what to do. Thus seem to run the intentions of the Hillquit-Johnston machine which is running the convention.

Afternoon Devoted to Instruction.

The first afternoon session lasted about two hours. Chairman William H. Johnston appointed a committee on resolution and program, a committee on organization and a committee on nomination of officers. Among the members of committee on organization, which will handle the question of what the conference will do politically in the immediate future is William Mahoney, chairman of the Minnesota Working People's Non-Partisan League, and one of the leaders in the movement for the May 30th Farmer-Labor Convention.

With the committee appointments out of the way, the rest of the session was devoted to what Chairman Johnston called "instruction." Donal Richberg, an expert on railroads, rehashed the story told by Charles Edward Russell in his "Story of the Railroads," and Gustavus Meyer in his "History of Great American Fortunes," about the looting of the nation by the early builders of the railroads. He said the history of the railroads could be divided into three periods, those of "gifts, graft and guarantee." We were now in the period in which the railroads were trying to secure a governmental guarantee of interests on a twenty-five billion mortgage which they hold against the peoples of this country in the form of the securities issued against the railroads of the country.

Richberg was followed by Carl D. Thompson, formerly of Socialist Party fame, but now devoting himsefl to telling the people of this country all about the beauties of public ownership. Thompson "instructed" the delegates for an hour and a half, many of them asleep, about the super-power movement thru which all the ills of our social order are to be ended.

The delegates are promised more instruction by various judges, etc. The plan of the official machine seems to be to keep the delegates interested in something else than the real business of the convention, until little time is left and then rush thru its program, whatever it may be, without much discussion, with the plea that there is no time.

PENNSY SLAPPED GENTLY ON WRIST BY LABOR BOARD

Mildly Reproved for Company Unionism

By LELAND OLDS,
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

Forcible domination and control of the election of employe representatives is the condemnation passed upon the Pennsylvania railroad by the U. S. railroad labor board in a case presented by the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. According to the board the carrier by absolute compulsion prevented the telegraphers from exercising their right to select their organization to represent them in negotiations. This adds one more to the long list of "uninforcible" decisions condemning the Pennsylvania for violation of the Transportation act.

"The statute," says the board, "never contemplated such an absurdity as the carrier naming the representatives of the employes who were to sit on the opposite side of the bargaining table from the management, neither did it contemplate that this anomalous situation might be effectuated by indirect methods which would permit the carrier forcibly to dominate and control the election of representatives of the employes."

Rebukes Tyrannical Rule.

The board's brief description of the lawless action of this leading anti-union corporation is probably the only service which such decisions render. It says:

"The carrier assumed charge and control of the employes' election, formulated the ballot and the accompanying instructions over the protest of the employes' representatives and proceeded to hold the election in accordance with its own arbitrary policy. The employes were left no choice but to participate in the election and forego their right to vote for their organization. They knew that if they wrote the name of their own organization on the ballots they would be thrown out by the carrier and not counted and that a rump comittee would be set up by the carrier to represent the employes, altho such a committee may have received but a small fraction of the eligible vote. This was what happened to the shop crafts under identical conditions when approximately 10 per cent of the eligible to vote was permitted to name the representatives of the shopmen by throwing out the ballots of all who voted for the Federated Shopcrafts."

Demoralize Paternalism.

This government appraisal of the Pennsylvania's boasted representation system shows that it is nothing more than the most demoralizing sort of paternalism. There is nothing of industrial democracy and nothing of real protection for the employes contained in it.

The board says that a protest of such a grave character affecting the rights of such a large number of employes cannot be strangled by a technicality and proceeds to order the carrier to cancel its notice of an illegal election and prepare to cooperate in an election by secret ballot in accord with previous decisions. But with the backing of the courts the Pennsylvania will undoubtedly pay little attention to this body which appears to be given teeth only when enforcement against employes is in order.

president of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, in executive session.

Traylor, it is said, related some details of a big bond issue said to have been floated by his bank for the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Company.

Traylor is also reported to have told the committee that Strawn was a member of the board of directors of his bank.

Newspaper Deal Aired.

The Senate investigating committee today made an effort to learn if former Secretary of the Interior Fall was behind the purchase of the Albuquerque, N. M., Journal, in May, 1922.

Melvin A. Traylor president of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago was the first witness. He told of financing in connection with the sale of the Journal by Carl C. Magee. The purchase was made for $200,000 in the name of Sidney M. Weil, citizen of Albuquerque.

Paper Attacked Fall.

Magee, as editor, had been attacking Fall prior to the sale, Magee previously testified.

Weil testified that Magee had encountered editorial difficulties in the operation of the Journal.

"Mr. Magee told me he was prepared to sell the publication," Weil said. "He said he thought perhaps Mr. Fall might be interested in the purchase.

"I drove up to see Mr. Fall and he assured me he had no desire to buy the Journal. He said he was completely out of politics."

Weil said he got the $200,000 for the purchase, "by a loan." The money was given thru the First National Bank of Albuquerque, but there was no separate security. He said he believed the money may have been advanced personally by A. B. McMillan, vice-president of the bank.

He turned the paper over to McMillan after 30 days for $190,000, he said, and deducted $10,000 "for a commission."

Carl C. Magee from whom the Journal was purchased, took the stand. Magee said he did not know who furnished the $200,000 for the purchase of the paper. "I don't think the paper was bought for any other purpose than to eliminate me from the newspaper business in New Mexico," he said, explaining that before the sale the Journal had consistently attacked Fall. Since the sale, he said, it has been friendly to Fall.

Magee is now editor of the New Mexico State Tribune of Albuquerque.

"How to Make Real Money."

Magee testified that the Barham brothers, publishers of the Los Angeles Herald, and later H. H. Tamman and Fred G. Bonfils, publishers of the Denver Post, desired to buy the Albuquerque Journal with the provision that he accept employment with them, but that he had refused.

Magee declared a representative of Tamman and Bonfils told him: "You're a fool if you don't come in with us. We will show you how to make real money out of a newspaper."

It was Magee's testimony before the committee in a previous appearance that gave the committee its first clue to alleged fraud and corruption in the execution of the oil leases between Fall and Doheny and Sinclair.

Magee at that time told the committee of Fall's ranch purchases and the extensive improvements he had made on his New Mexico properties about the time the leases were executed.

Following this lead, the committee inquired into Fall's personal finances and disclosed the $100,000 loan he received from Doheny and the $25,000 lent him by Sinclair.

After Magee's testimony the committee went into executive session to consider the nomination of Strawn and Pomerene.

Four hours later Mr. Coolidge in a statement defied the upper house and refused emphatically to pay any attention to the Senate demand. He said the Senate had no right to make it.

Denby himself had nothing to say when he was told of the Senate's vote, but previously he had stated he would not resign.

The best legal minds in the House and Senate will now consider whether impeachment proceedings against Denby would be likely to succeed. If there is a probability that Denby would beat the impeachment court, the action probably will not be taken.

There was tremendous indignation in the Senate against Mr. Coolidge for his refusal to heed the demand contained in the Robinson resolution.

Coolidge's Statement.

Mr. Coolidge, in his formal statement defying the Senate, said:

"No official recognition can be given to the passage of the Senate resolution relative to their opinion concerning members of the cabinet or other officers under executive control.

"As soon as the special counsel can advise me as to the legality of the leases and assemble for me the pertinent facts in the various transactions, I shall take such action as seems essential for the full protection of public interests.

"I shall not hesitate to call for the resignation of any official whose conduct in this matter in any way warrants such action upon my part. The dismissal of an officer of the government such as involved in this case, other than by impeachment, is exclusively an executive function.

Quotes Madison.

"I regard this as a vital principle of our government. In discussing this principle, Mr. Madison has well said:

"'It is laid down in most of the constitutions or bills of rights in the republics of America; it is to be found in the political writings of the most celebrated civilians and is everywhere held as essential to the preservation of liberty, that the three great departments of government be kept separate and distinct.'

"President Cleveland likewise stated the correct principle in discussing requests and demands made by the Senate upon him and upon different departments of the government, in which he said:

"'They assume the right of the Senate to sit in the judgment upon the exercise of my exclusive discretion and the executive function for which I am solely responsible to the people from whom I have so lately received the sacred trust of office.

"'My oath to support and defend the constitution and my duty to the chief magistracy which I must preserve unimpaired in all its dignity and vigor, compel me to refuse compliance with these demands.'"

Mr. Coolidge concluded declaring he is responsible to the people for his conduct in retention or dismissal of public officials and assumes full responsibility.

"I do not propose to sacrifice any innocent man for my own welfare," the President said.

Tough Days for Standard.

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12.—Without one word of debate, without even a question from any of the corporation bellboys on either side, the Senate adopted without a dissenting vote, on Jan. 7, Senator Walsh's resolution directing the Secretary of the Interior to proceed to cancel the Standard Oil titles on Sections 16 and 36 in Naval Reserve No. 1 in California. The fraud involved was shown during the Teapot Dome inquiry.

It was on the pretext that the naval oil was being pumped away, thru Standard Oil wells located on these sections, that Secretary Fall gave Reserve No. 1, to Doheny on lease, and Doheny jauntily predicted that his profits would be $100,000,000.

Ancient Fraud.

F. C. Dezendorf, field agent for the General Land Office, who was stationed in California in 1913, testified before the Senate committee on Jan. 25 that he investigated the claims to these two sections, and made an adverse report in April, 1913, showing that these were oil lands and as such were reserved by the government. That report was "misplaced" in the San Francisco office for some months, and then Dezendorf was transferred to Washington. For seven years his report was buried in the files here, while Standard Oil held the disputed land and pumped steadily from the petroleum deposit beneath. And at last, after a vain attempt had been made to hold Atty. Gen. Palmer responsible for surrendering these oil lands to Standard Oil, the fact of that surrender was used as Fall's excuse for surrendering the richest oil reserve that remained in public hands, to his personal friend, Doheny.

Shows Political Trend.

This incident of seven-years-too-late enforcement of law by the Senate is another straw in the political wind. It shows to what extent panic has seized upon the hard-boiled cynics who make up the majority of both the Republican and Democratic membership of Congress. It is what visitors to the Senate gallery read in the faces of the supposed leaders on the floor, as these senators sit, twisting nervous hands, listening to some new chapter of infamy in oil. The fight has gone out of them. They dare not resist new proposals of investigation of corruption in high offices of the nation. They read the daily press, they listen to chance conversations in the restaurants, on the street, in the theatre lobby, and they are afraid. The public has lost all faith in the integrity of its federal machinery. Too many hypocrites in patriotic guise have been exposed. The bluster and brag of "business in government" has been dropped. Old party politicians have lost their nerve.

Want Real Prosecution.

That is why Pomerene and Strawn are being challenged, as suitable counsel to prosecute the lawbreakers disclosed in this inquiry. Pomerene is the attorney of a big railroad group, and is known as almost a fanatic in his big-business partisanship. Strawn's law firm includes the father of one of Mellon's chief assistants, and is counsel for a Mellon oil concern. A month ago such selections by Mr. Coolidge would not have been seriously opposed; today they are protested. Keen politicians in Congress know that the people want men of the type of Francis J. Heney and Frank P. Walsh to handle the public's interest in this oil mess. Pomerene and Strawn are prejudiced by their whole business environment and personal sympathies. They don't look good to the millions of voters who will bring in the verdict on this case in November.

Money! Money! Money! Money! That Is All the Talk at Miami, Fla.

(NOTE—Following is our second article on the southern playground of the rich in winter.)

* * * *

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 12—Miami is as full of pep as an oil camp just after a gusher has come in.

All the hotels are jammed and the talk in the lobbies is mostly about money that is being made, is to be made, or has been made in and about this section.

There are more expensive automobiles on the causeway to Miami beach than are seen in an ordinary afternoon on Fifth avenue in New York. And the licenses are from every state in the union, including California.

Natives are fond of saying Californians come here for the climate and to make them feel perfectly at home. Miami is advertised as the "Los Angeles of Florida." One of the nearby real estate tracts has been named "Hollywood."

Because of the proximity of the British West Indies, liquid delicacies are available at low rates and of course, reputed to be the imported varieties rather than the home-grown which dominate the markets of the north.

As yet no workers have arrived with their families.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—"Did the other papers in CoClorado ever charge you with blackmail in connection with this deal?" Senator Dill of Washington asked of Fred G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, after Bonfils had tried in vain for three hours to find justification for the million dollar "settlement" he secured from Harry Sinclair and the sudden stopping of the Post's attacks on the Teapot Dome lease when that "settlement" had meen made.

Bonfils airily brushed the ugly word aside.

"Oh no, not at all, so far as I am aware," he said. The crowd in the Senate committee room, listening to his defense, grinned skeptically.

Bonfils had come forward, with a bale of contracts and complaints which seemed never to have been filed in court, to show that his little transaction in Teapot Dome was pure as the Denver Post itself. He frankly admitted that he had been "loyal to the common people all my life, fighting against every kind of wrong and corruption, attacking predatory wealth and serving the public good" for some 30 years at that one stand.

Senator Lenroot, who defended Albert Fall during the earlier stages of the oil scandal, and who now is trying to defend his own political situation, dug into Bonfils' past. He showed that Bonfils once testified in court in Kansas City, Kans., with running a lottery. Bonfils replied that "that was just as legitimate a business at that time, in that city, as banking," and counter-charged that Lenroot was "representing one Tom O'Donnell of Colorado in this line of questions." He claimed that O'Donnell had once tried to assassinate him, Bonfils, but that Bonfils had disarmed the man and had actually refrained from killing him.

Lenroot went back to the Sinclair squeeze, showing over and over that the Interior Department had disallowed the claims on which Bonfils and his associate, J. Leo Stack of Denver, had hoped to get a "cut" from Teapot Dome. He read Denver Post headlines and editorials, showing that that paper assailed the Sinclair deal with Fall, and denounced it as a "crooked, corrupt deal," prior to Sinclair's decision to pay them the $250,000 cash and give them a $750,000 interest in the lease. Then the paper ceased to thunder. Its reporter who had gathered the story of Fall's sudden wealth, was not sent to Washington to testify; the committee had to send a subpoena to fetch him.

But the publisher, at intervals bragging of his wealth and of the power of his paper, insisted that he had never quit fighting the lease, even after he had taken a $750,000 interest in it. He said, quite coolly, that he felt sure Sinclair had compelled the Midwest (Standard Oil) crowd to contribute half of the million. His partner, Stack, had told him that there was "a conspiracy and agreement" between Doheny, Sinclair and the Standard Oil crowd, whereby Sinclair got Teapot Dome, Doheny got the California naval reserves, and Standard Oil got $1,000,000 from Sinclair for its worthless claim based on three wells in the Teapot field. That might explain why Doheny had backed out of his first venture, which was the financing of Stack in the attempt to get Teapot Dome or a share of the Dome oil.

Lenroot hung to the subject of Sinclairs giving up that million to the publisher of the thunderous Denver Post. Finally he asked whether Sinclair had not been driven to "purchase your silence" in regard to the "crooked, corrupt deal."

Bonfils, looking pained and surprised, but intensely virtuous, denied it. Why, he had rather that a man with a dinner pail in his hand came into his office, than the owner of 40 banks.

This is the Bonfils who defended the Ludlow massacre, and whose premises were stormed and wrecked by thousands of irate citizens during the last street railway strike in Denver. He is a large owner of those street railways, and he is an expert on the employment of gunmen.

Senator Adams of Colorado, listened to Bonfils' defense in silence. He knew the futility of questioning that species of honest philanthropist.

WHEN McADOO QUIT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Questioning by Senator Lenroot after McAdoo had finished his prepared statement, brought out that McAdoo severed his connection with Doheny, Feb. 2, the day after Doheny testified he had given Albert B. Fall, $100,000.

The meeting adopted resolutions pledging itself to follow in the footsteps of the great leader of the working class and to exert all its efforts in the building up of the Communist movement as the best monument to his memory.

The resolutions adopted were as follows:

"WHEREAS our Comrade Vladimir Ulianoff Lenin has finally fallen a victim of his own heroic efforts and over-exertion in behalf of the Revolution in Russia and thruout the world, and

"WHEREAS our leader Lenin dedicated his life to the emancipation of the working class and to organizing the workers to seize the power of the state and establish their own dictatorship as the only means to organize a Communist society, therefore

"BE IT RESOLVED that we hereby express our limitless sorrow over the death of our belover leader and our intention to give expression to our grief by following in his footsteps and exerting all our efforts to build up the International Communist Movement. Joint meeting, Workers Party and the Labor Open Forum."

Recognition Is Urged.

"WHEREAS, Soviet Russia is a country of 150 million people, a country with great natural resources and great promise for the future, and has thus far received no official recognition from the government of the United States, and

"WHEREAS, Soviet Russia has shown herself to be fully capable of maintaining herself under the most trying circumstances, such as war, famine and pestilence, and

"WHEREAS, recognition by this government would help the Soviet Republic of Russia to further improve the condition of the people of that great country and

"WHEREAS such recognition would in no way harm the people of the United States, but on the contrary, would be of great benefit to them, and

"WHEREAS Soviet Russia has been recognized by other great nations, such as Italy, Spain, Germany and England, showing that these nations have no fear of any of the so-called destructive propaganda which the government of Soviet Russia is charged with spreading in other countries,

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this meeting of working people of the City of Rochester, N. Y., urge the United States Government to recognize without delay the government chosen by the people of Soviet Russia.

North Dakota Blazing New Trails in Big Struggle for Class Political Action of Workers and Farmers

By JOSEPH MANLEY.
(Secretary, Federated Farmer-Labor Party)

North Dakota, in the days when its Non-Partisan League was a militant fighting organization, was much in the public eye. The conservatives denounced it, while the radicals praised it. But lately North Dakota lost its leading position in the political revolt of the Northwest.

The causes for this were plainly evident in the recent convention of the Non-Partisan League at Bismarck. The mental bankruptcy of that convention was so evident that all delegates, who were real representatives of the farmers—together with many of the old "wheel-horses" of the Non-Partisan League—called a conference immediately after adjournment of the League convention, and organized the Farmer-Labor Party of North Dakota.

This new organization, which thus joins North Dakota with the other states forming the farmer-labor movement of the Northwest, crystallizes the militant movement which is so widespread within that state. It will place North Dakota once more in the lead of the Farmer-Labor movement away from the old dominant capitalist political parties, and toward independent political action.

To understand the situation in North Dakota, it is necessary to recall the action of the Republican State Central Committee, in its meeting of Dec. 28th, last year, when it endorsed President Coolidge for reelection. This action aroused a storm of protest, thruout the state of North Dakota. And because the State Central Committee is under the control of the Nonpartisan League, this was "the last straw", and destroyed all remaining faith in the old league.

When the convention went into session, with 97 delegates—only four of them representing labor—it was quite plain to be seen that there was absolutely no hope for any progressive measures to be adopted there.

Three Big Measures

The following were the three measures of most importance which came befor[illegible]tion:

A re[illegible] Congress-man [illegible] J. Fr[illegible] m[illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] state Cen[illegible] eague-contr[illegible] ent of Coolidge

Small Bankers There

This convention was composed of a majority of small bankers, business men, office-holders and office-seekers, with general farmer representation in a very small minority.

And the principal controversies were with regard to which particular choice for office should be nominated by the convention. There were many factions in the convention.

And these consisted of the retainers of various office-seekers.

Ayres Makes Eloquent Plea

An eloquent plea to the convention was made by Tom Ayres, Chairman of the South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party, asking that it cast aside the old Nonpartisan policy, organize a State Farmer-Labor Party, and thus come into the ranks of the national farmer-labor movement.

Ayres' speech was applauded to the echo—but only by the few delegates who were not bound, body and soul, to the interests of the office-seekers. And when it seemed that Ayres might make some impression upon the other portion of the convention a political henchman of one of the principal office-seekers (not a delegate to the convention), called "time" upon the speaker. The effect of all this was to clearly demonstrate that the Nonpartisan League is now nothing more or less than an adjunct of the national Republican Party.

Delegate J. W. Hempel read several long letters from Congressman Sinclair and Senator Frazier, asking endorsement of Robt. M. LaFollette for President. Delegate Hempel made a forceful argument. Most of the delegates admitted that LaFollette was far superior to Coolidge as a Presidential candidate. But the political machine carried, with but few dissenting votes, a motion that the convention do not endorse any candidate for President.

Much Time in Wrangling

The rest of the convention's time was spent in wranglings between adherents of the rival office-seekers. There was much vague talk about the "program" of the League—but not the slightest hint of anything constructive, with the single exception of the Fedje bill. This bill proposes the extension of the mechanics' lien so as to include the farmer (under the Farm-Labor Lien) and give him the right of first claim upon his mortgaged crop.

In the midst of this welter of confusion and reactionary tactics, petitions were circulated advocating the formation of a State-Farmer Labor Party immediately. And many signers were obtained, to this petition. With result that, immediately following the adjournment of convention—altho the delegates were wearied with the ceaseless bickerings of the rival politicians and their henchmen—an all-night conference was held, with over forty delegates present. Twenty-five of these were delegates to the Nonpartisan League convention. The rest,—men like "Dave" Hamilton and R. H. Walker,—all among the old stalwarts of the old Nonpartisan League when in its prime.

Farmer-Labor Party Organized

In this conference was organized the Farmer-Labor Party of North Dakota. And for it there was adopted a constitution and a national and state program. Farmer-Labor Voice was made the official organ of the new party. Officers for the new organization were elected. Some resolutions were passed—one of them calling upon LaFollette to get out of the Republican Party; another endorsing the United Front campaign of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party; and one approving the May 30th convention in St. Paul and protesting against any attempt toward its postponement.

The officers elected by this conference were as follows:

R. H. Walker, Chairman, who is one of the best known real farmers in North Dakota and was formerly an organizer for the Nonpartisan League;

H. R. Martinson, Secretary-Treasurer, who is President of the Central Labor Union at Fargo and is well-known thruout the state.

An Executive-Committeeman from each of the three Congressional Districts was also elected, as follows:

First district: Alfred Knutson, formerly of the Nonpartisan League;

Second district: Herman Hardt, well-known as a member of the State Legislature and as the popular representative of more than 20,000 Russian-German farmers in that district;

Third district: H. B. French, editor of an influential farmers' newspaper in the state.

A most interesting discussion took place on the question of the national and state program. Of special interest was clause one, of the national program, which reads as follows:

"Land was created for all the people, and we demand a system of land tenure that will eliminate landlordism and tenantry, and will secure the land for the users of the land."

And also clause 5, reading:

"A moratorium for all working farmers, on their farm-mortgage debts, for a period of five years."

The discussion also demonstrated that the farmers and industrial workers of North Dakota are swiftly developing a clear understanding of the economic basis underlying their present critical situation and the great need for such fundamenatl relief measures as the two above quoted. And these two measures are stated, word for word, as in the program of the Federated Farmer-Labor program—which was adopted, in its entirety, by the conference.

The need for a state program became apparent during the discussion when the fact was brought out that the old Nonpartisan League program, most of which had been incorporated into the laws of the state, had never been permitted to really function, to any extent; and that this fact was due to the sabotage of old-line party politicians. The state program adopted in this conference goes much farther than anything ever proposed by the old League. It reads as follows:

STATE PROGRAM:

1. We demand the retention and faithful administration of the state industries, especially the building of terminal-elevators and flour mills.
2. We demand that all public funds be deposited in the Bank of North Dakota, and that branch banks be established, one in each county of the state.
3. We favor the enactment of the farm-crop lien law, known as the Fedje Bill No. 164.
4. We demand that all tax titles revert to the state.
5. We demand the re-enactment of the tax-exemption law repealed by the 1923 Legislature.

The whole situation in North Dakota can be summarized by citing, first the action of the Republican State Central Committee—controlled by the Nonpartisan League—endorsing Coolidge for President, at its meeting last December; the action of this League convention in side-stepping a motion to rescind that action; and its point-blank refusal to endorse LaFollette.

On the day following adjournment of the convention, the State Central Committee met and practically reaffirmed their endorsement of Coolidge, by refusing to entertain any motion on the subject.

All of which proves that the Nonpartisan League has been sold out to the most reactionary wing of the Republican Party, and that the only hope for progress must be in the newly-organized Farmer-Labor Party.

MILL OWNERS ATTACK MASS. 48-HOUR LAW

Gompers' Spokesmen Crawl Before Masters

By H. M. WICKS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass.—The textile mill owners of Fall River and New Bedford have started a drive against the 48-hour law in the state of Massachusetts. One Richard Long, a tool of the mill owners, introduced a bill in the legislature to repeal the law. A joint committee of the Senate and Legislature was appointed and held public hearings this week.

As is usual in such hearings the "legislative agents" of the American Federation of Labor were on the job crawling before the legislative flunkeys of capitalism in the most servile manner.

Wednesday's session was particularly interesting. The case for the mill owners had been presented by a drooling individual, an attorney named Dreiser, representing the Associated Industries. This porzon talked at length about the destructive inroads of Southern competition upon the industries of "our commonwealth."

"Labor" Crawls.

A Mr. Charles Hodgson of the A. F. of L. legislative committee arose and attempted to defend the law against repeal. He opened his address with humanitarian sentimentalism and declared that he does not believe in placing the dollar sign above a humanitarian law. In a feeble attempt at convincing argument he said the proposed repeal was a blow at women and children in the industries of the state. Then he had a brilliant inspiration as he remembered that the bill was passed under the Coolidge administration. He switched his argument from the women and children to a eulogy of the wisdom of the scab-herding, strike-breaking midget politican who now sits in the White House at Washington. In the city of Boston, the identical city in which Coolidge first gained notoriety as a strike breaker and enemy of the working class, this alleged representative of labor, fawning before the republicans on the legislative committee, indulged in a crude, disgustingly sychophantic exhibition of grovelling by asserting that since the law was signed by Coolidge it must have been a good law. "He (Coolidge) never made many unwise moves, otherwise he would not be where he is."

Praise of Coolidge failed to impress the committee, so the legislative agent began to squirm, adjusted the big Elk's tooth dangling from a large chain on a green vest, and emitted this grammatical gem: "Natural conditions (in the South, presumably) doesn't allow the efficiency as exists in the North." It reminded one of Hinky Dink's famous saying, "Them as has shiners, wears 'em!"

Argues Both Ways.

In trying to meet the attacks of the corporation lawyers and appear eminently respectable before the committee, Mr. Hodgson endeavored to reply to the charge that organized labor would force the mills to leave the state with the assertion that: "It would be useless for me to answer that if the industries isn't here there won't be any work."

Then in the next sentence he claimed that even tho the industries did leave it would be better than sacrificing the women and children and that other industries would take their places. The legislative agent of the decrepit State Federation of Labor was not able to perceive his own contradiction after one of the flunkeys of the shoe workers had openly laughed at this blunder. To a mind capable of eternally crawling before the employers in the alleged interest of labor nothing could possibly strike him as inconsistent. Instead of devoting their time to strengthening the political power of the working class, these agents of the Gompers machine take part of the dues paid by the members of organized labor in order to persuade the capitalist class that the labor movement is respectable and the defender of civilization.

In conclusion Mr. Hodgson declared that labor needs no defense as it has proved to be beneficial to both employer/and employee in the past and that it would continue to so function.

The only worth-while point brought out during the whole proceedings was the fact that the talk of Southern competition is baseless, because the same capitalists that control textile mills in the North also control most of the mills of the South, therefore they are only competing with themselves.

It is unlikely that the 48-hour law will be repealed, as the peanut politicians are afraid of the voters and from the presentation of the mill owners it is doubtful if they are making a serious effort to defeat it.

The efforts of the representatives of the labor unions trying to prove to the committee how respectable they are could be utilized to better advantage by exposing the class character of the government in order to develop independent political action on the part of the organized workers of the state.

Switzerland to Have Referendum on the 48-Hour Week, Feb. 17

(By The Federated Press)

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 12.—On February 17 a referendum is to be held in Switzerland to decide whether the present 48-hour week established by law shall be exchanged for a 54-hour week. The whole country is stirred up about it, and the employers and a large part of the peasantry are ranging themselves on one side of the question, favoring the extension of working hours, while hand and brain workers of all grades are unanimous in agitating against the proposal.

The law establishing the 48-hour week was passed in June, 1919. Up to then a 59-hour week had been in force. The law applied, however, only to factory workers, and not to workers engaged in trade, transport, the hotel industry, and the building industry. The next year it was proposed that a second law should be passed extending the shorter hours to railwaymen, and to postal and telegraph employes. The reactionaries then insisted upon a public referendum on the question. They were beaten, for the law was approved by a majority of about 100,000.

George L. Siegel Gets League's Endorsement for Mayor of St. Paul

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 12.—The Workingmen's Non-partisan Political League endorsed George L. Siegal, local attorney as their candidate for Mayor in the forthcoming primaries after Coroner C. A. Ingerson of Ramsey county had declined the nomination.

The primary elections will take place on March 18th and the election on May 6th. Mr. Siegel was missing when the nomination was made but William Mahoney assured the delegation appointed to wait on him that he would be a candidate.

In the forthcoming elections the voters of St. Paul are to elect a mayor, a controller, six members at large to the common council, a municipal judge, two justices at large, two constables at large and justices in two wards.

Trachtenberg, Lore Trial at Newark, Comes up Feb. 14

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The four members of the Workers Party, Lore, Trachtenberg, Kaplan and Chriss, arrested on charges of disorderly conduct in Newark, N. J., last week, will be tried Feb. 14. The defendants will attempt to summon Commissioner of Safety Brennan, of Newark, to testify. In view of the impending trial and the settlement of the free speech issue in Newark, the scheduled meeting, at which William Z. Foster was to speak, was postponed at the last moment.

FIRST SHIPMENT OF U. S. COTTON GOES TO RUSSIA

American Business Is After Soviet Trade

By FREDERICK KUH.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—While Secretary of State Hughes is cursing the Russian government from beneath his nicely clipped beard, unofficial recognition of the Moscow regime is making notable headway in American quarters which are no less powerful than Washington officialdom.

Ten thousand bales of American cotton valued at $2,000,000, left New Orleans, Feb. 3rd on the S. S. Aetna, bound for Murmansk. This is the first direct shipment of cotton from the United States to Russia since the revolution.

Huge Trade Coming.

This shipment is merely the forerunner of a series of similar transactions on a large scale. In 1923, the All-Russian Textile syndicate purchased foreign cotton thru the Liverpool and Bremen markets, worth more than $40,000,000. It is likely that the bulk of this trade will henceforth be carried on by direct imports from America. That will depend, of course, upon the attitude of cotton producing combines and upon the terms of credit available thru American banks. There is every reason for believing that both cotton exporters and bankers will do their utmost to encourage the resumption of trade relations.

The extent to which the American markets will be called upon to meet Russia's demands hinges upon the U. S. government's policy. A pursuance of the state department's offensive attitude might conceivably oblige the Russian government to seek markets elsewhere.

It may be asserted, however, that this shipment of the first cotton cargo marks a milestone in the relations of the two countries.

Banks Coming to Terms.

It is not even two months since the All-Russian Textile syndicate opened its office in New York City. The president of that organization, Nogin, who visited this country recently, found American cotton growers eager to transact business with Russia, while powerful American financial groups, notable the Chase National bank, were quick to show their readiness to come to terms in negotiating a credit agreement.

Aside from the 10,000 cotton bales shipped on the S. S. Aetna, the cargo included 500 tons of cottonseed, destined for Turkestan, where the Moscow government is embarking upon an ambitious scheme for cotton cultivation. It has been intimated to certain American groups that concessions might be available in Turkestan, both for cotton growing land and for the establishment of textile industries.

Purchases made thru the Russian syndicate also included textile machinery, mill supplies and textile fibers. Tests will be made of American dye-stuffs, and proving satisfactory, these, too, will be bought on an ample scale.

Southern States Eager.

Prior to his departure, Nogin traveled thru the southern states, where he found the liveliest interest manifested in the Textile syndicate's activities. His dealings during that excursion resulted in tentative arrangements with the South Carolina Co-operative Cotton-Growers' Association and with the Georgia Growers' Co-operatives.

While most of the credits hitherto granted to the Russian syndicate by American banks were of a short term nature, the stability of the Russian chervonetz, coupled with the rapid improvement of Russia's whole economic organism, presages the availability of American credits on more favorable terms soon.

It is understood, in this connection, that a high official of a New York financial institution is contemplating a journey to Russia for the purpose of ascertaining more precisely the assurances which the Russian government and its subsidiary institutions can offer for future credits.

MOUSORGSKI'S RUSSIAN MUSIC STIRS AUDIENCE

Miss Breslau Gives Vital Interpretation

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Russian music at its best, and a splendid artist of Russian descent featured the concert of the Chicago Symphony orchestra last Friday and Saturday. Sophie Breslau, the contralto, was the soloist and she sang a group of songs by Mousorgski.

Modest Mousorgski, more than any other composer, got close to the great pounding peasant heart of Russia that bled once, and will bleed no more. The five songs that Miss Breslau sang express different phases of life. Those entitled "Pain" and "Death's Serenade" are conceived in the spirit of grim, bitter pessimism that pervaded the art of old Tsarist Russia, and which found literary expression in Dostoievski and Andreyev. "The Banks of the Don" paints a different picture, one of a people that sings and dances, a people revelling in brilliant colors and laughter. "On the Dneiper" is a Cossack song, a song of a gaunt, determined race, bloody and unafraid. "The Classicist" is a satire, written to work off a personal grudge, and it is the refinement of sarcasm to the nth degree.

Miss Breslau is rich, warm, vital in voice, a truly great singer, possessing unusual dramatic ability.

"Nutcracker" Suite.

The other Russian work was Chaykovski's "Nutcracker" suite. This is a series of dances composed for toys made of tinsel and sugar. But the toys that can dance to the trepak in the suite must be phenomenally vigorous dolls.

The program opened with Gluck's overture to "Iphigenia." The work is not as simple minded as a Gluck composition usually is, but it is fiery and powerful, and big in outline, like the Greek tragedy to which it is a prelude.

Following this was an aria from Wagner's "Rienzi." "Rienzi," like the romantic German music it copies, is good opera, but bad drama. The aria is full of pompous grandeur, and Miss Breslau sang it superbly.

Then came the "Dante" symphony of Granados. This is a most mediocre composition, modern in technic, and embalmed in spirit. It is in two movements, one with a vocal part, but even Sophie Breslau could not save it from deadly dullness and boredom. The work does succeed in suggesting one line of the Italian poet, "Abandon all hope, ye who enter here."

"Indian Rhapsody."

Carl Busch of Kansas City directed the first Chicago performance of his "Indian Rhapsody." The composition suggests a series of disconnected episodes, ending with an elaborate student's exercise, rather than a continuous piece of music. It is skillfully orchestrated. Busch's Indian is a half breed in a dress suit, who belongs to "The Minute Men of the Constitution."

For next week three piano soloists are promised. Maier and Pattison, the musical Gold Dust twins, and Arthur Shattuck, who has played once before at the symphony concerts this season. There will be two concertos by both Bachs, one for two pianos, one for three. A ballade for two pianos and orchestra, by Sowerby, our most important native son, a sinfonietta by Schumann, an overture by Handel, and the tone poem "Don Juan," by Strauss, will round out the program. This might be a good concert to stay away from.

She Is Going Home.

SINCLAIR GETTING PERSIAN OIL, BUT BRIBE IS DENIED

John D. in Background, Is Suspicion

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Hussein Khan Alai, Persian minister to the United States, tells The Federated Press that there is no truth in the story published in the Hearst papers, to the effect that a bribe of $100,000 to $200,000 was received by the Persian foreign minister in connection with the Sinclair oil concession in north Persia.

According to a statement prepared by the minister, the Sinclair deal is still before the Persian parliament, which meets this month to determine whether the Sinclair bid conforms to the oil concession law adopted last June. Under this law, he says, it was provided that concessions might be given, with the consent of parliament, for 40 to 50 years, provided a loan of at least $10,000,000 was arranged by the concessionaire thru reputable American banks. Twenty per cent of the net profits in any case, and as high as 28 per cent if the profits run beyond a certain level, will go to the Persian government.

It seems that Standard Oil was about to get the concession for exploitation of oil in the five northern provinces of Persia, in November, 1921, when the Anglo-Persian Oil Co., controlled by the British government, blocked the agreement. It claimed rights under a previous concession, which had been cancelled on the ground that none of the conditions had been performed by the company. But the Anglo-Persian, according to Hussein Khan Alai, was able to force the Standard Oil to give it a half interest in the deal. The Persians refused to accept the British partnerships, and in the summer of 1922 entered into discussions with Sinclair's agent who had reached Teheran.

Standard Oil then made a bid on an all-American basis, but the Persian government favored a wholly independent concern, and enacted the new law in order that everything should be open for competition. Standard was asked, along with Sinclair, to bid under the new law, but failed to do so.

This is Persia's official version of the deal on which Sinclair is understood to be staking his fortune in Asia. The failure of the Standard Oil to bid against Sinclair excites no surprise in Washington, where they are commonly understood to be in agreement if not in formal alliance. Anglo-Persian Oil is kicked out of Persia, but comes back as a silent partner of Standard Oil. This combination is kicked out, and Standard steps aside from independent bidding to give the "truly American" Sinclair concern the field. No one need be surprised if, when the deal is consummated, Sinclair will confess that Standard Oil is to share the venture with him.

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

By PROJECTOR.

Uncensored Movies.

Will Rogers in this Pathe comedy uses the film to satirize the films, just as he used the after-dinner speech to poke fun at after-dinner speeches. Actors, censors, reformers, directors, continuity men and even the "dear public" itself comes in for some of the sharp barbs of his wit. He plays the part of a film reformer who presents "Uncensored Movies" to a select and high-minded audience gathered (in the interests of reform) to test the perils of the screen even at the risk of their own purity. Then each of the prevailing types of program pictures are burlesqued, and directors, stars, and even the lowly title writer come in for their share of attention. A half-hour of fun that cuts like a razor.

* * * *

Enemies of Children.

Program picture that leaves the working class alone for a change. All the villains are distributed among the underworld and the upper crust. And even Chinatown is used as a background without villifying the yellow man. The picture is more remarkable for its omissions than for its commissions. The title is obviously intended to snare those looking for "birth control" thrills but it's not that kind of a picture, kidnapping, burglary, and embezzlement are the limit of its crimes.

Story? Rich crook parks baby heir in the slums where she is raised as a boy. Fate makes her the ward of her wealthy and unsuspecting grandfather. When she reaches marriageable age her life is devoted to the search for her parents' marriage license. In the end she finds it. And they live happy ever after.

TO THE DAILY WORKER

We who are dumb with toil
We who are weary with work
Call upon you, our voice,
To give our misery words.
Take up your mighty pen,
Dip it deep in our lives,
Find what is hidden there—
Our pain, our dreams and our hopes—
Our murmurs, indistinct,
Have menaced the silence of years,
But now you shall be our voice
And our words will ring sharp and clear.

McAdoo's Oily Political Ghost Hovers Over Halting Conference For "Progress" at St. Louis, Mo.

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 12.—The third convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action finds this body reaping the results of its betrayal of the demand of the workers and farmers of this country for a Farmer-Labor Party and independent political action.

The first convention in Chicago, in February, 1922, expressed a great mass demand by the workers and farmers for a party of workers and farmers. At the second convention in Cleveland, in December, 1922, there were representatives present of many of the great industrial unions, central labor bodies, state federations of labor and a score of farmers' organizations. The convention which is in session here is little more than a convention of representatives of the railroad unions.

Only 106 Delegates Present.

Only 106 delegates were reported present by the credentials committee. Of these 44 are delegates from the sixteen standard railroad unions and 24 others represent state organizations of the Conference for Progressive Political Action. As these state organizations are made up almost entirely of railroad men these twenty-four delegates can be counted as coming from the same unions, making a total of 68 delegates representing those unions.

The only international unions represented outside of the railroad unions are the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Fur Workers. The miners, the printers, and other international unions, who sent delegates to the Cleveland conference, are absent.

Besides the above there are about twenty-five delegates from miscellaneous organizations such as the League for Industrial Democracy, American Labor Party, Non-Partisan League, co-operatives, etc., including seven delegates from the Socialist Party. The credentials committee report included only two delegates from farmers' organizations. There were only six representatives from central labor unions and five from state federations of labor. Local unions are barred.

Workers and Farmers Lose Hope In Conference.

The only conclusion which can be drawn by a person who saw the gathering which assembled in Cleveland, who analyzes the make-up of this convention and watches it at work is that the farmers and workers have lost faith in anything of interest to them ever coming out of it, and have directed their effort to secure representation upon the political field into other channels.

Compared to the great gathering of rank and file delegates who formed the Federated Farmer-Labor Party on July 3, this convention is a dismal affair. Here sit the conservative leaders of the railroad unions, all of them big prosperous looking men, together with the representatives of the dying Socialist Party. They indulge in formally eloquent words, but there is no life nor spirit in the whole convention. They applaud references to a Workers' and Farmers' government, but no movement which will win the goal of a Workers' and Farmers' government can come out of the dismal, deathly atmosphere of this gathering.

While the Conference for Progressive Political Action has been conducting its work to organize local and state organizations to reward the friends and punish the enemies of labor, it seems the rank and file movement has been crystallizing in local and state labor parties, which have turned their back upon the Conference as hopeless as an instrument thru which the national crystallization of the movement is to come. The facts that the actual existing farmer-labor organizations have practically boycotted this convention is a good omen for the May 30th Farmer-Labor Convention. The hopes of the farmers and workers are not upon the convention. They have turned their backs upon and are looking elsewhere.

Another Convention Proposed.

It is rumored around "Parlor A" of the Statler Hotel, in which the convention is being held, that the leaders of the organization are very much at sea as to how to proceed. Their pretty little scheme for endorsement of McAdoo as the candidate for president on the Democratic ticket has gone awry. McAdoo is dear to the hearts of the railroad unions. But they are afraid to give the endorsement now that he has been splattered with the oil from Teapot Dome. So the proposal seems to be to wait and call another convention after the national conventions of the old parties. Maybe McAdoo may still run. Maybe some other good man will be nominated by one of the old parties. We'll wait and see what the republicans and democrats have to offer and then we'll decide what to do. Thus seem to run the intentions of the Hillquit-Johnston machine which is running the convention.

Afternoon Devoted to Instruction.

The first afternoon session lasted about two hours. Chairman William H. Johnston appointed a committee on resolution and program, a committee on organization and a committee on nomination of officers. Among the members of committee on organization, which will handle the question of what the conference will do politically in the immediate future is William Mahoney, chairman of the Minnesota Working People's Non-Partisan League, and one of the leaders in the movement for the May 30th Farmer-Labor Convention.

With the committee appointments out of the way, the rest of the session was devoted to what Chairman Johnston called "instruction." Donal Richberg, an expert on railroads, rehashed the story told by Charles Edward Russell in his "Story of the Railroads," and Gustavus Meyer in his "History of Great American Fortunes," about the looting of the nation by the early builders of the railroads. He said the history of the railroads could be divided into three periods, those of "gifts, graft and guarantee." We were now in the period in which the railroads were trying to secure a governmental guarantee of interests on a twenty-five billion mortgage which they hold against the peoples of this country in the form of the securities issued against the railroads of the country.

Richberg was followed by Carl D. Thompson, formerly of Socialist Party fame, but now devoting himsefl to telling the people of this country all about the beauties of public ownership. Thompson "instructed" the delegates for an hour and a half, many of them asleep, about the super-power movement thru which all the ills of our social order are to be ended.

The delegates are promised more instruction by various judges, etc. The plan of the official machine seems to be to keep the delegates interested in something else than the real business of the convention, until little time is left and then rush thru its program, whatever it may be, without much discussion, with the plea that there is no time.

PENNSY SLAPPED GENTLY ON WRIST BY LABOR BOARD

Mildly Reproved for Company Unionism

By LELAND OLDS,
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

Forcible domination and control of the election of employe representatives is the condemnation passed upon the Pennsylvania railroad by the U. S. railroad labor board in a case presented by the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. According to the board the carrier by absolute compulsion prevented the telegraphers from exercising their right to select their organization to represent them in negotiations. This adds one more to the long list of uninforcible decisions condemning the Pennsylvania for violation of the Transportation act.

"The statute," says the board, "never contemplated such an absurdity as the carrier naming the representatives of the employes who were to sit on the opposite side of the bargaining table from the management, neither did it contemplate that this anomalous situation might be effectuated by indirect methods which would permit the carrier forcibly to dominate and control the election of representatives of the employes."

Rebukes Tyrannical Rule.

The board's brief description of the lawless action of this leading anti-union corporation is probably the only service which such decisions render. It says:

"The carrier assumed charge and control of the employes' election, formulated the ballot and the accompanying instructions over the protest of the employes' representatives and proceeded to hold the election in accordance with its own arbitrary policy. The employes were left no choice but to participate in the election and forego their right to vote for their organization. They knew that if they wrote the name of their own organization on the ballots they would be thrown out by the carrier and not counted and that a rump comittee would be set up by the carrier to represent the employes, altho such a committee may have received but a small fraction of the eligible vote. This was what happened to the shop crafts under identical conditions when approximately 10 per cent of the eligible to vote was permitted to name the representatives of the shopmen by throwing out the ballots of all who voted for the Federated Shopcrafts."

Demoralize Paternalism.

This government appraisal of the Pennsylvania's boasted representation system shows that it is nothing more than the most demoralizing sort of paternalism. There is nothing of industrial democracy and nothing of real protection for the employes contained in it.

The board says that a protest of such a grave character affecting the rights of such a arge number of employes cannot be strangled by a technicality and proceeds to order the carrier to cancel its notice of an illegal election and prepare to cooperate in an election by secret ballot in accord with previous decisions. But with the backing of the courts the Pennsylvania will undoubtedly pay little attention to this body which appears to be given teeth only when enforcement against employes is in order.

president of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, in executive session.

Traylor, it is said, related some details of a big bond issue said to have been floated by his bank for the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Company.

Traylor is also reported to have told the committee that Strawn was a member of the board of directors of his bank.

Newspaper Deal Aired.

The Senate investigating committee today made an effort to learn if former Secretary of the Interior Fall was behind the purchase of the Albuquerque, N. M., Journal, in May, 1922.

Melvin A. Traylor president of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago was the first witness. He told of financing in connection with the sale of the Journal by Carl C. Magee. The purchase was made for $200,000 in the name of Sidney M. Weil, citizen of Albuquerque.

Paper Attacked Fall.

Magee, as editor, had been attacking Fall prior to the sale, Magee previously testified.

Weil testified that Magee had encountered editorial difficulties in the operation of the Journal.

"Mr. Magee told me he was prepared to sell the publication," Weil said. "He said he thought perhaps Mr. Fall might be interested in the purchase.

"I drove up to see Mr. Fall and he assured me he had no desire to buy the Journal. He said he was completely out of politics."

Weil said he got the $200,000 for the purchase, "by a loan." The money was given thru the First National Bank of Albuquerque, but there was no separate security. He said he believed the money may have been advanced personally by A. B. McMillan, vice-president of the bank.

He turned the paper over to McMillan after 30 days for $190,000, he said, and deducted $10,000 "for a commission."

Carl C. Magee from whom the Journal was purchased, took the stand. Magee said he did not know who furnished the $200,000 for the purchase of the paper. "I don't think the paper was bought for any other purpose than to eliminate me from the newspaper business in New Mexico," he said, explaining that before the sale the Journal had consistently attacked Fall. Since the sale, he said, it has been friendly to Fall.

Magee is now editor of the New Mexico State Tribune of Albuquerque.

"How to Make Real Money."

Magee testified that the Barham brothers, publishers of the Los Angeles Herald, and later H. H. Tamman and Fred G. Bonfils, publishers of the Denver Post, desired to buy the Albuquerque Journal with the provision that he accept employment with them, but that he had refused.

Magee declared a representative of Tamman and Bonfils told him: "You're a fool if you don't come in with us. We will show you how to make real money out of a newspaper."

It was Magee's testimony before the committee in a previous appearance that gave the committee its first clue to alleged fraud and corruption in the execution of the oil leases between Fall and Doheny and Sinclair.

Magee at that time told the committee of Fall's ranch purchases and the extensive improvements he had made on his New Mexico properties about the time the leases were executed.

Following this lead, the committee inquired into Fall's personal finances and disclosed the $100,000 loan he received from Doheny and the $25,000 lent him by Sinclair.

After Magee's testimony the committee went into executive session to consider the nomination of Strawn and Pomerene.

Four hours later Mr. Coolidge in a statement defied the upper house and refused emphatically to pay any attention to the Senate demand. He said the Senate had no right to make it.

Denby himself had nothing to say when he was told of the Senate's vote, but previously he had stated he would not resign.

The best legal minds in the House and Senate will now consider whether impeachment proceedings against Denby would be likely to succeed. If there is a probability that Denby would beat the impeachment court, the action probably will not be taken.

There was tremendous indignation in the Senate against Mr. Coolidge for his refusal to heed the demand contained in the Robinson resolution.

Coolidge's Statement.

Mr. Coolidge, in his formal statement defying the Senate, said:

"No official recognition can be given to the passage of the Senate resolution relative to their opinion concerning members of the cabinet or other officers under executive control.

"As soon as the special counsel can advise me as to the legality of the leases and assemble for me the pertinent facts in the various transactions, I shall take such action as seems essential for the full protection of public interests.

"I shall not hesitate to call for the resignation of any official whose conduct in this matter in any way warrants such action upon my part. The dismissal of an officer of the government such as involved in this case, other than by impeachment, is exclusively an executive function.

Quotes Madison.

"I regard this as a vital principle of our government. In discussing this principle, Mr. Madison has well said:

"'It is laid down in most of the constitutions or bills of rights in the republics of America; it is to be found in the political writings of the most celebrated civilians and is everywhere held as essential to the preservation of liberty, that the three great departments of government be kept separate and distinct.'

"President Cleveland likewise stated the correct principle in discussing requests and demands made by the Senate upon him and upon different departments of the government, in which he said:

"'They assume the right of the Senate to sit in the judgment upon the exercise of my exclusive discretion and the executive function for which I am solely responsible to the people from whom I have so lately received the sacred trust of office.

"'My oath to support and defend the constitution and my duty to the chief magistracy which I must preserve unimpaired in all its dignity and vigor, compel me to refuse compliance with these demands.'"

Mr. Coolidge concluded declaring he is responsible to the people for his conduct in retention or dismissal of public officials and assumes full responsibility.

"I do not propose to sacrifice any innocent man for my own welfare," the President said.

Tough Days for Standard.

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12.—Without one word of debate, without even a question from any of the corporation bellboys on either side, the Senate adopted without a dissenting vote, on Jan. 7, Senator Walsh's resolution directing the Secretary of the Interior to proceed to cancel the Standard Oil titles on Sections 16 and 36 in Naval Reserve No. 1 in California. The fraud involved was shown during the Teapot Dome inquiry.

It was on the pretext that the naval oil was being pumped away, thru Standard Oil wells located on these sections, that Secretary Fall gave Reserve No. 1, to Doheny on lease, and Doheny jauntily predicted that his profits would be $100,000,000.

Ancient Fraud.

F. C. Dezendorf, field agent for the General Land Office, who was stationed in California in 1913, testified before the Senate committee on Jan. 25 that he investigated the claims to these two sections, and made an adverse report in April, 1913, showing that these were oil lands and as such were reserved by the government. That report was "misplaced" in the San Francisco office for some months, and then Dezendorf was transferred to Washington. For seven years his report was buried in the files here, while Standard Oil held the disputed land and pumped steadily from the petroleum deposit beneath. And at last, after a vain attempt had been made to hold Atty. Gen. Palmer responsible for surrendering these oil lands to Standard Oil, the fact of that surrender was used as Fall's excuse for surrendering the richest oil reserve that remained in public hands, to his personal friend, Doheny.

Shows Political Trend.

This incident of seven-years-too-late enforcement of law by the Senate is another straw in the political wind. It shows to what extent panic has seized upon the hard-boiled cynics who make up the majority of both the Republican and Democratic membership of Congress. It is what visitors to the Senate gallery read in the faces of the supposed leaders on the floor, as these senators sit, twisting nervous hands, listening to some new chapter of infamy in oil. The fight has gone out of them. They dare not resist new proposals of investigation of corruption in high offices of the nation. They read the daily press, they listen to chance conversations in the restaurants, on the street, in the theatre lobby, and they are afraid. The public has lost all faith in the integrity of its federal machinery. Too many hypocrites in patriotic guise have been exposed. The bluster and brag of "business in government" has been dropped. Old party politicians have lost their nerve.

Want Real Prosecution.

That is why Pomerene and Strawn are being challenged, as suitable counsel to prosecute the lawbreakers disclosed in this inquiry. Pomerene is the attorney of a big railroad group, and is known as almost a fanatic in his big-business partisanship. Strawn's law firm includes the father of one of Mellon's chief assistants, and is counsel for a Mellon oil concern. A month ago such selections by Mr. Coolidge would not have been seriously opposed; today they are protested. Keen politicians in Congress know that the people want men of the type of Francis J. Heney and Frank P. Walsh to handle the public's interest in this oil mess. Pomerene and Strawn are prejudiced by their whole business environment and personal sympathies. They don't look good to the millions of voters who will bring in the verdict on this case in November.

Money! Money! Money! Money! That Is All the Talk at Miami, Fla.

(NOTE—Following is our second article on the southern playground of the rich in winter.)

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 12—Miami is as full of pep as an oil camp just after a gusher has come in.

All the hotels are jammed and the talk in the lobbies is mostly about money that is being made, is to be made, or has been made in and about this section.

There are more expensive automobiles on the causeway to Miami beach than are seen in an ordinary afternoon on Fifth avenue in New York. And the licenses are from every state in the union, including California.

Natives are fond of saying Californians come here for the climate and to make them feel perfectly at home. Miami is advertised as the "Los Angeles of Florida." One of the nearby real estate tracts has been named "Hollywood."

Because of the proximity of the British West Indies, liquid delicacies are available at low rates and of course, reputed to be the imported varieties rather than the home-grown which dominate the markets of the north.

As yet no workers have arrived with their families.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—"Did the other papers in CoClorado ever charge you with blackmail in connection with this deal?" Senator Dill of Washington asked of Fred G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, after Bonfils had tried in vain for three hours to find justification for the million dollar "settlement" he secured from Harry Sinclair and the sudden stopping of the Post's attacks on the Teapot Dome lease when that "settlement" had meen made.

Bonfils airily brushed the ugly word aside.

"Oh no, not at all, so far as I am aware," he said. The crowd in the Senate committee room, listening to his defense, grinned skeptically.

Bonfils had come forward, with a bale of contracts and complaints which seemed never to have been filed in court, to show that his little transaction in Teapot Dome was pure as the Denver Post itself. He frankly admitted that he had been "loyal to the common people all my life, fighting against every kind of wrong and corruption, attacking predatory wealth and serving the public good" for some 30 years at that one stand.

Senator Lenroot, who defended Albert Fall during the earlier stages of the oil scandal, and who now is trying to defend his own political situation, dug into Bonfils' past. He showed that Bonfils once testified in court in Kansas City, Kans., with running a lottery. Bonfils replied that "that was just as legitimate a business at that time, in that city, as banking," and counter-charged that Lenroot was "representing one Tom O'Donnell of Colorado in this line of questions." He claimed that O'Donnell had once tried to assassinate him, Bonfils, but that Bonfils had disarmed the man and had actually refrained from killing him.

Lenroot went back to the Sinclair squeeze, showing over and over that the Interior Department had disallowed the claims on which Bonfils and his associate, J. Leo Stack of Denver, had hoped to get a "cut" from Teapot Dome. He read Denver Post headlines and editorials, showing that that paper assailed the Sinclair deal with Fall, and denounced it as a "crooked, corrupt deal," prior to Sinclair's decision to pay them the $250,000 cash and give them a $750,000 interest in the lease. Then the paper ceased to thunder. Its reporter who had gathered the story of Fall's sudden wealth, was not sent to Washington to testify; the committee had to send a subpoena to fetch him.

But the publisher, at intervals bragging of his wealth and of the power of his paper, insisted that he had never quit fighting the lease, even after he had taken a $750,000 interest in it. He said, quite coolly, that he felt sure Sinclair had compelled the Midwest (Standard Oil) crowd to contribute half of the million. His partner, Stack, had told him that there was "a conspiracy and agreement" between Doheny, Sinclair and the Standard Oil crowd, whereby Sinclair got Teapot Dome, Doheny got the California naval reserves, and Standard Oil got $1,000,000 from Sinclair for its worthless claim based on three wells in the Teapot field. That might explain why Doheny had backed out of his first venture, which was the financing of Stack in the attempt to get Teapot Dome or a share of the Dome oil.

Lenroot hung to the subject of Sinclairs giving up that million to the publisher of the thunderous Denver Post. Finally he asked whether Sinclair had not been driven to "purchase your silence" in regard to the "crooked, corrupt deal."

Bonfils, looking pained and surprised, but intensely virtuous, denied it. Why, he had rather that a man with a dinner pail in his hand came into his office, than the owner of 40 banks.

This is the Bonfils who defended the Ludlow massacre, and whose premises were stormed and wrecked by thousands of irate citizens during the last street railway strike in Denver. He is a large owner of those street railways, and he is an expert on the employment of gunmen.

Senator Adams of Colorado, listened to Bonfils' defense in silence. He knew the futility of questioning that species of honest philanthropist.

WHEN McADOO QUIT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Questioning by Senator Lenroot after McAdoo had finished his prepared statement, brought out that McAdoo severed his connection with Doheny, Feb. 2, the day after Doheny testified he had given Albert B. Fall, $100,000.

Criminal Lionized by "Best People" of Patriotic New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Another lion has come to New York to be dined and wined by the "best people" until they want another diversion. The new hero is Corliss Hooven Griffis, in the three-name class since he tried to kidnap Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, wealthy draft avoider still enjoying the beer gardens of Germany.

Mayor Hylan headed an official committee to meet the steamship, Albert Ballin bringing the unsuccessful criminal, who was arrested when he fell down in his plot against the elusive exile.

Seek Fake Doctor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A fake doctor, with a prison record for three jewel robberies perpetrated upon his patients, is being sought by police today in their chase thru the murky ways of the underworld for the murderer of pretty Louise Lawson.

BIGGEST MEET HONORS LENIN AT ROCHESTER

Workers Pledge Selves to Fight for Leninism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Juliet Stuart Poyntz was the principal speaker at the Lenin Memorial meeting here. It was the largest and most enthusiastic meeting held in Rochester, for a long time. The meeting adopted resolutions pledging itself to follow in the footsteps of the great leader of the working class and to exert all its efforts in the building up of the Communist movement as the best monument to his memory.

The resolutions adopted were as follows:

"WHEREAS our Comrade Vladimir Ulianoff Lenin has finally fallen a victim of his own heroic efforts and over-exertion in behalf of the Revolution in Russia and thruout the world, and

"WHEREAS our leader Lenin dedicated his life to the emancipation of the working class and to organizing the workers to seize the power of the state and establish their own dictatorship as the only means to organize a Communist society, therefore

"BE IT RESOLVED that we hereby express our limitless sorrow over the death of our belover leader and our intention to give expression to our grief by following in his footsteps and exerting all our efforts to build up the International Communist Movement. Joint meeting, Workers Party and the Labor Open Forum."

Recognition Is Urged.

"WHEREAS, Soviet Russia is a country of 150 million people, a country with great natural resources and great promise for the future, and has thus far received no official recognition from the government of the United States, and

"WHEREAS, Soviet Russia has shown herself to be fully capable of maintaining herself under the most trying circumstances, such as war, famine and pestilence, and

"WHEREAS, recognition by this government would help the Soviet Republic of Russia to further improve the condition of the people of that great country and

"WHEREAS such recognition would in no way harm the people of the United States, but on the contrary, would be of great benefit to them, and

"WHEREAS Soviet Russia has been recognized by other great nations, such as Italy, Spain, Germany and England, showing that these nations have no fear of any of the so-called destructive propaganda which the government of Soviet Russia is charged with spreading in other countries,

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this meeting of working people of the City of Rochester, N. Y., urge the United States Government to recognize without delay the government chosen by the people of Soviet Russia.

North Dakota Blazing New Trails in Big Struggle for Class Political Action of Workers and Farmers

By JOSEPH MANLEY.
(Secretary, Federated Farmer-Labor Party)

North Dakota, in the days when its Non-Partisan League was a militant fighting organization, was much in the public eye. The conservatives denounced it, while the radicals praised it. But lately North Dakota lost its leading position in the political revolt of the Northwest.

The causes for this were plainly evident in the recent convention of the Non-Partisan League at Bismarck. The mental bankruptcy of that convention was so evident that all delegates, who were real representatives of the farmers—together with many of the old "wheel-horses" of the Non-Partisan League—called a conference immediately after adjournment of the League convention, and organized the Farmer-Labor Party of North Dakota.

This new organization, which thus joins North Dakota with the other states forming the farmer-labor movement of the Northwest, crystallizes the militant movement which is so widespread within that state. It will place North Dakota once more in the lead of the Farmer-Labor movement away from the old dominant capitalist political parties, and toward independent political action.

To understand the situation in North Dakota, it is necessary to recall the action of the Republican State Central Committee, in its meeting of Dec. 28th, last year, when it endorsed President Coolidge for reelection. This action aroused a storm of protest, thruout the state of North Dakota. And because the State Central Committee is under the control of the Nonpartisan League, this was "the last straw", and destroyed all remaining faith in the old league.

When the convention went into session, with 97 delegates—only four of them representing labor—it was quite plain to be seen that there was absolutely no hope for any progressive measures to be adopted there.

Three Big Measures

The following were the three measures of most importance which came before the convention:

A request coming from Congressman J. H. Sinclair, Senator Lynn J. Frazier, and others, asking endorsement of LaFollette for President.

The question of whether the League would accept the legal status given to it by the State's Attorney's ruling that the Nonpartisan League had become the Nonpartisan political party;

And the question whether the convention would or would not rescind the action of the Republican State Central Committee—which is League-controlled—in its endorsement of Coolidge for President.

Small Bankers There

This convention was composed of a majority of small bankers, business men, office-holders and office-seekers, with general farmer representation in a very small minority.

And the principal controversies were with regard to which particular choice for office should be nominated by the convention. There were many factions in the convention.

And these consisted of the retainers of various office-seekers.

Ayres Makes Eloquent Plea

An eloquent plea to the convention was made by Tom Ayres, Chairman of the South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party, asking that it cast aside the old Nonpartisan policy, organize a State Farmer-Labor Party, and thus come into the ranks of the national farmer-labor movement.

Ayres' speech was applauded to the echo—but only by the few delegates who were not bound, body and soul, to the interests of the office-seekers. And when it seemed that Ayres might make some impression upon the other portion of the convention a political henchman of one of the principal office-seekers (not a delegate to the convention), called "time" upon the speaker. The effect of all this was to clearly demonstrate that the Nonpartisan League is now nothing more or less than an adjunct of the national Republican Party.

Delegate J. W. Hempel read several long letters from Congressman Sinclair and Senator Frazier, asking endorsement of Robt. M. LaFollette for President. Delegate Hempel made a forceful argument. Most of the delegates admitted that LaFollette was far superior to Coolidge as a Presidential candidate. But the political machine carried, with but few dissenting votes, a motion that the convention do not endorse any candidate for President.

Much Time in Wrangling

The rest of the convention's time was spent in wranglings between adherents of the rival office-seekers. There was much vague talk about the "program" of the League—but not the slightest hint of anything constructive, with the single exception of the Fedje bill. This bill proposes the extension of the mechanics' lien so as to include the farmer (under the Farm-Labor Lien) and give him the right of first claim upon his mortgaged crop.

In the midst of this welter of confusion and reactionary tactics, petitions were circulated advocating the formation of a State-Farmer Labor Party immediately. And many signers were obtained, to this petition. With result that, immediately following the adjournment of convention—altho the delegates were wearied with the ceaseless bickerings of the rival politicians and their henchmen—an all-night conference was held, with over forty delegates present. Twenty-five of these were delegates to the Nonpartisan League convention. The rest,—men like "Dave" Hamilton and R. H. Walker,—all among the old stalwarts of the old Nonpartisan League when in its prime.

Farmer-Labor Party Organized

In this conference was organized the Farmer-Labor Party of North Dakota. And for it there was adopted a constitution and a national and state program. Farmer-Labor Voice was made the official organ of the new party. Officers for the new organization were elected. Some resolutions were passed—one of them calling upon LaFollette to get out of the Republican Party; another endorsing the United Front campaign of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party; and one approving the May 30th convention in St. Paul and protesting against any attempt toward its postponement.

The officers elected by this conference were as follows:

R. H. Walker, Chairman, who is one of the best known real farmers in North Dakota and was formerly an organizer for the Nonpartisan League;

H. R. Martinson, Secretary-Treasurer, who is President of the Central Labor Union at Fargo and is well-known thruout the state.

An Executive-Committeeman from each of the three Congressional Districts was also elected, as follows:

First district: Alfred Knutson, formerly of the Nonpartisan League;

Second district: Herman Hardt, well-known as a member of the State Legislature and as the popular representative of more than 20,000 Russian-German farmers in that district;

Third district: H. B. French, editor of an influential farmers' newspaper in the state.

A most interesting discussion took place on the question of the national and state program. Of special interest was clause one, of the national program, which reads as follows:

"Land was created for all the people, and we demand a system of land tenure that will eliminate landlordism and tenantry, and will secure the land for the users of the land."

And also clause 5, reading:

"A moratorium for all working farmers, on their farm-mortgage debts, for a period of five years."

The discussion also demonstrated that the farmers and industrial workers of North Dakota are swiftly developing a clear understanding of the economic basis underlying their present critical situation and the great need for such fundamenatl relief measures as the two above quoted. And these two measures are stated, word for word, as in the program of the Federated Farmer-Labor program—which was adopted, in its entirety, by the conference.

The need for a state program became apparent during the discussion when the fact was brought out that the old Nonpartisan League program, most of which had been incorporated into the laws of the state, had never been permitted to really function, to any extent; and that this fact was due to the sabotage of old-line party politicians. The state program adopted in this conference goes much farther than anything ever proposed by the old League. It reads as follows:

STATE PROGRAM:

1. We demand the retention and faithful administration of the state industries, especially the building of terminal elevators and flour mills.
2. We demand that all public funds be deposited in the Bank of North Dakota, and that branch banks be established, one in each county of the state.
3. We favor the enactment of the farm-crop lien law, known as the Fedje Bill No. 164.
4. We demand that all tax titles revert to the state.
5. We demand the re-enactment of the tax-exemption law repealed by the 1923 Legislature.

The whole situation in North Dakota can be summarized by citing, first the action of the Republican State Central Committee—controlled by the Nonpartisan League—endorsing Coolidge for President, at its meeting last December; the action of this League convention in side-stepping a motion to rescind that action; and its point-blank refusal to endorse LaFollette.

On the day following adjournment of the convention, the State Central Committee met and practically reaffirmed their endorsement of Coolidge, by refusing to entertain any motion on the subject.

All of which proves that the Nonpartisan League has been sold out to the most reactionary wing of the Republican Party, and that the only hope for progress must be in the newly-organized Farmer-Labor Party.

MILL OWNERS ATTACK MASS. 48-HOUR LAW

Gompers' Spokesmen Crawl Before Masters

By H. M. WICKS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass.—The textile mill owners of Fall River and New Bedford have started a drive against the 48-hour law in the state of Massachusetts. One Richard Long, a tool of the mill owners, introduced a bill in the legislature to repeal the law. A joint committee of the Senate and Legislature was appointed and held public hearings this week.

As is usual in such hearings the "legislative agents" of the American Federation of Labor were on the job crawling before the legislative flunkeys of capitalism in the most servile manner.

Wednesday's session was particularly interesting. The case for the mill owners had been presented by a drooling individual, an attorney named Dreiser, representing the Associated Industries. This person talked at length about the destructive inroads of Southern competition upon the industries of "our commonwealth."

"Labor" Crawls.

A Mr. Charles Hodgson of the A. F. of L. legislative committee arose and attempted to defend the law against repeal. He opened his address with humanitarian sentimentalism and declared that he does not believe in placing the dollar sign above a humanitarian law. In a feeble attempt at convincing argument he said the proposed repeal was a blow at women and children in the industries of the state. Then he had a brilliant inspiration as he remembered that the bill was passed under the Coolidge administration. He switched his argument from the women and children to a eulogy of the wisdom of the scab-herding, strike-breaking midget politican who now sits in the White House at Washington. In the city of Boston, the identical city in which Coolidge first gained notoriety as a strike breaker and enemy of the working class, this alleged representative of labor, fawning before the republicans on the legislative committee, indulged in a crude, disgustingly sychophantic exhibition of grovelling by asserting that since the law was signed by Coolidge it must have been a good law. "He (Coolidge) never made many unwise moves, otherwise he would not be where he is."

Praise of Coolidge failed to impress the committee, so the legislative agent began to squirm, adjusted the big Elk's tooth dangling from a large chain on a green vest, and emitted this grammatical gem: "Natural conditions (in the South, presumably) doesn't allow the efficiency as exists in the North." It reminded one of Hinky Dink's famous saying, "Them as has shiners, wears 'em!"

Argues Both Ways.

In trying to meet the attacks of the corporation lawyers and appear eminently respectable before the committee, Mr. Hodgson endeavored to reply to the charge that organized labor would force the mills to leave the state with the assertion that: "It would be useless for me to answer that if the industries isn't here there won't be any work."

Then in the next sentence he claimed that even tho the industries did leave it would be better than sacrificing the women and children and that other industries would take their places. The legislative agent of the decrepit State Federation of Labor was not able to perceive his own contradiction after one of the flunkeys of the shoe workers had openly laughed at this blunder. To a mind capable of eternally crawling before the employers in the alleged interest of labor nothing could possibly strike him as inconsistent. Instead of devoting their time to strengthening the political power of the working class, these agents of the Gompers machine take part of the dues paid by the members of organized labor in order to persuade the capitalist class that the labor movement is respectable and the defender of civilization.

In conclusion Mr. Hodgson declared that labor needs no defense as it has proved to be beneficial to both employer and employee in the past and that it would continue to so function.

The only worth-while point brought out during the whole proceedings was the fact that the talk of Southern competition is baseless, because the same capitalists that control textile mills in the North also control most of the mills of the South, therefore they are only competing with themselves.

It is unlikely that the 48-hour law will be repealed, as the peanut politicians are afraid of the voters and from the presentation of the mill owners it is doubtful if they are making a serious effort to defeat it.

The efforts of the representatives of the labor unions trying to prove to the committee how respectable they are could be utilized to better advantage by exposing the class character of the government in order to develop independent political action on the part of the organized workers of the state.

Switzerland to Have Referendum on the 48-Hour Week, Feb. 17

(By The Federated Press)

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 12.—On February 17 a referendum is to be held in Switzerland to decide whether the present 48-hour week established by law shall be exchanged for a 54-hour week. The whole country is stirred up about it, and the employers and a large part of the peasantry are ranging themselves on one side of the question, favoring the extension of working hours, while hand and brain workers of all grades are unanimous in agitating against the proposal.

The law establishing the 48-hour week was passed in June, 1919. Up to then a 59-hour week had been in force. The law applied, however, only to factory workers, and not to workers engaged in trade, transport, the hotel industry, and the building industry. The next year it was proposed that a second law should be passed extending the shorter hours to railwaymen, and to postal and telegraph employes. The reactionaries then insisted upon a public referendum on the question. They were beaten, for the law was approved by a majority of about 100,000.

George L. Siegel Gets League's Endorsement for Mayor of St. Paul

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 12.—The Workingmen's Non-partisan Political League endorsed George L. Siegal, local attorney as their candidate for Mayor in the forthcoming primaries after Coroner C. A. Ingerson of Ramsey county had declined the nomination.

The primary elections will take place on March 18th and the election on May 6th. Mr. Siegel was missing when the nomination was made but William Mahoney assured the delegation appointed to wait on him that he would be a candidate.

In the forthcoming elections the voters of St. Paul are to elect a mayor, a controller, six members at large to the common council, a municipal judge, two justices at large, two constables at large and justices in two wards.

Trachtenberg, Lore Trial at Newark, Comes up Feb. 14

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The four members of the Workers Party, Lore, Trachtenberg, Kaplan and Chriss, arrested on charges of disorderly conduct in Newark, N. J., last week, will be tried Feb. 14. The defendants will attempt to summon Commissioner of Safety Brennan, of Newark, to testify. In view of the impending trial and the settlement of the free speech issue in Newark, the scheduled meeting, at which William Z. Foster was to speak, was postponed at the last moment.

FIRST SHIPMENT OF U. S. COTTON GOES TO RUSSIA

American Business Is After Soviet Trade

By FREDERICK KUH.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—While Secretary of State Hughes is cursing the Russian government from beneath his nicely clipped beard, unofficial recognition of the Moscow regime is making notable headway in American quarters which are no less powerful than Washington officialdom.

Ten thousand bales of American cotton valued at $2,000,000, left New Orleans, Feb. 3rd on the S. S. Aetna, bound for Murmansk. This is the first direct shipment of cotton from the United States to Russia since the revolution.

Huge Trade Coming.

This shipment is merely the forerunner of a series of similar transactions on a large scale. In 1923, the All-Russian Textile syndicate purchased foreign cotton thru the Liverpool and Bremen markets, worth more than $40,000,000. It is likely that the bulk of this trade will henceforth be carried on by direct imports from America. That will depend, of course, upon the attitude of cotton producing combines and upon the terms of credit available thru American banks. There is every reason for believing that both cotton exporters and bankers will do their utmost to encourage the resumption of trade relations.

The extent to which the American markets will be called upon to meet Russia's demands hinges upon the U. S. government's policy. A pursuance of the state department's offensive attitude might conceivably oblige the Russian government to seek markets elsewhere.

It may be asserted, however, that this shipment of the first cotton cargo marks a milestone in the relations of the two countries.

Banks Coming to Terms.

It is not even two months since the All-Russian Textile syndicate opened its office in New York City. The president of that organization, Nogin, who visited this country recently, found American cotton growers eager to transact business with Russia, while powerful American financial groups, notable, the Chase National bank, were quick to show their readiness to come to terms in negotiating a credit agreement.

Aside from the 10,000 cotton bales shipped on the S. S. Aetna, the cargo included 500 tons of cottonseed, destined for Turkestan, where the Moscow government is embarking upon an ambitious scheme for cotton cultivation. It has been intimated to certain American groups that concessions might be available in Turkestan, both for cotton growing land and for the establishment of textile industries.

Purchases made thru the Russian syndicate also included textile machinery, mill supplies and textile fibers. Tests will be made of American dye-stuffs, and proving satisfactory, these, too, will be bought on an ample scale.

Southern States Eager.

Prior to his departure, Nogin traveled thru the southern states, where he found the liveliest interest manifested in the Textile syndicate's activities. His dealings during that excursion resulted in tentative arrangements with the South Carolina Co-operative Cotton-Growers' Association and with the Georgia Growers' Co-operatives.

While most of the credits hitherto granted to the Russian syndicate by American banks were of a short term nature, the stability of the Russian chervonetz, coupled with the rapid improvement of Russia's whole economic organism, presages the availability of American credits on more favorable terms soon.

It is understood, in this connection, that a high official of a New York financial institution is contemplating a journey to Russia for the purpose of ascertaining more precisely the assurances which the Russian government and its subsidiary institutions can offer for future credits.

MOUSORGSKI'S RUSSIAN MUSIC STIRS AUDIENCE

Miss Breslau Gives Vital Interpretation

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Russian music at its best, and a splendid artist of Russian descent featured the concert of the Chicago Symphony orchestra last Friday and Saturday. Sophie Breslau, the contralto, was the soloist and she sang a group of songs by Mousorgski.

Modest Mousorgski, more than any other composer, got close to the great pounding peasant heart of Russia that bled once, and will bleed no more. The five songs that Miss Breslau sang express different phases of life. Those entitled "Pain" and "Death's Serenade" are conceived in the spirit of grim, bitter pessimism that pervaded the art of old Tsarist Russia, and which found literary expression in Dostoievski and Andreyev. "The Banks of the Don" paints a different picture, one of a people that sings and dances, a people revelling in brilliant colors and laughter. "On the Dneiper" is a Cossack song, a song of a gaunt, determined race, bloody and unafraid. "The Classicist" is a satire, written to work off a personal grudge, and it is the refinement of sarcasm to the nth degree.

Miss Breslau is rich, warm, vital in voice, a truly great singer, possessing unusual dramatic ability.

"Nutcracker" Suite.

The other Russian work was Chaykovski's "Nutcracker" suite. This is a series of dances composed for toys made of tinsel and sugar. But the toys that can dance to the trepak in the suite must be phenomenally vigorous dolls.

The program opened with Gluck's overture to "Iphigenia." The work is not as simple minded as a Gluck composition usually is, but it is fiery and powerful, and big in outline, like the Greek tragedy to which it is a prelude.

Following this was an aria from Wagner's "Rienzi." "Rienzi," like the romantic German music it copies, is good opera, but bad drama. The aria is full of pompous grandeur, and Miss Breslau sang it superbly.

Then came the "Dante" symphony of Granados. This is a most mediocre composition, modern in technic, and embalmed in spirit. It is in two movements, one with a vocal part, but even Sophie Breslau could not save it from deadly dullness and boredom. The work does succeed in suggesting one line of the Italian poet, "Abandon all hope, ye who enter here."

"Indian Rhapsody."

Carl Busch of Kansas City directed the first Chicago performance of his "Indian Rhapsody." The composition suggests a series of disconnected episodes, ending with an elaborate student's exercise, rather than a continuous piece of music. It is skillfully orchestrated. Busch's Indian is a half breed in a dress suit, who belongs to "The Minute Men of the Constitution."

For next week three piano soloists are promised. Maier and Pattison, the musical Gold Dust twins, and Arthur Shattuck, who has played once before at the symphony concerts this season. There will be two concertos by both Bachs, one for two pianos, one for three. A ballade for two pianos and orchestra, by Sowerby, our most important native son, a sinfonietta by Schumann, an overture by Handel, and the tone poem "Don Juan," by Strauss, will round out the program. This might be a good concert to stay away from.

She Is Going Home.

MEXICANS KNOW HOW TO TALK TO SUPREME COURT

Then Frightened Judges Reverse Decision

(By The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12.—The peasants here know something about handling a supreme court. Over three hundred militant peasants from a little town in the state of Tlaxcala, came down last week to interview the supreme court of the nation here in the capital, when said court decided that they would have to return the communal lands which had been granted to them a couple of years back by the agrarian commission for the redistribution of land.

This commission declared that the lands had been stolen by a big landowner from the common lands of the peasants. After they had taken possession again and were preparing to harvest their second crop, the "owners" who had been fighting them with injunctions and other legal chicanery, got a favorable decision from the supreme court. (Aren't they all alike, tho?)

When the peasants came to town to "see about" the eviction order, they marched three hundred strong together with their wives and children and arrived late at night after tramping all day. Early next morning, in a drizzling rain, they went to the supreme court. All day they picketed the place till the court closed. Then they marched down the fashionable Avenina Juarez and Avenida Madero to the central plaza, shouting "Death to the supreme court," and alternating with "Death to the magistrates." Next day the supreme court "discovered" new technicalities, and reversed its decision. The peasants are now harvesting their crops.

Five peasant leaders and the wife of one of them, were framed up on a fake murder charge over six months ago, when they became too active in the Agrarista movement in Zamora. The labor and peasant forces of the country blocked their execution up till the outbreak of the counter-revolution. But when Enrique Estrada and Salvador Alvarado took possession of Zamora in the name of the fascisti, the six were taken out into the courtyard of the prison and shot, after which their bodies were hung from the prison walls. The peasants in question are Ascensio, Cervantes, Herrera, Reyes, and Alvarado and his wife, Teresa.

The Villistas are on the warpath in the north under the lead of Hipolito Villa brother of the famous Pancho. The first sign of their uprising came in the form of the successful robbing of the train from Laredo. They got away with 21,000 pesos but did not harm the passengers. The train then proceeded on its way. A detachment has been sent out after them from the nearest garrison.

Daniel B. Gish, member of the International Association of Machinists, local 1657 (Mexico City), is the most active aviator on the western front, operating against the rebel forces of Enrique Estrada. So far he has received two telegrams of congratulation from President Obregon and a broken rib, from running his plane into an army mule. But he is again in active service.

German Bosses Hate Workers' Relief Society

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The International Workers' Relief Committee is thoroly hated by the big German industrialists. Here is an example of the work of I. W. R. C. that rouses the bosses' ire. In Weisswasser the glass blowers were locked out because they would not accept a reduction in wages. They sent a delegation to Berlin to ask the I. W. R. C. for help. They were supplied with 2,000 rations daily. When the lockout ends a soup kitchen will be established in Weisswasser. The action of the I. W. R. C. in helping the locked out workers brought universal condemnation from the industrialist press.

Flivver Magnate's Wealth Will Pile Sky High This Year

BOSTON, MASS., Feb. 12.—Henry Ford sees 1923 as a banner business year.

"We plan an increase of 15 to 20 per cent in our output of Ford cars, Lincoln's and tractors," the manufacturer said today in an interview with the Boston News Bureau.

"As against an output of 2,200,000 of these units in 1923," Ford said, "I am confident we will manufacture 2,500,000 and 2,600,000 units this year.

"This will include the output of all our plants in Detroit, England and Canada."

Kids Denounce the Lies About Lenin and Soviet Russia

The children of the United Workers Sunday schools are always on the lookout for the propaganda of the bosses. Recently Current Events, a publication claiming to be nonpartisan, published an article on "The Red Radicals Mourning for Lenin." The Workers Sunday school children who saw the article were quick to disagree with it and sent the following letter to the editor of Current Events. So far they have received no reply.

Gentlemen:—

Regarding your article entitled "Red Radicals Are Mourning for Lenin" in a recent number of Current Events, we quote as follows:

"Lenin accepted German money and carried out the German plans, not because he had any love for Germany, but because he hoped to bring on a revolution that would establish Communism thruout the world."

What do you mean by this statement? Did he get the money from the Kaiser or from the workers? Please let us know where, when, and from whom you got this statement. Prove that this is true.

You say, "Taking the French Revolution as an example, he established the 'terror' and ruthlessly killed scores of thousands who dared to oppose Communism."

You make the appearance of being a nonpartisan paper, yet all your news is written deliberately from the viewpoint of and for the benefit of the bosses of society, the Rockefellers, Morgans, etc. . . .

For the last six years, Russia was establishing herself by developing its industries and strengthening its "Workers' Government." It had to do this while fighting against world capitalism, the armies of Kolchak, Denikin, etc., besides fighting against the foreign invaders, including the armies of the United States when they tried to intervene in Siberia. Today Russia is the strongest of European nations.

Recognizing this, we demand the proof of your statements, which says that Lenin and Trotzky were instrumental in murdering thousands of non-believers in Communism.

We ask you to print this in the next issue of the Current Events, and thereby prove to us, your readers, that you are just a pure news-spreading agency, and not a deliberate distorter of facts for the interest of the capitalists and their fat-belly politicians in Washington.

Yours very truly,
The Children of the North-West
Branch of the United Workers
Sunday Schools.

Sancho Panza Is Rich Satire for Workers to Enjoy

By A. L. CARPENTER,
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

Altho produced as a fantastic comedy, Sancho Panza, which has been playing in Boston, Mass., for some time is unique in its message to the onlookers. The play is a satire on romance, a satire on government, a satire on life. Its humor, its vitality, its philosophy, has made for it a play that will be looked upon by the working class as a lesson that will not hurt anyone to learn.

The play itself is taken from Cervantes' story, Don Quixote de la Mancha. It was originally written in the year 1605. A short synopsis of the play is here given.

Sancho Panza, the great popular character of Spanish literature, was first introduced to the reading world in 1605, but the play as it has been written for the stage does credit to any modern story. Don Quixote went about trying to restore the world to chivalry. He was accompanied by the rotund Sancho and the latter's donkey, Dapple. Don Quixote had promised Sancho the governorship of an island as soon as he should "conquer a kingdom." The incident most familiar to English readers is the adventure of the windmills immortalized by the artist Dorr.

His philosophy is evident during the entire play. Such saying as, "If the kings and dukes, the governors and all connected with the direction of governments instead of fighting each other, would get together around a table on which was plenty of good food and wine and would inject a little common sense into their meals there would be no wars." "Between the man who produces and the man who purchases there shall be no interference."

The play was well received here. The producers circularized every labor union in the city for support.

Doctors Framing Helper of Poor, Declare Friends

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 12.—Dr. H. B. McCall was arraigned yesterday before the United States Commissioner charged with selling narcotics illegally. Dr. McCall said the narcotics were used in a cough medicine which he gave his patients as part of his treatment of them.

Dr. McCall is a well known physician and is very popular with the poor of the city whom he has been treating in many cases without charge. His friends declare the charge is a frame-up engineered by other doctors.

DARING GRAFTER AND DESERTER IS PAL OF HARDING

Forbes Rose from Ranks to $225,000,000

Col. Charles R. Forbes, former head of the Veterans Bureau, whose conduct of that office a United States grand jury is investigating here, is as picturesque a grafter as ever got his hand in the public till.

In addition to being picturesque he was efficient; $225,000,000 is the boodle that did not go for the benefit of soldiers who were disabled in the world war.

Drummer Boy to Grafter.

Forbes began his career at the age of 12 when he joined the Marine corps as a drummer. He was with the marines two years. From then till he was 22 he wandered over the country doing anything he could. At the age of 22 he joined the army and deserted after a few months. For four years he managed to dodge the authorities and when he was caught he agreed to finish the term of his enlistment and thus escaped prison for desertion.

He went to the Philippines and rose to the rank of sergeant and was discharged.

Discharged from the army at the age of 31 he settled in the Pacific Northwest. Here he became an active politician of sorts. From the Northwest he drifted to Honolulu and island politics. His rise was rapid and he soon became Commissioner of Public Works.

While holding this job he met President Harding, then a Senator on tour of the Philippines. He made a hit at once with the Senator. Forbes was a man after Harding's own heart. He was jolly, easy-going, good natured.

Decorated, By Gad.

America entered the war and at once Forbes applied for a commission as an officer in the army. The War department didn't bother to look up his record. He was a somebody now and O. K. He got the commission and was sent to France. He received a couple of decorations.

After Forbes was mustered out of the army and Harding was nominated for president, Forbes rushed to Marion where he became a fixture on the Harding front porch.

After the election and before Harding assumed office, Forbes cooly asked for the job of running the shipping board. Harding would have given it to him but other men had to get jobs so he was given something "just as good."

Spent Only $447,000,000.

Forbes was made head of the Veterans Bureau. As soon as he took over the office he managed to make it the most expensive branch of the government; spending $447,000,000. A great deal of this money went into giving wild parties to his friends and political bootlickers. His parties are still remembered.

At the White House he was a familiar figure. While politicians waited to see Harding, Forbes walked into the presidential office. He was not averse to using the prestige the general knowledge of his friendship with the president gave him. He used it in every way he could.

When Secretary Fall resigned, Forbes bragged that the job was his for the asking. But, the Senate investigation of his conduct of the Veterans Bureau started and his little world came tumbling down. He resigned as director of the Bureau and today he expects to be indicted and maybe be sent to prison for the most colossal piece of graft ever pulled off in this country.

"Power from Sun" When Coal Goes, Declares Edison

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 12.—Thomas A. Edison started out his seventy-eighth year today by arriving at his office before any of his employes and punching the time clock as usual, the electrical wizard finally was persuaded to give his views after another year of maturity on current subjects of interest.

In response to questions, he said:

"Man has not yet reached, but is approaching, physical perfection.

"When coal and crude petroleum resources are exhausted, power will be extracted from the sun, the wind, the tides and vegetable growth.

"The controversy between fundamentalists and modernists in religion is the result of an attempt to make facts out of myths.

"Death of criminals by lethal gas is more human than by electrocution.

"Radio is the greatest recent invention but it will never supplant the newspapers as a means of disseminating information.

"During the last year I have devoted a major portion of my time to perfecting various kinds of labor saving machinery. I believe that electricity will stand many new uses on the farms."

Oppose MacDonald's Appointment.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Scottish Labor members of parliament are up in arms at the action of Ramsay MacDonald in appointing H. P. MacMillan, an avowed Conservative, to the position of Advocate-General of Scotland.

"This appointment is enough to make Keir Hardie turn over in his grave," declared Neil MacLean, labor M. P. for Glasgow.

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

Youth Begins Trade Union Activities.

Karl Liebknecht who built the foundation of the present German Communist Party from the young revolutionists he had won to his side before and during the dark days of the war would be proud of our young American rebels. The first big work undertaken by the revolutionary youth in the trade unions in this country was that conducted at the United Mine Workers Convention.

Reports from many present, show an amazing ability on behalf of the young miner delegates, many of them around 20, and some even younger. It is incongruous to think that with so many jazz hounds in this country, with the octupus-like Y. M. C. A., deeply sunk boy scout movement and a host of other anti-working class organizations that a band of determined revolutionary youth can flourish and show its metal. Extremes breed extremes.

On the one hand there is a mass of indifferent working youth, made so by years of distorted teaching; on the other hand, a small but growing revolutionary youth movement beginning to take an active part in the real struggles of the working class.

The United Mine Workers Convention example was just a definite, out-and-out beginning of the Young Workers League of America. There was demonstrated that years are not required to make one a progressive trade unionist, one who understood the needs, not only of his fellow trade unionists, but the working class generally.

When Old Gompers lies rotting amid affectionate worms, the young fellows now beginning their work in the worker's organizations, will be the most energetic in cleaning up the dirty mess he has been creating in the organized labor movement for these many years.

Gompers' attitude reminds us of the old social-democrats who detested the growth of the youth movement in Germany and actually prohibited it in its early stages, and later, when it grew in spite of official edict, they sanctioned but sought to control it. But the difference in the rise of the American young workers in the American trade union movement is this: Gompers will never sanction them; neither shall he ever control them.

Doheny Steal Is Unchallenged; City Considers Effect

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 12.—The entire city administration of Los Angeles is still trying to avoid an investigation of the manner in which Edward L. Doheny, oil operator, got a thiry-years lease on a pier in Los Angeles harbor from the city at $6,813.34 a year after the city spent $1,722,000 to improve the land surrounding it. The lease was granted after Doheny took the president of the harbor commission, Edgar McKee to Honolulu for a little trip on Doheney's yacht.

A few days after Doheny rented his pier the Harbor Commission raised the rents on all public lands in the district. This increase cannot affect Doheny for ten years. Had the increase been applied to the Doheny pier he would have had to pay $130,000 a year more than he is doing now.

All the politicians are eager to hush up the whole matter in order that the fair name of Southern California may not be touched by a scandal like the one in which Doheny is already involved in in Washington. So far indications are that Doheny and his friends on the Harbor Commission will be able to get away with their deal in order to save the climate and name of Los Angeles.

Taxi Men Slain by Rivals, Not Labor, New Clue Reveals

Assistant State's Attorney Gorman was busy up till a late hour last night questioning Tim Neary, secretary of the Teamsters' union about the killing of two Checker Taxi company employes Friday which he is trying to pin on labor. Gorman refused to say if he intended to hold Neary or what he asked Neary or what Neary said.

While the states attorney was questioning Neary it was indicated that the officials of the Checker Company really knew that the shooting was done by agents of rival taxi companies. They petitioned the mayor to remove a certain police lieutenant who they say discriminated against the Checker company in favor of rival concerns.

The executive board also announced that they would ask states attorney Crowe to investigate charges that Chief of Police Collins and Sheriff Hoffman had been negligent in failing to provide the company officials with protection against the gunmen's attack.

So far all attempts of the states attorney's office to attach the killing to a war between rival labor factions has failed.

County conventions to elect delegates to the state convention and endorse candidates for the legislature will be held March 1st.

LENIN MEETING STOPPED AGAIN AT WILKES-BARRE

Bulls Bar Workers from the Hall

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Feb. 12.—Obeying the orders of the American Legion, Mayor Hart's police stopped the Lenin memorial meeting which was to have taken place here yesterday. The police surrounded the meeting and prevented anyone entering. Rose Pastor Stokes, who was to have spoken, tried to reason with the chief of police who was in charge of the heavily armed guard that surrounded the meeting place, but he refused to discuss the matter merely saying "Get out 'o here, lady. Beat it."

Rose Pastor Stokes and officials of the Workers Party here will confer with the American Civil Liberties Union to decide on what legal action should be taken in the matter.

Dan Hart, mayor of Wilkes-Barre, had promised to permit the meeting to proceed without police interference, but when the American Legion who prevented the first meeting objected he backed down on his promise and ordered the chief of police to prevent the meeting.

It is expected that the Workers Party and the American Civil Liberties Union will make another attempt to hold a meeting in the near future.

Mayor Hart told Rose Pastor Stokes and others that if the Workers Party asked for a permit to hold a meeting, gave him a list of the speakers and the nature of the topics to be discussed, he would consult with a committee from the Black Diamond Post of the American Legion, and if the legionnaires found no objection, the meeting would be allowed. His offer was ignored.

Straight Talk from Queensland to John Bull on War Loan

BRISBANE, Queensland, Feb. 12.—Something in the nature of straight talk is likely to take place when Labor Premier Theodore of Queensland reaches London to discuss the question of loan conversions for $125,000,000 of loan money to Queensland which falls due this year and in 1925.

In 1920, when Premier Theodore last went to London to secure loan money, the money kings of London demanded that he should repeal certain labor legislation that affected them financially—particularly the taxation of large estates owned by absentee landlords. Theodore refused to do so, and secured his loan in the United States on better terms than those offered him in London.

Now the money kings in England are again demanding that Theodore repeal the legislation objected to as the price of his securing the conversion of the loans now due. He has stated definitely that as the legislation in question has been indorsed by the people of Queensland by general election he does not purpose to alter one letter of it.

Theodore states that should they refuse to reconvert the loans he will go to the United States again. Theodore's action in refusing the demands of the London money kings is applauded by the Australian people.

Russian Farmers Getting Machinery from United States

(By The Federated Press)

MOSCOW, Feb. 12.—As a part of the general campaign to furnish the peasants with agricultural machinery on easy terms, Selskosoyuz (All-Russian Union of Agricultural Co-operatives) is organizing stations to lend out the machinery to the peasants. The number of stations set up in the various localities will depend on the number of primary agricultural co-operatives there, on the extent of cultivable land, and on the needs of the local peasant population.

For the purpose of lowering the price of machinery, Selskosoyuz has arranged with the government authorities for lowering the transport rates for agricultural machines by 50 per cent and also the storage charges. The greatest demand at present is for tractors, binders, steam-driven threshing machines and grain polishing machines.

Centrosoyuz (All-Russian Union of Consumers' Co-operatives) has adopted the system of selling machinery for its equivalent in grain on long-term credit and is also instituting lending stations. In order to widen the scope of this work, Centrosoyuz has presented a petition to the state planning department for the granting of a five to six-year credit especially for this purpose. The prices of the machinery are to be kept down to the pre-war level if possible.

Centrosoyuz has ordered a large amount of agricultural machinery from America.

East Liverpool Honors Lenin.

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, Feb. 12.—The Workers Party of East Liverpool held an inspiring Lenin memorial meeting here last Sunday. Talks were given on the life and work of Lenin and the effect of his leadership on the labor unions, and the Communist Party both in Russia and other countries. There was a fine musical program given by local comrades. The meeting ended with the singing of the International.

THE THEATRE

By D. FERRIER

The "Ziegfeld Follies," which arrived out here in the provinces just a year late due to its immense popularity in the more appreciative East, is not nearly so good a show as several of its predecessors. This may or may not be due to the fact that most of the original group of entertainers in the present edition of the show have long been missing from its scenes.

In the first place, $4.40 is too high a price to pay for the best seats of a far better show than this "Follies." That being off our chest, let use see what the current edition of the "national institution" has to offer.

The feminine dancing in the show, handled best by Evelyn Law, Gilda Gray and Martha Lorber, is up to the usual "Follies" standard. Each does notably in her own particular style, and the specialties by the Tiller girls from London are syncronized motion at its best.

The pleasing voices of Elsa Peterson, Alexander Gray and the "Follies" quartette are wasted on the songs, which are mostly unnoteworthy.

Willie Collier and Sam Bernard, two generally capable comedians, have probably the most banal and tiresome lines of their careers, and Jimmy Hussey is impossible in trying to imitate Eddie Cantor, an asinine ambition in the first place.

The Fokine ballet is nicely arranged, altho most of the "frolicking gods" fail entirely to get the spirit of the thing. Joseph Urban contributes various particularly uninspired settings to the show, which are in part offset by two or three Ben Ali Haggin tableaus made appealing by the nude bodies of beautiful girls.

Simeon Karavaeff and the Kelo brothers are excellent in the limited moments alloted to their dances.

The "Follies" is being presented at the Colonial theater.

"Jig Time" at the Olympic.

Many rare and colorful stage pictures and musical numbers are magnificently presented in "Jig Time," the mammoth revue at the Olympic Theater. In two acts and seventeen scenes, it is one of the most pretentious offerings in Columbia burlesque. A talented company has won approval in musical comedy, vaudeville and the cabarets, and furnishes the entertainment of the piece.

Dictatorship in America

The Senate, provided by the framers of the constitution as a check upon the House of Representatives, composed of the most conservative types in American political life, demands that President Coolidge force Secretary of the Navy Denby to resign.

The president cooly tells the senators and the people of the United States who elected them that the senate has not the power to make such a demand and that he will ignore it.

Representative government?

Responsibility of elected officials to the electorate?

The president the servant of the people?

President Coolidge is right. The senate has no such power because the framers of the constitution saw to it that the executive alone enjoys it.

The democratic character of the United States government is a myth. It is not responsive to the will of the people as expressed thru the franchise and was not intended to be.

Our form of government was planned by individuals who represented the privileged classes of the period in which they lived and who made the most careful arrangements to prevent any wave of popular protest being reflected in the government itself until time had tempered mass resentment.

Congressmen are elected for two years, senators for six and the president for four. Above all stands the supreme court appointed for life—the highest tribunal in the land, combining thru both law and custom, executive, legislative and judicial authority.

The American form of government is the most inflexible and irresponsible, barring absolute monarchy, ever devised by man because its mandate is always conditioned upon issues that have lapsed before it takes office. Its personnel cannot be changed by the popular representatives during the term of the president—appointees are HIS and not the people's. Impeachment of the president—to all intents and purposes impossible—is the only recourse.

In any other country in the world having the pretense of democratic government, such a scandal as the Teapot Dome steal would have forced the resignation of the executive wing—the prime minister and his cabinet. President Coolidge and his official family would have been kicked out—he and they could not have defied the demands of elected representatives.

Never in the history of American government has a similar situation arisen and this of course is taken as proof by the unthinking that it is an unfortunate affair that will never occur again. The contrary is true.

The United States has left behind the period in which government could afford to make some show of representing the popular will—the competitive period of American capitalism. The United States is now a world power. It conducts adventures abroad of which the American people, badly informed as they are, do not approve.

It wages ruthless war on native peoples in its colonies on behalf of financial institutions that choose and dominate the government. It presents an unyielding front to labor at home and it finds it ever harder, in the face of popular discontent, to protect those who have stolen the natural resources of the nation.

It is natural that the dictatorial possibilities latent in the American form of government should have been utilized first to force the populace in 1917 into an imperialist war against which its opposition had just been expressed in a popular election—in 1916.

It is just as natural that the inflexible character of American government should find its second expression in the use of its dictatorial power by President Coolidge to protect his administration from the righteous wrath of a people aroused by proof of the corrupt class nature of American government indisputably shown by the Teapot Dome revelations.

It is in such times as these, when the nation is seething with unrest that reaches up from the working and farming masses and involves large sections of the middle class, with American capitalism in danger—not of revolution but of far-reaching social and political changes that would make its task of exploitation more difficult by weakening its hold on the mass mind—that the capitalists give thanks for "the farsightedness of the founders"—the farsightedness that was shown by James Madison when he told his fellow-exploiters at the Constitutional Convention:

> In future time, a great majority of the people will be without landed or any other sort of property. These will combine, under the influence of their common situation—in which case the rights of property and the public liberty will not be secure in their hands. There will be, particularly, the distinction between the rich and the poor. An increase in population will of necessity increase the proportion of those who will labor under all the hardships of life, and secretly sigh for a more equal distribution of its blessings.

The Workers Party contends that the American government is a dictatorship of the capitalist class, that it was intended to be such by its founders and that the sops thrown to the democratic leanings of the masses have not weakened but have strengthened this dictatorship by concealing its real nature.

Woodrow Wilson did much to shatter the myth of government "of, for and by the people".

Calvin Coolidge has continued the good work under the pressure of the forces that are working for uprooting of capitalism.

Appealing to the power granted him as president by the constitution President Coolidge today is carrying out the historic task of American capitalist government—protecting the despoilers of the people from the consequences of their dishonest and tyrannical acts.

To say that such use of governmental power was not within the ken of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention is to admit ignorance of American history. Not only did they contemplate this possibility but they recognized the necessity for it by a system of checks and balances and division of authority which placed the American government beyond the reach of the people at the only times great masses are aroused to action—when corruption, inefficiency and tyranny have discredited completely the people's rulers.

The Workers Party of America calls attention of the workers and farmers to the proof furnished by President Coolidge of the dictatorial class character of the United States government and urges them to organize for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government that will use its power, not to protect and advance the interests of the capitalists but in the interests of the working and farming masses.

A New "Hero"

Maudlin sentimentality has found an opportunity for expression in the welcome accorded Lieutenant Griffis—the would-be kidnaper of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll.

The whimperings of this formerly doughty and self-appointed avenger of America's honor have cluttered up the pages of the capitalist press ever since his appeal for aid was broadcasted.

He and some others of the American military caste violated just about all the laws that Germany has in the endeavor to capture and bring back for punishment a young man whose only crime was evasion of military service in a war that even children now know was a crime against humanity.

Lieutenant Griffis seems to have reasoned that so cowardly a person as Bergdoll would be easy to handle, but Bergdoll's pacifism apparently is confined only to imperialist military adventures, as he killed one of his attackers and wounded another.

We have little sympathy for pacifists and none at all for Bergdoll, but Griffis and his companions, the type of militarist that is terrorizing the workers in Italy, Greece, Spain and only a short while ago composed the Black and Tans in Ireland, are deserving of nothing but contempt.

No sooner was Griffis sentenced than he whined like a spoiled child—which is what he is. Lionized on his return, the demonstration in New York is ample proof that the ruling-class of America and its dupes look upon this country as a sort of international bully, who needs to pay no attention to the laws of any country, not even its own.

It is little wonder that Europeans of all classes look upon Americans as uncouth savages when a Griffis gets the front page and a Steinmetz a meager obituary notice.

The Negro Assembly

Desire for unity of action for all Negro organizations, an intense interest in all labor problems and a very evident desire to co-operate to the fullest extent possible with labor organizations of white workers are the outstanding characteristics of the All-Race Assembly, which began its session yesterday, at Wabash avenue and 38th street.

Some idea of the scope of the assembly agenda is given by the following impressive list of questions to be discussed: Labor, Education, the Negro Press, the African-American's Relation to Worldwide Race Movements, Fraternal and Benevolent Organizations of the Race, Religion, Inter-Racial Co-operation, Agitation Against Lynching, Segregation, Disfranchisement, and Peonage.

It is no tribute to American civilization that the lynching question will occupy a large part of the assembly's time.

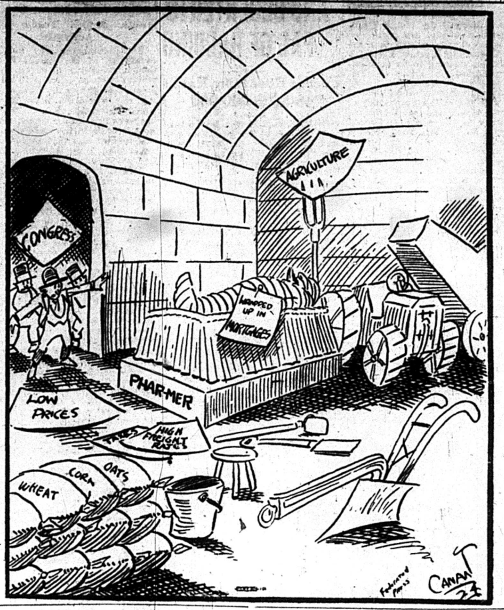
Of all committees appointed by the assembly the most important is the Committee on Labor.

This body will have to consider the all-important issues raised by the entry of more than a million southern Negroes into industry during the last few years and upon the satisfactory solution of this problem depends much of the success of the movement for racial emancipation.

The future of the 12,000,000 Negroes in America, most of them wage-earners and dependents of wage-earners, is indissolubly linked with that of the white workers and those who have the interests of the American labor movement at heart will await with interest the program which the committee on labor will propose for the endorsement of the assembly and the action of the assembly upon it.

The political and oil activities of Coolidge and McAdoo have made it proper to refer to them as the two leasing candidates.

THE AMERICAN TUT-ANKH-AMEN



When Comrade Lenin Spoke

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH.

(This impression of Lenin's last speech is written by the English poet and journalist, who served two and a half years' imprisonment in Leavenworth Penitentiary, for I. W. W. activity, and was deported to England.)

IT was during the Fourth World Congress of the Communist International.

The Congress was held in the Nikolaevsky Palace—the Moscow residence of the Czars—in the Kremlin. It is a huge place, with great halls and corridors, with something of grandeur about them despite the glaring vulgarity of their marble, gilt and mirrored decorations.

We knew that Lenin was to speak at the Congress, and that the time for his address was nearing. We knew, too, all of us, that Vladimir Ilyitch's health was none too good.

In the corridor outside the Congress rooms, and in the great hall—where once Court Levees were held—where we used to promenade between sessions, the question was continually being asked, "When is Lenin going to speak?" In all languages we could hear it as we surged up and down the hall, taking our brief exercise. Big blond Scandinavians, animated Italians, loose-gaited Americans, Englishmen—looking intensely and rather self-consciously English amid this motly gathering—Frenchmen, Turks, Bulgars and a score of other nationalities; revolutionists from every corner of the world, hard-bitten, class-war veterans from almost every prison in the world, they were eager, like simple children, to see and hear Lenin. It was not just curiosity however; it was not alone their respect for a man who had contributed so much new thought to revolutionary history; it was also affection.

For Lenin was loved; and loved by millions of plain simple people, as well as by revolutionaries. I have seen old peasant women, in Russian country towns, gathered round the bulletin which announced the state of Lenin's health, listening to some one reading it aloud to them. And I have seen the tears streaming down the faces of these old women, as they crossed themselves, over and over again, crying, "God help our Vladimir Ilyitch." "Christ restore him to health again!" They knew nothing of the theories of Communism, these simple people, but they loved Lenin, and trusted him. They loved him as one of themselves, with a sort of brotherly familiarity, entirely untouched by all.

And so we waited to hear this man who had our respect and our love.

I remember that I was in the press bureau that day, in the great hall of palace where scores of typewriters were clicking out the news of the Congress, in many languages, so that the workers, the world over, might know what was taking place.

Some one came hurrying in. "The Old Man is going to speak!" It was in these familiar terms that Lenin was affectionately known to us of the English-speaking nationalities.

We hurried into the Congress hall. The platform was overcrowded. At the long scarlet-covered table of the Presidium sat Zinoviev, Radek, Bucharin, and others, still and intent.

Suddenly the delegates arose. A rather short, stocky man had walked briskly onto the platform. Yes, he had walked briskly enough, but there was a doctor and a nurse with him. We stood, all of us, and we cheered, in heaven knows how many languages; and we sang the "Internationale," and then cheered again. It was a perfectly spontaneous tribute from this World Congress of seasoned revolutionists to that man, with the keen humorous eyes, who stood quietly, absolutely without pose, waiting for us to finish.

Then he spoke. He was dealing with the question of the New Economic Policy. But, instead of going into its many details, as he intended, he could only speak to us for a couple of hours. His health would not permit the great effort he had wished to make.

Lenin's manner was not oratorical. He spoke in a conversational tone, rather as tho he were endeavoring to convince an intelligent opponent in a discussion. He was perfectly distinct; his voice carried, apparently without effort, to the farthest corners of the long and accoustically very unfavorable, hall.

He had none of the flamboyant gestures of the platform. As he approached a crucial point in his argument, he would make a sort of little lunge forward. His right hand moved constantly in short, incisive, crisp gestures, emphasizing, confirming.

It was the tremendous earnestness and mastery of the man which impressed one. Thru his coolness, the unstudied carriage, the pleasant voice which he went on, reasoning, convincing, was shining, an intense fire and impeccable will. And it was not the fire, the will of an individual; it seemed as tho the aspirations and determination of a class were in Lenin. It was as tho he had been made the vehicle for the driving will of the awakened workers. Thru him spoke Revolution.

He had that incommunicable quality which is genius, had Lenin. He had that which we call greatness. But he was a new kind of great man. His greatness was part, not just of himself, but of a class, the workers; it was part of the revolution. He did not, "give" his greatness to the people, as did the great saints, the great humanitarians, for instance. It was not his to give; it was already the people's. He was an organic expression of the revolutionary working class; and he knew it, down to the deepest places of his consciousness, and acted instinctively always according to this knowledge. His form of greatness could never have existed in a previous historical period. He was the product of the modern proletariat, the mass become conscious. He was the Mass Man.

Comrade Lenin had finished. He was tired, you could see that. As he turned away from the tribune, the doctor and nurse came anxiously forward; and he left, rather slowly, leaning on an arm.

And there were some around me, who had noted this, who were sobbing. They were men who had been imprisoned and tortured by the master class, and who, dry-eyed and grim had defied their captives. Yet now they wept. After years of exile, of poverty, of austere devotion to the cause; and after the five long years of struggle, when Socialist Russia was combating, with every sinew, the enemies within and without; and now, when more light began to shine on the way, now when the roads became easier, our Comrade Lenin was ill. We feared he might not see the glorious New Russia, which was now beginning to be built up. Those faithful, fearless eyes had seen the dawn, but they were not to see the full and beautiful effulgence of the day. Our soldier was tired, and his old wounds were bleeding, and he was not to hear the happy songs of children, crowning his victory, in a new world.

We took Lenin to our hearts that day—our comrade, loyal and unsparing of himself, who had so well fought the fight of our class. And we walked from the Congress Hall, re-consecrated, strengthened and steeled to carry on the work he loved so well, hoping only that we, too, might be fortunate enough to have the chance of giving all our strength, all our blood to the struggle which would one day, make the old earth blossom with a new and radiant life.

Loggers Walk Streets as Bosses Luxuriously Winter in Sunny South

By SYDNEY WARREN.

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb 12.—While hundreds of lumberjacks are walking the streets of Vancouver waiting for the camps to open for the spring and drawing up their belts a notch each day, the lumber bosses are wintering in California and looking forward to another boom year in the industry.

The first nine months' export lumber shipments by mills belonging to the B. C. Lumber and Shingle Manufacturers' Association exceeded the whole export shipment of 1922 by over 34,000,000 feet board measure. The lumber shipments from this port to Japan alone have increased during the past three years as follows: 1921, 52,000,000 board feet; 1922, 72,000,000, and for the first nine months of 1923, 54,000,000.

The last three months of 1923 received some of the biggest Japanese orders which will in all probability bring up the year's total to nearly 100,000,000 board feet.

So intensified has been the speeding up process in the logging industry that it is now admitted that the 1923 total scale will exceed that of 1922 when, according to the government's figure the total of logs scaled was 1,899,158,273 board feet. The value of lumber products for last year is estimated at nearly $81,000,000. In contrast to these figures there has been no increase in the wages paid to loggers. Sawmill workers thruout the province are paid an average wage of from 30 cents to 35 cents an hour for a nine-hour day and in some places ten hours are worked. In the logging camps where the speeding up and piece work system has been in force most the increase in output has been accomplished by but a fractiona increase in the number of men employed.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE rabbis have declared for a five-day week for labor, not it seems because they are very much concerned with the welfare of the workers but for theological reasons. It hurts the religious sensibilities of the whiskered divines to see the Lord's Saturday defiled on the Rialtos of America but the greed of the capitalists and the prejudices of the Christians offer no balm to the wounded souls of the Talmudians. The God of the Christians insists on being honored by idleness on Sunday—capitalism and other circumstances permitting—but his double, Jehovah, has selected Saturday. The division in the ranks of the followers of Jehovah and God was the cause of much shedding of blood in ancient times but in these days of civilization religious folk take it out in cursing and prayer rather than in military combat.

The rabbis are peaceful people and they have learned the manly art of compromise. Instead of raising a fund of several millions of dollars to shift the legal Lord's day from Sunday to Saturday and thus bring joy to the troubled countenance of Jehovah they offer a compromise of a five-day week. Let the Gods be propitiated! Give the workers a five-day week. We join in a united front with the rabbis. Let us have more Gods, that stand for progress.

One of our readers of this paper resolved on the 13th day of January, 1924, never again to purchase a copy of the capitalist press so long as he found instruction, information and consolation in the columns of The DAILY WORKER. But alas, many a good resolution dies in its cradle and before our comrade had time to recover from the effects of the capitalist dope to which he was addicted for years he was tempted on the corner of Madison and Clark by a journalistic harlot in the form of the Daily News. Like a reformed inebriate on his good behavior who succumbs to the urging of a friend to "take just one little nip" but nevertheless tries to hide his shame from the public our comrade sneaked over to the news stand and purchased a copy of the reptile press.

He was duly punished for his sin. In the privacy of his attic chamber he turned over the pages of the Daily News and read in succession a report of a lecture delivered by Pitirim A. Sorokine, formerly of Petrograd, and an article by one Gregor A. Alexinsky, now in Paris. In atonement for his sin he sent the clippings to THE DAILY WORKER so that we could apply the rod of castigation to the political hides of the Russian perverts above mentioned.

• • •

Dr. Sorokine predicts the rise of Russian democracy and the downfall of Communism. He pictured a state of lawlessness in Russia that can be compared only with that of Chicago or the average American city. All the "real scholars" of Russia have either committed suicide or were banished. We are sorry Dr. Sorokine was banished. Lenin, he says, was the only real Russian among the Bolsheviki; all the others are considered foreigners. And so on. Soviet downfall sure to come, etc. Of course the Dr. is not as big a fool as he is liar and does not believe a word of this but an ex-bootlicker to the Czar who is now compelled to shine shoes or clean cuspidors in an American hotel for a living likes to make a little easy money once in a while by tickling the ears of the American capitalists who frequent the City Clubs and Rotary Clubs and other Babbit institutions where such lectures are welcome. Lenin's death furnished the occasion for another deluge of filth from these counter-revolutionary sewer-rats.

The Parisian emigre gives Lenin credit for much honesty but diagnoses his illness as insanity. His main ambition was to slaughter his foes. So intent was he on glutting his desire for gore that he once made the declaration, according to this disciple of Ananias. "We must shoot our enemies on the spot without counting them; without making an arrest." Evidently he did not succeed. Alexinsky winds up his column and a half of fiction with the wish, "Now the sick man is no more. The razor has fallen from his hand. And the friends of Russia are asking if the time has not come for them to act to prevent some other from recovering this terrible instrument of destruction and death." Alexinsky and his fellow panhandlers will stay in Paris rather than face the vengeance of the Russian workers they have betrayed. The death of Lenin brings them no consolation. The Communist Party of Russia remains and woe unto the counter-revolutionary reptile who attempts to crawl back and undo the work of the revolution.

Lenin's death was not the signal for a counter-revolution as it might have been had he died a few years ago. On the contrary it was the signal for the recognition of the Soviet Republic by the powerful British Empire and by Italy, action soon to be followed by other important European countries. These are dark days for Russian stool pigeons of the Czar's regime.

TEAPOT OIL TRICKLES INTO HARDING TOMB

Senate Probe Sinks Deeper Into Putrid Mess

LANDIS MEN IN THREAT TO FIGHT STRIKE

Plan To Engage Scabs To Man Struck Trucks

Infuriated over the success of the strike called by the Excavating, Grading and Asphalt Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' Union, Local 731, against the Chicago Contracting Team Owners' Association, the Committee to Enforce the Landis Award in a public statement threatened to organize a fleet of trucks and smash the strike, which at present has brought building operations in Chicago to a standstill.

The union men demanded one dollar a day increase and an additional fifty cents if they are required to help load their trucks or wagons. The existing scale is $6.50 a day for truck drivers and $5.50 for wagon drivers on the basis of a nine hour day. The strikers are also fighting for the 8-hour workday.

Boasts of Its Success.

The strikebreaking agency known as the Landis Award committee openly boasts of its success in furthering the open shop in Chicago.

In letters to Landis Award contractors officials of the committee say:

"The citizens committee takes the stand that nothing shall interfere with construction in Chicago. If your work is being delayed by the tieup the committee intends to take the same action that it took last spring when the teamsters refused to haul structural steel to the Cub's ball park and the committee organized trucks and men to do this work."

The contractors fear that acceptance of the offer of the Landis Award strike breakers to introduce scabs into the situation will bring about sympathetic strikes. The haulers are determined to fight for victory.

Several big building projects among them the new Union station and the Balaban & Katz theater at Lawrence avenue are at a standstill.

Collins Offers Services of Police.

Barely had the men quit their trucks than Chief of Police Collins offered his services to the contractors in case the latter attempted to break the strike. The police under the instructions of Collins would protect the strikebreakers. The strikers would thus be given an example of the benevolence of a Democratic administration which was elected to office on the ground that it was friendly to organized labor.

John Flynn, president of the Excavating, Grading and Asphalt Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' Union which is conducting the strike has charge of strike operations and is busy out in the field.

He declares that his men are out to win the fight. The plea of the Chicago sociation that the business cannot afford an increase does not hold water in the opinion of labor men conversant with the situation. The work performed by the haulers is laborious and dirty and the increase demanded by them is extremely moderate.

Profits Are Big.

The contractors make big profits and can easily afford to grant the strikers demands. Talk of sympathetic strikes are in the air but whether the bosses will hold out until this sentiment crystallizes into action is doubtful.

Landlords Piling up Ever Greater Profits As Suffering of the City Workers Becomes Ever More Acute

By JAY LOVESTONE.

The New York landlords, like the landlords everywhere else, are not distinguished by altruism as a class.

New York is known as the landlords' paradise. Tenement House Commissioner Mann emphasized to the State Housing investigators that the landlords in New York City are better off than they are anywhere else in the whole world.

The landlord does not care a cent-piece for the welfare of the tenants. All he is out for is the biggest possible profit on

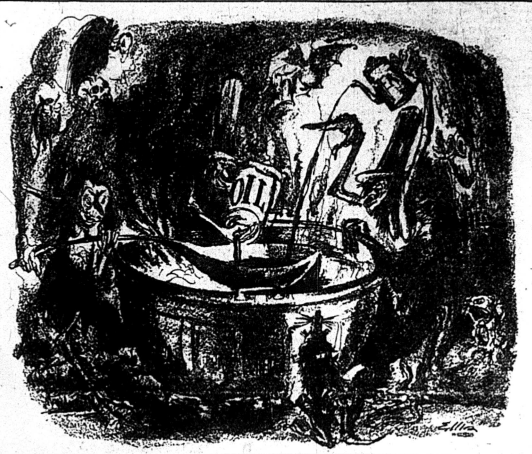
BUBBLE, BUBBLE, OIL AND TROUBLE



Negro Workingmen Are Urging All Race Assembly To Lead Fight For Open Door Into the Labor Unions

The labor program of the great Negro All-Race Assembly or Sanhedrin is being worked out in an executive session of the labor committee, at the Wabash avenue branch of the Y. M. C. A., as this is being written.

Sitting with the original committee, appointed by Dean Kelly Miller, which contains only one actual representative from labor, are a half dozen others from the Workers Party and the African Blood Brotherhood. These members of the workingclass will fight for a genuine labor program that will mean actual progress towards the industrial emancipation of the workers of the darker race.

Ask Equality in labor Unions.

The open door into the labor unions is one of the important issues before the labor committee. More and more labor unions have been dropping the color barrier but there are still leading industrial occupations from which the Negro is shut by conservative unionism. The real labor elements of the labor committee want the Sahedrin to throw all its influence behind the program of equality in every labor union in America. They believe that if the standing labor commission that will sit after the conference closes, will constantly agitate this question and make an issue of every instance where the color line is drawn that progress towards racial equality thruout the labor movement will be greatly hastened.

Migration of a million southern Negroes into northern industries has made the labor union program more important than ever..

Organization of the southern tenant farmers now held in peonage or semi-peonage is another vital issue before the labor committee. Fresh in their minds is the massacre of more than a hundred Negro cotton farmers in Elaine county, Arkansas, October, 1919, after they had organized a tenant farmers' union. Organization on a national, not a local scale, is the answer.

Recognition of Russia.

The international aspect of the labor movement will be considered tomorow or Friday when the resolution from the Workers Party colored delegation urging the Sanhedrin to endorse the demand to recognize the Russian Republic comes on the floor. There is considerable sentiment in favor of Russian recognition on behalf of the delegates because Russia is the only great power in the world which practices as well as preaches the theory of race equality. There is little doubt that the Russian recogntion resolution will go thru with enthusiasm unless the conservatives block it in committee.

Sympathy With Russia.

Sympathy with the struggles of Russian workers towards freedom, was expresed by one of the leading speakers at yesterday morning's session, Dr. C. S. Brown, president of Lott Crey Convention, and chairman at the Sanhedrin of the committee dealing with the "African-American's relation to world-wide race movements."

The American Negro has suffered so much from oppression himself that he can sympathize with the struggles of oppressed peoples in all parts of the world, declared Dr. Brown. The Russian soil was drenched with blood that the peasants might be free, he declared, and struggles for freedom are going on in India, Spain, Greece and numerous other countries, and to all these peoples goes the sympathy of the black race in America.

Friendly to Garvey.

Both Dr. Brown and Prof. Alain Leroy Locke, of Howard University, who preceded him, held out the hand of fellowship towards the two Negro movements which emphasize the world-wide bond between the peoples of the African race—the movement headed by Mr. Marcus Garvey, which aims at the return of all Ne-

MINES CONTRACT IS REFERRED TO SUB-COMMITTEE

Three or Four-Year Pact Expected

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 13.—The coal miners' wage-scale and contract question was yesterday referred to a sub-committee and negotiations are in progress today between the operators and miners representatives of the reduced body.

Two miners' representatives from each of the four competitive fields and two representing the operators compose the sub-committee. Attending all sessions and acting in an advisory capacity for their organizations are John L. Lewis, Philip Murray and William Green for the United Mine Workers; Michael Gallagher and Ezra Vanhorn for the coal operators' association.

John L. Lewis has announced that the miners will hold out for a four-year contract and no reduction in wages. The operators appear to favor conceding the wage question altho a strong minority is apparently willing to fight it out.

Among the operators the view is freely expressed that the presidential year gives the United Mine Workers a decided advantage and about the only objection to a four-year contract so far expressed is that it would bring the next negotiation period into an election year.

The settlement that is expected here is a three-year contract without a wage reduction, altho there may be a readjustment of working schedules.

Hindmarsh Opposes Sub-Committee.

John Hindmarsh of Riverton, Ill., who fought for the six-hour day at the Indianapolis convention, was one of the wage-scale committee who objected to referring the wage-scale and contract question to the sub-committee. It was announced, as a result of the objections, that the report of the sub-committee would be subject to thoro review by the entire conference before acceptance. No announcement was made of the possibility of amendments.

Phil H. Penna and other active members of the coal operators association have moved from the Mason hotel to the Seminole hotel, where Lewis and other miners' officials are quartered. Informal conferences are being held in addition to the regular sessions.

CREEL GIVEN $5000 FOR HIS OFFICIAL PULL

Strawn Opposed; More Fall Frauds Rumored

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Steadily growing opposition to the appointments made by President Coolidge gained such headway today that rejection of the nomination of Silas H. Strawn as one of the presidential oil counsel nominations seemed inevitable.

When President Coolidge came back from New York this morning the situation was placed before him by administration senators, who advised him to withdraw Strawn's nomination.

Strawn's connection as a director of the First National and First Trust and Savings Banks of Chicago—admittedly Standard oil banks—is the basis for opposition to him.

Congress will fight it out with the president on the nominations and let the move for impeachment proceedings against Secretary of the Navy Denby rest for the time being at least.

Senator Walsh, Montana, who dominates the oil scandal inquiry, has been designated to survey the record for specific charges that might warrant charges of impeachment against the secretary.

The public lands committee today proceeded with cross examination of Leo Stack, Denver oil man. Stack charged that the Standard Oil of Indiana "entered a conspiracy" with Harry Sinclair to put over the lease of Teapot Dome.

New Sensation Promised.

Senator Walsh received a telegram from D. F. Stackelbach, Denver newspaperman, stating he believed Karl C. Schuyler, Denver attorney, had "some sensational correspondence" relating to the Teapot Dome lease.

Walsh also received a telegram from Schuyler in which he stated he acted as attorney for Stack.

He said, "I have in my possession certain correspondence which I believe your committee should see and hereby request opportunity to

Ask Illinois Coal Miners to Demand Howat Convention

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., Feb. 13.—A resolution calling upon the convention of Dist. 12, United Mine Workers of America, to be held in Peoria the second week of March, to demand a special international convention of mine workers to settle the Howat case is now being read in Illinois locals. The resolution in part reads:

"Alex Howat has been refused the floor of our last international convention, and by such refusal the demands of the many local unions that the Kansas issue be brought out on the floor on the international convention and settled once and for all time have also been refused, and

"Whereas: Repeated demands have been made upon the international executive board the last two years past, that the Kansas Issue be settled and this has not been granted the rank and file, therefore we believe that the only way this issue can be rightfully settled is by the calling of a special international convention to give Alex Howat and all other Kansas mine workers who have been expelled from our union a fair and impartial trial and a decision rendered that shall be final and binding by the delegates present."

The law governing special international conventions requires the consent of five district organizations before such a meeting can be held.

VANDERLIP TELLS A LOT OF POLITICIANS THEIR RIGHT NAMES

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—In Frank A. Vanderlip's speech, as published here today, the financier's utterances constituted the climax of an impassioned plea for a general house cleaning by President Coolidge in Washington.

"The last administration," he said, "stands challenged. We cannot wait for Congress or the courts, especially when we remember that Mr. Daugherty is attorney-general. Lack of courage and leadership is the underlying evil in American life today. Coolidge has a great opportunity, but he needs sufficient courage to go to the bottom regardless of which party he hits."

Striking out at different individuals who have figured in the teapot dome probe, Vanderlip said William G. McAdoo, "Like any boy with stolen jam, dropped his client immediately after the client had testified before the investigating committee."

Of the committee itself he said "The associates of Senator Walsh are very improper investigators of any moral question. 'Jim Reed'," he declared, "is a political skunk and if he were dusted with asafetida, it would perfume him."

"The Senate," he charged, "did not go further in investigating Secretary Fall because Fall was ready to 'peach' and what he would have said would have gone into a high place They didn't dare."

Mr. Vanderlip then swept into charges against the veterans bureau, the shipping board and "the sinister activity of Attorney-General Daugherty."

"All these things," he said, "are going to be scrutinized closely and coldly sooner or later. What was Ned McLean's relations with the government? Let us know."

KING MORGAN GRANTS BIG LOAN TO JAPS

Money Will Be Spent in U. S.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—A $150,000,000 loan, one of the greatest if not a record peace-time international financial issue, has just been completed between the Japanese Government and a group of American financiers, headed by J. P. Morgan.

The transaction, completed at the Morgan home Monday night means that Japanese Government bonds in this sum will be floated in the United States and certain European continental countries. The money advanced to Japan will, for the most part, return to the United States thru direct trade channels.

U. S. Beats England.

Simultaneously with the completion of the loan transaction in New York, a similar loan of 23,000,000 pounds sterling was arranged in England between the Japanese Government and a British group of financiers.

Under conditions of the loan, a bulk of Japan's expenditures for her reconstruction program will be made in the United States. An interesting feature of the transaction is that the United States receive a larger share of the business than England, which, before the war, always had what appeared to be first call on new international business.

High Priestess Robbed.

Three bandits, one of them a "fat little man who cussed horribly" were hunted by police today for taking jewels valued up to $150,000 and $2,000 in cash from Gilda Gray, high priestess of the shimmy.

VANDERLIP IN SPEECH ASKS STAR INQUIRY

Purchase Price Too Large, Says Banker

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Frank A. Vanderlip, New York financier, today indirectly demanded an inquiry into the conditions of sale of "a certain Marion newspaper, which sold for $550,000, when it was well known to everyone that it was not worth half that sum."

Vanderlip today was subpoenaed by the Senate Teapot Dome Committee to appear before it tomorrow morning.

Chairman Lenroot called Vanderlip because of the latter's statements regarding need for congressional investigation of the sale of the Marion Star, owned by the late President Harding.

Explaining the summons of Vanderlip, Senator Lenroot said:

"Certain insinuations have been made by Mr. Vanderlip against the late President Harding. The committee desires to know what he meant. We want to know what reason he had for making such a statement. The committee has no information touching on this subject, but we desire to know all the facts."

Vanderlip Only Has Thoughts.

Vanderlip in New York today said he had no personal knowledge of the matter, but thought there should be a congressional inquiry to clear President Harding's good name of Washington rumors regarding the sale of his newspaper.

Behind the scenes here, there has been private comment about the amount of money received in the sale of the Star. It sold for $550,000.

Louis Brush of Marion, purchaser of the Marion Star from the late President Harding, will not be subpoened to tell about the sale of the Star until after Vanderlip has testified, Senator Walsh announced.

"We want to hear all that Mr. Vanderlip has to say before we call other witnesses," Walsh said.

Vanderlip Wants Investigation.

A congressional investigation to clear President Harding's good name of Washington rumors regarding the sale of his newspaper, The Marion Star, was urged today by Frank A. Vanderlip, in an interview with newapapermen at his office here.

Vanderlip thus explained his speech on the same subject delivered last night before the Ossining Rotary Club, during a banquet at Briarcliff Lodge.

He delivered any personal knowledge of the facts in "The Kettle of Washington Gossip," but added that "this gossip outrages the name of the dead President and should be cleared up."

Vanderlip emphasized that all he knew about the sale of the Marion Star is "that it was sold for over $550,000, when it was not worth half of that," and, therefore, that President Harding's name is "floating round in the kettle of scandal simmering at Washington."

"There seems to be a policy of silence on the part of the press with regard to using President Harding's name in connection with the Washington scandals," said Vanderlip. "The newspapers do not want to look under the shroud, out of respect to the

KLUX EMPEROR SELLS HIS CROWN FOR $146,000

Gives up Title to Klan and Kamelia

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 13.—Colonel William J. Simmons, founder of the Ku Klux Klan is willing to let 100 per cent Americanism run the risk of getting drowned in the Anglo-Saxon stream in return for enough money to soothe his patriotic conscience.

According to reports circulated here he has buried the hatchet for the consideration of $146,000, giving all his rights in the Klan and Kamella to Imperial Wizard Dr. H. W. Evans who will henceforth run the morons without competition from Simmons, if reports are authentic.

Call Meeting For Feb. 26th.

A meeting of Klansmen is called for Feb. 26 to "kill or cure" the hooded order it was was announced at the office of E. Y. Clarke, former Imperial Wizard.

At a meeting of the Simmons followers now held in Jacksonville, it was stated that Simmons plans to promulgate a new order to be called the "Knights of the Flaming Sword" and will be organized along the line of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Thus the battle rages between rival groups of grafters for the control of the biggest aggregation of suckers in the history of America.

Departed From "His Ideals."

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 13.—William J. Simmons, "Father of the Ku Klux Klan, renounced his brain child because it departed from its ideals.

This, it was learned today was Simmons' reason for making "peace" with the rival faction of the "hooded order," headed by Dr. W. H. Evans, whereby he was paid $100,000 for his rights and interests in the organization agreed to retire.

Simmons, in a speech to the Klansmen here, related the fight he made for the life of the Klan, explained in detail a compromise agreement with the Evans faction and then proclaimed a new sect society, the "Knights of the Flaming Sword."

The conference has been in session here for two days and is attended by representatives from Ohio, Alabama, Georgia, Kansas, Missouri, Colorado and Florida. The 500 delegates voted to go with Simmons in forming the new organization which the former Klan leader declared would pursue his original principles and ideals. The new order will be launched immediately with Simmons at the head.

New Name is Necessary.

He served notice he would continue to preach his doctrines but that it had become necessary to proclaim them under a new name. He then reviewed in detail the long bitter struggle between his forces and those of Dr. Evans for control and charged the latter with departing from the original purposes of the order.

Explaining his compromise agreement, he said he received $90,000 for his copyrights and rituals and had agreed to resign as a Klansman and would never become affiliated with the order again. He invited those who had followed his paths to travel the same way with him again and said if they wanted him as the leader he would accept the post.

Orders for the organization of the Knights of the Flaming Sword were then drawn and probably will be made public later this week.

Vanderlip Asks Inquiry Into Sale of The Marion Star

dead. I want to look under the shroud for that very reason and to protect the name of a dead president."

Star Subject of Gossip.

Rumors concerning the sale of the Marion Star, the late President Harding's newspaper, came to the attention of the Senate Teapot Dome Committee some time ago, it was learned today.

The committee has not investigated them, members said, because there is no definite information to go on.

When shown Frank A. Vanderlip's speech suggesting inquiry into the sale of the Star, members of the committee said they did not feel warranted in investigating it unless some "substantial and definite information" was furnished.

The Senate today broadened its oil investigation to cover international dealings of big American oil interests.

The resolution of Senator Dill, Washington, was adopted, calling on the State Department for information concerning international activities of American oil men.

It is aimed particularly at Harry F. Sinclair, lessee of teapot dome, who recently made oil leases in Persia and who is reported to have been negotiating with German and Russian interests, and Edward L. Doheny, who has Mexican oil.

Wheeler After Daugherty.

Simultaneously Senator Wheeler, Montana, Democrat, introduced a revised resolution calling for investigation of the activities of Attorney-General Daugherty in connection with the oil leases, war frauds prosecutions and other matters.

This was a substitute for the original Wheeler resolution expressing the sense of the Senate that Daugherty should resign.

Dill Wants Oil Dope.

Dill's resolution covers the entire oil world. It requires the State Department to submit all correspondence in its files relating to oil.

Dill wants to find out, he said, "How much of our foreign policy is an oil policy."

In a statement today, commenting on President Coolidge's stand on the Denby ouster resolution, Senator Robinson said, "Retention in office of Secretary Denby means that the President for all practical purposes supports the Secretary's policies and approves or acquiesces in his actions."

"Notwithstanding his defiant statement, it is respectfully suggested that the President soon may be forced by public opinion to turn out of office every one including Secretary Denby, who encouraged or participated in making the secret leases," said Senator Robinson, democratic leader in the Senate.

appear at the earliest possible time."

Arrangements will be made to have Schuyler testify in a few days.

Investigation of public lands by former Secretary Fall has been broadened to include his leasing of certain Indian lands.

Fall ruled that unallotted Indian lands could be leased if the administration saw fit. The legality of this ruling was questioned by the sub-committee of the House Indian affairs committee, which yesterday reported unfavorably a bill to pay the Indians royalties accruing from such leases.

Says Creel Lied.

When the senate committee resumed its hearings today, J. Leo Stack, Denver, repudiated the testimony of George Creel. Creel yesterday said he didn't know E. L. Doheny was behind Stack in an effort to get Teapot Dome.

"Mr. Creel knew that Mr. Doheny was the man behind our project," Stack said, "even tho he told me he didn't."

Stack and Creel were associated during the last administration in attempting to get the Teapot lease for Doheny.

Stack said he got $5,000 from Doheny and gave it to Creel.

"I wanted Mr. Creel to introduce me to the officials in the various government departments," Stack said.

Stack said Creel introduced him to Secretary of the Navy Daniels. Stack tried to prevail on Daniels to lease the naval reserves, but Daniels flatly refused.

Stack said his plan was not abandoned, however, because "the incoming administration of President Harding was practically committed to leasing the lands."

Stack Collected.

The Pioneer Oil company has been secretly pressing to get the leases. Pioneer had the advantage, Stack said, because of certain warranted claims to sections in the Dome.

Doheny became disheartened then and withdrew.

But in order to reward Stack for his work Doheny had the Pioneer—a Standard Oil subsidiary—give Stack a contract. This contract gave Stack 5 per cent of any profits if the leases were obtained. As a preliminary advance to Stack for his work, the Pioneer gave him $14,000, he said.

Lenroot questioned Stack about the settlement he and Fred G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, made with Sinclair by which Sinclair promised to pay them $1,000,000.

"The only claim you had was based on a charge of fraud against the Pioneer, wasn't it?"

"Well, yes."

Asked by Lenroot about this charge that there was conspiracy in connection with the lease to Sinclair, Stack said:

"I thought that the Pioneer conspired with Sinclair to 'gyp' me out of my interest. The Pioneer said they got $1,000,000 in oil from Sinclair for the claims but I don't know whether they did or not. They just wanted me to get out of it."

Fight On Strawn.

Reports that Silas H. Strawn, Chicago, had withdrawn as one of the president's special counsel in the oil leasing cases, were prevalent today after Strawn conferred with President Coolidge.

It was stated at the White House, however, that "nothing was decided" at the conference. This was taken to indicate that Strawn's withdrawal was under consideration.

Concerning a report that James A. Garfield, Ohio, was to be named one of the special counsel, a White House official said that "it would not be well to go too strong on that." Garfield called on the president today.

Strawn was reported to have offered to withdraw if President Coolidge thought his membership on the directorates of two Chicago banks known as "Standard Oil banks" rendered him less available as a prosecutor in the oil cases.

Strawn's connection with the two banks was revealed to the Senate Teapot Dome committee by officials of the banks yesterday, and was confirmed to the committee by Strawn himself.

Herrin, the Klan and the Miners

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

IT APPEARS that there are some people who are determined to keep the town of Herrin on the map, even at the expense of advertising for the merchants who deal in pillow cases and bed sheets. If, after the recent episodes in Herrin, there are any who still doubt that the Klan is a business organization, they should be treated to an examination by a competent phrenologist, so as to determine the reason for such doubt.

Under the cloak of a "Law and Order" campaign, and under the personal direction of a paid agent of the Ku Klux Klan, the otherwise peaceful mining community, located in what is known as "Little Egypt," was invaded and its inhabitants brutally assaulted. The gang led by S. Glenn Young will find that they are not dealing with a lot of scissorbills, for the miners of America, and especially the ones in "Little Egypt" have demonstrated before that they will tolerate no invasion.

The strike that has just been declared is only a natural conclusion to the events that led up to it, for there is one thing that is sure, that the miners there, as in any other union field, will refuse to work under armed guard, and it makes no difference whether they come as bums to work as coal and iron police, or as wearers of the K. K. K. hoods or tin badges, or even as the wearers of the khaki uniform. In the eyes and minds of the miners all three are analogous as far as they are concerned; and those who have undertaken to usurp the right to rule that community against the wishes of the people there, might just as well come to an understanding of that fact now, for if they don't it will come to them later.

It is quite possible and even probable that there are men in the ranks of the miners, who because of racial or religious prejudices, have joined forces with the Koo Koo's, but that should not deter action on the part of the others to put them where they belong, outside of the union. At the convention recently held in the city of Indianapolis, the miners of the country declared in no uncertain tone, that the United Mine Workers could not harbor both union men and the K.K.K., Fascist wearers of the Nightie, and decided that inasmuch as the Miners Union was organized primarily for the purpose of protecting the members, it could not tolerate the agents of the business interests on the inside, and that they had to "get out."

Now it is time for the officials of the miners' union to get busy, and even tho there are many who do not admit to membership in the Klan we think that on an occasion of this kind they can be best judged by their actions. Let those who proclaim that the law of the United Mine Workers of America shall be obeyed by its members, not fail to act in the interest of the union, by applying Article 14, Section 2, to those who belong to the Klan, admittedly, and also to those who, by their action, have shown that they belong to it, even tho they do not possess the courage to publicly declare that they do.

The only sure way to cure an ill, whether it be social or otherwise, is to remove the cause, and the cause of the trouble at Herrin is in our mind, the desire to avenge the deaths of the "scab-herders" who were loaded up with death-dealing armament and sent into Herrin to help break the strike of 1922. To do this dirty job, the Klan-paid usurper, S. Glenn Young has injected himself, armed to the teeth, and the disorder and chaos that now prevails there is a direct result. He is the cause of all the trouble and should be summarily punished for his acts.

Young boldly declares that the law will be administered and that a "speedy justice" will be meted out, and now that he has made such a declaration, he should be given a dose of his own medicine. There should be no hesitancy about placing the responsibility for the Herrin outrages on the shoulders of the Ku Klux Klan and its agent, S. Glenn Young. They are without a doubt the cause, and the cause should be speedily removed, so that the poor innocents who have been detailed to Herrin as National Guardsmen, under orders from the state, can return to their families and peaceful pursuits, and allow the people of Herrin to do likewise.

groes to Africa and the building of a great African republic and the Pan-African congresses of Dr. Dubois which aim rather at the spiritual kinship of the members of the Race.

The purpose of the Sanhedrin is to bring what unity is possible between these two movements. Tho Mr. Garvey has failed to send representatives to the Sanhedrin the leaders here are hopeful of winning him over to the united front idea at a later date. Garvey has many friends at the convention.

An ardent appeal to all Negroes to support the Liberian people and all Back-to-African movements, was made by Dr. Jay Peters, a young Negro from Chicago. He pictured an America where the lot of the black man would get worse and worse and warned his hearers that when the struggle for jobs becomes more tense as times become harder the white man would get the preference and the Negro would be scrapped.

"Liberia has not failed," he declared: "the hard times she has had are due to the interference of foreign imperialism."

Both Haiti and Liberia have been injured by imperialism and Negroes must support these Negro republics warmly, he cried.

An appeal for literary sincerity was made by Miss Jessie Faucett, a nationally known literary critic of the race, in her talk on "The Importance of Culture in Race Betterment."

Literature and Lynching.

There is power in the truth, she pleaded, urging that the race gains nothing by the attempts of Negro writers to describe Negro life, not as it is but as the whites will admire it.

Never be afraid of the charge of "propaganda," she said, citing the fact that so-called cultured people cry out against unpleasant facts by labelling them "propaganda." The wrongs of the race, such as lynching, must be told. The injury to art, from "propaganda" is as nothing compared with the injury to life from lynching. However, she insisted, truth itself it art, if told with the emotional power inherent in the facts, as in the case of Dubois' "Dark Water."

Negro Literature Needed.

Mr. W. H. Moore, of Chicago, followed Miss Faucett and urged the creation of a Negro literature that would acquaint the race with itself as the literature of Synge, Lady Gregory and other Irish writers acquainted the Irish people with themselves during the Gaelic Renascence.

Prof. Monroe N. Work, director of the department of records and research at Tuskegee Institute, urged the need of more race knowledge—knowledge about the past achievements of the race and its present status.

The Rape Lie.

Value of research data was shown at the senate hearings on the Dyer anti-lynching bill when none of the opposition attempted to repeat he old charge hat lynchings were made necessary by rape. That charge had beben exploded by Tuskegee's research, which showed that only 20 per cent of lynchings were traceable to rape charges—charges which were usually unfounded.

Need of a better organized Negro press to cement the race together and expose the atrocities committed against the Negro was emphasized by Mr. Robert L. Vann, editor of the Pittsburgh Courier and chairman of the Negro Press Committee at the Sanhedrin, before the session.

Los Angeles Labor Party Opposed to Delay from May 30

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 13.—Opposition to any move to postpone the date of the May 30, political meeting of workers in St. Paul was voted by the local Farmer-Labor party in a recent meeting.

The local party will celebrate its first birthday anniversary with a mass meeting March 9.

Plans are under way to make a place for the party ticket on the spring election ballot by having a sufficient number of votes register Farmer-Labor party or, that failing, by petition. The recent meeting voiced a protest against the action of persons employed to register voters in a house to house canvass who insist that one can register for only the Republican, Democratic, Socialist or Prohibition parties.

Small Says Money Attacks Him.

Moneyed interests are behind attacks on him, Governor Len Small, holds. In a Lincoln Day speech here last night Small declared that certain newspapers attacking him have taken the side of wealth, aristocracy and financial and commercial power while the Governor has taken his stand on "the side of the people."

Race For Attorney-General.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 13.—Stephen A. Day of Evanston today filed a petition as a candidate for Attorney-General on the Republican ticket. Attorney-General Edward J. Brundage, Walter Provine of Taylorville, and Oscar Carlstrom of Aledo, already have filed for this place.

St. Louis Gathering of C. P. P. A. Makes Slogan of "On to St. Paul"! of Greater Importance Than Ever

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

The developments in relation to the St. Louis Conference for Progressive Political Action, Feb. 12, were well summarized in a statement by one of the delegates, who said, "At least we have made some progress. We have submitted the possibility of organizing a party and adopting independent political action at the Cleveland Convention, July 4th."

In order to understand the significance of the third conference, at St. Louis, and the decisions it adopted, an analysis of the makeup of the conference is vital. The credentials committee of the conference reported that such organizations as the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Furriers' Union had sent in credentials, but the fact was that there were no delegates from any international organization of labor except the 16 standard railroad unions in the conference.

The representatives of these unions, together with a fringe of farmer and labor political organizations, which have sprung up in various parts of the country, composed this conference.

The Socialist Party was represented by seven delegates, but its only influence is the influence which its leader, Morris Hillquit, wields, in conferences, upon the leaders of the railroad unions. As an organization, the Socialist Party means nothing in the conference.

Why Railroad Workers Are In Politics.

It is not at all surprising that the railroad unions, as organizations, should be the first to enter into the political arena in order to make their political power felt. It is the experience of the workers in the industries where there is governmental interference which develops their political consciousness. The railroad workers are just those who have had to meet government action most often in the industries in which they are working.

During the war period the railroads were government controlled and these workers again and again felt the power of the government affecting their wages and working conditions. Since the end of the war they have had to deal with the legislation of the Railway Labor Board, a government institution controlling wages and working conditions on the railroads. The fact that the sixteen standard railroad unions are engaged in politics and are drifting toward the organization of a political party is the best proof of the correctness of the Communist viewpoint that it is the development of capitalism in the form of governmental interference in industry which develops the mass political movement of labor.

These railroad unions, however, express an attitude of what is close to contempt so far as other organizations of workers and farmers are concerned. At the St. Louis conference they refused to consider the great mass movement for a farmer-labor party expressing itself in the call for the May 30th Convention. Their attitude was that their conference was the only thing worth while or which mattered in relation to political action by farmers and workers and they were going to run the thing as they saw fit, regardless of the desires of any other group working toward the organization of the farmers and workers for political action.

They made their control absolutely secure by re-adopting and also making part of the call for the Convention which they have set for July 4th at Cleveland, the provision that upon roll call each organization represented shall have one vote for each 10.000 members. This means, under existing circumstances, that the million and a half organized railroad workers will absolutely dominate any conference in which they take part.

The observer at the third conference could not help but be impressed by the fact that the organization had made some progress since the Cleveland conference. They were not yet ready to commit themselves to independent political action but they were drifting in that direction even against their will. The fact that the hero of the railroad brotherhoods, McAdoo, had been splattered with Teapot Dome oil was a big feature in developing the tendency toward independent political action.

Socialists Support Anderson.

In connection with the decision of the conference as to what is to be done at the July 4th convention, the part played by the Socialists cannot be ignored. In the Organization Committee, which drafted the plan for the July 4th Convention, the decision was that the convention be called for the purpose of nominating a candidate for president and vice-president on a new party ticket. When this report came before the conference and the question was raised as to whether it committed the conference to independent political action, it was Morris Hillquit, leader of the Socialist Party, who was the first on his feet to deny that the conference was committed by the report and to interpret it to mean that the conference could endorse an old party candidate on July 4th or nominate independently, as the circumstances warranted. Thus the Socialist leader, Hillquit, played the part of preventing a clear-cut decision and leaving the way open for the endorsement of a McAdoo, Smith or some other old party candidate on July 4th. This action by Hillquit again puts the Socialists in the position of holding up the development of a mass farmer-labor party and betraying the farmers and workers to whom they have said that they are for independent political action.

When the sprinkling of delegates representing the groups which have called the May 30th Convention made the fight to definitely commit the conference to independent nominations and a new party, the railroad machine easily voted it down; in fact, practically cut off all discussion of their proposals. The determination of the railroad machine to maintain its iron-clad control was also evident in its turning down of the amendment to the convention call which provided for representation from local unions.

The Statement of Principles.

Contrasting to this vacillating and indecision on the question of how to carry on the fight against the old parties and their domination of the government, is the statement of principles adopted by the conference. The preamble to the concrete proposals to which the conference committed itself is as bitter a denunciation of the old parties and their use of governmental power to aid in the looting of the nation by the capitalists as could be written. True, the statement of principles does not touch the fundamental point in the exploitation of the workers. It never attacks the capitalist system but it shows to what extent the governmental power is used by the capitalists for their own enrichment at the expense of the workers and farmers.
